"This is a simple, artless novel about life on a collective agricultural settlement in Israel. It moves as effortlessly as the seasons; its characters unfold like plants in a garden. Yet it contains, in its quiet narrative, a searching, intelligent examination of the primary problem of a collective, the translation from theory into practice of the idea of equality in all things among members of the settlement." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 18 '50 800w

N Y Times p26 My 21 '50 320w

"Mr. Maletz has a fine, human way of writing about things. To be sure, his complete lack of sentimentality sometimes freezes into a merely clinical point of view, but not often enough to do any real damage to his storytelling."
+ — New Yorker 26:117 My 6 '50 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 26 '50 300w

"'Young Hearts' is far from being a well-constructed piece of fiction. While it ends on a note of unconditioned loyalty to the ideal of collective work and living, the amount of controversy crammed into the story of Menahem and Hannah and their friends is not unlikely to overshadow that closing declaration of love. But M. Maletz's sincerity and his great courage in airing the problems of the communal experiment and clarifying them make up for his shortcomings as a storyteller." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:28 Je 10 '50 650w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, pseud). Death knocks three times. 244p $2.50 Random house

50-5006

Detective story.

"One of the least successful in the long series of Anthony Gilbert's tales about Arthur Crook." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p6S Ja 13 '50 120w

Kirkus 17:635 N 15 '49 60w

"Not as elaborate as most of lawyer Crook's cases, but—possibly for that reason—even more intriguing."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 5 '50 140w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANNE MEREDITH, pseud). Unknown path [Eng title: Draper of Edgecumbe]. 246p $2.75 Random house

50-6700

The story of a "back street" love affair that ended in murder and disgrace. The lovers are a draper and a dressmaker of Victorian England.

Booklist 46:246 Ap 1 '50

Kirkus 18:109 F 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 3 '50 50w

"Miss Meredith writes of these lovers in a curiously dispassionate way. Oliver the draper and the problems of his family come alive, but the overwhelming passion of Lily Brown and her lover never does. Their world may have been truly well lost for love, but the reader never understands why."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 30 '50 270w

"Oliver's complacent wife, his three daughters, the employees at Youngman's and a fine collection of friends and relatives are drawn with sharpness, delicacy, and a nice humor which heightens and solidifies the reader's image of Oliver's world. The historical side of things is also handled beautifully by Miss Meredith, who has written two other novels of that period. Her knowledge of the sociological background of Victorian England is most rewarding." Joyce Geary
+ N Y Times p20 Jl 9 '50 230w

"Miss Meredith describes the progress of the affair and the climax of it with a calm and expert pen, steering her rather foolish characters easily toward the murder that providentially occurs to solve everything, for better or for worse."
New Yorker 26:109 Ap 1 '50 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 17 '50 140w

MALONE, CARL CURTIS. How to make your farm pay; a practical guide for Midwest farm operators. 371p il $3.75; lea'tte $2.50 Iowa state college press

631.1 Agriculture—U.S. Farm management
Agr50-42

"From the first considerations on buying a farm, to details on crops and livestock, a financial plan, and marketing, this is practical advice intended for the midwest farmer." (Wis Lib Bul) Contains practical examples, photographs, maps, and tables. Index.

"The excellent charts scattered throughout the text illustrate methods for keeping records, graphing farm-crop incomes, feeding cattle on pasture, and other know-how essentials. This is a good birthday present for the fellow who's always talking about buying a farm. If he still persists after reading this work, he's the type of man the Midwest needs." R. W. Howard
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 Jl 1 '50 230w

Wis Lib Bul 46:16 Jl '50

MALRAUX, ANDRE. Psychology of art; v 1, Museum without walls; v2, The Creative act; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 2v il col pl $25 Pantheon bks.

701.15 Art—Psychology. Art—Philosophy
49-48802

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by F. A. Sweet
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ja 29 '50 600w

"The reading is sometimes strenuous, the meaning occasionally elusive, but the broad implications of Malraux are unmistakable. Through art, he has discovered the might and the honor of man." Dorothy Adlow
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 4 '50 1150w

"Every page of this magnificent work gives evidence of a profound mind nourished by a rich sensibility. Malraux's train of thought is not encumbered by the apparatus of scholarship; yet, it is solidly grounded in scholarship, despite a few minor errors of detail. At once liberated and informed, it plays over the vast range of art history with dazzling brilliance." S. L. Faison
+ Nation 170:531 My 27 '50 2150w

"Malraux has been explorer, merchant (and discoverer) of unfamiliar art, Marxist, soldier, novelist, politician. What these two magnificent volumes show, perhaps not surprisingly, is that Malraux also, and even before everything, is a Christian. . . His Psychology of Art is written with almost monotonous brilliance. The elevation of diction, the shock and clarity of dialectic, the range of observation, reading, vision are on a level of such imaginative proliferation that it is exhausting to digest more than a few pages at a time." Lincoln Kirstein
+ New Repub 122:18 F 27 '50 1150w

Reviewed by Herbert Read
New Statesman & Nation 39:102 Ja 28 '50 950w

"This is a book of prophecy and of poetry, expressed on a plane of extraordinary passionateness and at moments of almost oppressive nobility. Its prose, pitched, it would seem, deliberately to the note of eloquence, is extremely well translated. The book is to be treated as a work of art upon the arts, as the medita-

MALRAUX, ANDRE—Continued
tion of an enraptured and informed connoisseur upon the genesis of finished works of art and upon the finished works themselves. But if this book is poetic utterance, it is responsibly so; if it is prophecy, it is that of a moralist." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 19 '50 1100w
New Yorker 26:123 Ap 22 '50 300w

"The reading of this book is an intense, stimulating, and suggestive experience. . . The book is not carefully ordered or thought through, and it would be impossible to summarize it. . . M. Malraux is an explorer, or a hunter, in the rich jungles of the museum without walls, rather than a thinker. He is often inconsistent, and he suggests far more questions than he answers." Francis Fergusson
+ — Poetry 76:288 Ag '50 900w

"With all its faults, Malraux's 'The Psychology of Art' is a work of great force and is bound to stir thoughtful students of art." Meyer Schapiro
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:37 F 4 '50 700w

"This is a remarkable book. If it is partial and incomplete as a history or as an esthetic, it is yet wholly partisan in its author's commitment to his belief that, as human beings, we are as deeply involved in our arts as in our other activities. One may question the implied criticism that since 'all great styles of the past have been religious' our own modern art cannot be considered great, yet one senses that Malraux urges us to accept the art of our own times since it is the most certain assertion of our humanity. Even if one disagrees in part, Malraux's noble conception deserves to be read entire." G. H. Hamilton
+ — Yale R n s 39:751 summer '50 1350w

MALVERN, GLADYS. Meg's fortune; decorations by Corinne Malvern. 182p $2.50 Messner
50-6059

A novel for teen-aged girls. It tells the story of a London family, the Dillons, who came to America on the Mayflower, hoping to make a fortune and return to England. They survived the terrors of the sea voyage and the first year in the Plymouth colony, and when a chance came to return to England to claim a fortune, they chose to stay with the Pilgrims.

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor
Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 25 '50 80w

"There is some feeling for the London scene, but the yarn is far-fetched as a whole with stereotyped characters."
— + Kirkus 18:63 F 1 '50 100w

"Some of the characters are poorly drawn, Squanto in particular, but the poor characterizations do not spoil the story. Recommended." C. W. Field
+ — Library J 75:1056 Je 15 '50 80w

"Not recommended." G. E. Cartmell
— Library J 75:1056 Je 15 '50 80w

"Both Pilgrim Fathers and the fictitious characters are lacking in depth and reality. This austere theme deserves better treatment than it receives." Irene Smith
— N Y Times p24 Mr 26 '50 140w

MAMMEN, EDWARD WILLIAM. Turnipseed Jones; il. by Jessie Robinson. 127p $2 Harper 50-6441

The story of Henry Jones's experiences as a hired boy for Mrs Turnipseed who was busy preparing for a big family reunion celebrating her hundredth birthday. Henry was so helpful that at the reunion dinner he was adopted into the clan as Henry Turnipseed Jones and given the bicycle he wanted. For ages 7-11.

Booklist 46:292 My 15 '50

"Nonsense and lighthearted adventure for boys who like to chuckle while they read."
+ Bookmark 9:164 Ap '50 30w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p3 Ap 22 '50 420w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 14 '50 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '50

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:193 My '50 90w

"A story of great charm and humor. Deliciously funny illustrations by Jessie Robinson."
+ Kirkus 18:178 Mr 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:631 Ap 15 '50 160w

"This story is great fun to read. . . Recommended for all libraries for ages 7-10." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 75:784 My 1 '50 70w

"Boys will be grateful that a young professor in a city college can recapture their feelings so well and put down village life and a rare old lady with such gusto." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 2 '50 200w

"What adult readers will think is a very ordinary, unexciting story will, no doubt, be gobbled up by youngsters who like just that folksy, detailed kind of book." Phyllis Fenner
N Y Times p24 Ap 9 '50 140w
Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Ap '50

MANACH, JORGE. Martí: apostle of freedom; tr. from the Spanish by Coley Taylor; with a pref. by Gabriela Mistral. 363p il $4.50 Devin-Adair
B or 92 Martí, José. Cuba—History
50-7768

A biography of a leader of the Cuban revolutionists, who was killed in a skirmish with the Spanish in 1895. No index.

"For all its dramatic moments the book has something decidedly elusive about it. Possibly national aspirations no longer wield the powers of attraction they once did. Possibly it is because Marti's personal life was so disordered or because he was so prey to long-discounted nineteenth century ideas. Perhaps a certain spark is lacking in the writing. Whatever it is, the book does not engender in me the wholehearted enthusiasm which Marti still evokes throughout Latin America to this day. Yet here is a man who gave his whole life to a cause and rushed out to die for what he believed in." E. S. Skillin
— + Commonweal 52:300 Je 30 '50 250w
Current Hist 19:165 S '50 40w

"This excellent translation of the ablest biography of the Cuban liberator is a welcome addition to the Latin-American shelf. . . There have been a dozen lives of Marti in Spanish; of these Jorge Mañach's comes nearest to that objectivity for which we beg. Good as it is, Mañach's work confirms the peril of writing about heroes, reminding us of older books about Washington and Lincoln. Gabriel Mistral, in her glowing foreword on Mañach, unwittingly gives away the secret of why even the best biographies produced in Latin America fail to satisfy those whose tastes have been trained by Douglas Southall Freeman, Carl Van Doren and Allan Nevins." Hubert Herring
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 4 '50 500w

"This biography is a thorough and painstaking piece of work. Yet it is far more than that. It is an inspiring portrait, against the complex yet clear background of the tumultuous latter half of the nineteenth century, of a rare and memorable figure: a poet-philosopher who forced himself to become a fighter for oppressed humanity." Abel Plenn
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 9 '50 650w

MANCHESTER, PHYLLIS WINIFRED, and MORLEY, IRIS. The rose and the star; ballet in England and Russia compared. 95p pl $2.75 Macmillan
792.8 Ballet 50-6628

A discussion of the ballet in England and Russia, presented in dialogue form, with criticism of each. "Of particular interest to American readers are the descriptions of a trio of works familiar in one form or another to this country—'Swan Lake,' 'The Sleeping Beauty,' and 'Giselle'—as they are presented in Russia, while Miss Manchester provides parallel accounts of the same ballets as performed by Sadler's Wells in London." (Sat R of Lit) Miss Morley was correspondent for the Observer and Yorkshire Post in Russia from 1943 to 1947 and the photographs of the Russian ballet were taken by her.

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '50 500w

"First-hand reporting on ballet in Leningrad and Moscow is rare indeed, and Miss Morley has given an interesting, valuable, and readable account of this lively art as it lives today in the Soviet Union. . . An estimable work, happily free from pretentiousness, and copiously illustrated with striking action photographs." Irving Deakin
+ Sat R of Lit 33:28 Ap 29 '50 230w

MANGIONE, JERRE. Reunion in Sicily. 277p $2.75 Houghton
914.58 Sicily—Description and travel 50-8542

The author, an American of Sicilian parentage, in spite of somewhat unpleasant recollections of a previous visit, went to Sicily after the war to gather material for a book on postwar conditions there. This volume is partly his personal story, partly his observations of politics and social life in his father's land.

Booklist 46:352 Jl 15 '50
Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p4 Jl 16 '50 360w

" 'Reunion in Sicily' seems to me a remarkably solid, thoroly readable, and genuinely alive piece of writing. As to its authenticity I can't judge, because all I know about postwar conditions in Sicily is what Mr. Mangione tells me. But there is so much charm and excitement in his treatment that I'm quite ready to believe in its general accuracy, with perhaps some small allowance for personal coloring." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 16 '50 360w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 25 '50 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50

Kirkus 18:255 Ap 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 75:977 Je 1 '50 90w

Reviewed by Alfred Hayes
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 2 '50 750w

"This is, the reader occasionally feels, not quite so good a book as so good a writer as Mr. Mangione should have written about Sicily. Its casual pages lack the undercurrent of thought and organization that the best casual writing has. Nevertheless, Mr. Mangione puts over his central idea, as stated by his Uncle Nino in Rochester: 'I'll bet that even the hungry Sicilians are less nervous than the best-fed Americans.' " John Brooks
N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '50 650w

"An able piece of reporting, with none of the stylistic frills characteristic of many accounts of this sort."
+ New Yorker 26:72 Jl 22 '50 170w

"The sum of it is that you get a new and valuable view of Europe-in-little. You come to know some of the key European problems, and at the same time you are well entertained. A book of this kind could hardly do more for you." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 30 '50 850w

" 'Reunion in Sicily' makes easy and delightful reading. Mr. Mangione happens to possess not only good taste but the gift of good prose, none too common now in any land. . . Altogether Mr. Mangione has written a sincere, a readable, and a useful book. In its way it is a contribution not alone to the literature of travel, but to the feeling of responsibility to which we must more and more awaken." H. J. Forman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:8 Jl 1 '50 1000w

MANGOLD, ILA CORNELIUS. Clan McGuire. 314p $2.75 Rinehart
50-6701

Family story of life in Texas in 1905. The McGuires had two daughters: Kathy, eighteen and a beauty; and precocious little Maggie, aged five and the darling of the family. Kathy was "going steady" with Bob until Randolph King came to Dallas. In short order they were engaged and Bob left town for the oil fields. Then Grandpa came to town for a visit, and between them he and Maggie managed a change of suitors for Kathy.

Booklist 46:261 Ap 15 '50

"Quite the best portions of the book are those that concern themselves with the processes of drilling for oil and some of the geological lore involved. Here Mrs. Mangold shows the greatest promise of being able to do work on a better level than this book maintains. She is not without some gifts for characterization, as well, if she could bring herself to look beyond the trappings of standard brands of dear hearts and gentle people." Edmund Fuller
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 16 '50 330w

"Neither glamorous nor yet corny, this combines a certain matter of fact simplicity with a warm feeling for family life and period atmosphere, and a certain gay humor. In keeping with the era's lack of sophistication."
+ Kirkus 18:76 F 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by James Kelly
N Y Times p31 Ap 23 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:23 My '50

MANLY, HAROLD PHILLIPS. Electric appliance repair and servicing; trouble shooting, adjustment, repair, and maintenance of household appliances. 246p il $3 Drake, F. J.
621.394 Electric apparatus and appliances 50-7021

"A practical but elementary introduction. Repair and servicing operations which are common to the simpler appliances are covered with fair thoroughness, but complicated present-day appliances such as automatic washers are not covered or if covered are not discussed in sufficient detail to enable the repairman to undertake the repair work in confidence. Probably the book will prove most useful when it is used in conjunction with a manufacturer's manual for the appliance under repair." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 47:7 S 1 '50

N Y New Tech Bks 35:36 My '50

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 Je '50

MANN, FREDERICK GEORGE. Heterocyclic derivatives of phosphorus, arsenic, antimony, bismuth, and silicon. 180p il $5.25 Interscience
547.9 Heterocyclic compounds 50-6657

"This book is the first of a series devoted to the complex field of heterocyclic organic compounds. Although it does not appear to be entirely complete with respect to all available references, this monograph provides the reader with background information and sufficient references to original articles to give him an excellent view of the field of organic heterocyclics containing phosphorus, arsenic, antimony, bismuth, and silicon. Because of the present degree of development of these types of compounds, the major portion of the book necessarily deals with compounds of arsenic." Chem & Eng N

"To the chemist desiring to acquaint himself with heterocyclics containing the phosphorus, arsenic, antimony, bismuth, or silicon atoms,

MANN, F. C.—Continued
Dr. Mann's book will serve as an excellent guide. Certainly, it should stimulate many readers to new ideas for research in this relatively unexplored area of heterocyclic organic compounds." W. H. C. Rueggeberg
+ Chem & Eng N 28:1958 Je 5 '50 320w

"This modest-size volume at rather high price fulfills most, if not all, of the expectations of the reviewer and launches the series on an even keel. Not only has an expert in the art been chosen to handle the little-explored heterocyclic compounds discussed, but also a careful author. The theoretical and practical aspects of compounds involved are well-blended with suggestions for additional investigations." E. A. Steck
+ Chem Eng 57:296 Je '50 270w

MANN, MARTY. Primer on alcoholism; how people drink, how to recognize alcoholics, and what to do about them. 216p $2 Rinehart
616.861 Alcoholism 50-10198

"Views alcoholism as a disease, exposes the symptoms, and examines the various successful treatments including Alcoholics Anonymous. Not a scientific study, but based on scientific fact and intended for the layman immediately and practically concerned with this problem." (Library J) Brief bibliography.

Booklist 47:90 N 1 '50
Bookmark 10:30 N '50 40w

"A book that everyone concerned in the subject as an immediate problem would do well to read and ponder."
+ Kirkus 18:457 Ag 1 '50 320w

"Recommended for collections where subject needs coverage—and there are approximately 4,000,000 alcoholics in the United States." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 75:1656 O 1 '50 70w

"Mrs. Mann is chiefly interested in getting the facts to her readers. . . Most unusual chapter is her 'What to Do About an Alcoholic,' in which is much good counsel for the alcoholic's family and friends. Altogether Mrs. Mann's chief purpose is to get between one set of covers all the tested information and advice her committee has brought together, and this is what she does—not in technical terms but in solid, sensible language for the ordinary reader." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 10 '50 280w

Reviewed by Yvelin Gardner
Survey 86:570 D '50 240w

MANN, THOMAS. Reader; selected, arranged, and edited by Joseph Warner Angell. 754p $5 Knopf 838 50-8080

"The Thomas Mann Reader contains short novels (Tonio Kröger and Death in Venice); short stories; selections from Buddenbrooks, The Magic Mountain, Joseph and His Brothers, and Doctor Faustus; and numerous essays dealing with literature, politics, music, and psychoanalysis. Of peculiar interest is an excerpt, never before published in English, from Betrachtungen eines Unpolitischen." Publisher's note

Booklist 46:335 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Margaret Sinden
Canadian Forum 30:142 S '50 350w
Chicago Sun p4 Jl 16 '50 60w

"A writer like Mann hardly can be assessed in a short review. But it is possible, perhaps, to describe the memorable artistic personality which emerges from the pages of this 'Reader' as one possessing remarkable weight and floridity, seriousness and assurance, and gentle, humorless dignity." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 11 '50 350w
Kirkus 18:245 Ap 15 '50 400w

"Anthology recommended for public and college libraries, even those having Mann's whole writings, since this is easy introduction to his life-work." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 75:1046 Je 15 '50 160w

"A generous, rich volume."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 30 '50 110w
New Yorker 26:123 S 16 '50 190w

"It is to be feared that the scales are too heavily weighted in favor of the ponderous element in Mann's writing, with his exquisite humor largely missing. His unusual skill in handling the lapse of time—one of the marks of the great novelist—is hardly noticeable in the short excerpts. And what a powerful creator of unforgettable characters Thomas Mann is can only be hinted. Mr. Angell was undoubtedly aware of the dilemma which a writer of lengthy prose books offers to the editor of an anthology. He chose comprehensiveness of themes and scope of his author's development over the consideration of simple reading pleasure. It is also arguable whether the editor is justified in condensing material to the point that several pages of the original are missing in the middle of a paragraph, with no hint given whatever. As an introduction to the literary work of Thomas Mann, Mr. Angell's reader is excellent. His short and sober preface ought to be as helpful as are the very competent explanatory notes that link the various selections. It is to be hoped that the book will serve more as an 'appetizer' than a substitute for the unabridged novels." Claude Hill
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:13 Je 10 '50 1200w

Discussion by the editor
Sat R of Lit 33:23 Jl 22 '50 220w

MANNERS, WILLIAM. One is a lonesome number. 256p $3 Dutton
50-5765

Ward Pearson was happily married and had one small son when he discovered that his death was imminent. He did not want his wife to know at once, but he did write his story so that she might learn the truth from reading it. On the night that his manuscript was accepted for publication Ward died.

Booklist 46:262 Ap 15 '50
Kirkus 18:7 Ja 1 '50 130w

"Characterizations fall somewhat short of completeness and there are occasional melodramatic flares and labored passages. Yet withal, it is a compelling story, sincerely and simply told. Reader reaction will be mixed and its very theme makes it of limited appeal." E. P. Nichols
Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 100w

"'One is a Lonesome Number' is a questioning book, but not despairing. And it is tonic in its understanding of a love enriched in marriage." Lisle Bell
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 5 '50 320w

"William Manners has taken a difficult theme: there is no doubt that he has tackled it with sincerity. But the real drama of his situation melts away rapidly in self-conscious cynicism, exasperatingly detailed descriptions of pedestrian events, and the soul-searching of a hero who is an ordinary man who never becomes anything more than just ordinary." Edward Stansbury
N Y Times p31 Mr 5 '50 100w
San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 2 '50 150w

"The publishers say this is a very tender book. I am afraid it is too tender. The love scenes consist largely of Ward and Peg rubbing noses together like Eskimos. Little Chris says the cutest things. It seems a shame, with all this tenderness, that when one reaches page 256 it is only as if a sparrow had fallen to earth." Pat Frank
— Sat R of Lit 33:30 Mr 25 '50 460w
Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Mr '50

MANNHEIM, KARL. Freedom, power, and democratic planning [ed. by Hans Gerth, and others]. 384p $5 Oxford

301 Democracy. Social problems 50-9374

"In this posthumous work the author suggests a way in which society may be planned and yet remain democratic. Mr. Mannheim believed that political, social and economic forces are impelling civilization along a dangerous course, but that progress toward disaster can be arrested. Here he attempts to show what principles will have to be the bases of practices, concerning himself for the most part with such matters as the representative principle in government, the right of suffrage, the right of free speech and of press, and the role to be played by the army." (Library J) Index.

Current Hist 19:291 N '50 50w
Kirkus 18:540 S 1 '50 220w

"Recommended." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 140w

"The general public will not find this an easy book; each new point is developed with excessive repetition of previously established arguments, and the language is at times needlessly abstract. These considerations, of course, will not affect the professional student of social structure. And organizational and stylistic defects aside, there is no question that one is dealing with a compendious, profoundly analytical, and brilliantly original mind." G. L. Joughin
+ — Nation 171:443 N 11 '50 1450w

"While it is not easy reading, this book helps to clear up many political and economic confusions of our time. The role of power and status, of authoritarianism, of competition and aggression in our society are clearly analyzed, and ways of achieving co-operation, better communication, sounder human relations, and a balance of security and freedom are discussed." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 26 '50 260w

Reviewed by Mary Van Kleeck
Survey 86:515 N '50 550w

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH (MRS REGINALD REYNOLDS). Bavarian story. 314p $3 Appleton

50-3452

Weisslingen, a small Catholic town in Bavaria, is the scene of this novel. The time is from the early days of the rise of Hitler, to the American occupation. The heroine is the gentle Lucia, and the story is of her love for two men: the choirmaster who defied the Nazis, and was imprisoned in Dachau, and a young Irish-American soldier.

"A shallow but pleasing novel." Mary Sandrock
Cath World 171:395 Ag '50 200w

"If I find 'Bavarian Story' dull it is not because I disagree with the author's message. It is rather because I find her version of reality a somewhat pale and manipulated one." J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 6 '50 550w

"Would the ideal mate for a lovely girl of 26 be a widower twice her age, further enfeebled by ten years in Dachau? The local priests thought so, and Lucia's engagement with a charming GI of her own age bracket was broken off. Maybe such unions are more customary on the Continent; here in the land of enthroned youth a common faith and common devotion to the same good music would hardly be considered enough. Miss Mannin's local color is, however, uniformly good." E. S. S.
Commonweal 52:326 Jl 7 '50 130w
Kirkus 18:284 My 15 '50 300w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 75:1045 Je 15 '50 100w

"Miss Mannin, yielding to none in her abhorrence of all that Nazism stood for, here gives an easily read tale of one corner of a Germany a world away from Hitler in mood and thought and of some of the aftermath of turmoil in which we ourselves shared." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 25 '50 370w

"Miss Mannin's novel is a convincing chronicle. . . She knows the land and its people. She has, so it seems, directed herself mainly at a Catholic audience, paints vivid pictures of church services. Lucia's frustrated love affair with an Irish G. I., however, is not convincing, nor do the final chapters match the beginning in interest." Richard Plant
+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 2 '50 200w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 33:13 Jl 15 '50 290w

MANNING-SANDERS, MRS RUTH. Swan of Denmark; the story of Hans Christian Andersen; with il. by Astrid Walford. 232p $2.50 McBride

B or 92 Andersen, Hans Christian—Juvenile literature [50-25386]

The story of Hans Christian Andersen told for ages ten to sixteen. The author devotes most of her history to Andersen's youth and his years of struggle.

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 7 '50 60w
+ Kirkus 18:279 My 15 '50 200w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis
New Statesman & Nation 38:660 D 3 '49 110w

"A lively, intelligent and charming picture of a boy who was very 'different' indeed, pursuing his dreams of fame in spite of the dark obstacle of his own queer physical make-up and his poverty. Such a story of a strange genius, however well and reasonably worked out, would seem to be for the rather special child of eleven or twelve, who already knows enough of the famous tales to bring a real interest to it, and to find the tales in his life." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 2 '50 240w

"The most perceptive biography of Andersen yet available to young readers here comes to us from England. Miss Manning-Sanders is to be thanked for a finely sensitive study, based upon unusual understanding of the beloved Dane, whose true story possesses all the elements of a fairy tale." Irene Smith
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 13 '50 180w

"Recommended for ages 10 and up." Eleanor Breed
+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 12 '50 100w

MANSKE, RICHARD HELMUTH FRED, and HOLMES, HENRY LAVERGNE, eds. Alkaloids: chemistry and physiology. 4v v 1 525p il $10 Academic press

547.8 Alkaloids (50-5522)

"The first volume published of a projected [multi-volume] work in which the chemistry and pharmacology of the alkaloids will be surveyed comprehensively. The authors are specialists in the field, and each chapter is essentially a compact presentation of data reported in the published literature. The statements are carefully keyed to the long bibliographies which accompany each paper. Formula diagrams are included frequently, and information about properties, such as the boiling and melting points, is always given." N Y New Tech Bks

"In books of this type, I would welcome more of an attempt to relate the detailed chemistry of the compounds under discussion to the general body of chemical knowledge and theory. . . The editors and authors have, however, performed a highly meritorious job in preparing this volume, and it will undoubtedly become a standard work of reference." D. S. Tarbell
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:4845 O '50 390w

MANSKE, R. H. F.—Continued
"The editors and authors are distinguished authorities, and the book contains abundant evidence of careful editing." E. B. Carter
+ Chem & Eng N 28:3160 S 11 '50 400w

"This is the first of [a series] which will doubtlessly become a vade mecum for those interested in alkaloids and related compounds. The work has been elegantly conceived and the entire group of specialists has done much patient work in difficult fields." + Chem Eng 57:232 Ag '50 430w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:18 Mr '50

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Industrial electrochemistry. 3d ed 781p il $8.50 McGraw 660 Electrochemistry 50-7859

"A well-known work which covers practically all of the electrochemical processes of industrial importance such as electroplating; electrolytic refining; electric melting of metals; the manufacture of such products as calcium carbide, silicon carbide, phosphorus, and graphite; the fixation of nitrogen; and the electrostatic precipitation of noxious fumes. Practical engineering aspects are emphasized, but there is a preliminary section on theory, and frequent reference to basic theory throughout the work." (Library J) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1932, 1940.

"The author's aim has been to treat industrial electrochemistry as a branch of chemical engineering, and he has produced a useful textbook, as well as a valuable reference book for the electrochemist." H. N. Gilbert
+ Chem & Eng N 28:3536 O 9 '50 250w

Chem Eng 57:289 Je '50 1100w

"The work is of interest to engineers connected with practically any of the manufacturing industries that use electricity in chemical processes. It has been well revised in this edition, and much new material has been added." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 130w

"An established text and reference book notable for its treatment of electrochemistry as a branch of chemical engineering."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:55 Jl '50

MANTER, MRS ETHEL H. VAN VICK. Rocket of the Comstock (the story of John William Mackay). 256p pl $5 Caxton ptrs.
B or 92 Mackay, John William. Comstock lode, Nevada 50-6702

Story of the life and career of Irish-born John Mackay, who was one of the millionaires who built their fortunes on Nevada's Comstock lode.

"There is considerable historical ore in this biografy, but unfortunately one must dig for it. Nor is the material well assayed. The volume, we fear, is a source book rather than a well drawn portrait of the iron willed Mackay." John Randolph
— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 14 '50 90w

"This phase of her subject—that is, her account of what Mackay did—the author covers as adequately as can reasonably be expected in view of the lack of dependable source material covering so much of his career. She is considerably less successful, however, in her effort to present a well-rounded and convincing picture of the man himself." Oscar Lewis
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 3 '50 850w

MARCH, RICHARD, and TAMBIMUTTU, M. J., eds. T. S. Eliot; a symposium from Conrad Aiken [and others]. 259p il $3.50 Regnery
B or 92 Eliot, Thomas Stearns 49-48864

"This collection of forty-seven essays on Eliot, first published in England, is a Festschrift designed to honor the poet on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday in 1948. . . The essays vary from chatty personal reminiscences to poems of praise and salutation, testimonies of vital influence received and absorbed, and more conventional critical studies." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:216 Mr 1 '50

"Indispensable to admirers of the poet and to all libraries pretending to keep reasonably abreast of current things, the volume is possibly the gentlest as well as the most human introduction to this difficult poet now available." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Ap 2 '50 500w

"There is, in truth, a great deal of brilliant writing in this symposium and not a little illumination of what is—like it or not—one of the notable literary phenomena of this generation." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:209 F 15 '50 340w

"There is nothing of the forced or occasional in any of these pieces. The great and near great have come together to pay homage which they feel deserved, and their combined effort may become a monument of its type." T. V. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 27:181 Ap '50 300w

Reviewed by Philip Toynbee
New Statesman & Nation 36:308 O 9 '48 1100w

"It is interesting less for the critical appreciations of Eliot which it contains (though some of these are perceptive and valuable) than as a witness to Eliot's stature in the world of letters and beyond." David Daiches
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 8 '50 900w

+ New Yorker 26:122 Mr 25 '50 120w

"The book is thoroughly worthwhile and readable. The net result far outreaches its original purpose." J. W. Bogan
+ Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 29 '50 330w

MARCHAL, LUCIE. Mesh; tr. from the French by Virgilia Peterson. 240p $3 Appleton 49-49329

A novel of life in a middle-class household in Brussels, where a possessive mother is using all possible wiles to break up her son's marriage to Noemi. In the end it is the death of Noemi's pet dog which brings the conflict to a head and settles the question of who should have the weak Charles. The story is told by the sister who longs for a place of her own and views the household happenings dispassionately.

Reviewed by Marie Gibbons
Chicago Sun p21 Mr 19 '50 100w

"The story, excellently translated from the French, is told in the first person by a young woman who lives in Brussels with her scholarly brother and her domineering mother. . . A grim, ominous, hopeless novel; yet under its own limited light and within its own constricted area it is honest work sturdily done." Richard Sullivan
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 12 '50 350w

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 25 '50 130w

"A clever, cumulative portrayal of domination and victimization which is realistically rather than glamorously derived."
+ Kirkus 17:590 O 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by M. L. Monroe
Library J 75:104 Ja 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. T. Nicholl
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 29 '50 500w

"This book grips the reader and keeps him nervously turning the pages—but one can hardly look back at the characters, after the first attentive reading, without a grimace. They are so incredibly unpleasant as to be almost comic." Edith Efron
N Y Times p30 F 5 '50 550w

"Mme. Marchal's story is excellent." John Broderick
+ New Yorker 25:91 F 11 '50 700w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 33:17 F 11 '50 600w

MARCO DA NIZZA. Journey of Fray Marcos de Niza, by Cleve Hallenbeck; il. and decorations by José Cisneros. 115p $10 Univ. press in Dallas

973.16 America—Discovery and exploration —Spanish 50-801

"In the spring of 1539 Friar Marcos de Niza set out from Culiacán in New Spain in an attempt to check on the whereabouts of the legendary Seven Cities of Cibola. . . He returned to Culiacán three and a half months later, having by his own account crossed into what is now Eastern Arizona and Western New Mexico. His report was highly circumstantial and utterly amazing. . . What Mr. Hallenbeck did was to explore the route Fray Marcos said he covered and to bring to bear on his exploration the resources of science and common sense. . . The historical background is presented in brief but sufficient detail and then Fray Marcos is permitted to go it alone. Mr. Hallenbeck then takes the platform in rebuttal, and his analysis of the ancient narrative is the longest unit in the book. The notes that follow are both citational and elucidative." Sat R of Lit

"An excellent translation of Mendoza's instructions to Fray Marcos, of his official narrative, and the certifying documents, is subjected to a searching analysis, especially the vital question whether he actually reached New Mexico and saw the first of the pueblos, Hawaikuk, or was merely lying. The trail is thoroughly traced, and the report of a 'greater Mexico,' sent back by the African slave, Estevánico, fully assayed. Using the modern works of Carl Sauer, Lansing B. Bloom, and Henry R. Wagner, the author condemns the favorable views of Bandelier, Bancroft, Winship, Shea, and other earlier writers. Hallenbeck concludes that 'I myself know of no other character in all history who, so obviously unworthy, has been so zealously defended. So let us pigeonhole "The Lying Monk" with the other Munchausens of history; but we cannot forget him, as one writer has recommended, for his fictionized narrative resulted in the greatest exploring enterprise ever undertaken in the New World.' " A. S. Aiton

+ — Am Hist R 55:1006 Jl '50 450w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 29 '50 180w

"This is a special kind of historical detective job, and of interest chiefly to the specialist. Yet it is out of just such careful, step-by-step analyses that all historical truth emerges. Mr. Hallenbeck is to be congratulated both on the pains to which he went, and the clarity with which he presents his conclusions. Just by the way, anyone who has read and enjoyed Herbert Bolton's new book, 'Coronado,' should by all means get hold of this one. It is the perfect companion-piece." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 9 '50 750w

"Mr. Hallenbeck's indictment is so careful, so reasoned, so forthright a piece of detective work that it does not read at all like an indictment. But his conclusions, though they fly in the face of those of most historians, appear to be inescapable. The material is admirably arranged and presented with a view to rewarding and informing the general reader who may never have heard of Fray Marcos no less than the well-grounded authority on Spanish exploration. . . Mr Hallenbeck died in February 1949. The sumptuous and lavish investiture which Carl Hertzog has given his exciting monograph provides an admirable memorial to his scholarship and zeal." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 My 6 '50 550w

MAREK, CLARENCE THOMAS. Fundamentals in the production and design of castings. 383p il $4 Wiley

671 Foundry practice. Design, Industrial 50-7089

"A survey of metal-casting processes. The various types of molds, how they are made, their uses and limitations; foundry equipment and general production techniques; the properties and uses of both ferrous and nonferrous cast metals; and the economical design of parts to be produced by casting are all discussed. The discussions are condensed and are devoted mainly to practical information. The book can be read by anyone interested in the founding process and its products, but it is designed chiefly for advanced engineering students and practicing engineers who are concerned with the design rather than the actual manufacture of cast metal parts." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 110w

"The book is well organized and admirably illustrated."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:34 My '50

MARGENAU, HENRY. Nature of physical reality; a philosophy of modern physics. 479p $6.50 McGraw

530.1 Physics—Philosophy 50-7392

"The book contains a helpful discussion of the theory of experimental errors, the mechanics of particles and continua and their relation to quantum mechanics, thermodynamics, and statistical mechanics." (U S Quarterly Bkl) The author is professor of natural philosophy and physics at Yale. Index.

"Excellent study. . . Students of physical theory and theory of knowledge will be grateful for the clarity and thoroughness of this competent analysis." P. P. Wiener

+ N Y Times p22 Je 4 '50 230w

"Doubtless intended primarily as a textbook for advanced students, this volume on the philosophy of physics is intelligible to the general reader with modest mathematical and philosophical background. . . Professor Margenau succeeds remarkably in giving a general account of basic ideas and principles, interconnections, and evidential basis, without being merely vague."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:293 S '50 360w

MARGON, LESTER. Construction of American furniture treasures. 167p il $4.95 Home craftsman publishing corporation, room 603, 115-117 Worth st, N.Y. 13

749.211 Furniture 50-1263

Illustrations of thirty-eight examples of early American furniture, with working drawings of each one, complete with measurements, so that each one may be reproduced by the modern cabinetmaker. Index.

Booklist 46:259 Ap 15 '50

"The interior decorator or the lover of antiques will like this collection, but the home craftsman who delights in building fine furniture will find it a treasure house, for construction is the keynote. . . Followed faithfully, the book will enable the craftsman to construct fine furniture few people can afford to buy." William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 19 '50 90w

"Probably the best book in print on the construction of American furniture. The drawings range from Colonial cupboards and paneling, Pennsylvania chests and benches to Queen Anne highboys and Duncan Phyfe tables and chairs, all chosen for their excellent construction and beauty of design. Even such items as a cradle, a clock, cellarette, spinning wheel, and fire screen are included. Anyone, looking for the recognized 'masterpieces' in American furniture will be somewhat disappointed. . . The drawings are complete and should be fairly easy for the home cabinetmaker to follow." R. L. Howell

+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 Jl 1 '50 230w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:144 Je '50 210w

MARGULIES, LEO, and FRIEND, OSCAR JEROME, eds. My best science fiction story; as selected by twenty-five outstanding authors. 556p $3.95 Merlin press, inc, suite 1200, 545 5th av, N.Y. 17
49-49362

An anthology of twenty-five science-fiction stories, each chosen by its author from his own work. Each story has an author's introduction.

Booklist 46:189 F 1 '50

"Many of the 25 choices of 'My Best' are, to say the least, questionable; but the anthology contains enough interesting and unusual stories (and enough data on the peculiar self-evaluation of topflight writers) to make it worth looking into." Anthony Boucher

+ — Chicago Sun p6S F 3 '50 60w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p29 D 11 '49 180w

MARIN, JOHN. Selected writings; ed. with an introd. by Dorothy Norman. ltd ed 241p il $7.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-50306

Selections from the letters and other writings of the American artist, John Marin. The editor has included a biographical introduction. Illustrated with photographs. Reference index.

"Fragmentary but fascinating to those who like to link words and pictures together." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:782 My 1 '50 130w

"Miss Norman has done well to bring Marin's letters before the public at this time, for a generation has unfortunately grown up to accept the portrait of half-god, half-Puck which 'An American Place' has presented of him. In his writings we are able to measure Marin's deep humility, his belief in man and his constant wonder at the works of God." F. H. Taylor

+ N Y Times p1 D 11 '49 750w

"Marin seems to approach writing in the same fashion he approaches painting. He does not rely on the previously established conventions and rules but creates out of the colors of his own speech and personality a curious idiom composed partly of his own humorous verbal inventions and partly of an unclassifiable mixture of Whitmanesque poetry, rustic Abe Martinisms and a Down East twang that fairly reeks of lobster pots and rockweed. . . The book also contains some moving tributes to dead friends (notably Stieglitz and the critic, Paul Rosenfeld) that have the simple grainy beauty of an unplaned pine board." R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 15 '50 850w

MARION, FREDERICK. In my mind's eye; with a foreword by R. H. Thouless and B. P. Wiesner. 315p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Psychical research 50-9559

Autobiography of a telepathist, a native of Prague, who has traveled all over the world as entertainer and lecturer. The second part of his book relates his experiments at the London Laboratory for Psychical Research. No index.

Booklist 47:60 O 1 '50

"However interesting Marion's work would scarcely have merited serious consideration had he not been so willing to submit himself to responsible investigation when at length opportunity offered. From the beginning he was desirous of such attention, but as usual no one bothered! That his gifts certainly justified serious consideration is vouched for by Professor R. H. Thouless and Dr B. P. Weisner. . . Frederick Marion has told a story which certainly suggests that here at least is a case for further serious and responsible enquiry." Herbert Crabtree

Hibbert J 48:306 Ap '50 1100w

Kirkus 18:408 Jl 15 '50 190w

"The book falls between two stools. It adds little beyond a sincere report to the study of the paranormal, and doesn't qualify as a full-fledged autobiography of a stage personality." E. L. Lewis

Library J 75:1287 Ag '50 80w

"A readable and unusual book."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 3 '50 190w

N Y Times p33 O 1 '50 180w

MARKEY, MORRIS. Doctor Jeremiah. 313p $3 Dial press
50-9217

"The case history of the happy professional life and the less successful private life of Dr. Jeremiah Smithers, an outstanding young surgeon in an industrial town." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The tasteless jacket design and Markey's own unfortunate choice of a quaintly comic name for his hero belie the serious nature of the story and the long years of careful, authentic research the fascinated author gave to the medical and surgical background of his tale. He knew doctors and their ways and work intimately, and his Ligon Hattering in 'Dr. Jeremiah' is an affectionate and lively portrait of his great friend, the late Dr. Logan Clendening, who would have applauded the wise and accurate, often moving, and always skillful way the book deals with the complex machinery of hospitals in action and doctors at work." James Thurber

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 3 '50 850w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter

N Y Times p23 Ag 27 '50 180w

"There is no substance to the novel's medical content. Mr. Markey's main concern is for Dr. Jeremiah's emotional hegira, from Nell back to Nell. We cannot share it, since the doctor is not the fine soul or the mature man that Mr. Markey has evidently in mind. He seems in fact a selfish man with the judgment of an adolescent, and we must pause to wonder whether he could possibly be so magnificent a doctor." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 33:75 N 11 '50 340w

MARKHAM, EDWIN. Poems; selected and arranged by Charles L. Wallis. 198p $2.75 Harper

811 50-7489

"The selection is made from published collections now out of print, and unpublished work, and includes some poems appearing here for the first time in book form. Arrangement is by topic; date of writing is not given." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 46:300 Je 1 '50

"Markham was not a man of one poem 'The Man with the Hoe.' He published at least six volumes. The present collection contains about 160 poems, largely selected from those books. These are the expressions of a lofty soul who believed in God, loved humanity, was sensitive to the beauty and the pathos of life, and knew the meaning of duty and courage." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 67:618 My 17 '50 280w

Kirkus 18:257 Ap 15 '50 70w

"It can be argued that anthologies have pretty well taken care of the best of Markham's work but I believe many readers will welcome the wider range of examination offered by this excellent edition." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 75:1189 Jl '50 90w

"Many of the topical and occasional poems are omitted to the benefit of Markham's critical standing. . . Professor Wallis has written an informative introduction of especial value to a newer generation who may not have known the druidic figure whom we remember walking the windy decks of the Staten Island ferry." A. M. S.

Sat R of Lit 33:21 Jl 22 '50 230w

MAROTTA, GIUSEPPE. San Gennaro never says no; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye; il. by Laboccetta. 255p $3 Dutton

914.57 Naples—Social life and customs 50-7827

The author describes Naples: its spirit and its people, as he found it after a twenty years' absence.

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"There is nothing depressing about these sketches; Marotta is in love with his city and its people; he writes of them frankly, but always with understanding and tenderness." J. F. Nims

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Je 11 '50 450w

Kirkus 18:230 Ap 1 '50 170w

"All the poverty, sadness and gaiety of this city are described with a great deal of charm. . . The translation by Frances Frenaye is as usual, very good." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 75:977 Je 1 '50 90w

"There is, perhaps, since Mr. Marotta prefers to treat Naples as a myth, a bit too much insistence upon the city's color, a too careful proportioning of tears and smiles into the cocktail he mixes. I suppose Mr. Marotta has the usual journalist's reluctance to 'depress' his audience, in addition to wishing to maintain an image of Naples he himself helped to create. At any rate, 'San Gennaro Never Says No' is a pretty good tour of a city Stendhal also found fascinating." Alfred Hayes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 11 '50 650w

"Mr. Marotta has a mellow, human sense of fun and a gift for perfect timing; there is never a laugh at the wrong moment, as we go his meditative way. His power of selection and of phrase are admirably served by Frances Frenaye's translation and by Laboccetta's black line drawing, which match their subjects in surface gaiety and deep pathos." Nancy Lenkeith

+ N Y Times p4 Je 4 '50 550w

"A collection of sketches about Naples by an Italian journalist whose ebullient style is well suited to the depiction of a city in which even inanimate objects 'seem to be playing a part.' . . Frances Frenaye's translation gets right into the spirit of things, as do the illustrations by Laboccetta."

+ New Yorker 26:94 Je 24 '50 120w

"Since the novelist Matilde Serao, who wrote about Naples before World War I, no one has interpreted the state of mind which is Naples as sympathetically and as wittily as Giuseppe Marotta. You'll find this book as good as, if not better than, 'The Treasure of Naples,' the same author's first book." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 1 '50 1000w

"It is a pleasant book to read, a book of the moment, giving a contemporary picture in which, perhaps, the local color may be laid on with too heavy a brush. But how can one describe Naples in black and white? Naples is the most superlatively colorful of all cities. Her sky and her sea are the bluest, her sunsets the pinkest and purplest, and even Neapolitan ice cream, to be found all over the world, is the closest possible approximation of the solar spectrum." L. G. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:9 Jl 1 '50 550w

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories, 1950. (V6) 336p il $3 Dutton

796 Sports (45-35124)

The sixth annual anthology of sports, news, pictures, features and short stories, covering all major sports, with a complete sports record for 1949.

Chicago Sun p8 My 7 '50 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

+ Kirkus 18:194 Mr 15 '50 100w

"Interesting and amusing as ever." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 30w

"The editors have collected stories from all sections of the country to give this edition a thorough geographical representation. This absolves them from any charges of parochialism. There is no question that the quality of the sports writing is getting steadily better. If I have any complaint against the editors it is that they seem to have deliberately avoided any sports story which might be controversial. I have always felt that sports writers, like baseball pitchers, do better work when they can 'get up a sweat.' " Tom Meany

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 14 '50 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 100w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Infinite woman. 374p $3 Farrar, Straus

Montez, Lola—Fiction 50-10337

"The first-person story of wily Lucia Riley, born in Ireland, who changed her name to Lola Montero. . . When Lola, a brash young girl, was properly put in her place by a titled English-woman, she vowed she would become a countess some day—no easy task in 19th century Europe for a nondescript—and to reach this goal she decided to become an adventuress, an unstable profession even in the best of times. But reach her goal she did, and 'The Infinite Woman' is the picturesque biografy of a determined, predestined beauty." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 47:115 N 15 '50

"A dazzling display of literary pyrotechnics with all the lusty, adventurous spirit that made 'Moll Flanders' and 'Amber' what they are today." Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 22 '50 450w

"Colorful, fast paced, overladen with picaresque details, but holding reading for those who enjoy passionate adventure."

+ — Kirkus 18:530 S 1 '50 270w

"That early civilizations, anxious to perpetuate the race, in appealing to mythical fertility gods, should have developed orgiastic rites is understandable, but that a modern novelist should seek to transfer this primitive milieu, steeped in esoteric eroticism, to the nineteenth century is incomprehensible, especially by one who has superb skill as a romanticist and writes with dramatic power." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 75:1661 O 1 '50 170w

"The itinerary is familiar, but Edison Marshall is an artful courier. 'The Infinite Woman' is a fruity narrative."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 29 '50 300w

"Delicate readers subject to palpitations at the sight of rich prose or swooning at the sweet scent of romance might do well to stay three paces away from this novel. 'The Infinite Woman' is likely to prove a heady mixture for the unhardened." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p11 D 24 '50 270w

"Mr. Marshall puts his heroine through the routine paces with heavy-handed authority, a rather lush style, and a fine disregard for probabilities of character and incident." E. J. Fitzgerald

— Sat R of Lit 33:27 D 30 '50 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 190w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Love stories of India. 307p $3 Farrar, Straus

50-6507

Fifteen romantic stories laid in India, Indo-China, and China. A brief comment on the history of the story introduces each tale.

" 'Love Stories of India' is a collection of 15 short, sparkling literary gems." L. R. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 26 '50 200w

Kirkus 18:71 F 1 '50 90w

MARSHALL, EDISON—Continued

"Colorful, tense, full of the lure of the East, various characters from potentates to preachers, ingenious plot, and romance to gladden the hearts of young and old." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:563 Ap 1 '50 100w

"Although the author takes several of his themes from the more forthright of the Ten Commandments and relies on the O. Henry technique rather than authentic atmosphere, a few of these stories ring the temple bell. The majority, however, are as subtle as an elephant stampede somewhere east of Suez." Nancy Ladd

— + N Y Times p23 Ap 2 '50 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 30 '50 190w

Reviewed by John Cournos

Sat R of Lit 33:32 Ap 29 '50 320w

MARSHALL, MURIEL. Lovely rebel. 305p $3 Rinehart

50-10199

"What Ames Engleman sought in marriage he found in Jenneth Boyne, fifteen-year-old daughter of an Irish patriot active in the Fenian rebellion of the 1860s. When he brought his bride to preside over his home, he tried to make her over into the proper wife of an English aristocrat. But Jenneth remained a Fenian, and when she discovered that Ames had betrayed her own brother into the hands of British authorities, her vows of marriage were canceled." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Muriel Marshall can write. 'Lovely Rebel' has depth as the study of inherited hates that proved too strong for what might, just barely, have been fused in a great passion." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 5 '50 460w

"The author describes her mid-Victorian scenery nicely, but unfortunately, her people are only figures in wax." James MacBride

N Y Times p33 N 5 '50 130w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 10 '50 110w

MARSHALL, PETER. Mr Jones, meet the Master; sermons and prayers. 192p $2.50 Revell

252 Sermons. Prayers 49-50155

A collection of the sermons and prayers of the late chaplain of the Senate. The sermons were preached in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church in Washington, D.C., and the prayers were offered in the United States Senate.

Bookmark 9:104 F '50 40w

Kirkus 18:170 Mr 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p16 Ja 22 '50 170w

"Dr. Marshall's death last year at age forty-six was a tragic loss to the church and the nation. This book passes on to the reader something of the flavor of his personality." K. D. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:44 F 18 '50 190w

"These are unusual sermons and prayers, which stir the minds and hearts of sympathetic readers as they must have stirred the minds and hearts of the folk who were fortunate enough to hear them as they came from the lips of a rugged, forceful preacher of the gospel." O. J. Aldrich

+ Springf'd Republican p8C F 5 '50 230w

MARTENSEN, HANS LASSEN, bp. Jacob Boehme (1575-1624) studies in his life and teaching; tr. from the Danish by T. Rhys Evans; new rev. ed. with notes and appendices, by Stephen Hobhouse; foreword by Peter Green. 200p $5 Harper

B or 92 Boehme, Jakob 49-10976

A study of the metaphysical philosophy of a seventeenth century mystic, the Silesian cobbler who died in 1624. This work by a Danish bishop, first published in 1882, is here presented in an English translation with notes and appendices by Stephen Hobhouse. Indexes.

"Some of the most profound students of mysticism, and of Boehme in particular, have testified that this is the most enlightening book on Boehme in the English language. I do not know enough about the literature to make any such general statement, but it gives a clear exposition of what is inherently a not very clear system. . . The notes and appendices added by Mr. Hobhouse greatly increase the value of Martensen's classic for readers and students." W. E. G.

Christian Century 66:1425 N 30 '49 370w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 27:177 Ap '50 550w

"The revival of interest in mysticism and the current vogue of Berdayev and Kirkegaard among theologians makes this new edition of Martensen's studies of the life and teachings of Jacob Boehme most timely."

+ Kirkus 17:543 O 1 '49 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 S 8 '50 550w

MARTIN, BETTY, pseud. Miracle at Carville; ed. by Evelyn Wells. 302p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Leprosy 50-10381

Autobiography of a New Orleans girl who, shortly after her nineteenth birthday, was discovered to have leprosy. This account covers the next twenty years of her life, her first hopeful months at Carville, her unhappy days of grief, her eventual dedication to a life of experiment and help to others.

Booklist 47:129 D 1 '50

"Strong in human interest and long on personal history, this is a story of faith which lights the dark places of a dread affliction."

+ Kirkus 18:577 S 15 '50 250w

"The librarian will have to use her own judgment, but at least, it is a book we should all know about." M. D. Read

Library J 75:2161 D 15 '50 70w

"Dismissed now and in a position to forget the past, Mrs. Martin remembers it constructively instead. She still devotes much time and energy to the things about which she feels strongly—dissemination of information about leprosy and a crusade to have it called by one of its alternative names, Hansen's disease. This book is part of what she wants to do. So skillfully edited that we are aware of only the one voice, pathetic at first but growing stronger and more effective, it succeeds in being tremendously persuasive." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 5 '50 800w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p12 O 22 '50 460w

MARTIN, CHARLES MORRIS. Orphans of the range; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 192p $2 Viking

50-9493

Story of thirteen-year-old Jimmy Cawthorne who escaped from a forest fire with his horse and his dog. A kind neighbor took the three in, and Jimmy worked his way, until the happy surprise ending.

"The story is very well told, almost entirely by the conversation of the characters in true ranch vernacular. Jimmy, his horse and his dog all become champions. The story is brought to a satisfactory conclusion by having Jimmy's cowboy prayer answered." B. J. R.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 12 '50 110w

Kirkus 18:471 Ag 15 '50 120w

"Boys will eat up the lively conversation spiked with cowboy lingo and the informational details of the day-by-day routine of ranch life. A bit sentimental but recommended for the reader of cowboy stories." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 75:2020 N 15 '50 80w

"Not recommended in spite of the endless demand for cowboy stories." Anne Izard
— Library J 75:2020 N 15 '50 70w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 19 '50 160w

"This swiftly-moving story of ranch life is filled with action and a rich detail that will be new and exciting to most readers. The illustrations are excellent." R. A. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 33:48 N 11 '50 80w

MARTIN, HENRIETTE, and LEWIS, GITA. Naked eye. 284p $2.50 Greenberg 50-6956

Mystery story.

Kirkus 18:77 F 1 '50 90w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 7 '50 150w

"An adroit mixture of such sure-fire ingredients as murder, assault, kidnapping, blackmail, psychiatry and perpetual menace to a sympathetic hero. Best of all, the unraveling of an involved puzzle never slows up the yarn's lickety-split pace." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p25 My 7 '50 130w

"If the clinical details don't strike you as too forbidding, this book ought to give you an agreeably puzzled evening."
New Yorker 26:124 Ap 8 '50 120w

MARTIN, JAMES STEWART. All honorable men. 326p $3.50 Little 338.885 Trusts, Industrial—International trusts. Germany—Industries and resources 50-8790

"At the conclusion of World War II a mission sponsored by the Department of Justice, and directed by the author, entered Germany to investigate the role of big business in promoting the German war effort. Here is the detailed story of what this team discovered regarding the stranglehold on the economic life of the nation of such firms as I. G. Farben, Metallgesellschaft, Krupp and Degussa." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 8 '50 600w
Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 8 '50 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50

"He shows the fascinating facets of investigating techniques, and the heartbreak of sabotage from conflicting agencies, the feuds between departments, the vacillation from Washington, the interference from American business, and the lack of carry-through, consistent support from General Clay, who seemed interested only in preserving appearances. A frightening book, which unfortunately will probably be bypassed by the people who should read it."
Kirkus 18:405 Jl 15 '50 270w
Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 75:1504 S 15 '50 160w
Reviewed by Dewey Anderson
Nation 171:660 D 16 '50 850w

"This is an important book about an important subject: the failure of the American decartelization policy for occupied Germany. . . Mr. Martin's credentials are excellent. . . Mr. Martin is obviously suffering from a serious case of frustration. In this forthright book he gives names and dates, and some shiny reputations acquire a bit of tarnish from his version of the story. One cannot say that this book is mellow, but on the whole the author presents the main facts dispassionately and in chronological array, leaving it to the reader to draw the inferences." David Fellman
+ — New Repub 123:17 N 27 '50 1050w

"Mr. Martin left military government in July, 1947. . . The progressive restriction of the decartelization policy after that date and Gen. Clay's sudden suspension of the American program against German heavy industry in March, 1948, represented, he feels, a victory of special interests over the declared wishes of the American people and was accompanied by a return to influence on the part of the German business leaders who had supported Hitler. This, and other arguments of the author, will doubtless be subject to sharp rejoinders by other participants in the policy decisions made in Germany. His main conclusion, however, seems sound and has been supported by recent reports from Germany." G. A. Craig
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 24 '50 150w

"The whole story of the revival of Germany's industrial cartels since the war has long needed to be told, and no one is better qualified for the telling than James S. Martin. As civilian director of the decartelization program under Gen. Lucius D. Clay he fought a courageous rear-guard action to defend the integrity of American policy against the raids of the cartelists, German, British and American. 'All Honorable Men' is a bold and convincing account of the effort of powerful private interests to return control of German economic life to huge financial and manufacturing combines." A. Z. Carr
+ N Y Times p10 S 17 '50 600w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 3 '50 320w
Reviewed by Delbert Clark
Sat R of Lit 33:19 O 7 '50 1000w
Springf'd Republican p5C S 24 '50 200w

MARTIN, JOHN BARTLOW. Butcher's dozen, and other murders. 275p $3.50 Harper 364.38 Murder. Crime and criminals—U.S.
50-9716

In his Introductory Note the author says: "This book contains six stories on criminal cases. They are true. The crimes actually happened. The names (with a single exception, noted elsewhere), dates, places, and events were in life as stated here. I have invented nothing. Nontheless, these are stories—not studies in criminology, not articles on police methods. I hope the book suggests the criminal atmosphere—morgues, slums, police stations, laboratories, courts, prisons; but my central intent is to tell some stories about some people involved in crime."

"I approached the reading of 'Butcher's Dozen' with considerable prejudice. And it turns out to be precisely what was expected, a grand book of crime reporting done by one of the best nonfiction writers in the business." Lloyd Wendt
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 15 '50 450w
Kirkus 18:404 Jl 15 '50 170w

"The writer has perfected a muted, naturalistic style which makes most of these grim studies in American crime strikingly effective. Considerable food for thought for sociologists here." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 100w

"John Bartlow Martin, an Ohioan, has examined with distinction and scrupulous craftsmanship, the Cleveland butcher, the three Shelton brothers, and four other criminal figures, only one of whom is not Midwestern. Three of the author's chapters—the title piece, 'The Shelton Boys,' and 'Cops and Robbers,' which is the story of a mob of minor Chicago torpedoes—are rather remarkable. . . The title piece, 'Butcher's Dozen,' is very likely the most distinguished of his chapters." Gilbert Millstein
+ N Y Times p14 O 1 '50 320w

"Highly recommended to those who like their homicides handled with style and restraint."
+ New Yorker 26:144 O 21 '50 130w

"All six of these stories show Mr. Martin as the first-rate reporter he is, reflecting both his talent for running down details and his ability to put the pieces together into a story that holds the reader." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 21 '50 800w

MARTIN, LAURA KATHERINE. Magazines for school libraries. rev ed 196p $2.75 Wilson, H.W.

016.05 Periodicals—Bibliography. School libraries (high school) 50-6277

"Lists and evaluates magazines for elementary and secondary schools, and in appendixes gives directories, newspapers, French and Spanish magazines for school use, periodical indexes, and criteria for evaluating magazines." (Booklist) For earlier editors see Book Review Digest 1941, 1946.

Booklist 46:235 Mr 15 '50

"The author's thorough investigation of the whole field of magazines and magazine reading is evident throughout the book, giving authority to her comments on the various aspects of the problem. Especially valuable is the material included in the appendices: buying information for classroom newspapers and for foreign magazines, plans for teaching units on magazines to high school students, research studies of aviation and home making magazines, and excellent bibliographies to stimulate further reading. In short, this book brings up to date the best tool in its field." E. D. Hodges

+ Library J 75:1039 Je 15 '50 280w

Springf'd Republican p8D Ap 2 '50 90w

Wis Lib Bul 46:30 Ap '50

MARTINDELL, JACKSON. Scientific appraisal of management; a study of the business practices of well-managed companies. 300p $4 Harper

658 Business management 50-5352

"From a career including financial editor, investment counsel president, management consultant, corporation director, and now President of the American Institute of Management, the author has produced a critical treatise on the operation and relations of the modern corporation as a management problem. . . Developing his thesis from the top down, board, management, financial administration, production, research, sales, against the background of case studies, he distils his essential views into 'The Principles of Excellent Management', his practices into an outline of 'Management Audit Material.'" (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Winifred Baum

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 My 14 '50 50w

"An interesting and important book." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 75:403 Mr 1 '50 140w

"It has often been said that those who really know cannot write, and those who can write do not really know. Here, however, is an unusually well-written book, by a man who supervised the investment of over $600,000,000 during his 17 years as president of Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., and who is currently president of the American Institute of Management. Here is a brilliant intellect which has shone in many corners of management appraisal and which has come up with a volume that might well be studied in the business office as well as in the citadels of learning." F. A. Magoun

+ Management R 39:356 Je '50 1050w

"'The Scientific Appraisal of Management' is a sound book. It is of special significance to investment counselors, investment bankers, and others engaged in the analysis of corporation securities. It is also of interest and value to corporation officers who would benefit from the application of systematic appraisal to their management performance." G. H. Blackett

+ Sat R of Lit 33:41 Ja 28 '50 850w

MARVIN, HAROLD MYERS, and others. You and your heart; a clinic for laymen on the heart and circulation; foreword by Paul D. White. 306p $3 Random house

616.2 Heart—Diseases 50-7828

Information on cardiovascular diseases and disorders, written for the layman by five active members of the American heart association. Index.

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

Cath World 171:480 S '50 60w

Reviewed by T. R. Van Dellen, M.D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 28 '50 230w

"Educational, understandable but not to be used without doctor's orders."

Kirkus 18:197 Mr 15 '50 160w

"The authors of this fine book on heart disease are all eminent specialists in that field, but there is more than just authority here. There is a marked readability and simplicity, achieved by the logical expedient of having the technical discussions translated into popular idiom by a professional medical writer, David Loth. The result is a new and outstanding form of medical journalism, one which should set a pattern for the future. Most important of all, this is an optimistic book about a pessimism-generating subject." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p40 Je 11 '50 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 D 10 '50 70w

MARX, HERBERT L., comp. American labor unions; organization, aims, and power. (Reference shelf) 240p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

331.88 Trade unions 50-7742

Articles on the organization, aims, and power of labor unions, selected from various sources. The articles are arranged under the following headings: An overview of unions; Labor legislation; Inside the unions; What labor wants; "Big unionism" on the defensive; The division in labor's ranks; The unions' role in society. Bibliography.

Booklist 46:354 Jl 15 '50

Current Hist 19:105 Ag '50 20w

MARX, HERBERT L., ed. Welfare state. (Reference shelf) 212p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

342.739 Insurance, Social. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. State, The 50-14807

"A compilation of definitions, speeches and articles dealing with the subject of the welfare state. This volume has been prepared to bring together the pro and con arguments on the national high school debating topic: 'Resolved: That the American People Should Reject the Welfare State.'" (Current Hist) Bibliography.

Booklist 47:117 N 15 '50

"The editor has presented an excellent selection of references on both sides of the question and a valuable bibliography is included."

+ Current Hist 19:291 N '50 60w

Springf'd Republican p8D N 12 '50 50w

MASANI, MRS SHAKUNTALA (SRIVASTAVA). Gandhi's story. 101p il $2.50 Oxford

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand—Juvenile literature 50-9868

Simply told story of Gandhi's life written for boys and girls of eight to twelve. By the author of Nehru's Story (Book Review Digest 1949).

Booklist 47:161 D 15 '50

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '50 30w

"This account, written for Indian children, should be of great value in schools."

+ Kirkus 18:609 O 1 '50 90w

"Without doubt, it is a work of love by one who knew and loved Gandhi and who knows and loves children. Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 75:2018 N 15 '50 70w

"I find the Masani book much more sympathetic and moving than Miss Nehru's. For all its brevity, it gives a real feeling of India and of the great person it describes. Much had to be compressed, much omitted, in a large-type story intended for readers under twelve. But they have here a worthy introduction, and an ending that makes clear the overwhelming sorrow of Gandhi's last days." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 12 '50 150w

" 'Gandhi's Story' and 'The Story of Gandhi' [by Krishna Nehru] are both aimed at the younger reader, but the first of these is moralistic and stilted and the second frankly talks down. However, as each progresses, the faults are tempered somewhat by the greatness of the subject matter, though neither approaches the power and the strength, the spiritual quality, of the two books for older readers." Eleanor Brent

+ — N Y Times p42 N 19 '50 150w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. On the hill. 122p $1.50 Macmillan

821 50-91

Twenty-four poems by the English poet laureate. Some are short lyrics, but in the main they are poetic narratives on legendary or heroic themes.

Booklist 46:216 Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by Chester Duncan

Canadian Forum 30:95 Jl '50 70w

"No man living has served poetry longer and with more devotion than has the present Laureate, but the publication of this book of new poems is regrettable. Whatever ardor, whatever creative energy Mr. Masefield has displayed in the past . . . is shown here either in sad dilution or in an unconscious and cruel kind of self-parody. There are occasional passages of beauty, and of course the essential sweetness of the man is apparent everywhere; but these are not enough to outweigh the appalling mediocrity of the verse, both in content and execution." Dudley Fitts

— + N Y Times p33 Mr 12 '50 230w

New Yorker 26:74 Jl 22 '50 50w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

Sat R of Lit 33:14 My 20 '50 2400w

"The 24 poems that make up the volume are echoes of a sturdier Masefield who can still spin a tale of a country prizefight, drop a tear for the rifled tomb of an old king and enjoy the sense of friendly ghosts in Hilcote Manor. They are only echoes of the Masefield of Reynard the Fox, Enslaved and Dauber, but if they are unlikely to win the poet new admirers, they will still serve to keep the old ones mindful."

+ Time 55:106 F 27 '50 750w

Wis Lib Bul 46:16 Ap '50

MASEFIELD, JOHN, ed. My favourite English poems. 310p $2.75 Macmillan

821.08 English poetry—Collections 50-13419

Certain conditions were imposed on the editor in making his selections for this anthology, namely: "His poets are confined to those who are English by habitation. He includes nothing that is not a century old. He excludes all verse that is directly or indirectly a translation from a foreign tongue. Everything printed must have delighted him for fifty years." (Publisher's note)

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 5 '50 160w

"Masefield's scheme is not only circumscribed but arbitrary. . . Also, nothing has been included save those poems which Masefield has loved or admired for fifty years. The result is highly personal. Everyone who reads poetry will have his special fancies, Mr. Masefield may argue, and these are his. It would be ungracious to criticize their inclusion." William McFee

N Y Times p44 N 12 '50 320w

"This is a limited collection, certainly, but it is a most interesting one, full of good things: the work of a man who believes that the making of poetry 'is the overflowing joy of the mind.' " B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 33:76 N 11 '50 380w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Gray-nosed kitten; il. by Marie C. Nichols. 118p $2 Houghton

Cats—Legends and stories 50-8856

This is the story of a gray-nosed kitten which nobody wanted until a lonely little boy, Bennie, adopted him. One day, (it was Bennie's birthday) Old Baldy (that was the kitten's name) climbed a tree and the whole town gathered to rescue it, and after that Bennie was no longer lonesome.

Booklist 47:48 S 15 '50

Kirkus 18:351 Jl 1 '50 70w

"A bit sentimental, but eight-nine-year-olds will love it. Has the advantage of a real plot and plenty of suspense. Writing and characterization are good. Too bad the pictures by Marie C. Nichols are so mediocre." M. E. Martignoni

+ — Library J 75:1514 S 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 29 '50 100w

"One of the publishers' Easy Reading Series, this book combines excellent information about animals with an understanding of the loneliness that superficial differences may cause either kittens or people." M. R. Brown

+ N Y Times p42 O 22 '50 130w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Three ships came sailing in; a story of John Smith's Jamestown; il. by Charles V. John. 246p $2.50 Bobbs

50-7477

The settlement of Jamestown pictured as it seemed to Martin Wynne, aged twelve, apprentice to a doctor who was a friend of Captain John Smith. For ages ten to fourteen.

Reviewed by Louise Davis

Library J 75:640 Ap 15 '50 60w

"Fun and adventure enliven the story and make it an interesting introduction to early American history. . . Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 75:1197 Jl '50 80w

"On the whole, this is an illuminating picture of the hazards of the colony, and the character of John Smith. Much had to be simplified, as the complicated dealings with the Virginia company at home, and, of course, much had to be invented. A page might have been added about the matter of Smith's famous diary and maps, for in the story it is a boy who works on both. It is good reading on the junior high level, also for bright ten and eleven year olds."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 7 '50 240w

"The story is readable, the setting for the most part authentic, and the characters well drawn." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p22 My 28 '50 150w

MASON, RICHARD LAKIN. Shadow and the peak. 298p $3 Macmillan

50-5516

A novel depicting life in a "progressive" boarding school in Jamaica, as seen from the viewpoint of Douglas Lockwood, a young Englishman on the teaching staff.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 16 '50 40w

"Mr. Mason is equally deft with the brilliant, dramatic Jamaican landscape and its humid, slippery social atmosphere. His portrayals are quick and true but warmly tolerant. The children too are vividly done. Yet in its treatment of the central problem 'The Shadow and the Peak' fails to be finally satisfying." Ruth Chapin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 21 '50 250w

Kirkus 17:659 D 1 '49 200w

"Not recommended." M. E. Monroe

— Library J 75:104 Ja 15 '50 80w

MASON, R. L.—Continued

"Richard Mason proves himself to be a perceptive and deftly ironic novelist in 'The Shadow and the Peak,' and does it largely by avoiding any note of creative self-assertion. He writes, in fact, with a relaxed, British reticence—which may not be as unstudied as it appears."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 19 '50 400w

" 'The Shadow and the Peak' is diverting, it is humorous, it contains the necessary serious undertones. . . Despite the fact that he has not tied up all elements of his story, Mr. Mason has proved with this book his skill as a writer. Indeed it may not be long before Mr. Mason himself joins the elders, mentioned above, as a yardstick for writers to come." Robert Knittel

+ N Y Times p34 F 26 '50 320w

"Mr. Mason works very painstakingly over the many mixed-up relationships in his book, but his characters have a tendency to repeat their behavior that would be irritating in real life and is unbearable in fiction. In any case, they seem a poor and humorless group, fully enjoying the torments that have been visited upon them."

— New Yorker 26:102 Mr 11 '50 120w

"It is a fascinating story that Mr. Mason spreads before us, and he does the job with uncommon skill. His opening pages are as arresting and fresh as anything that I've seen in quite a while. . . I could sit up all night quarreling with Mr. Mason's book but it is mighty good reading. And as a story teller, you can never quite outguess him." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:20 F 25 '50 750w

MASON, ROBERT EMMETT. Moral values and secular education. 155p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

370.1 Education—Aims and objectives. Education—U.S. 50-7022

"Within its few pages major theories of contemporary education are clearly summarized. Chapters are given to essentialism, traditionalism, and individualism, and two chapters are devoted to evolutionary naturalism, the theory espoused by the author. Other chapters are entitled 'Values and Public Education,' 'The Emergence of the Secular School in America,' and 'Loyalty, Faith and Criticism.' " (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"Teachers with a philosophical interest will find this to be a valuable book. . . The treatment is eminently fair and objective with meticulous documentation, and copious quotation from the salient works of many recent writers in the field of educational theory." H. M. Gehr

+ Crozer Q 27:377 O '50 250w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 72:279 O 28 '50 370w

"The central body of this stimulating volume is devoted to meanings and values found in essentialism, traditionalism, and individualism. The author's scholarship and conscience are displayed in these areas of discussion. His composition is dispassionate and sympathetic, with evil intent toward none and broad educational outlook for all. Still, in chapters vi and vii, the heat is applied in favor of evolutionary naturalism as the most favorable and productive agency for undergirding an adequate philosophy of modern educational practice." C. D. Champlin

School R 58:557 D '50 1000w

MASSE, HENRI JEAN LOUIS JOSEPH. Chats on old pewter; ed. and rev. by Ronald F. Michaelis. 240p pl $3.75 Wyn

739.533 Pewter 49-10977

New edition of a book which first appeared in 1911 (Book Review Digest 1911). "There is a bibliography and a glossary; the latter informs you concerning the meaning of such elusive terms as 'bimbelotier,' 'cistil' and 'quaich.' There is advice to collectors, a chapter on church pewter; there are touch-marks, lists of pewterers, and remarks on care of a collection in the 'Chats' series." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50

"Useful for those [who] enjoy pewter spoons or tankards, plates, or candlesticks." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:45 Ja 1 '50 100w

MASSING, PAUL W. Rehearsal for destruction; a study of political anti-Semitism in imperial Germany. 341p $4 Harper

296 Jews—Persecutions. Jews in Germany 49-50156

"This book is a historical study of Germany in the era of Bismarck and the Kaisers, and more particularly it is a study of the tides of anti-Semitism in those portentous years. In tracing the social and political events of the period, Paul Massing shows specifically how anti-Semitism was used as a tool by those who understood its power potentialities. His objective, dispassionate study substantiates the point that German anti-Semitism was historically rooted neither in the nature and social role of the Jews nor in widespread popular sentiment." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Certainly little in it will be of use to specialists. So of the fifty pages of documents. However for the general reader the volume may well possess real value. Moreover, the comprehensive character and serious purpose of the series to which it belongs, the organizations which sponsor it, give it and other volumes in the series a certain scholarly importance and value." R. G. Usher

+ — Am Hist R 56:105 O '50 600w

"Massing's competent and painstaking analysis of the imperial era is very successful. . . There is an implicit warning in this study in its depiction of a rather moderate movement suddenly swelling to gigantic proportions. If this resulted largely from economic forces and factors, it is a matter to be pondered gravely. If, on the other hand, it derived from a purely inner development, we must conclude that the symptoms do not always betray the gravity of the disease. The author of this competent work does not answer this question, which is indeed outside the framework of an analysis of anti-Semitism in Imperial Germany. He does, however, stimulate thought on this wider problem which, in its entirety, has not yet found a satisfactory answer." Bart Landheer

+ Am Soc R 15:319 Ap '50 1050w

Ann Am Acad 270:175 Jl '50 230w

Reviewed by J. M. Yard

Christian Century 67:532 Ap 26 '50 280w

Current Hist 18:296 My '50 10w

Foreign Affairs 28:683 Jl '50 20w

Kirkus 17:506 S 1 '49 220w

Reviewed by David Spitz

New Repub 122:18 Ap 10 '50 700w

Reviewed by Thomas Mann

N Y Times p3 D 11 '49 1050w

Reviewed by R. J. Sontag

Pol Sci Q 65:600 D '50 700w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear

Springf'd Republican p5C S 24 '50 120w

Reviewed by Julius Schreiber

Survey 86:262 My '50 310w

"Compression of such a vast subject into some two hundred pages of text represents a fine achievement, but it necessarily entails the loss of amplifying explanations. One of the most illuminating sections of the book discusses with great insight the attitude of Social Democracy, including its tragic belief that anti-Semitism was only an immature form of rebellion, a passing stage in the march toward true anticapitalist revolution. The volume includes a useful collection of illustrative documents."

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:68 Mr '50 250w

MASTERS, KELLY R. (ZACHARY BALL, pseud). Joe Panther; il. by Elliott Means. 241p il $2.50 Holiday

50-10209

"Joe's capture of a live alligator brought him the job he most wanted, as a helper on a fishing boat which took tourists from Miami to the Gulf Stream for deep-sea fishing. This was the beginning of an exciting summer for Joe, a Seminole Indian, a summer in which he proves himself capable and worthy of the life he wanted." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"A fast-moving, well-integrated plot, vivid descriptions and even a wonderful dog make it a fine adventure story for all readers over twelve or thirteen." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 26:382 S '50 140w

Kirkus 18:355 Jl 1 '50 170w

"The background and Seminole information is authentic but scanty. No character development and too many action incidents make this book of only average worth. The colored jacket is cheap and sensational not representative of the book's contents." A. B. McCreary
Library J 75:1837 O 15 '50 70w

"Well written, vivid, fast moving story with a new setting for older boys and girls." Siri Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 15 '50 130w

"Mark this down as one of the most thrilling, satisfying teen-age books of the year." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p10 N 12 '50 140w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 33:52 N 11 '50 220w

MASTERS KELLY R. (ZACHARY BALL, pseud). Piney. 273p $2.75 Little

50-7647

Piney, a teen-aged Mississippi backwoods boy, is the central character. His mother had been dead eight years when his father was executed for murder, leaving the boy to the care of a distant cousin. The story is of Piney's growing up on the farm, of his friendship with the boy Doff, and his final break with his brutal cousin. The book closes with the death of Doff after a tornado, and Piney's choice of a new way of life.

Booklist 46:281; 303 My 15 '50; Je 1 '50

Bookmark 9:243 Jl '50 40w

"Portraying the subtle growth of a boy into a man before his boyhood has really ended is no mean feat for any writer. Mr. Ball has not been completely successful but his novel is touched with honesty and deep love. That is enough to make it worthwhile." V. P. Hass
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 2 '50 350w

Christian Science Monitor p6 Ag 12 '50 140w

"Sweet but never soft." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 26:397 S '50 80w

"Melodrama here but without heavy accent, tenderness in the understanding of an orphan boy and his relation to the adult world, and a simplicity of style, all are woven into a story of fresh interest."
+ Kirkus 18:186 Mr 15 '50 180w

"Recommended to all readers." M. G. Checrallah
+ Library J 75:774 My 1 '50 110w

"The author piles up the agony to a point where Piney's spirit is no longer sustained by his father's maxims—to a point, in fact, beyond which the story defeats itself in a welter of woe."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 16 '50 100w

"Zachary Ball has written in lucidly poetic prose of freshly conceived characters." Jules Bergman
+ N Y Times p19 My 28 '50 170w

Springf'd Republican p5D S 10 '50 110w
Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Jl '50

MATCHETTE, FRANKLIN J. Outline of a metaphysics; the absolute-relative theory. 108p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

110 Metaphysics 50-6311

"His editor tells us that Mr. Matchette, having missed getting a collegiate education, devoted himself to business, meanwhile nursing philosophy as an avocation. From his initiative and ingenuity there came a successful career as hotel operator, numerous inventions in vacuum cleaning, the American Air Cleaning Co., the Nitragin Co., New York's Statler hotel and other imposing structures. Upon achieving unusual success thus, he relaxed his preoccupation with such affairs and pursued philosophy." (Christian Century) This book is a statement of some of Mr Matchette's ideas on what he calls "the absolute-relative theory." Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Houf
Christian Century 67:706 Je 7 '50 1400w

"One wishes that [Matchette] had developed the details of his system more fully. If early in life he had gone into philosophy instead of business, it seems likely that he would have become one of the foremost philosophers of our time." W. K. Wright
Crozer Q 27:280 Jl '50 400w

School & Society 71:143 Mr 4 '50 40w

MATTHEWS, CHARLES D. Palestine—Mohammedan Holy Land; with a foreword by Julian Obermann. 176p map $3 Yale univ. press

297 Palestine. Mohammedanism 49-50057

"The volume contains translations of the full text of two Arabic manuscripts, one of the 13th century and one of the 14th. The first, a compilation of still earlier writings, is a Muslim pilgrim's guide to the holy places of his faith in Palestine. The second, written by a preacher of the mosque at Hebron, deals with the shrines of that city. The titles of the two are 'The Book of Arousing Souls to Visit Jerusalem's Holy Walls' and 'The Book of Inciting Desire to Visit Abraham the Friend of Allah.' " (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 67:734 Je 14 '50 140w

"The translator has collated both texts with copies in the British Museum and the Bibliothèque Nationale. Twenty pages of introduction, sixteen pages of notes on the text, a glossary of Arabic terms, a selected bibliography, an adequate index, and an illustrated map make this volume an important new addition to the Yale Oriental Series. The documents are significant for knowledge of Palestine as a pilgrimage center, for the stories and legends of events and persons associated with the shrines."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:31 Mr '50 270w

MATTHEWS, COURTLAND W. Aleutian interval [poems]. 61p $2.50 Frank McCaffrey, pubs, 2116 4th av, Seattle 1, Wash.

811 World war, 1939-1945—Aleutian islands—Poetry

Poems depicting the life of the men who served thru the Aleutian campaign in World war II.

"Mr. Matthews is not a practiced poet, but his versified account of life in the Aleutians during the war has a sweetness and sensitivity, an unaffected quality, that are quite appealing." R. H.
+ Nation 170:66 Ja 21 '50 110w

"There is a wide range of line lengths and rhyme schemes in the book, but there is a sameness of mood which palls at times. The book might be shortened to good effect by taking out some trivial and repetitious comments." A. M. Sullivan
Sat R of Lit 33:42 Ap 15 '50 280w

MATTHEWS, HERBERT LIONEL, and MATTHEWS, EDITH CROSSE (NANCIE MATTHEWS). Assignment to austerity; an American family in Britain. 338p $3 Bobbs

942.084 Great Britain—Description and travel. Great Britain—Social life and customs 50-7886

In alternate chapters Herbert Matthews, New York Times correspondent, and his wife, "Nancie," describe life in England during the last five years. He writes about politics, economics, and the state of England under the present ruling party. Mrs. Matthews discusses her side of the picture: house hunting, schools, rationing, education, and visits in different parts of England and Ireland.

Booklist 46:281; 313 My 15 '50; Je 15 '50

Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 50w

Reviewed by Arthur Veysey
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 28 '50 410w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p8 My 27 '50 2450w

"Herbert Matthews is, certainly, one of the ablest newspaper correspondents living, and his share of this joint book is as passionately interesting as it is scrupulously fair. . . What perhaps was less to be expected was Mrs. Matthews' talent. She is not only a born writer, witty, incisive, warm; she also is most admirably feminine, answering all the personal, intimate questions that Mr. Matthews leaves one shyly holding behind one's back, afraid to intrude." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 52:322 Jl 7 '50 850w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 28 '50 240w

Reviewed by A. H. Uhl
New Repub 123:20 S 11 '50 430w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 40:404 N 4 '50 550w

"Mr. Matthews is a well known reporter and an acute political observer. His latest book constitutes an interesting commentary on the purposes, trials and cloudy future of modern Britain. . . Mrs. Matthews's very readable report on her stay in England is all the more interesting because she herself was born and brought up there. . . Mr. and Mrs. Matthews have written a fascinating and a true book." L. M. and L. L. Hacker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 28 '50 2050w

"This reviewer considers its outstanding virtue the clear, well-proportioned picture it affords of Britain today." Emily Hahn
+ N Y Times p6 My 14 '50 950w

"A good deal of their material is by this time on the familiar side, but both members of the team are skillful enough to give it fresh life. Their reactions to the English variety of Socialism are on the whole favorable, although both of them are distressed over the price the middle class is paying for the country's social transformation."
+ New Yorker 26:101 Je 3 '50 170w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 11 '50 650w

Reviewed by W. H. Stevenson
+ Sat R of Lit 33:13 O 14 '50 700w

"England has never been so much exposed to authors as the United States, but since Froissart, Voltaire, Emerson, Max O'Rell, Dibelius, down to almost contemporary reporters and commentators, the rude islanders have attracted a good deal of comment. And they have listened with attention, often with agreement, and gone their way in scarcely ruffled calm. They have now another report to read, and one that is highly readable, illuminating and friendly."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 17 '50 850w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Jl '50

MATTHEWS, RODERIC DONALD, and AKRAWI, MATTA. Education in Arab countries of the Near East: Egypt, Iraq, Palestine, Transjordan, Syria, Lebanon. 584p il $6 Am. council on educ.

370.956 Education—Levant. Arabs—Education 49-50272

An American professor and an educational leader in Iraq have compiled this compendium of facts and figures on academic activities in Egypt, Palestine, Transjordan, Syria, Lebanon, and Iraq. Index.

Reviewed by Nathaniel Stewart
Library J 75:695 Ap 15 '50 140w

"But for the change which overtakes the Near East even more rapidly than our West, Education in Arab Countries could be justly described as a permanent contribution. But already the description of the Palestinian school systems has been rendered obsolescent by the events of the last two years, especially as far as the organization of Hebrew education is concerned. And in some of the other countries the masterly presentation of the report is no longer a completely adequate account of the actual conditions. Nevertheless, it would be difficult to overestimate the value of the Commission's work. . . It is a rare privilege for a reviewer to deal with a work equally distinguished by accuracy of information and maturity of judgment." G. E. Von Grunebaum
+ Library Q 20:150 Ap '50 1700w

"The treatment is descriptive and textual and leaves much to be desired in background information and general interpretation. None the less, in this encyclopedic presentation, scholarly and well reported, the authors have made a promising beginning to what may become a crucial interest center for Americans." C. D. Champlin
+ — N Y Times p29 F 12 '50 160w

School & Society 70:383 D 10 '49 30w

MATTHEWS, WILLIAM, comp. British diaries. 339p $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

016.92 Diaries—Bibliography 50-5974

Annotated bibliography of British diaries written between the years 1442 and 1942. Arrangement is chronological. There is an index of diaries extending over more than ten years, and a general index.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 2 '50 80w

"Omissions there must be, especially in unpublished diaries, but Professor Matthews is breaking virtually virgin soil and is to be congratulated on a scholarly bibliography, well-arranged and indexed. It should prove of great value to librarians." D. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 23 '50 300w

"For the political and social historian, for the scholar in general, these writings are a valuable mine. . . Professor Matthews has described well over 2,000 diaries, whether in manuscript or printed in any form. His book is excellent in every way, clearly and logically arranged, and briskly annotated." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 33:20 Je 3 '50 190w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:257 Je '50 240w

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO, ed. See Oxford book of American verse

MAUGHAM, ROBERT CECIL ROMER. Line on Ginger. 186p $2.50 Harcourt

50-6431

The story of James Merton's search for a former war comrade, Ginger. In his quest he meets other members of his tank unit, all greatly changed in the post-war years. Ginger is finally found on an East Yorkshire farm, where he reluctantly tells the story of his life. At the end James is not sure he can save him from the life of crime he has chosen, and he is left with the feeling that all the war survivors he has met are lonely and godless.

Booklist 46:276 My 1 '50

"A story which could be commonplace and unconvincing if it were not for the vitality of Robin Maugham's storytelling. There is no excess baggage, every page of the book is essential to the narrative, and the pace is swift, the interest unflagging. Despite its brevity, it is a most satisfying book to read, and in this brief compass the author has proved that he is an artist in his own right." Kelsey Guilfoil

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 26 '50 500w

Commonweal 52:134 My 12 '50 120w

"There's a natural narrative gift here, a facility, a fluency which gives this its accomplishment."

+ Kirkus 18:108 F 15 '50 180w

" 'Line on Ginger' manages to create a certain amount of tension and it demonstrates once again that Mr. Maugham is able to keep us in suspense until almost the very last page. The trouble is that when we reach those last pages Mr. Maugham, having carefully built us up to his climax, lets us down rather badly. Having meticulously set the stage for his denouement, he dismisses the whole thing in a few hasty pages of semi-sociological claptrap which purport to explain away a character as complex as Ginger, but which succeed only in giving us the parody of life." J. J. Maloney

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 26 '50 600w

"As readable and exciting as any thriller, 'Line on Ginger' suffers nevertheless from one of its author's principal virtues: speed. There are gaps in this whirlwind, often slick, narrative which make the reader wish to raise questions." James Stern

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 2 '50 450w

New Yorker 26:112 Mr 25 '50 160w

"Mr. Maugham's talent was demonstrated by his earlier stories, and there is evidence of that talent here, particularly in the swift, compelling movement of the narrative, even in its most unconvincing moments. Nevertheless, it would seem that 'Line on Ginger' was too hastily put together, after the highly commendable plot was thought out." C. W. W.

— + San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 23 '50 500w

"This is a fine working plot. . . Plotting is the thing Mr. Maugham does best. He tells his tale with deceptive ease, he illumines it with meticulously chosen bits of dialogue. Everything contributes, everything builds toward the planned effect. There isn't a wasted word or moment and certainly there is no time for boredom. Yet I derived no pleasure from the tale. . . I was repelled by the writer's marked disinterest in his characters. I felt with growing certainty that Mr. Maugham has no intention of ever getting mixed up personally or emotionally with the people he writes about —rum fellows as he sees them." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ap 8 '50 500w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Maugham reader; with an introd. by Glenway Wescott. 1217 $5 Doubleday

828 50-9916

This anthology includes two novels: The Painted Veil, and Christmas Holiday; the whole of The Summing Up; two plays: Our Betters, and The Constant Wife; and several short stories.

Booklist 47:137 D 1 '50

Kirkus 18:434 Ag 1 '50 60w

'He will never be among the first rank of creators, because he has always known precisely what he was doing; but at least half a dozen of his books will last for a long, long time. He has had, and never explained or underlined, enormous pity for his characters; but none, I think, for himself. He came to his maturity during World War I, and his timing was perfect. His unique blend of gin and quinine tonic was exactly what a bitter generation needed. Long may it remain." Christopher Morley

+ N Y Times p3 O 8 '50 1350w

"Glenway Wescott, who got to know Maugham during the war years Maugham spent in this country, has written a personal, critical, and affectionate introduction that is weakened by the unnecessarily defensive way he discusses Maugham's place in the contemporary literary hierarchy. This serves only to emphasize the fact that, of all living writers, Maugham needs defending the least; he is what he is, and you can take him or leave him."

+ New Yorker 26:145 O 14 '50 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 22 '50 550w

"Here in one volume are some of Maugham's riches. Perhaps not the profusion of colors of rubies, emeralds, and old gold, but a valuable treasure of fine stainless-steel watches and utensils, all working with a beautiful efficiency. To say of Maugham that he is not a very great writer is at this date a pointless banality, insinuating more than it says, and particularly gratuitous from an age that bandies the word 'great' about so much." William Barrett

+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 O 21 '50 1150w

MAURIAC, FRANCOIS. Proust's way; tr. from the original French, Du côté de chez Proust, by Elsie Pell. 105p $3 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Proust, Marcel 50-6681

"A literal translation of brief essays by the well-known French novelist setting forth his impressions of certain aspects of Proust's personality and thought." Library J

Reviewed by Theodore Kalem

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 10 '50 550w

"Material of interest to readers who would take more pleasure from the original. Not recommended." B. B. Libaire

Library J 75:558 Ap 1 '50 60w

"This anxious little volume is written around Proust rather than about him. Here Mauriac has gathered eight informal essays on Proust and a few of his contemporaries—notably the great editor Jacques Rivière. Because some of these were written for periodicals over a period of twenty-five years, the book is uneven in quality, disjointed, often confusing; yet sometimes illuminating and moving." Elizabeth Gallaher

Nation 170:477 My 20 '50 450w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 122:28 Ap 24 '50 650w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 25 '50 270w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p16 Ap 30 '50 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 30 '50 200w

"As an essay it is disorganized, with a carping and unsympathetic tone. It is not improved by an inept translation, wretched typography, and an exorbitant price for 100 wide-margined, small pages. A promising title page—but a disappointing book."

— Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ap 29 '50 150w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 70w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Maurois reader; novels, novelettes and short stories; introd. by Anne Fremantle. 448p $4.50 Didier pubs.

50-5026

Contents: Novels: Silence of Colonel Bramble; Weigher of souls; Bernard Quesnay. Novelettes and short stories: Harpies on the shore; After ten years; Guardian angel; Bonsoir, Chérie; The unexpected always happens; Earth dwellers; Role of Myrrhine; Schoolboy's return; Chelsea Way; Proust in England; If Louis XVI had had an atom of firmness; Fragment from a universal history published in 1992.

MAUROIS, ANDRE—Continued

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p5 Ap 3 '50 70w

"As Readers go, this one is eminently satisfying in the fact that it contains mostly completed yarns." Henry Sowerby
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 19 '50 700w

"The impression throughout this collection of Maurois is one of fatty artificiality. There is none of the classic French économie of thought or portraiture or plot. Instead, a sleazy Gallic cinematic aura, Grade B, surrounds each piece. The plots of the short stories are too blatantly contrived. The whiff of stale Chanel and the acrid dregs of last night's fin greet the nostrils in a wave of bourgeois clamminess. . . With relief and joy I re-read The Silence of Colonel Bramble, and here, certainly, Maurois redeems himself. Along with the subtle humor and kindly sensitivity, he shows an admirable and far-reaching understanding of the inscrutable Anglo-Saxon, not an easy feat for a Frenchman, or vice versa." Elizabeth Johnson
+ — Commonweal 51:445 Ja 27 '50 370w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 15 '50 230w

Reviewed by Roger Pippett
N Y Times p36 F 19 '50 380w

New Yorker 25:80 Ja 7 '50 80w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 33:12 Ap 29 '50 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 12 '50 420w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Proust: portrait of a genius; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins [Eng title: Quest for Proust]. 332p il $4.50 Harper

B or 92 Proust, Marcel 50-7198

A study of the life and writings of Proust, based on some hitherto unpublished material. They are "letters to his family during military service; letters to friends and men of letters at all stages of his life; a long and fantastically involved set of instructions to his broker, and so on. . . One letter to his mother is a uniquely literal proof of the accepted theory that Proust's asthma was related to his obsessive need for affection." (Atlantic) Bibliography. Index.

"The new documentation (which makes this book essential reading for the specialist) enables Maurois to tell us more about how some of Proust's characters took shape; aside from this, the interpretative section is not notable for its contribution to Proustian criticism. It does, however, a very welcome job of restating, succinctly and tidily, what has been said in various places before, and of molding this into an enlightening study." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 185:86 My '50 1000w

Booklist 46:334 Jl 1 '50

"Remarkably perceptive literary biography, using unpublished as well as published material."
+ Bookmark 9:210 Je '50 30w

Reviewed by Louis Zara
Chicago Sun p5 Je 6 '50 600w

"Andre Maurois has left to others the startling delineation of a bizarre life. He has written, it must be evident to any reader, the definitive critical biografy of Marcel Proust." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 23 '50 550w

Reviewed by Theodore Kalem
Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 10 '50 180w

"Andre Maurois has prepared a brilliantly balanced and utterly revealing portrait of the man Proust and of his book. Of course, like all the Maurois biographies, this one is closely-knit and magnificently written." W. P. Sears
+ Churchman 164:17 Ag '50 120w

"Maurois had for his use many papers in the possession of Proust's family which have not been published elsewhere. They are helpful in restoring the shadowy figure of the writer. He has a detached manner when he discusses sexual inversion, and his discussion of this element in Proust's life and Proust's writing is interesting and plausible. His handling of the time quality in Proust's novel is also successful." George Miles
+ Commonweal 52:298 Je 30 '50 600w

"There is nothing too profound or too critical here, but he does provide—with sufficient intelligence, insight and sympathy a portrait of the exacerbatedly sensitive genius."
Kirkus 18:123 F 15 '50 130w

"A useful assembling of material for students and the best interpretation available for the general reader of Proust. Recommended for all Proust collections." B. B. Libaire
+ Library J 75:777 My 1 '50 140w

"Decidedly, this is a book which admirers of Proust should read." E. M. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 19 '50 270w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Gallaher
Nation 170:477 My 20 '50 550w

"A conventional biography, and good of its kind. It is readable, and incorporates material hitherto unpublished—notebooks, memoranda and, particularly fascinating, a number of letters to and from Proust's parents." John Farrelly
+ New Repub 122:28 Ap 24 '50 100w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 39:634 Je 3 '50 2500w

"Mr. Maurois's book, certainly the best single volume on the subject, is very likely to be the one to which subsequent writers will return both for its body of information and for the general outlines of what will probably be the standard portrait." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 16 '50 1500w

"To the already vast literature on Proust (of which the selective bibliography in this volume gives but a sampling) and to his own thoughtful and sensitive reading of the great novel, Maurois has been able to add a whole new body of documentation to confirm his interpretation." Justin O'Brien
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 30 '50 350w

New Yorker 26:120 My 6 '50 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 2 '50 400w

"M. Maurois has no axe to grind. He studies Proust from no special point of view. He is comprehensive, impartial, well informed. . . He undertakes here to provide the general and rather passive reader with an easy compendium of all that he might wish to know on Proust. . . The problems posed by Proust's study of sexual inversion, by his ferocious dissection of love and jealousy, by his laying bare of all the vanities of social life, by his esthetics deserve far more intellectual courage and more critical acuity than are here displayed. The book is very skillful, an excellent professor's summary for a survey course. One had a right to expect more." H. M. Peyre
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:19 Je 3 '50 950w

"A very interesting and useful book. . . On Proust as a man there is not much new to say, but what is said is worth pondering." D. W. Brogan
+ Spec 184:862 Je 23 '50 900w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 300w

Time 55:120 Ap 17 '50 460w

Times [London] Lit Sup p516 Ag 18 '50 1650w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Jl '50

MAXWELL, J. B. Data book on hydrocarbons; application to process engineering. 259p $5 Van Nostrand

661 Hydrocarbons 50-6249

"This book presents in tabular or graphical form, as appropriate, basic data on physical and thermodynamic properties for hydrocarbons, some related organic compounds, and certain fractions of petroleum, important in process engineering operations in the petroleum industry. The topics covered include the following: physical constants, characteristics of petroleum fractions, molecular weight, vapor pressure, fugacity, critical properties, thermal properties, density, viscosity, combustion, flow of fluids, flow of heat, equilibrium flash vaporization, fractionating towers. References are given to the sources of the data." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"This reviewer does not hesitate to say that Mr. Maxwell's handbook is one of the most valuable publications in the field of reference books, as far as petroleum refinery process and designing engineers are concerned." V. L. Shipp
+ Chem & Eng N 28:1872 My 29 '50 600w

"The verdict: a book which will be extremely useful to any engineer whose work deals with hydrocarbons, and which, though not above all criticism, represents a good practical realization of the author's purpose." W. H. B. Geoghegan
+ — Chem Eng 57:308 Jl '50 750w

"The book will be helpful to chemical engineers concerned with the commercial processing of hydrocarbons, related organic compounds, and petroleum fractions."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:250 Je '50 160w

MAY, EARL CHAPIN, and OURSLER, WILLIAM CHARLES. Prudential [a story of human security] il. by E. Stanley Turnbull. 372p il $5 Doubleday

368.3 Prudential insurance company of America. Dryden, John Fairfield 50-10119

"The story of the founding of the Widows and Orphans Friendly Society in Newark in 1874; changed in 1875 to the Prudential Friendly Society to embark on the business of industrial life insurance, later to add regular life insurance, and the subsequent development of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. In the main it is the story of its founder, John F. Dryden, and his successors in the presidency of the company, their vision and policies, climaxed in the policy of decentralization of administration now in progress." (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 18:498 Ag 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:1666 O 1 '50 120w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman
N Y Times p51 N 12 '50 150w

MAY, ROLLO. Meaning of anxiety. 376p $4.50 Ronald

157.3 Fear 50-6600

"This study seeks to bring together in one volume the theories of anxiety offered by modern explorers in different areas of our culture, to discover the common elements in these theories, and to formulate these concepts so that we shall have some common ground for further inquiry." (Pref) "The author [has] included a study of the philosophical predecessors of the scientific theories of anxiety. Besides a short reference to Spinoza's and Pascal's thoughts on anxiety, he explains Kierkegaard's sensitive and increasingly modern theories of anxiety." (Survey) Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 71:190 Mr 25 '50 50w

"This volume is not only a lucid compendium of the modern theories of anxiety; it also presents some aspects of the phenomenological approach in psychiatry. In our 'age of anxiety,' it will be welcomed by all those who, for professional or personal reasons, have an interest in understanding the basic motivations in the processes of integration and disintegration of personality, as well as of social and cultural organizations." Therese Benedek
+ Survey 86:376 Jl '50 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:352 S '50 280w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. The crown and the cross; a biography of Thomas Cromwell. 292p $4.50 McGraw

B or 92 Cromwell, Thomas, earl of Essex. Great Britain—History—Henry VIII, 1509-1547 50-9595

This biography of Thomas Cromwell by a Roman Catholic writer, is chiefly concerned with his political career, his rapid rise and sudden fall under Henry VIII, his part in the dissolution of the monasteries, his aid in making Henry an absolute monarch.

Kirkus 18:599 O 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 24 '50 1500w

"Cromwell is a magnificent subject for biography. . . Unfortunately Mr. Maynard has not used these elements to their utmost. Though not entirely unsuccessful, he is less colorful than a Francis Hackett and less sharply analytical than a Lytton Strachey. In the end his volume shapes up less as a biography of a man than a history of certain aspects of the reign of Bluff King Harry." T. C. Chubb
— + N Y Times p26 S 10 '50 460w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly
Sat R of Lit 33:12 N 4 '50 650w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Last garland; a sequence of sonnets. 56p $2 Monastine

811 49-11383

"A sequence of fifty Shakespearean sonnets [which] is a tribute of love and faith written in sorrow to the memory of his wife by Theodore Maynard." Cath World

---

"It is new proof of his gifts that in the month following her death, his grief and his devotedness, should have found spontaneous voice in these poems, many of which are in the noblest tradition of the sonnet—all of which portray tenderness and bravery and the added burdens that grief places upon the man who is also a poet." E. R. Hanlon
+ Cath World 170:398 F '50 70w

"As perhaps befits Maynard's more formal verse, there are a number of archaisms here, but I do not think that they detract from the lofty beauty of the poems. Occasionally, in this sequence, he calls to mind the metaphysical poets of the seventeenth century." M. S. Curtler
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 1 '50 140w

"The sonnets are competent, tender, and personal. In restrained Shakespearean patterns, they tell the story of the lovers' meeting, their marriage, and the rewards and problems of their life together. . . A few of the sonnets are contrived and almost too intimate in detail, but they help carry the major theme, and might damage the framework of the poem if omitted." A. M. Sullivan
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:36 Ja 14 '50 360w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays, 1949-1950. 312p $3 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Contents: Doctor Faustus lights the lights, by Gertrude Stein; The camel and I, by Morton Wishengrad; August heat, by Stanley Richards; Going home, by John Gainfort; The beast, by Gerty Agoston; Day before yesterday, by Norman Holland; Exodus (a dance-drama), by M. W. Robinson; Period house, by W. P. Eaton; Fantasia on an old familiar theme, by Frank Lanzl; The long fall, by C. V. Howe.

Booklist 46:331 Jl 1 '50

"The best volume yet issued in this well edited series. . . Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 60w

"A valuable book for amateurs and television studios."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 N 26 '50 130w

MEAD, DANIEL WEBSTER. Hydrology; the fundamental basis of hydraulic engineering; 2d ed rev. & enl. by Mead and Hunt, inc; chapter on Drought by Henry J. Hunt. 728p il maps $7.50 McGraw

551.57 Water. Hydraulic engineering 50-7787

"Of particular interest due to the ever-increasing concern with the hydrological problems facing metropolitan and industrial areas in various sections of the U.S. Minor changes and revisions appear throughout; several new sections are added. Designed for teaching, the text is eminently practical, with a wide subject range. . . The selection and arrangement seems well done. Fully documented." (Booklist) First edition published in 1919.

Booklist 47:42 S 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1302 Ag '50 140w

MEAD, MARGARET (MRS GREGORY BATESON). Male and female; a study of the sexes in a changing world. 477p $5 Morrow

392 Sex. Anthropology 49-10784

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"A great deal in Dr. Mead's evidence requires to be taken on trust, based as it is on nothing more solid than private impressions and unverifiable intuitions as to what things mean, 'really' or symbolically. . . However, Dr. Mead also advances certain precise and important hypotheses. . . The final chapters on America seem to me the most convincing." S. F. Nadel
Am Anthropol 52:419 Jl '50 700w

"The chapter on marriage in America is one of the most original and stimulating in the book, and is destined to arouse much beneficial discussion. And so it is with the whole book. Male and Female is a substantive contribution to the understanding of the sociology of the status and relations of the sexes in the United States." Ashley Montagu
+ Am Soc R 15:152 F '50 750w

"In this wise and penetrating book, Margaret Mead has given us a very solid piece of reading as well as a capstone to an eminent scientific career." L. M. Young
+ Ann Am Acad 268:246 Mr '50 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Lynde
J Home Econ 42:298 Ap '50 400w

"There is no doubt that this is remarkable book. It is certain to make almost every reader think, to induce him to ponder anew on many problems. . . Only a long review could even list these problems. Therefore I must content myself with recommending the book strongly, though with some riders." M. Gluckman
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 F 14 '50 550w

"The book is badly written, the style is obscure and it is unnecessarily overlaid with technical jargon. Miss Mead, in fact, has not mastered the art of saying what she means clearly, simply and shortly. . . So much having been said by way of disparagement, it would be ungracious not to come out handsomely with the avowal that the book represents a great achievement; indeed, for originality of material, freshness of treatment and wisdom of conclusion, there has been nothing like it in the anthropological field since the days of Rivers and Malinowski." C. E. M. Joad
+ — New Statesman & Nation 39:221 F 25 '50 1350w

Reviewed by John Useem
Social Forces 28:444 My '50 440w

Reviewed by Julian Huxley
Spec 184:184 F 10 '50 1400w

"Dr. Mead is seldom at a loss for a happy phrase; but when she has not one to hand she is liable to lapse into verbiage. . . A reader is hardly surprised to learn from a note that Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, in criticizing an article of the author's completely misunderstood her meaning and had to publish a correction. But occasional obscurities detract little from the merit of a learned and highly original book, much of which is of absorbing interest and urgent importance."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 3 '50 1350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:93 Mr '50 240w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Whaler 'round the Horn; il. by Edward Shenton. 244p $2.50 Harcourt

50-9530

A story for boys about the adventures of Rodney Glenn who one hundred years ago shipped out of New Bedford on the whaler Pelican.

Booklist 47:104 N 1 '50

"Imaginatively conceived, this book is one of Stephen Meader's finest—a story which any boy and his father will enjoy." E. B. Hungerford
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 12 '50 250w

Horn Bk 26:483 N '50 100w

Kirkus 18:561 S 15 '50 130w

"Recommended for grades 7-9." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 75:1839 O 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 31 '50 70w

"This is not a closely knit story but rather a series of adventures on land and sea, with characters entering and leaving the narrative. The book does three things of value: It gives a vivid account of the old whaling industry; it relates a thrilling voyage round the Horn; and it pictures the native Hawaiian life." Howard Pease
+ N Y Times p24 O 1 '50 170w

"Stephen Meader can always be depended upon to tell a good story. This is another one." M. P. A.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:54 N 11 '50 180w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 N '50

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LA MONTE). Texas Star; il. by Lloyd Coe. 148p $2 Crowell 50-13236

A story of Texas in 1845. The youthful hero is Andy Blake who travels to Texas with his brother and sister to join their parents settled near Austin. The Texas Star of the title is the horse Andy is given for his own. For ages 8 to 10.

Booklist 47:81 O 15 '50

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 1 '50 200w

Kirkus 18:351 Jl 1 '50 130w

"An untouched period in books for young people. Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 60w

"Mrs. Meadowcroft, that capable and vigorous writer on historical themes, has again blended fact with fiction to give an entertaining picture of early days in Texas." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p13 S 3 '50 150w

MEADOWS, DENIS. Tudor underground. 365p $3.50 Devin-Adair

50-13666

"A stirring historical novel of the Jesuit attempt to bring back a vigorous Catholicism to Elizabethan England in the days of the Oath of Supremacy when recusancy was dangerous." Library J

"The material is top-notch: figures like Edmund Campion and Father Persons, quick adventures and deep thought. But it doesn't meld into a very successful novel. The author too carefully labels the characters black and white." Mary Sandrock
+ — Cath World 172:72 O '50 250w

Chicago Sun p4 S 12 '50 70w

Kirkus 18:338 Je 15 '50 190w

"The descriptive passages and the characterizations are good. Catholic doctrine appears well handled. Recommended." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 100w

"On the whole, the author does bring to life the stirring struggle between two contending religious ideologies. He is not exactly flattering to the Virgin Queen in a brief portrait. On the other hand, he presents Walsingham as a gentleman, generous, courtly and kind." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 20 '50 250w

"A startling but fascinating combination of standard historical fiction and hagiography." W. R. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 12 '50 330w

"Walsingham himself—that always enthralling personality—comes alive with considerable authority, and there is an excellent account of the secret Jesuit press at Stonor Park outside London. . . There is also some good suspense in the scenes of Hugh's narrow escapes, and good writing (after too much theological argument) in the pages where he makes the hard decision between his devotion to the Jesuit cause and his dawning love for Walsingham's daughter." Elswyth Thane
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:34 S 9 '50 380w

MEADOWS, PAUL. Culture of industrial man. 216p $3.75 Univ. of Neb. Extension division 301 Industry. Economic policy. State, The 50-5926

"Professor Paul Meadows of the University of Nebraska has undertaken an ambitious project. His approach is primarily sociological rather than economic; he begins with the statement that 'the quest of the modern industrial man is a search for significance as a human being.' . . Meadows's formula for contemporary liberalism is a strong welfare state which still has limited powers, and he emphasizes the importance of other groups and agencies." Nation

---

"How the work will be regarded will likely depend upon the predilections of its readers. One group will wonder audibly about what the colleges are coming to; others will find in it a bulwark for their faith in the planning idea; and many others will speculate upon just what the volume has accomplished. The author packs a lusty punch, but he delivers scattered blows at a tremendous target!" H. M. Diamond
Am Soc R 15:446 Je '50 800w

"The author says, 'It is difficult for any person to describe the form of this new liberal State, even in slight detail.' One can hardly describe what one does not clearly see, and the author is using a clouded glass in his analysis of possible solutions to present social and economic problems." W. L. Mezger
— Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 10 '50 300w

Reviewed by A. H. Cole
Management R 39:491 Ag '50 490w

"The book makes one of the most successful efforts in recent years to rehabilitate the word 'liberal,' to rescue it alike from the reactionaries and the totalitarian radicals. And it offers a program of social adjustment which is intelligent and hopeful, if a little vague in terms of political realities. . . Unfortunately, the book is marred by a turgid, academic style which will probably discourage most readers except the students to whom it is assigned as a text. A writer who uses 'The Stratigraphy of Liberalism' as a subhead can scarcely expect a wide audience." C. E. Noyes
+ — Nation 170:453 My 13 '50 240w

"Mr. Meadows's book, in the rhapsodic, if somewhat foggy style appropriate to professorial prophets, is sure to impress anyone who has wondered why so many millions of men hate and fear the industrial civilization of our time so much and regard its achievements and its future with so little enthusiasm. . . Mr. Meadows warns against the 'pathetic delusion' that Communist industrialism is a cure for capitalist difficulties and defects. It is evident that the author shares these unfriendly feelings toward the industrial culture of our time. . . This picture of 'industrial man' and his cultural malaise is not profoundly penetrating or highly original, but it summarizes in a useful and stimulating way a widely accepted interpretation of some of the issues of our time which have emerged in an irrevocably technical society." Virgil Jordan
Sat R of Lit 33:42 Ja 28 '50 1100w

"The book has neither an author index nor a subject index, but a detailed section of 'Notes' at the end of each chapter is a redeeming feature. It is written in a clear and stimulating fashion, with a content sufficiently challenging to elicit from many a second reading." E. W. Noland
+ — Social Forces 29:213 D '50 1650w

"This is an exciting book, for those who can stand a high-level vocabulary, and who have the patience to endure being battered with hard, discouraging facts for chapter after chapter before the author considers the reader softened up to the point of accepting modern liberalism as the only hope." D. C. Coyle
+ Survey 86:265 My '50 600w

MEALAND, RICHARD LEWIS. First person. 272p $3 Doubleday
50-5841

A satirical novel about a New York columnist, headliner of a New York daily. His column, his worries, his women, including his wife, and his jealousy of another columnist fill the story of his life, up to the time that his angry wife, tired of his affairs, departs for Reno.

Reviewed by R. W. Glasgow
Chicago Sun p9 Ap 16 '50 250w

"Because the hero is what he is and Richard Mealand is what he is, a writer with a facile, clever, often witty pen, 'The First Person' may achieve a popularity, which like that of Luke's bete noire, columnist Harry Bannock, could rightly be called 'sensational.' " Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 26 '50 550w

Kirkus 18:5 Ja 1 '50 170w

"It is all reasonably good fun, with a lot of bitterness poured into the pages. Mr. Mealand isn't exactly a satirist; like Luke Peters he is a soap-box orator in a blue serge suit, with a sharp wit, a charge account at Bleeck's, and a little tap dance that he throws in for laughs. He is selling honesty, something most people don't know, as Luke would put it, from a hole in the head. 'The First Person' helps to explain the difference." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 26 '50 650w

"Mr. Mealand's novel indicates that he has a good working knowledge of some of the more sordid phases of journalism, the mechanics of getting out a newspaper, the strange phobias and delusions of some of our more oracular by-liners. 'The First Person' would further indicate that Mr. Mealand has a low opinion of column writers, their standards and their methods, and a considerable fear of the influence they wield and the havoc they may work." Richard Maney
N Y Times p34 F 19 '50 470w

"The author is not preaching; he's in the entertainment business himself. His novel, purposely light, will amuse many and give them a bit of truth to chew on, too." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 17 '50 800w

Sat R of Lit 33:28 Mr 18 '50 140w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL), and MEANS, CARL. Silver fleece; a story of the Spanish in New Mexico; il. by Edwin L. Schmidt. 213p $2.50 Winston 50-7750

A tale of the Spanish resettlement of New Mexico from old Mexico in 1695, fourteen years after they had been driven away by hostile Indians. This story describes the arrival of the Rivera family, with their flocks; their difficulties in resettling the lands, once owned by them; their search for family silver presumably buried years before; and their final success. For ages twelve and older.

MEANS, F. C.—Continued

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Book 26:286 Jl '50 120w

"Absorbing and diverting in its wealth of authentic detail. . . There is good material here for background reading, but the reading may be too static and rarefied for many."
Kirkus 18:180 Mr 15 '50 220w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:641 Ap 15 '50 130w

"Well done and long needed." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 80w

"Before opening this new title in 'The Land of the Free' series, one wonders what aspect of Spanish colonization will be stressed, what angle taken on their religious contribution, and what will be called their gift to our present culture. After reading, one is satisfied on all scores. One feels assured that thoughtful research, and knowledge gained from living Spanish and Indians lie behind this book. . . It is an interesting American background, rich in colorful detail."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 7 '50 290w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker
N Y Times p18 Je 4 '50 190w

Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 170w

Wis Lib Bul 46:22 Je '50

MEANY, THOMAS WILLIAM. Baseball's greatest hitters; foreword by Branch Rickey. 278p $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball—Biography 50-7731

"There are 20 chapters in this book, and each is devoted to one of baseball's greatest batsmen since 1900. The list includes Cobb, Ruth, Speaker, Collins, Hornsby, Wagner, Williams, Di Maggio, Gehrig, Lajoie, Paul Waner, Foxx, Simmons, Terry, Joe Jackson, Kiner, Ott, Heilmann, Musial and Sisler. Meany [is] a former president of the Baseball Writers' association and now a sports editor of Colliers." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Booklist 46:305 Je 1 '50

"An appetizing mixture of anecdote and straight facts, complete with hitting records and an index."
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 11 '50 80w

Kirkus 18:294 My 15 '50 130w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1191 Jl '50 40w

"The files are closed on all but four of the twenty hitters whom Tom Meany selects as the greatest, but it is that excellent sports writer's gift to restore his heroes as if they were still annoying pitchers from St. Louis to Boston. In point of fact, since he had to draw the line somewhere, he limited his lineup to batters who did most of their playing after 1900, thus excluding such immortals as Wee Willie Keeler and Ed Delehanty. While elder statesmen fuss over that, just about every one else should agree that this is a practically perfect book by an authority who can really write." J. K. Hutchens
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 4 '50 450w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Hans, a dog of the border patrol. 253p $2.50 Knopf

Dogs—Legends and stories 50-5748

"Chet Hillyard is sent on a special assignment for the U.S. Border Patrol, an organization formed to prevent illegal smuggling of aliens across the border (operating in this case through the South). After an exciting chase, capture and escape with the help of his boxer, Hans, Chet aids in the arrest of an international smuggler and saboteur. The author has compiled an appendix of information concerning the Border Patrol and careers in that service." Kirkus

Kirkus 18:101 F 15 '50 100w

"Older boys and dog-lovers will enjoy the dramatic story of Chet and his boxer." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 75:568 Ap 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 23 '50 50w

"Similar in style and characterization to other dog stories by the author, the tale's merit is strongest in the interesting background and fast action. . . Toward the end Chet lands in the hands of the smugglers. The author pulls no punches in details of Chet's treatment: an eye is gouged, a finger bent backwards, a knife run under a fingernail, and other tortures performed. The sensitive reader may find this a little strong." F. C. Smith
N Y Times p24 F 26 '50 180w

"It is a fast-moving, exciting story that both boys and girls will probably enjoy."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:47 Ap 8 '50 90w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Surfman; the adventures of a Coast guard dog. 267p $2.50 Knopf

Dogs—Legends and stories 50-9126

This story of the deeds of a dog and his master, a coastguardsman on the Carolina coast, is based on a number of stories of men and dogs the author heard from the lips of coastguardsmen while he was serving as a volunteer.

+ Kirkus 18:387 Jl 15 '50 130w

"Fine story of a courageous group of young men and a dog. Good, authentic picture of the Coast Guard service. Recommended for all over 12." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 75:1417 S 1 '50 70w

"All of the colonel's followers will want to read his new book. Though he has an awkward style and no literary pretenses he puts down man and dog so that one feels they must be true. . . The mystery and plot are one of the least good this writer has invented, but the information is worth while." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 17 '50 180w

MEERLOO, ABRAHAM MAURITS. Patterns of panic. 120p $2 Int. univs. press

157.3 Fear 50-5823

An analysis of panic, what it is, how to conquer it, and how to prevent it. The author is a psychiatrist, who escaped from the Nazis, and came to this country. He now lives in New York as a practicing psychoanalyst. Bibliography. No index.

"The volume contains a wealth of anecdotal descriptive material. The forty-seven-item Bibliography will be of considerable assistance to serious students of elementary collective behavior. On the whole, however, it adds little to the existing inadequate knowledge of panic. While the author is making a pioneering effort in an undeveloped area of inquiry, it is to be hoped that he will introduce greater precision in his future formulations." Tamotsu Shibutani
— + Am J Soc 56:207 S '50 750w

Reviewed by M. H. Kuhn
— Ann Am Acad 271:216 S '50 440w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 122:18 My 22 '50 3400w

"Although comprehensive and palatable reading for the layman, 'Patterns of Panic' is written especially for social workers, doctors, and others who are called upon to deal with fear and panic in these disturbed times." B. M. Murphy
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 12 '50 230w

MEES, CHARLES EDWARD KENNETH, and LEERMAKERS, JOHN ANDREWS. Organization of industrial scientific research. 2d ed 383p $5 McGraw

658.57 Industrial research 50-6794

"This book deals chiefly with the setting up and administration of research laboratories in industrial corporations. The chapters on other types of laboratories occupy relatively little space. The senior author is associated with the Eastman Kodak Company and has the title, Vice-president in Charge of Research. His colleague is Assistant Director of the same company's research laboratory. . . The first edition, written by the senior author alone, was published in 1920 [Book Review Digest 1920]. This edition, written 30 years later and with assistance of a co-author, is largely new, even though the essential viewpoint is the same." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 47:42 S 15 '50

"Every one interested in research laboratory administration can have confidence in the essential information set forth in this book." W. A. Hamor

+ Chem & Eng N 28:2918 Ag 21 '50 250w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:875 My 15 '50 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:44 My '50

MEG, ELIZABETH, pseud. of ELIZABETH WENNING GOEPP and MARGARET WEBB SAUNDERS. A cheese for Lafayette; il. by Helen Belkin. 31p $1.50 Putnam

50-13319

Story for grades three and four about Nantucket in 1786. Out of gratitude to Lafayette for his help in their oil trade, each of the Nantucket islanders contributed "the milk afforded by his cow during the space of twenty-four hours" to make a huge cheese. This cheese, weighing 500 pounds was sent to France by sailing ship.

+ Kirkus 18:415 Ag 1 '50 110w

"Good storytelling technique, but this very delightful tale is at times condescending. Illustrations are very charming and typical of Nantucket. Bound in boards, it would not be practical for library circulation unless prebound, but it seems to us to have a place in the literature which proves to children that history is people." N. L. Rathbun

+ — Library J 75:1416 S 1 '50 80w

"Stories like this one help young children to a deeper realization of our country's past. It is too bad that such an appealing tale isn't presented in a more attractive format." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 20 '50 140w

MEGROZ, RODOLPHE LOUIS. Profile art through the ages. 131p pl $7.50 Philosophical lib.

704.941 Silhouettes. Rock drawings and paintings 49-11642

"A study of the use and significance of profile and silhouette from the stone age to puppet films." (Subtitle) "The history begins with the often skilful scratches of the cave men and from there to the colored silhouette of the Egyptians, and on to the finely balanced decorations of Greek vases, where shadow representation reached its greatest beauty. Chapters on the human profile, painted and cut out silhouettes of the 18th and 19th centuries follow. The book ends with a discussion of the modern applications of the silhouette to the screen, as illustrations, and as a medium of art expression." (Chicago Sun)

Booklist 46:169 Ja 15 '50

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 12 '50 100w

"All this plus material on the famous Edouart and lesser practitioners of the most charming of lesser arts should prove as generally useful as it is entertaining." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:107 Ja 15 '50 80w

"A delightful, excellently illustrated, English-produced book on an absorbing branch of the graphic arts, written and designed with fullness and charm. Particularly brilliant is the treatment of Lavatar's physiognomical outlines, and nineteenth-century silhouettes, the precursor of the camera portrait." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 121:27 D 12 '49 80w

School Arts 49:4a Mr '50 200w

"Mr. Megroz tells us frankly that his book is a compilation, and he draws lavishly on the writings of other art historians and critics; but for all that it is a curious and individual work, and obviously inspired by the strong individual taste of the writer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p260 Ap 23 '49 550w

MEHL, MARIE A., and others. Teaching in elementary school. 541p il $4.50 Ronald

372 Teaching. Education, Elementary 50-6420

"Elementary education, as considered in this book, encompasses the all-round growth of children. The authors synthesize the widely accepted modern views of the elementary-school teacher's functions, but do not present a 'new' philosophy or procedure." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is intended for use in courses in elementary education; it is a comprehensive treatment of much of the theory and practice of teaching. Instructors will find the book adaptable to their own methods of teaching." Gertrude Boyd

+ El School J 51:107 O '50 650w

School & Society 71:174 Mr 18 '50 40w

MEINECKE, FRIEDRICH. The German catastrophe; reflections and recollections; tr. by Sidney B. Fay. 121p $3 Harvard univ. press

943.086 Germany—History 50-5221

A German historian attempts to explain the reasons for Germany's present situation. He begins with the age of Bismarck and traces the developments in German thought and character, which led to the two disastrous recent wars. No index.

"Few historians have written so wisely of the inner conflicts of German history as Friedrich Meinecke, but his audience in this country has been limited by the fact that very little of his work has been translated. Professor Sidney Fay's desire to correct this situation is therefore, understandable; and his choice of Die deutsche Katastrophe was probably determined in part by the thought that, in days when the German problem is very much on our minds, it might be useful to have before us Meinecke's reflections on the causes of the German tragedy. Meinecke's admirers will perhaps regret Professor Fay's choice, and with reason, for, although it comes from the pen of the dean of German historians, this is in some ways a disappointing book. . . Professor Fay's translation is generally readable but at times inaccurate." G. A. Craig

Am Pol Sci R 44:1029 D '50 1200w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder

Ann Am Acad 271:231 S '50 700w

Booklist 46:198 F 15 '50

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 2 '50 220w

"It is the book of a profound historian, no doubt, but at the same time a book of personal emotions and reflections, written amidst defeat and disillusionment, in a situation when only chaos was visible and the further development of Germany was mere guess. . . Sidney B. Fay, Harvard's Professor Emeritus of European History, offers us an English version of the book that makes as beautiful reading as it is an accurate translation. But we have some doubt whether it is fair to the author to publish his book four years late, without giving him a chance to revise it, since we are convinced that Professor Meinecke would today formulate many phrases somewhat differently from his draft in the first nervous months of the catastrophe. Nevertheless it is good that this honest and intelligent analysis is published in English and it will be useful reading." Max Fischer

MEINECKE, FRIEDRICH—Continued

+ — Commonweal 51:513 F 17 '50 850w

Current Hist 18:165 Mr '50 70w

Foreign Affairs 28:683 Jl '50 100w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 75:103 Ja 15 '50 130w

"[Meinecke's] reflections on the German catastrophe, slight though profound, were published in German in 1946; if written to-day they would be, one suspects, less despairing and less honest. As it is, they make up probably the most revealing book to come out of Germany since the war. On the one hand, there is deep historical analysis—a clear demonstration that Hitlerism had a long past in Western civilisation and particularly in Germany... But there is also another side to the book—a sort of crude cunning, peculiar to the German mind. . . So Meinecke, the great historian, turns aside from profound analysis to showing that Hitler owed his success to chance. . . By the end one despairs to see such high intellectual gifts turned to such crude uses." A. J. P. Taylor

— + Manchester Guardian p4 Je 27 '50 430w

Reviewed by P. W. Massing
New Repub 122:20 Ap 10 '50 1150w

"Of all the German books written after 1945, that by Meinecke is the most noteworthy and the most admirable. At the end of a long and distinguished career, the old man finds the strength and the courage to reappraise the values in which he and Germany had so firmly believed for eighty years. His book should be widely read in Germany in the years to come." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 29 '50 1150w

"Professor Meinecke is now 87 years old. How few writers have written their best books after 80, and how hard it is for octogenarians to interpret the present to itself. The Nazi catastrophe can occasionally be illuminated, but can it be explained by a historian of the past who was over 70 when it began? I am obliged to answer no. Professor Meinecke's book can be interesting when he draws on his old knowledge of the past. . . Altogether, this book is interesting as a symptom; but it would be unfair to judge an outstanding historian by these octogenarian afterthoughts." H. R. Trevor-Roper

N Y Times p12 F 5 '50 700w

New Yorker 25:101 F 18 '50 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 Ap 23 '50 380w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:36 Je 10 '50 270w

"This is a memorable little book, which does not put Germany into a corner by itself but places it in the stream of those intellectual and social developments which have affected Europe as a whole." G. N. Shuster

+ Survey 86:263 My '50 400w

"Professor Meinecke oscillates between recognizing historical responsibilities and trying to shift the blame on to others. Sometimes his book is an analysis of the failure of the German governing classes; sometimes it is an altogether too clear revelation of the moral and intellectual defects of that class. . . The translation must have been for Professor Fay a labour of love. Unfortunately, the labour has been more loving than successful. Meinecke's German needs the services of a professional translator, who would not shrink from lyrical phrases; Professor Fay is too accurate a scholar to depart from the precise German of the text. But he, or his proofreader, has also allowed elementary errors to slip by."

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Ag 4 '50 850w

"As the distinguished dean of Germany's historians, Meinecke deserves a respectful hearing, and his story is rich in experience. Although an octogenarian, he retains, to an amazing degree, the capacity to think with and to inspire youth. His way through the chaotic and thorny history of his nation is made the more impressive by the very fact that, unlike his great contemporaries Alfred Weber and Walther Goetz, he was not always a fighter for democracy." Sigmund Neumann

+ Yale R n s 39:737 summer '50 600w

MELADY, JOHN HAYES. Nature dictionary; a picture guide to living things; il. by Samuel Nisenson; with an introd. by Marvin M. Brooks. 119p $2 World pub.

574.03 Natural history—Dictionaries 50-11992

Colored pictures and descriptive text describe some 500 nature subjects for young readers.

"This 'Nature Dictionary' has something of the same quality of nature lore taught by Kipling. Its pictures and text make cheerful friends of our wildlife neighbors, be they crocodile, butterfly, or the unfamiliar quetzal. . . Frankly, I found it rooted me to the chair. . . If delightful for the adult, the Dictionary will be doubly so for the child." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 N 4 '50 550w

"Pictures of animals, birds, insects and plants with a chatty descriptive text should make this fun to browse through; too bad the illustrations by Samuel Nisenson are very badly reproduced and the colors muddy and dull."

Kirkus 18:676 N 15 '50 90w

Library J 75:2158 D 15 '50 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 26 '50 100w

MELCHER, EDITH. Life and times of Henry Monnier, 1799-1877. 253p il $4.25 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Monnier, Henri Bonaventure. France—Social life and customs 50-7071

"Henry Monnier was an artist, an actor, a writer, and that elusive phenomenon known as a humorist. His comic and satiric prints belong to the period of Daumier and, although he has never attained and does not deserve first place among French comic artists, the number of his admirers has grown and the market value of his work has increased in the twentieth century, during the years when Daumier's greatness has been receiving due recognition. . . It is the aim of this book to romanticize Monnier as little as possible. . . The story of his life reflects the times in which he lived: Monnier might almost be called a symbol of the nineteenth century." (Pref) Bibliographies. Indexes.

Bookmark 10:37 N '50 20w

Current Hist 18:355 Je '50 40w

Kirkus 18:126 F 15 '50 180w

"This scholarly biography is extremely readable and should have a wide public in all the creative fields represented in addition to the people who want to know what makes the French people 'tick.' Well written by an author with a clear sense of direction. Highly recommended for theatre, art, literature, and French political collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:991 Mr 15 '50 100w

"The biographer makes the most of her subject, at bottom a trivial personality, by etching in his detailed background—the literary, artistic and social movements of the 'romantic' period and the emergence of 'realism.' Her book is a solid work on an unsubstantial character, diverting in spots and appropriately illustrated, which should attract and reward students of nineteenth-century France." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 18 '50 800w

"Edith Melcher, Associate Professor of French at Wellesley, has drawn a full-length portrait of Monnier. . . Her biography is amply documented, entertaining, written with simplicity and charm and refreshingly free of the pedantry and of the jargon which often spoil academic studies." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p19 My 7 '50 400w

"Miss Melcher writes out of a broad knowledge of the period and the bourgeoisie when she interprets the latter's development through the course of French life and popular ideas of the Restoration, July Monarchy, and the Second Empire. . . Her social history embodies the first full-length account in English of Monnier's life." O. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 18 '50 350w

"In her admirable study Miss Melcher . . . has traced the rise and fall of this rich personality. More that that, she has integrated his career with his age, so that esthetics, art history, belles-lettres, the stage, as well as the salon and the studio, all figure in the blend that constitutes her book. She has composed it out of a ripe endowment of learning, with sensitive perception, with sympathy undiluted by sentimentality, and with many stimulating excursions into the side alleys of related cultural developments." Leo Gershoy
+ Sat R of Lit 33:25 My 27 '50 800w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:307 S '50 260w

MELCHIOR, WILLIAM TOBIAS. Instructional supervision; a guide to modern practice. 485p $4.50 Heath

371.1 Teachers, Training of

A study on the improvement of teaching performance, which uses a series of illustrations of practice to prove its points. "Libraries, workshops, mutual observation, planning conferences, curriculum change, and many other devices are treated in full detail and with ample bibliographical support." (School & Society) Index.

"The naïveté and patness of some of the illustrations were probably deliberate, and the experienced supervisor will recognize such stereotypes as the visionary new supervisor, the overlooked-gem veteran teacher, the astute professor of education, the inflexible board member, and the super-efficient superintendent in a clearer light as he ponders the broader meaning of the book as a whole. It is a textbook which will challenge the reader to do some thinking on his own." R. H. Anderson
El School J 51:169 N '50 900w

"The most systematic and thorough work in recent years on [this subject]." W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 72:218 S 30 '50 180w

MELLEN, KATHLEEN (DICKENSON). Lonely warrior; the life and times of Kamehameha the Great of Hawaii. 179p $3.50 Hastings house

B or 92 Kamehameha I, the Great, king of the Hawaiian Islands. Hawaiian Islands—History 49-48206

Biography of the Hawaiian ruler who united the islands in the eighteenth century. The author has combined known facts and legends to produce this life story. Glossary of Hawaiian words. Map on end papers.

"A spirited and sympathetic biography."
+ Kirkus 17:599 O 15 '49 100w

"A solemn, informative but faintly dull biography. . . It is a distant and slightly cold portrait of a man too perfect and just to seem human. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
Library J 74:1677 N 1 '49 100w

"A brief bibliography would have been helpful, particularly if Mrs. Mellen had appended to each entry an evaluating paragraph—a service she was clearly well equipped to render."
Sat R of Lit 33:30 Mr 18 '50 140w
+ Springf'd Republican p9D D 4 '49 150w

"A vivid and informative history of the life of King Kamehameha, the Great, to whom may be traced the rise to its height of Hawaiian culture and supremacy." Ethel Dexter
+ Springf'd Republican p6D Jl 16 '50 250w

MELLINGER, MAY (MRS DOUGLAS S. KNOWLES). Cloak of laughter. 243p $2.75 Putnam

50-6455

A first novel, the scene of which is a San Francisco boarding house in the 1930 depression. Four young people who board there are the chief characters, and the story is of their gallant struggle to live on very short rations and not give way to despair.

Booklist 46:287 My 15 '50

"A first novel with smoothly expert dialogue and a neatly packaged romantic plot." H. S. Taylor
Library J 75:560 Ap 1 '50 90w

Reviewed by David Tilden
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 16 '50 410w
N Y Times p27 Je 4 '50 100w

"A half-whimsical, half-realistic novel. . . The collective smile in the face of great odds occasionally turns Miss Mellinger's prose to pure sugar, but as a rule she is sprightly and economical in her use of words, and rushes her book along to its somewhat preposterous conclusion as neatly as possible."
New Yorker 26:133 Ap 15 '50 80w

"What gives Miss Mellinger's story its greatest appeal is its honesty and its guilelessness. . . With no hard shell to protect them, [the characters] wear the cloak of laughter and joke in the very teeth of trouble." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 16 '50 600w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 33:30 Je 24 '50 170w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 120w

MELLON, MELVIN GUY, ed. Analytical absorption spectroscopy; absorptimetry and colorimetry [contributors: L. J. Brady, and others]. 618p il $9 Wiley

535.3 Absorption spectra. Spectrum analysis. Colorimeters and colorimetry 50-8103

"A treatise which is of special value to professional analytical chemists, but is of some interest to all graduate chemists and to some physicists as well. In its nine chapters, as many specialists—each responsible for a chapter—discuss the chemical and physical principles, instruments, and analytical procedures. Particular attention is paid to mathematical computations useful in interpreting observations. Pertinent literature is cited generously. A long chapter on the measurement and specification of color has applications in many fields where accurate color designations are essential." (Library J) Index.

"The book as a whole is a fine reference text for those engaged in one or more of the various phases of absorption spectroscopy as well as for students preparing for work in these fields." D. M. Dodd
+ Chem Eng 57:271 D '50 550w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1194 Jl '50 90w

"The book is intended for professional chemists. It is of some interest to physicists as well."
N Y New Tech Bks 35:63 Jl '50
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:391 S '50 260w

MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN. Mooney. 306p $3 Appleton

50-10201

Tim Mooney was the town undertaker and sold furniture besides in the little New York state town of Haviland. Tim was drunk a good deal of the time, but he was kindly even when drunk. Thru Mooney's musings, alcoholic or otherwise, we learn to know the people of Haviland.

MELONEY, W. B.—Continued

Booklist 47:97 N 1 '50

"A book that's warm and friendly and tipsy in a nice, homey way, until a melodramatic plot gets into the mixture and the corn becomes mighty alien indeed. When that happens, what started out as a cheerful, rambling business about Mooney and his friends in the upstairs pool parlor becomes tight with conflict and with a sentimental ribaldry that is apparently intended for pretty deep thought. And the result is a kind of slick-magazine job with its taboos down." Riley Hughes
+ — Commonweal 53:102 N 3 '50 550w

Kirkus 18:615 O 1 '50 160w

"Meloney's style is clean-cut, virile, individual. He blends realism and romance in simple, poignant understanding of people. Recommended for adults." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:1824 O 15 '50 70w

"A mixture of happiness and sadness, greed, envy, jealousy, gossip, back-biting, neighborliness, love, hate. It is a true and richly-textured portrait of a small American town. My own small, hometown was not in New York but, except for that, this is its story as it is the story of every small town." V. P. Hass
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 29 '50 700w

"The book is interesting throughout, and its sentimental passages and self-conscious-vernacular prose are frequently outweighed by affecting descriptions—death, young love, fellowship in time of need. Mr. Meloney lived for years among the people from whom he draws his characters. His determined love for them is genuine and bright." A. C. Spectorsky
+ N Y Times p30 O 29 '50 270w

"Mr. Meloney makes the unfortunate mistake of calling on his hero to be both pious and earthy, a poor combination in anyone but disastrous in a man with a friend's corpse on the table in front of him."
— New Yorker 26:163 N 4 '50 60w

"Almost all of the principal figures in 'Mooney' are outwardly disreputable characters. But the author has matched them so strongly against the bigots and hypocrites of Haviland's society that we see them only as brave and honest human beings. 'Judge not, that ye be not judged' is what Mr. Meloney would have us remember. And though his story of Tim Mooney and the little town of Haviland is a serious and thoughtful one it is, nevertheless, thoroughly enjoyable." J. M. Grant
+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 D 23 '50 280w

MENABONI, ATHOS, and MENABONI, MRS SARA (ARNOLD). Birds. 132p il col pl $10; ltd ed $25 Rinehart
598.2 Birds—America 50-10404

"Paintings of birds, done over the years in Georgia by Italian-born Athos Menaboni, exhibited by the National Audubon Society, the American Museum of Natural History, and commercially too. . . The sympathetic and informative text by the artist's wife is pleasant reading with biographical bits intermingled with apt quotations and nature lore." Library J

"Let Chicago area nature lovers and book lovers bear in mind two things. First, tho 10 is a large number of dollars and 32 is a small number of birds, three Menaboni birds for a dollar is a bargain in itself, to say nothing of Sara Menaboni's charming, Franciscan-spirited writing. Second, nearly all of Menaboni's subjects can be seen every year in Cook county." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 19 '50 500w

"I will go along with 'the best since Audubon.' The man is good, very good. He has style and accuracy and a sense of the dramatic that reminds one inevitably of his great French-American precursor. But 'better than Audubon,' no. My edition of the master is not as good as this beautifully printed book that Rinehart has done for Menaboni. But still you can see that Audubon has the edge." J. C. Cort
+ Commonweal 53:310 D 29 '50 550

Kirkus 18:584 S 15 '50 180w

"The pictures are the thing. Whether in black and white or rather in the soft gray of a sensitive pencil, or in brilliant color, the birds, branches, flowers, and foliage are a real delight and should be equally attractive to bird-lover and artist. Useful therefore in more than one spot in a library." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:2079 D 1 '50 130w

"Nothing is said of the printing technique used for the color plates, but they give the general effect of the old engravings and are certainly among the most beautiful produced in the course of regular commercial publishing. All in all, this is a very generous ten dollars' worth." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 171:441 N 11 '50 750w

"During the three years this book has been in preparation, advance news of the difficulties of manufacture, of the care with which the color plates were being reproduced, has whetted public interest. That interest is fully justified. 'Menaboni's Birds' is a beautiful and exciting book. Its publication is an event in the history of bird-painting in America." E. W. Teale
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 26 '50 800w

"The book could have stood a good many more pictures and a good many less words. However, for its color plates alone, 'Menaboni's Birds' is worthy of an honored place beside Audubon in any library." J. B. Oakes
+ N Y Times p4 N 26 '50 320w

"The bird portraits are explicit, graceful, and done with loving care."
+ New Yorker 26:171 D 9 '50 80w

"Mrs. Menaboni writes very simply and directly, with a sense of the dramatic, and a sincere and contagious enjoyment of the beauty of a bird or a flower or a summer day. Athos Menaboni is a meticulous draftsman with a fine sense of color and a good feeling for design. . . The color work lacks uniformity. The publishers have tried so earnestly to reproduce the iridescent quality of the plumage of certain birds that they have occasionally overdone it. The coloration of the eastern bluebird is about as subtle as fluorescent socks, and—worse still—this plate, and that of the wood duck as well, are out of register, at least in the copy supplied this reviewer. . . All in all notwithstanding the foregoing and other lesser criticisms that might be made, this is a handsome book which effectively presents some of the best work of a sincere and able artist." R. C. Miller
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 19 '50 1000w

MENDELSOHN, ZORA (NORA BENSON, pseud). Joan takes a bow. 183p $2.50 Lothrop 50-9681

"Disappointed because they are financially unable to produce a professional play, Joan's high school class decide to write their own and earn enough money for next year's senior class to do a 'real play.' They succeed and Joan wins a personal as well as a dramatic triumph." Horn Bk

---

Horn Bk 26:479 N '50 40w

Kirkus 18:562 S 15 '50 90w

"For the girls who want a modern story, a school story or a book about play production." Ruth McEvoy
+ Library J 75:1913 N 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by Siri Andrews
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 15 '50 100w

MENEN, AUBREY. The backward bride; a Sicilian scherzo. 180p $2.75 Scribner 50-8917

"A satirical novel in which a young Sicilian bride and her intellectual bridegroom on their honeymoon in England, accompanied by the groom's canny uncle, have many experiences and upsets. The bride, Anisetta, wants twelve children; Aquila, the groom believes in birth control. The bride, who is not the simple little peasant she seems, leads Aquila a merry chase thru England, Paris, and back to Sicily. Along the way the author pokes fun at some varied modern theories, from Existentialism to psychoanalysis.

Booklist 47:13 S 1 '50

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p12 Ag 15 '50 450w

"A thoroly witty book—this bright amalgam of good sense and zany humor." J. F. Nims
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 20 '50 500w

"In his previous books, Mr. Menen has shown that satire comes easily to his hand, but here the elements of farce as well as of ridicule are predominant, and none too savory into the bargain." M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 19 '50 190w

"Champagne for jaded appetites in social satire. . . Opera bouffe presented with the lucid lunacy of a truly skillful satirist."
+ Kirkus 18:335 Je 15 '50 220w

"As usual, Mr. Menen pokes delicious and sensible fun at those who are inclined to follow intellectual fads. Do not miss this amusing novelist who has a way of making readers think." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 75:1292 Ag '50 140w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 N 3 '50 150w

"Mr. Menen retains his politely readable style, and there are several entertaining remarks: after that, unfortunately, the mercies become too small to catalogue." Frank Hauser
New Statesman & Nation 40:481 N 18 '50 120w

"Uncle Giorgio, is quite familiar to Americans, who met him, during our prohibition years, as the amiable, honest, well meaning racketeer. . . American readers of 'The Backward Bride' will recognize him as an old friend, a welcome spot of comic relief in a piece of buffoonery which now and then sparkles, but which generally is too superficial and too hastily executed to accomplish more than the suggestion of laughter. Mr. Menen has encrusted something mechanical on the living force of humor." Thomas Sugrue
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 13 '50 1000w

"Adding to the harmless gaiety of nations is a rare accomplishment in this or any age, especially if the word 'harmless' can be stressed. Aubrey Menen deals with the morals of the day and the even more complicated morals of the night, in his own fashion, a way that is intelligent but not unkind, witty but not bitter, and thought-provoking but not unto despair." Evelyn Eaton
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '50 700w

"Very deliberate, very arch, and seldom very entertaining."
New Yorker 26:83 Ag 19 '50 120w

"It's all good kidding, expertly done, with an underlying satirical flavor that Mr. Menen is here content to keep on a fairly obvious basis. The result is good, light entertainment and not enough profundity to bother the reader." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 24 '50 700w

"Light and agreeable, nonsensical satire." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 Ag 12 '50 650w

"Author Menen's little parable is fair sport as far as it goes, but it is a comedown from his witty and pointed satirical novel about the British in India, The Prevalence of Witches."
Time 56:86 Ag 14 '50 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p705 N 10 '50 350w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 40:192 autumn '50 90w

MENENDEZ PIDAL, RAMON. Spaniards in their history; tr. with a prefatory essay on the author's work by Walter Starkie. 251p maps $3 Norton

914.6 National characteristics, Spanish
50-9474

"An analysis of Spain's national characteristics written by a scientist and a humanist. He takes in the whole panorama of Spanish history and shows how modern tendencies are due to causes that lie embedded in the original Spanish character." (Publisher's note) The prefatory essay on the author's life and work has been written by Professor Walter Starkie, traveller, linguist and literary critic, who has been head of the British institute since 1940. Bibliography. Index of names.

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 22 '50 70w

Current Hist 19:356 D '50 40w

"His historical analysis of the Spanish character is the first cautious pronouncement by a Spanish intellectual to come from inside Spain since the Civil War. Pronouncement is, perhaps, not the word for an analysis which is scientific in tone and which cools the reader's head in the shades of history. Professor Pidal's book is the work of a humanist—it is, in fact, the introductory essay to a long work on Spanish pre-history and was written in 1946—and therefore a move towards reconciliation." V. S. Pritchett
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:44 Jl 8 '50 1250w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 N 12 '50 800w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton
N Y Times p19 S 17 '50 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 26 '50 50w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Sat R of Lit 33:41 D 9 '50 320w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen
Spec 184:56 Jl 14 '50 600w

"The octogenarian Ramón Menéndez Pidal is not just a scholar; he is renowned as philologist, medievalist, humanist, and sage, the biggest figure in Spanish letters of our time. Professor Starkie writes con amore, and with his wonted felicity of phrasing, of the author's work and influence, particularly as collector and interpreter of Spain's incomparable ballad lore. This essay on national characteristics which crowns Pidal's work was designed by the author as epilogue to a monumental history of Spain, but his disciples prevailed upon him to let it go out, in smaller compass. . . The analysis is masterly, but, above all, what illuminates the whole is the historical sweep which shows modern tendencies and phenomena to be rooted in a richly endowed past."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p327 My 26 '50 1050w

MERCER, CECIL WILLIAM (DORNFORD YATES, pseud). Laughing Bacchante [Eng title: Cost price]. 276p $2.75 Putnam
50-2153

An adventure story featuring the sleuths, Chandos and Mansel. Here they are engaged in smuggling the Borgia collection of sculptured gems out of prewar Austria to England. The Laughing Bacchante is one of these jewels, a carved ruby.

"The preposterousness of 'The Laughing Bacchante' is to some extent redeemed, as are all Mr. Yates' novels, by the verve and excitement with which the puppets are manipulated." Milton Crane
— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 30 '50 320w

"One of this British story-teller's breathlessly exciting Richard Chandos thrillers, it is full of the sound of running and falling water, with which the author seems to be pleasantly obsessed, and peopled with some very unpleasant and resourceful villians. Gleams like a diamond beside paste, compared to some recent synthetic productions. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

MERCER, C. W.—Continued
+ Library J 75:695 Ap 15 '50 80w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 11 '50 130w

"Swift and polished, Oxford-bred Dornford Yates' latest effort ranks high among current thrillers." Robert Elkon
+ N Y Times p39 Je 11 '50 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 16 '50 50w

"The whole heaven and the whole earth were created in six days. Mr. Dornford Yates, working more slowly and on a less ambitious scale, has succeeded in creating and peopling a rather smaller universe in the course of twenty-nine works of fiction. It is quite a different world from the one to which most of us are accustomed; but probably none the worse for that." Ralph Arnold
+ Spec 183:754 N 25 '49 750w
Springf'd Republican p12C Je 4 '50 230w

MEREDITH, ANNE, pseud. See Malleson, L. B.

MEREDITH, SCOTT. Writing to sell. 209p $2.75 Harper

029.6 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 50-7878

"The author, president of one of the largest literary agencies in the country, covers the problems of composition, planning the story, plots that sell, complications to be added, and endings, both happy and otherwise. He also discusses the even more elusive problems of marketing, deciding which magazines the writer should try to sell, various taboos to be observed in all fields, preparation of the manuscript, cutting and revision, and whether or not an agent is necessary." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 47:4 S 1 '50
Bookmark 9:207 Je '50 20w

"The section on writing for children will be—by people in the field—considered definitely belittling. Otherwise the text seems sound and constructive. In content and point of view it resembles at many points Neal's Writing and Selling Fact and Fiction but in style it has more dignity and literary quality."
+ — Kirkus 18:199 Mr 15 '50 70w

"Scott Meredith discusses with authority the technical knowledge necessary to be a writer. . . Perhaps the best thing about this work is that the reader doesn't have to take the author's word for anything; Meredith substantiates, with fact and figure, his behind-the-trade-scenes information." Saul Colin
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 9 '50 270w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 18 '50 150w
Wis Lib Bul 46:15 Jl '50

MERIAM, LEWIS, and SCHLOTTERBECK, KARL T. Cost and financing of social security; with a chapter on veterans' benefits, by Mildred Maroney. 193p $3 Brookings

331.2544 Insurance, Social. Public welfare—U.S. 50-5870

"This book presents descriptively and factually the financial implications of social security legislation, existing and proposed. It adds a chapter on veterans' legislation and one on private retirement systems. A chapter entitled 'Who Are the Needy?' summarizes and analyzes the recent account of low income families assembled by the subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. The book begins and ends with a criticism of the social security program and recommends a new approach to the problem." Ann Am Acad

"The argument of the book is set forth clearly and concisely. Its great merit is that instead of evading the problems of social security finance by projecting them into the future, it concentrates attention on the costs of a fully developed program as of the present. The discussion of the current situation highlights the subterfuges, anomalies and limitations which are characteristic of social security programs in their early stages, and from which ours has not escaped. If we are to be realistic, we must view the present arrangements as first attempts to meet problems of income maintenance, not a final solution. Proposals for change are to be expected. They should be analyzed in terms of their probable results in practice." H. F. Hohman
+ Am Econ R 40:710 S '50 2100w

"Timely and provocative study." C. G. Chakerian
+ Am Soc R 15:578 Ag '50 220w

"The book will serve as an excellent handbook of information concerning social security. It performs a useful service also in calling sharply to public attention the financial scope of the future commitments now being contemplated. The problem of forging existing programs into a system and of co-ordination with private programs is ably presented. Unfortunately the authors' conception of an adequate social security program falls far short of what the American people seem to want and ought to want." H. M. Groves
+ — Ann Am Acad 269:164 My '50 430w

"Bad as the existing system is, Dr. Meriam and his colleagues argue, current proposals for expanding it are even more dangerous." J. J. Corson
Survey 86:269 My '50 750w

"In general, the study is a polemic against the Truman Administration's social security policies; one must look elsewhere for the other side of the case."
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:182 Je '50 250w

MERLIN, SIDNEY DANIELL. Theory of fluctuations in contemporary economic thought. 168p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

338.53 Business cycles. Economics 49-50163

"This study examines critically the contemporary economic theories concerned with explanation of short-term business fluctuations, and also those formulations which deal with long-term quasi-periodic oscillations of economic activity, frequently termed business or trade cycles. Dr. Merlin examines the structure and implications of static and dynamic theories and their concepts for the framework of traditional equilibrium analysis, in the light of notions of economic causation. . . Dr. Merlin examines the theoretical work of J. M. Keyes, J. R. Hicks, The Swedish school of economists, and that of the econometric theorists in the light of his methodological stand." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"The level of the treatment is appropriate to its object, and the theories are adequately summarized and effectively discussed. If Dr. Merlin has not read widely, he has read thoughtfully and has pondered what he has read. He has mastered details without getting lost in them, and he has succeeded in placing some involved matters in clear perspective. . . Standards of presentation are low nowadays. The excessive use and misuse of parentheses, the abuse of Latin abbreviations in foot-notes, and errors in citations are to be found in the work of eminent economists. Dr. Merlin is thus in good company. . . The footnotes contain a dozen errors sufficiently glaring to attract the reader's notice; the bibliography half as many." R. V. Clemence
+ — Am Econ R 40:675 S '50 550w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:59 Mr '50 240w

MERRIL, JUDITH. Shadow on the hearth. 277p $3 Doubleday
50-8437

Story of what happens in one woman's little family in the few days succeeding an atomic bomb attack on New York city.

Booklist 46:353 Jl 15 '50

"No cosmic spectacle here, but a novel of intimate immediacy and everyday urgency, quietly terrifying and deeply moving—and handled with a skill astonishing in a first novelist."
+ Chicago Sun p12 Ag 8 '50 100w

"Miss Merril makes a deliberate attempt to put her readers into Gladys Mitchell's place, to make them see and hear and feel her world just before and after the bombs came. Hitherto known only as the editor of an excellent science-fiction anthology, 'Shot in the Dark,' published last year, Judith Merril demonstrates in this able novel that she has a talent for writing fiction which many a writer in the genre might envy." August Derleth
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 2 '50 310w

Kirkus 18:283 My 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p23 Je 18 '50 140w

"This novel exists pretty much in a vacuum. While the author tries very hard to show the plucky suburban housewife struggling gamely to out-Mrs. Miniver Mrs. Miniver the whole business seems little more than a somewhat inconvenient escapade. The characters who drop in from time to time seem shadowy figures whose motivation is unexplained." I. B.
— San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 27 '50 150w

"It is remarkable that it has not occurred to other writers that this awesome and frightening story could be best told by a woman and preferably a suburban housewife. In this novel the action is entirely within the walls of a house; the terror comes only through radio and telephone. . . The moral that runs through the story is almost too obvious. Men and women can go through the worst disasters if they are not conquered by fear or doubt but go bravely about their allotted tasks. A united family is the solid base on which civilization rests." Harrison Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:24 Jl 29 '50 650w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 33:16 D 30 '50 140w

MERRILL, ANTHONY FRENCH. Golf course guide [an up-to-date guide to over 1800 golf courses in the U.S, Canada, Central and South America, Australia, British isles, the Continent]. 418p $3.50 Crowell
796.352 Golf links 50-8081

"Nearly 2,000 golf courses, domestic and foreign are listed. The descriptions vary, from a brief mention . . . to a forty-line description. . . Wherever possible, Mr. Merrill lists the greens, whether they are grass, bent, sand, rye or Bermuda, plus the restaurant facilities and always makes it plain whether the course is private, public or semi-public." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 46:330 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 16 '50 100w

Kirkus 18:195 Mr 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 40w

"Mr. Merrill has done a great deal of research on this book and it is an essential for the golfer who habitually tosses his clubs in the back of his car, whether the trip be for pleasure or for business. The book is well indexed." Tom Meany
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Jl 16 '50 350w

Sat R of Lit 33:36 Jl 15 '50 100w

MERRILL, ANTHONY FRENCH. Our eastern playgrounds; a guide to the national and state parks and forests of our eastern seaboard. (Whittlesey house publication) 353p il maps $3.75 McGraw 917.3 National parks and reserves
Agr50-409

"Sixteen eastern states are included in this guide to recreation areas. The location is described for national parks and forests and state parks—features, facilities, fees are also given." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

"So far as this goes, it is excellent and meets a real need for a handbook for motorists in the district east of the Appalachians."
+ Kirkus 18:44 Ja 15 '50 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 30 '50 150w

"Although the guide is principally for the motorist, the map-maker has not seen fit to draw in the roads." H. S.
Sat R of Lit 33:44 Mr 11 '50 140w

"Recommended where such a guide would be useful."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:20 My '50

MERRY, MRS FRIEDA (KIEFER), and MERRY, RALPH VICKERS. First two decades of life. 600p il $3.75 Harper
136.7 Child study. Adolescence 50-8543

"A revision and extension of From Infancy to Adolescence." (Subtitle) For earlier book see Book Review Digest 1940.

Booklist 47:117 N 15 '50

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 72:342 N 25 '50 270w

MERTON, THOMAS. Tears of the blind lions [poems]. 32p $1.25; pa 50c New directions 811 49-49074

Seventeen religious poems about the monastic life and saints.

"These poems seem somewhat complicated and labored. There is something of the spirit of Bloy—a certain violence and starkness—discernible in them as well as the urgency we have come to recognize in the works of Father Merton." E. R. Hanlon
Cath World 170:398 F '50 90w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p5 Ap 17 '50 120w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 51:586 Mr 10 '50 190w

"While there is great beauty in these poems, the imagery is involved and the meaning abstruse. . . However, followers of Thomas Merton and of modern poetry as well will be interested in this little book."
Kirkus 17:644 N 15 '49 160w

"Not all the poems are successful. The 'Hymn for the Feast of Duns Scotus' struggles manfully to versify theological doctrine, but the transmutation seems at best imperfect." Milton Crane
N Y Times p31 N 27 '49 360w

New Yorker 26:105 Mr 11 '50 80w

"All too often Mr. Merton's objects turn out to have either no meaning or an absurd meaning. Such blemishes are the product of a mind which so admires conceits that it disregards altogether the relevance of an object to its occasion. But poetry ought to be written at least as well as prose." Arthur Mizener
— Poetry 76:224 Jl '50 550w

"There is not much lyric melody or thoughtful and self-concerned contemplation in 'The Tears of the Blind Lions'—it is far different, for instance, in tone and shifts of mood from Eliot's 'Ash Wednesday'—but there is tremendous vigor and great pictorial beauty." R. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 F 11 '50 460w

MERTON, THOMAS. What are these wounds? the life of a Cistercian mystic, Saint Lutgarde of Aywières. 191p $2.50 Bruce pub.
B or 92 Liutgardis, Saint 50-6547

"Here we have a biography of a saint who is little enough known even to Catholics, St. Lutgarde of Aywieres, the Cistercian Mystic. Her saint's day is observed only in two Belgian dioceses and by her own Cistercian order. Merton, however, gives to St. Lutgarde wider significance by pointing out that she was the forerunner of St. Margaret Mary and the institution of the Feast of the Sacred Heart." (Kirkus) Bibliography.

"Thomas Merton's name alone should warn one that this book is much more than the life of a saintly medieval woman, intensely fascinating as this may be. It is as well, a concentrated, yet richly documented treatise on spirituality." M. T. Lentfoehr
+ Cath World 171:234 Je '50 500w

"In considering the present work, a reviewer must make clear the fact that it has little in common with 'Mountain,' that it was written before that book and that judged purely on its merits without reference to its author's now radiant name it does not stand out particularly from other sincerely written devotional volumes." Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 26 '50 160w

"For Catholic readers interested in hagiography; although the name of Merton may elicit the interest of a wider group."
Kirkus 18:166 Mr 15 '50 170w

"Merton vividly and amusingly describes St. Lutgarde's robust good deeds and subtly analyzes her infinitely complex spiritual visions and states. But he is, unfortunately, naïve in his discussion of the Cathari. And, in the opinion of this reviewer, it was hardly necessary to over-simplify Frederick II into the big, bad wolf." Anne Fremantle
N Y Times p18 Mr 26 '50 600w

MESSER, MRS MONA NAOMI ANNE (HOCKING). See Hocking, A.

METZ, HAROLD WILLIAM, and THOMSON, CHARLES ALEXANDER HOLMES. Authoritarianism and the individual. 371p $3.50 Brookings
321.6 Authoritarianism 50-5424

"[The authors] strive with considerable success to assay the costs in human freedom inflicted by authoritarian regimes upon their subjects. They posit as their perhaps inescapable criterion the sum of the personal, political, economic, social and intellectual rights and liberties of individuals which constitutes the substance of orthodox western liberalism and, more precisely, of American constitutionalism; and they apply it with deliberate care to the theory and practice of selected authoritarian societies, medieval, early modern absolutist, Russian Communist, Fascist, Nazi, and finally American Utopian." Am Pol Sci R

"This work may prove of great value in bringing doctrinaire thinking 'down to earth.' To those who in pursuit of distributive justice would fritter away traditional political and civil freedoms, the authors give warning that the price would not be trivial." A. O. Spain
Am Pol Sci R 44:480 Je '50 700w

"In their study of the six 'controlled societies,' the authors have used reliable secondary sources. Their analysis is carefully developed, and their conclusions can hardly be challenged if we accept the criteria they set forth. It is with these criteria that this reviewer finds himself in disagreement. They are derived from a not too clear synthesis of the political philosophy of T. H. Green and the Utilitarians which is manifest in the authors' references sometimes to the economic and sometimes to the ethical nature of man, as well as in the absence of a more discriminating evaluation of the relationship of political and personal rights on the one hand and economic rights on the other. Finally, the authors' interpretation of individual rights is so formal and rigid that their criteria of a free society constitute a formidable test that no contemporary free society such as Great Britain or the United States can hope to meet, to say nothing of the 'controlled societies' which are doomed in advance." R. C. Macridis
Ann Am Acad 270:182 Jl '50 400w

Reviewed by Franz Alexander
Ethics 61:76 O '50 650w

"It is all very neat and systematic. With the exception of three chapters on modern totalitarian governments, this is the best that can be said of the work. It is clear that the book will not reach the audience for whom it was intended. The heavy array of footnotes suggests that the authors were writing for professional scholars. These will find little to attract their interest in chapters whose intellectual level is suggested by statements that in the Middle Ages 'the Church definitely disapproved of usury.' " C. M. Kenyon
— + J Pol Econ 58:450 O '50 800w

— Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 25 '50 240w

Springf'd Republican p6D Jl 16 '50 180w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:206 Je '50 260w

MEYER, CARL FREDERICK. Route surveying. 300p $6 Int. textbook
625.11 Surveying 50-5086

"A new book which is designed both as a textbook for use in engineering colleges and as a reference book for practical work in the field. Approximately half of it is exposition of principles and techniques and half of it is reference tables. As might be expected in a modern work, most of the examples pertain to highway problems, but there is one chapter of fair length on railroad surveys. Special attention has been given to curve problems." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:325 F 15 '50 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:76 S '50

"Written for a college textbook this will be useful as a reference book in a field that has little up-to-date subject matter."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:18 Mr '50

MEYER, HAROLD BURRIS-. See Burris-Meyer, H.

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Picture book of the earth; il. by Richard Floethe. 47p $2 Lothrop
551 Physical geography—Juvenile literature 49-50291

A geology text in a picture-book format for ages 9-12.

Booklist 46:176 Ja 15 '50

Bookmark 9:83 Ja '50 40w

"Boys and girls who like to know all about the earth's beginnings and the changes the centuries have brought will find this one of their favorite books, for it tells the earth's story in a most interesting manner." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 2 '50 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:108 Mr '50 60w

"Recommended for public and school libraries for ages 8-12." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 75:112 Ja 15 '50 60w

Sat R of Lit 33:44 Ja 21 '50 130w

MEYERS, BARLOW. Last of the wild stallions; il. by Bill Wickham. 176p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.
Horses—Legends and stories 49-10458

"A western built around the love of a young man for a horse. When the Wyoming ranchers caught and branded the wild horses which were stealing their mares, Jeff Bunting chose Sky High, a spirited young stallion. Jeff subdued and trained Sky High only to have him stolen and sold to a rodeo for a bucker. He traced Sky High, rode in the rodeo, and won him. Upon his return to the ranch the lure of his native hills was so great that Sky answered; soon he returned when he found his affection for Jeff outweighed his desire for freedom." Booklist

Booklist 46:175 Ja 15 '50

"There is a lot of the west in this story, and a lot of human quality." Will Davidson
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 13 '49 80w

"For this species of story, subdued, but with a general atmosphere of authenticity and thoroughly likeable."
+ Kirkus 17:477 S 1 '49 100w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 75:502 Mr 15 '50 80w

MEZERIK, AVRAHM G. Pursuit of plenty; the story of man's expanding domain. 209p $2.50 Harper

333.7 Conservation of resources 50-9869

"A stimulating volume on the challenge which increasing population is daily posing in respect to the provisioning of sufficient food and 'other essential resources' to maintain an adequate standard of living for all. Mezerik, no Malthusian, is concerned with such problems as soil conservation, irrigation, exploitation of natural resources, and the formation of a world food board as suggested by John Boyd Orr." Library J

Bookmark 10:31 N '50 20w

Kirkus 18:407 Jl 15 '50 180w

"Recommended." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 75:1287 Ag '50 130w

"This is an absorbing, instructive, important and angry book. Having once opened it, few will find it possible to drop it or dismiss its message. The book is essentially a defense of the rights of the public against those of private interests which block the full development of our resources." S. E. Harris
+ N Y Times p39 N 5 '50 600w

"A strongly-worded book, well worth reading, yet containing inconsistencies which each reader will need to unravel for himself." Fairfield Osborn
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:10 N 11 '50 450w

Reviewed by Richard Henchey
Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 190w

MIALL, STEPHEN, and MIALL, LAURENCE MACKENZIE, eds. New dictionary of chemistry; ed. with the assistance of many well-known chemists. 2d ed 589p $12 Longmans

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries A50-7486

"A useful one-volume dictionary. It is general in nature and includes a selection of terms from all fields of chemistry, together with short biographical sketches of famous chemists. Most of the definitions are essentially short statements of properties and uses. Formula diagrams are given for a fair number of the compounds. The work was first published in 1940 in London, and the whole of the unsold stock was destroyed in a bombing raid in December of the same year. In the present edition, errors have been corrected and new terms, such as plutonium, have been added." N Y New Tech Bks

"The dictionary remains the same in general character, but has been revised and brought up to date by the editors. For example, new articles on atomic energy, sulfa drugs, and other topics that have grown in importance during the last 10 years have been added. This dictionary, which is really a one-volume encyclopedia, will be welcomed by chemists, engineers, patent attorneys, manufacturers, and others who need a condensed source book of information on chemical matters." W. K. Menke
+ Chem & Eng N 28:498 F 13 '50 240w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:19 Mr '50

MICHAEL, LIONEL BAKER. Wage and salary fundamentals and procedures. 330p $4.50 McGraw

658.32 Wages 50-6548

"Wage and salary administration is presented as a complete but composite problem, bringing together, as interrelated parts of the whole, the individual components which are normally treated as separate and distinct functions: job analysis, classification, evaluation, time and motion study, selection and placement, merit rating, leading to wage determination as a final component. Necessarily brief on the individual topics, as the author points out, he succeeds in making his point of the essential unity of the overall problem." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 28 '50 50w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:985 Je 1 '50 110w

MICHELON, LENO CENO. Industrial inspection methods. rev ed 566p il $6 Harper

621.9 Machinery—Inspection. Testing 50-7556

"A practical and rather comprehensive introduction to modern inspection instruments and methods. The first edition was published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1942]. . . This edition is practically new in content. The work now includes good accounts of all the instruments commonly used in factory inspection, of the chief testing methods, and a concise description of quality control from the inspector's viewpoint. It is organized as a textbook. . . However it is suitable for the beginning worker and others who want to instruct themselves." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Manufacturers' catalogs and technical bulletins. List of visual materials. Index.

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:40 My '50

MICHELS, ROBERT. First lectures in political sociology; tr. with an introd. by Alfred de Grazia. 173p $2.75 Univ. of Minn.

301 Sociology. Political science 49-50266

"Papers of the German-born sociologist, originally delivered at the University of Rome, in a study of the chief European political scientists of the past century." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by G. A. Almond
Am Soc R 15:456 Je '50 160w
Current Hist 18:100 F '50 30w

"Coming some fourteen years after Michels's death, this collection obviously says nothing new but what it says ought to be better known in the United States. The uninitiated American reader may boggle at some of Michels's judgments on the virtues of aristocracy and the impossibilities of democracy, but he'll find here, in a simple and lucid translation, a guidebook to an extremely important facet of the cultivated Continental mind." P. R. L.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:57 My 6 '50 270w

Reviewed by Floyd Hunter
Social Forces 29:220 D '50 330w

MICOCCI, HARRIET (PALMER). Protocol and the Peabodies. 255p $3 Dutton

630.1 Farm life 50-8703

A young couple working in the State department in Washington invested in a Virginia farm and devoted their week ends to putting the place in order. Their flyer in poultry (the Peabodies) was not successful; but their Washington jobs (protocol) did not suffer.

MICOCCI, H. P.—Continued

Booklist 46:345; 47:8 Jl 15 '50; S 1 '50

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 13 '50 150w

"It is entertaining, instructive and well written. It has humor, that brand peculiar to home owners, which is tragedy at the time but dims with the passage of time to a point where you can laugh. It's something like laughing over the pangs of puppy love." Walter Trohan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 10 '50 490w

Reviewed by C. B. Bennett

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 13 '50 550w

"It's reassuring to find a couple with feet on the ground, with morale high, with zest for living. They laugh lots and many readers will laugh with them." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 75:1178 Jl '50 130w

"It is a gay record of a shared adventure, of getting married and buying a house in the country, of having chickens—known as 'the Peabodies'—and a baby." George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 13 '50 320w

Reviewed by F. Van de Water

N Y Times p19 Ag 13 '50 190w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 S '50

MIDDLECOFF, CARY. Golf doctor; foreword by Bob Hope. (Whittlesey house publication) 103p il $3 McGraw

796.352 Golf 50-8113

"The 1949 United States National Open golf champion, who gave up dentistry for golf, explains his methods, using numerous, clear photographs in illustration." (Bookmark) Author's tournament record. No index.

Booklist 46:349 Jl 15 '50

+ Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 30w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 26 '50 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:1191 Jl '50 20w

MIKESELL, WILLIAM HENRY, ed. Modern abnormal psychology; a symposium. 880p $10 Philosophical lib.

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Mental diseases 50-10794

"The 25 contributors to this 880-page symposium are connected with State Hospitals, Menninger Foundation, Veterans Administration Hospitals, psychiatry departments of medical colleges, or psychology divisions of universities. Drs. Sapirstein and Zilboorg, noted authors, are included. Typical contents: Normal and Abnormal in Behavior; History of Psychotherapy; Meaning and Causes of Mental Diseases; Mania-Depression of Famous Men; Psychology of Drugs; Suggestion and Hypnotism; Psychiatric Treatment; Psychosomatic Medicine; Mental Hygiene and the Future; Abnormalities of Intellect; Legal and Scientific Concepts of Mental Illness; etc. Has index, and chapter references, bibliographies, and summaries." (Library J) Index.

"Recommended for general readers and college students as an orientation course or a supplementary textbook." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 75:2074 D 1 '50 150w

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 20w

MILES, EDWARD ROY CECIL. Supersonic aerodynamics; a theoretical introduction. 255p $4 McGraw

533.6 Aerodynamics, Supersonic 50-7964

"In this work, the current knowledge of aerodynamic laws and behavior at supersonic speeds is presented for advanced students of aeronautical engineering and for engineering school graduates already employed in the field. The emphasis is on mathematical methods in solving the problems involved, and a good part of the text is concerned with the solutions of nonlinear partial differential equations." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"An excellent, introductory exposition of current theory." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:47 Jl '50

MILHOUS, KATHERINE. The egg tree; il. by [the author]. [32p] $2 Scribner

50-6017

An Easter story about a Pennsylvania Dutch family that painted eggs and hung them on a tree for the world to view. For ages 5-8.

"A charming book for the Easter season. . . Unfortunately, the directions for making the Easter egg tree are printed on the back of the book jacket."

+ — Booklist 46:237 Mr 15 '50

Bookmark 9:188 My '50 30w

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun p8 Mr 18 '50 200w

"A book of value for school, home or library." A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 2 '50 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '50

"True to the tradition from which the Easter Egg Tree sprang, in her story as well as in her pictures, the artist has given life and a lovely present-day atmosphere to an old custom that is sure to find wide acceptance in libraries and schools which are in constant search for a fresh outlook on the Easter season and in families which will be quick to respond to the invitation to make an Easter Egg Tree of their own." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 26:97 Mr '50 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 26:102 Mr '50 80w

Kirkus 18:94 F 15 '50 80w

"A most interesting picture-story book that contains the best work of a versatile artist. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 75:784 My 1 '50 70w

"The simple tale is gently and plainly written but the many colored pictures and designs around the pages enrich it. . . The artist's bold, simple style is one that would encourage children to try painting themselves." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 26 '50 90w

"It is a pity the narrative isn't more substantial and that there isn't more use of color words in the text to convey that joy which children have in using colors. But there are lovely illustrations and decorations based on traditional Pennsylvania Dutch designs to stimulate young eyes and young fingers, plus directions for making an egg tree." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p36 Mr 19 '50 90w

+ Sat R of Lit 33:46 Ap 8 '50 180w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:290 S '50 60w

Wis Lib Bul 46:27 Ap '50

MILLAR, KENNETH (JOHN ROSS MACDONALD, pseud). Drowning pool. 244p $2.50 Knopf 50-13124

Detective story.

Chicago Sun p4 S 12 '50 60w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 S 17 '50 60w

Kirkus 18:343 Je 15 '50 70w

"Mr. MacDonald draws some skillful red herrings over the chase, which is reduced to simplicity in the end. In the mean time, however, he plunges the reader into a maze of mayhem, murder, drugs and perversions. A novel of the tough school which is far better than the average. MacDonald writes with a real sense of color and of detail, and his characters are more grown-up than most."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 10 '50 200w

"Fast-moving, smoothly written, first-rate whodunit of the hard boiled school." Hillis Mills

+ N Y Times p39 S 10 '50 110w

"The mother-in-law is found drowned in a swimming pool, and from then on the plot is as hard to follow as one of Hammett's earlier masterpieces. It has quite a lot of the same quality of irrational excitement and depthless depravity, too."

New Yorker 26:76 S 2 '50 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 24 '50 130w

"Extra good."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 Ag 12 '50 40w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Do evil in return. 243p $2.50 Random house

50-9717

Mystery story.

"This seems to me the best mystery Margaret Millar has written."

+ Chicago Sun p5 O 10 '50 60w

Kirkus 18:438 Ag 1 '50 100w

"A novel which is both sensitive and tense. Miss Millar deserted the mystery field for a time, and it is a pleasure to welcome her back."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 8 '50 210w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p29 O 8 '50 230w

"The neurotic patient, like so many psychopaths Mrs. Millar has created before, is excellently drawn, and the whole story is logical, if a trifle arbitrary."

+ New Yorker 26:108 S 30 '50 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 15 '50 90w

"Writing tops, plotting intelligent, solution acceptable mills-of-the-gods. Definitely prescribed."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:46 S 23 '50 40w

MILLER, ALEXANDER RENFREW. Adsorption of gases on solids. 133p $2.50 Cambridge

533.1 Gases—Absorption and adsorption. Solids [50-1745]

"A sequel to the Cambridge physical tract written in 1939 by J. K. Roberts and entitled Some Problems in Adsorption." (Subtitle) "A short but meaty review of outstanding experimental work, together with the relevant theory. About half of the text is new, the remainder has been carried over from Roberts' work. . . The book is of interest to physicists and physical chemists generally, and it has specific application to such processes as the manufacture of electronic tubes where the phenomena of thin films are important." (N Y New Tech Bks) References. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:33 My '50

MILLER, EDGAR GEORGE. Standard book of American antique furniture. 856p il $7.95 Greystone

749.211 Furniture. Antiques 50-6480

"This book covers American antique furniture from the beginnings to 1840. In one volume it furnishes you with a guide for identifying and buying antiques, a complete background in their history and development, and a treasury of useful and detailed facts about them. . . Chapter 1 describes the plan and range of the volume. . . Chapter 2 presents basic information that everyone should know about antiques. . . Chapter 3 is a treatise on the styles of American antique furniture. . . Read Chapter 4 if you wish to understand the fundamentals of design and how to use them as keys to identifying the date, style, and maker of an American antique. . . The remaining fourteen chapters are each a thoroughgoing study of a particular kind of furniture, ranging from Chapter 5 on chairs to Chapter 18 on tables. Every kind of furniture is discussed in order of style and date, and the features of many different varieties are described in this convenient abridgment of the two-volume work American Antique Furniture (published by M. Barrows and Company)." (p v) Index.

Bookmark 9:249 Jl '50 20w

"It provides a guide for identifying and buying antiques, and is ideally suited for both the beginner and the most experienced collector because of its encyclopedic treatment." William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 30 '50 80w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 75:983 Je 1 '50 130w

"For laymen with no more than an intelligent interest in the early cabinetmaking of our country, it will provide a delightful picture book, along with a fund of not too technical information."

+ New Yorker 26:159 N 25 '50 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 2 '50 130w

"One very great virtue of Mr. Miller's work is that a majority of his illustrations are chosen from private collections rather than public institutions. This is a real reward for a student of American furniture who seldom has an opportunity to see the treasures hidden away from the public's eye. Although the book is primarily for the novice in the field, it still supplements such standard works as Wallace Nutting's three-volume 'Furniture Treasury' and Luke Vincent Lockwood's two-volume 'Colonial Furniture in America.'" R. L. Howell

+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 Jl 1 '50 240w

MILLER, MRS FRANCESCA (FALK). Golden heritage. 217p $2.75 Americana house

50-3384

A romantic triangle in which a beachcomber, a New England school teacher and a dance hall girl are the chief characters. The background is San Francisco in the days of the gold rush.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 4 '50 220w

"The quiet, sleepy little San Francisco just prior to and during the gold rush days of the '49ers is the new novel's most enchanting character, as it struggles with the mad frenzy of the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill. . . San Franciscans will be satisfied with this book, because of the excellence of the descriptive scenes." L. A. Potts

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 31 '50 750w

MILLER, HAROLD GLADSTONE. New Zealand. 155p $2; text ed $1.60 Longmans

993.1 New Zealand—History

"A short account of New Zealand. . . [The author] was asked to write for the 'general reader but especially for the unprofessional student.' Accepting this purpose, also a limit of less than 150 pages, he has chosen to present the history of New Zealand in two parts only—'a bitter conflict of races and a remarkable political experiment.'" Am Hist R

"The book as a whole seems an informal discussion by a thoughtful, well-informed, and objective New Zealander rather than a scholarly history, and it is quite probable that the author deliberately chose this approach in order to meet more effectively the needs of the general reader. The bibliography is well chosen but its usefulness is impaired by frequent omissions of given names or even initials of authors." Edith Dobie

MILLER, H. G.—Continued
+ Am Hist R 56:186 O '50 360w

"Within its limitations the story is clearly and fairly told. . . With its unpretentious merits the book satisfactorily fulfils its purpose as an introduction supplemented by a useful bibliography."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 3 '50 700w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Horns of Capricorn. 282p $3 Appleton
50-9494

A romantic story of North Carolina at the turn of the century when the tobacco business was beginning to boom. Lydia Keeling, living in genteel poverty in Baltimore, and her two young daughters, inherit a family property in North Carolina. Once settled in the house on the river, they discover that the Cavitts, with whom they have a family feud, still live across the river. However, that feud is healed by the young people.

Booklist 47:63 O 1 '50
Bookmark 10:8 O '50 30w
Kirkus 18:480 Ag 15 '50 130w

"A nice light novel for the teen-age girl." M. D. Read
+ Library J 75:2161 D 15 '50 50w

Reviewed by Charlotte Capers
N Y Times p34 O 22 '50 270w

"Helen Topping Miller, in this latest of her many books, which will be received with the usual joy by her devotees, has made the Keeling girls charming and believable. Their fussy little mother is a real person, too. . . Mrs. Miller has done a good job of arranging her period furniture of that time when the U.S. was still an awkwardly happy, though somewhat restless, adolescent." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 S 30 '50 360w

MILLER, HUGH. Community of man. 169p $3 Macmillan
901 Civilization 49-11896

"Rejecting philosophy and modern science, as presently understood, as inadequate for the solution of humanity's problems, Professor Miller finds in the theories of evolution and genetics the key to a new conception of science. Evolutionary science, based on religious insight and using the achievements of earlier kinds of knowledge, will furnish the means, scientific, political, and moral, to the progressive solution of social problems.. . In developing his ideas Professor Miller uses the materials of natural and social sciences, history, and philosophy; the whole argument is sparked by a moral and religious intensity which is associated with no orthodoxy." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming
Ann Am Acad 269:173 My '50 600w

"Recent comment by a contemporary labels this 'dangerous mysticism.' Perhaps it is, but we fail to see the danger for readers who are prepared to do their own thinking about what they read. Those who apply their critical faculties to Professor Miller's more astonishing statements will not be unduly influenced by what does not stand the test of common sense. This book contains some interesting ideas, few of them new in any sense, but it will nevertheless probably cause some controversy." Hilda Kirkwood
Canadian Forum 30:46 My '50 310w

Reviewed by Alden Powell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 26 '50 410w

"The book presents a strong case against Social Darwinism, but unfortunately makes the same mistake in reverse. In spite of this criticism, it is well worth reading. It is engaging, eloquent, abounding in insights, generous in the tradition of the great eighteenth-and nineteenth-century meliorists. And although the author's numerous convictions are often argued only very briefly, if at all, the result is a popular, readable book, not just for philosophers." V. J. McG.
+ — J Philos 47:271 Ap 27 '50 700w

"Not a book for the general reader but a book with a message which will interest, arouse and/or answer the serious reader."
Kirkus 17:498 S 1 '49 80w

"How far Professor Miller succeeds in this effort, it is difficult to say with confidence. To me, elements of wishfulness seem to creep into his thesis—or rather into his illustrative application. But that man is made for community as much as for individuality is the underlying theme to which he brings useful and heartening evidence." Ordway Tead
Sat R of Lit 33:19 Ap 22 '50 650w
Social Studies 41:192 Ap '50 10w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:32 Mr '50 210w

MILLER, LEE GRAHAM. Story of Ernie Pyle. 439p il $3.95 Viking
B or 92 Pyle, Ernest Taylor 50-8918

A biography of Ernie Pyle by one of his closest friends. It contains a good many of Ernie's letters to his bosses, his friends, and his wife, That Girl, as he called her. There is a straightforward account of Jerry Pyle's tragic illness. Index.

Booklist 46:281; 47:11 My 15 '50; S 1 '50
Bookmark 10:5 O '50 40w

Reviewed by Harold Smith
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 3 '50 450w

Reviewed by Ronald Stead
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 9 '50 500w

"Probably no one but Mr. Miller, his long-time editor and most intimate friend, could have revealed this sensitive, valiant and unhappy writer as effectively as he has done." James van Zandt
+ Churchman 164:17 N 1 '50 210w

"A complete, well flowing chronicle that makes Ernie live. As you read Miller's book, you realize further why Ernie was able to write in the mood that was in tune with that of the average American. Ernie was an average American, too." H. W. Flannery
+ Commonweal 52:539 S 8 '50 650w
Kirkus 18:346 Je 15 '50 220w

"Pyle fans will be enthusiastic over the many letters and will feel that they have been given an extra dividend in this volume. Author's newspaper style adds simplicity to the subject but gets somewhat tedious." Donald Wasson
+ — Library J 75:1410 S 1 '50 110w

"This is a remarkably honest and, without any special pleading or interpretation, surprisingly sympathetic portrait of a man who has become a symbol to many Americans." A. L. G.
+ New Repub 123:29 S 25 '50 480w

"The result of the long and close friendship between Lee Miller and Ernie Pyle is a biography which is as intimate as biographies can get, and yet is never in bad taste. Miller, in what must have been a monumental job of editing and selecting letters, stories and memories, takes you into the problems, the fun, the sorrows and the heart of one of the most beloved figures of our time." Bill Mauldin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 27 '50 1400w

"Lee Miller's touching biography will help perpetuate the Ernie Pyle legend. It is a moving story about 'the little fella,' sympathetically told and without literary side. . . This is magnificent biography, as tragic a love story as has been written in our time. The little Hoosier was not a greater war correspondent than, say, Richard Harding Davis, Winston Churchill or Floyd Gibbons; he was a different kind. He wrote himself into the heart of a great army and into the heart of a whole nation with a simpler prose. Miller's biography will bathe his shrine in sympathetic glow." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 27 '50 1700w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling

New Yorker 26:69 S 2 '50 2900w

"Although almost half of Mr. Miller's book is the story of Pyle in Europe at the front, and in the Pacific where he was killed, this part of it is comparatively well known, and anyway the reader should get the narrative, with all its intimate details from this book. It is fascinating reading for all those who have read Pyle, either in his columns or in his books. All I want to do here is to suggest to you something of that other, inner story that was so large a part of Pyle's life, and to note that Mr. Miller tells it in good taste." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 28 '50 1050w

Reviewed by Paul Sann

+ Sat R of Lit 33:56 O 7 '50 750w

Reviewed by G. F. Alsop

+ Survey 86:513 N '50 550w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY, ed. The transcendentalists; an anthology. 521p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

141 American literature—Collections. Transcendentalism 50-7360

The philosophy of the transcendentalists explained in terms of selections from the writings of its chief adherents. Well known works of Emerson and Thoreau, available elsewhere, are not included. Included are articles, essays, poems, and addresses of the New England transcendentalists. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Louis Filler

Am Hist R 56:131 O '50 750w

Current Hist 19:107 Ag '50 50w

"If you love the human experiment, you cannot but love and linger near that autumn tang of freshness that still surrounds Walden Pond after a century of America and of world revolutions of thought and practice, or fail to feel with Lewis Mumford that 'this period nourished men, as no other has done in America before or since.' We heartily thank the Professor of American Literature at Harvard University for the pleasure he has given us." J. C. G. Burton

+ Hibbert J 49:99 O '50 1200w

"Perry Miller is a careful student of New England thought, and in giving us this anthology he performs a service to the authors he includes, to the many libraries which will want to buy it, and to readers who might never be able to obtain some of the great works of an outstanding and intensely American intellectual movement in any other way. . . Recommended." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 75:772 My 1 '50 200w

"From Perry Miller's extremely skilful editing of the documents the Transcendentalist controversy emerges as one of the major intellectual battles of our history. He briefs us on its progress in a masterly fashion, discriminating the moves so that we watch it almost with the excitement of watching a play." Howard Doughty

+ Nation 171:43 Jl 8 '50 480w

"We can go back, after reading Brownson and Ripley and Elizabeth Peabody and Bronson Alcott, to the better known works of Emerson and Thoreau with a new understanding of their context and see in them a richer meaning and a subtler dialectic. This anthology can thus be read as an aid to the reading of these major figures; but it is better to read it for what it is —the fascinating record of a remarkable movement in American thought." David Daiches

+ New Repub 123:18 Ag 14 '50 2350w

"Professor Miller has skillfully retraced the lines of battle in what was one of the most momentous conflicts of mind and spirit that this country has known, a conflict unparalleled until the intellectual crisis of the 1920s. He has supplied an indispensable unit for the study of the intellectual, social and literary history of the United States. Though only one document of major importance, a sermon by George Ripley, is printed for the first time in this book, the materials which Professor Miller has assembled from scarce tracts and the files of forgotten periodicals have been little known even to specialists." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 18 '50 1250w

"A genuinely critical anthology like this one is a work of creative scholarship." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 20 '50 450w

New Yorker 26:150 O 14 '50 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 23 '50 250w

"Some editorial cutting was necessary and welcome, in view of the fact that brevity was not a transcendental virtue. Hitherto unpublished material like the sermon by George Ripley and portions of the Bronson Alcott journals is included in this collection, which also does a discerning job of representing the influence of the English and German romantics and the political and social efforts of the transcendentalists." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 Je 17 '50 270w

"Using this book, with the works of Emerson and Thoreau, the student of American thought may secure adequate knowledge of the Transcendentalists through their own writings, an achievement hitherto to be made only at great labor and with much search."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:294 S '50 240w

MILLER, RANDOLPH CRUMP. Religion makes sense. 308p $3 Wilcox & Follett

239 Christianity—Evidences 50-6456

"Dr. Miller, a professor in the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, at Berkeley . . . shows that religion 'makes sense' by showing that it points the way toward making a person's life make sense. . . It skirts the edges of the familiar intellectual problems concerning the rational foundations of religion, not falling into irrationality but proceeding on the assumption (which is true) that most people do not live by logic or find their deepest motivations in demonstrated propositions." Christian Century

"What gives his writing its clarity and the feeling of simplicity is that he approaches the great themes of Christianity not from the standpoint of the theologian who has a doctrine to expound, but from the point of view of the troubled or perplexed individual who needs help." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 67:1332 N 8 '50 280w

"The volume is largely based on the Book of Common Prayer, but is by no means useful only to Episcopalians. Such chapters as Medicine and Religion, The Church and Our National Faith, The New Testament and Church Unity, The Mystery of God, etc., will indicate the scope of the thesis. The volume is well edited throughout." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 164:15 My 15 '50 180w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. See Wade, B., and Miller, B.

MILLIKAN, ROBERT ANDREWS. Autobiography. 311p il $4.50 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-7302

"At eighty-two, four years after his retirement, Robert Millikan publishes this exciting life story of a genial and intelligent Mid-Western farm boy who came to manhood just when the science of physics was undergoing its greatest revolution at the opening of the twentieth century. His book is the intimate story of his vital part in that revolution." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 46:315 Je 15 '50

Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 30w

MILLIKAN, R. A.—Continued
"As a history of modern science, this book is a valuable contribution to the understanding of the important age in which we are living, and is an inspiration to creative thought about man's outlook on many of today's world problems." G. T. Seaborg + Chem & Eng N 28:2547 Jl 24 '50 650w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p9 Ap 14 '50 500w

"Dr. Millikan has a genuine story to tell and he relates it skilfully and with that lighter touch which is the hallmark of humor. The [author] says in his introduction that, with the exception possibly of two chapters, he has been led to believe that what he has to say is not beyond the comprehension of any high school graduate who has had only an elementary course in physics. This is justified reassurance to the uninitiated to whom this work is recommended as a notable document providing new perspective on a momentous era in science." Roy Gibbons
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 14 '50 600w

"It is a disjointed narrative, to be sure, something of a pastiche, without literary grace. But it has, notwithstanding, the style of the man. It has vigor. It has conviction. It has authority." Neil Martin
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 My 18 '50 600w

Reviewed by Anthony Standen
Commonweal 52:253 Je 16 '50 270w

Current Hist 19:105 Ag '50 40w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:876 My 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 170:475 My 20 '50 1200w

"This is an important book for all scientists, historians, philosophers and educators." Gerald Wendt
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 7 '50 1450w

"For those who would understand the scientists that have played so large a part in changing our world, I do not know where to find a more illuminating book than this. It is authoritative and eminently readable. It includes valuable source material regarding not only the history of modern science but also the great events of the last half century as recorded by a keen reliable observer. Only in certain matters of minor significance, such as his pessimistic view of the future possibilities of atomic power, would the reviewer consider the thoughts expressed by the author as misleading." A. H. Compton
+ N Y Times p1 My 7 '50 2500w

"A strangely uneven but absorbing book."
+ New Yorker 26:120 My 20 '50 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 7 '50 250w

"The reader can subscribe to or reject the personal opinions. But, in any case, Millikan's outstanding record as a teacher and investigator must give weight and value to his views. His account of his own life is one of the most entertaining and significant scientific testaments that has been offered us in recent times." L. N. Ridenour
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:11 Jl 8 '50 700w

School & Society 72:269 O 21 '50 30w

Springf'd Republican p3D F 26 '50 180w

"Professor Millikan's autobiography will be a valuable document for the history of the impact of physical science and engineering upon the prodigious American development during the twentieth century."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:307 S '50 260w

MILLIS, HARRY ALVIN, and BROWN, EMILY CLARK. From the Wagner act to Taft-Hartley; a study of national labor policy and labor relations. 724p $8.50 Univ. of Chicago press

331.15 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Industrial relations 50-7091

"Analysis of the development of our national labor policies based on documents, the authors' experience, etc. The provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act are carefully studied, including its background and formulation." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Avery Leiserson
Am J Soc 56:294 N '50 1400w

Reviewed by S. A. Levitan
Ann Am Acad 272:238 N '50 380w

Current Hist 18:356 Je '50 30w

Reviewed by Harry Shulman
Harvard Law R 64:352 D '50 1600w

"My major complaint against the authors is on their failure to deal adequately with some of the big issues raised by twentieth-century trade unionism. To be sure, Mr. Millis speaks out against excessive Government intervention, maintaining that in a free society collective bargaining is the responsibility primarily of labor and management. However, on such an issue, for example, as an elevator strike that ties up a city, and possibly the national economy, the authors do not suggest the limits of Government intervention." S. E. Harris
N Y Times p45 Je 11 '50 750w

"The great value of this book is the wealth of material that is clearly and fairly presented. The differences in evaluation should not trouble the careful reader, and this is not a book which the novice will read at length. The reviewer believes that the book suffers from a failure to appreciate the management point of view to the extent to which the views of union and N.L.R.B. are understood. This disagreement, however, is not so deep that it prevents the reviewer from regarding [the book] as an outstanding research job that will serve as a valuable aid in understanding national labor policy." H. R. Northrup
+ Pol Sci Q 65:613 D '50 1050w

"Once you concede the bias in favor of the principle of collective bargaining that the authors of this heavy 724-page volume admit to, their minutely researched, painstakingly documented analysis of the Taft-Hartley Act is devastating. They are too thorough, too accurate, and their prose too scholarly for their book to become a campaign tract. Moreover, their point of view while emphatically not that of business is not that of labor either. . . An indispensable book for anyone concerned with labor relations—including those who have framed or would frame its laws."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 S 2 '50 360w

"For detail, conscientious analysis, and broad perspective this book may be compared to some of the studies by Beatrice and Sidney Webb." Louis Stark
+ Survey 86:369 Jl '50 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:207 Je '50 380w

MILLS, CHARLES WRIGHT, and others. Puerto Rican journey; New York's newest migrants. 238p $3 Harper

325.27295 Puerto Ricans in New York (city) 50-9532

A study of the Puerto Rican migration to New York city and of the colonies in Harlem and the Bronx. The report covers reasons for the migration, social and economic conditions, comparisons between life in Puerto Rico and here, attitudes towards other residents.

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 26 '50 750w

Reviewed by Charles Grutzner
N Y Times p20 S 24 '50 470w

"This well-documented book will prove valuable to social, civic, religious and political interests." R. F. Henchey
+ Springf'd Republican p12C S 17 '5 130w

"A simply written running prose story of the social, economic, and political circumstances under which Puerto Ricans grow up in Puerto Rico constitutes part of the book, with enough historical roots being presented to illuminate the contemporary situation. Such aspects of life as religion, race, kinship (including family), education, population, agriculture, and the movement to industrialize are succinctly and excellently dealt with." R. K. Speer
+ Survey 86:526 N '50 650w

MILLS, FREDERICK CECIL, and LONG, CLARENCE DICKINSON. Statistical agencies of the federal government; a report to the Commission on organization of the executive branch of the government. 201p $2 Nat. bur. of economic res.

311 U.S.—Statistics

"The published report on federal statistical agencies which was made to the Commission on the Reorganization of the Executive Branch by the National Bureau of Economic Research was a slim pamphlet containing a summary statement and recommendations. [This book] presents a full survey of the materials on which the task force report and recommendations were based. The subsections develop topics related to the principal parts of the survey: Federal Statistical Activities, Organization of the Federal Statistical System, Operation of the Federal Statistical System, Appraisal, and Recommendations. The appraisal necessarily includes some critical judgments on the budgeting process and on the relations between agencies and Congress, which apply also to nonstatistical agencies in the federal system." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Since its publication, some of the recommendations of this distinguished report have already been adopted. If most of the others can be put into effect in the years to come, they will do much to help statistics to perform their role in the democratic process." D. C. Riley

+ Am Econ R 40:438 Je '50 1250w

"Many readers will find it worth while to compare this report with the report on Government Statistics published by the Social Service Research Council in 1937. Mr. Mills played a leading part in this earlier study, which was started during the turbulent days of the beginning of the New Deal. The rapid progress of mathematical statistics in recent years and its applications in science and industry have attracted more attention than the development of statistical intelligence. Within its special province, this book helps to restore the balance." F. F. Stephan

+ Ann Am Acad 269:159 My '50 450w

Foreign Affairs 29:151 O '50 20w

Reviewed by S. S. Burr

J Pol Econ 58:183 Ap '50 800w

"Their mature appraisal of the Federal statistical system and their constructive suggestions for increasing its efficiency will challenge the thinking of students of government as well as the makers and users of statistics."

+ Special Libraries 40:379 N '49 150w

"The survey is a valuable treatment of complex subject and should command the interest of students of public administration as well as students of statistical science."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:480 D '49 220w

MILLS, LENNOX ALGERNON, and associates. New world of southeast Asia. 445p $5 Univ. of Minn. press

959 Asia, Southeastern 49-48739

"Current conditions are problems common to the region as a whole and those of the separate countries—the Philippines, Indonesia, Burma, Malaya, French Indochina, and Siam—are presented in an understandable summary with only a reasonable amount of statistics. The authors note repeatedly the struggle for economic and political self-determination and are as objective about U.S. influence as about Russian efforts to gain a foothold." Booklist

"Written by scholars, this book makes no pretentions of impressing (although it may enlighten) the very few experts on the areas. There are practically no footnotes or citations, but there is a useful list of general references following each chapter and, also, an index." P. H. Taylor

+ Am Pol Sci R 44:763 S '50 700w

Booklist 46:170 Ja 15 '50

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ja 8 '50 60w

"One wishes that some of the space spent deploring the lethargic apathy and contentment of equatorial peoples had been devoted to these western-educated leaders. As long as ideologies are means to an end and political parties are still personal followings, the resolution of apparently paradoxical opposites in personalities such as those of Ho Chih-min and Soetan Sjahrir is more significant than most generalizations. Nevertheless, this book performs a real service and deserves wide reading." M. B. Jansen

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 D 8 '49 950w

"The victory of the Communists in China seems complete and now their expansion toward the west endangers the democratic regimes in Southeast Asia and the Occidental influence in these countries. It is, therefore, most useful to learn as much as possible about the conditions in the different lands of Southeast Asia and their latent forces of resistance against the Communist danger. . . It is a fate of many informative books in our time to have history march faster than the process of publication. Several articles in this useful volume are already a little outdated." Max Fischer

Commonweal 51:369 Ja 6 '50 750w

Foreign Affairs 28:518 Ap '50 30w

Manchester Guardian p8 My 30 '50 170w

"This volume will have its uses as a school text and for the interested general reader. . . Most of the individual essays are quite competent, especially the workmanlike summary of the recent history of the Philippines. . . The major weakness of the book has been contributed by its editor." H. R. Isaacs

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 29 '50 850w

"Any person who wants the information that this book has to give will thoroughly enjoy getting it in this form, not flippant, but not difficult." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p24 D 11 '49 500w

"Events have moved so speedily in Southeast Asia—notably in Indonesia and Indochina—that this book is already out of date at more than one key point, but it is sufficiently rich in background material to give it markedly greater value than merely a reporting of the latest happenings. . . This book should serve to lay a foundation from which such sympathy and understanding can arise." Rupert Emerson

+ Pacific Affairs 23:202 Je '50 650w

Reviewed by Virginia Thompson

Survey 86:217 Ap '50 550w

"Historians, economists, and political scientists, as well as students and general readers, will find here a well organized body of information on this little-known portion of the Orient."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:69 Mr '50 260w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Table near the band. 249p $3 Dutton

50-8704

A collection of thirteen short stories by a well-known English author. They are on many subjects; a few of them are mysteries. More than half of them have appeared in American magazines.

Booklist 47:13 S 1 '50

"Of the thirteen stories, the only real duds are the last two. . . But a book of short stories with a total score of two to eleven still ranks pretty high. Mr. Milne's bland and agile prose will not disappoint the many lovers, young and old, of Christopher Robin." Mary Sandrock

+ — Cath World 171:473 S '50 200w

Chicago Sun p12 Ag 22 '50 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 30 '50 320w

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 5 '50 240w

Reviewed by George Miles

Commonweal 52:516 S 1 '50 280w

MILNE, A. A.—Continued

"These stories, which have perhaps no great importance, are entertaining, continue a tradition which is decorous and facile."
Kirkus 18:316 Je 1 '50 100w

"Whether the scene is Mount Ararat or the pleasant little old-world village of Essington, the people are incontestably British, and the mood, that delightfully silly gay-heartedness that the British, despite American misconceptions, can rise to as perhaps no other people can. In brief, the book is as light and flavorsome as a superlative cheese soufflé. I cannot imagine a pleasanter companion for a hot afternoon or a tedious journey or a night when sleep is elusive." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 23 '50 400w

"These stories are amiable, but there is a touch of acrid insight, too. They have a variety of themes, but there is, one might say not inaccurately, a prevailing tone. It is that of ironic nostalgia and mordant geniality." Irwin Edman
N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '50 650w

"The stories, like their subjects, are cool, faintly humorous, and entirely lacking in surprise. In addition, they exude a rather engaging atmosphere of gentle nostalgia, which is probably due to the ingenuous and somewhat old-fashioned manner in which they are written."
+ New Yorker 26:67 Ag 5 '50 70w

"The tales in the book are deftly written, with no attempt at anything but sheer entertainment, but done with the kind of expertness that only an old hand at the business can command. Some of them are as slight as you can get and yet have any story at all, but all have the Milne touch, the stamp and hallmark of the virtuoso." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 19 '50 650w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 33:12 Jl 29 '50 700w
+ Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 140w

MILORADOVICH, MILO. Art of cooking with herbs and spices. 304p $2.95 Doubleday
641.5 Cookery. Herbs. Spices 50-8647

After an introductory chapter on savory herbs and spices the author of this cookbook takes up the various types of food and drink which can be improved by judicious use of herbs. Recipes in each section are arranged alphabetically. Some of the sections are: Herb bastes and marinades; blends and bouquets; Herb, condiment, and spice butters; Herb and spice jellies; Herb, condiment, and spice salad dressings; Herb teas and spiced beverages. Index.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

"By the time the reader has turned the last page, the all embracing value of herbs and spices for the creative cook urges one to try recipe after recipe. This is not strictly a cookbook, but there are enough recipes to fire the imagination, while the basic principles of the use of herbs provide a springboard."
+ Kirkus 18:291 My 15 '50 190w

"The erudition is almost frightening, but there is sound advice for the non-cordon-bleu, which, if followed, will prevent those ghastly mistakes in overseasoning that frequently occur. A variety of well-chosen recipes betters pretext with example." Mary Poore
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 16 '50 130w

MINER, ROY WALDO. Field book of seashore life. 888p il col pl $6 Putnam
591.92 Marine fauna 50-10405

"The purpose of this book is to serve as a compact manual of the more common invertebrate animals inhabiting the shallow oceanic waters of the Atlantic Coast of North America from Labrador to the Cape Hatteras region of North Carolina. . . The book is intended first of all for the layman who has become interested in the invertebrate sea animals he has chanced to pick up along the shore; second, for the student whose attention is more seriously drawn to the life of the seas; and third, for the research worker." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:111 N 15 '50

Reviewed by E. W. Teale
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 19 '50 250w

MIRSKII, DMITRII PETROVICH. History of Russian literature; comprising A history of Russian literature and Contemporary Russian literature; ed. and abr. by Francis J. Whitfield. 2v in 1 518p $5 Knopf
891.709 Russian literature—History and criticism 49-10390

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Professor Whitfield has rendered a genuine service in reediting this text, even with the excisions which the publishers have exacted. He has revised facts and dates about which Mirsky is liable to be inaccurate; and his own final chapter, in which he attempts to bring up to date the facts about living Soviet writers, admirably tentative and noncommittal in the absence of dependable information, is exceedingly useful." Isaiah Berlin
+ Nation 170:207 Mr 4 '50 1800w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ap 8 '50 140w

"The present volume presents the two original works in a slightly abridged form. But the editor has approached his task with scrupulous care, leaving the original text in the main unaltered, and merely adding some useful footnotes in the later period to complete the picture. His postscript is necessarily very brief, and the reader who desires a broader view of developments in contemporary Soviet writing will still have to turn to such books as Mr. George Reavey's Soviet Literature Today. But for the whole period up to 1925 Prince Mirsky's work still has no rival, and might serve as a model for any aspiring literary historian."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F 17 '50 500w

"The work is almost too much abridged at times; yet it is only fair to say that even Mirsky's personal accent has not suffered much in the process. At any rate, the book can be read with ease and pleasure from the first to the last page." Janko Lavrin
+ Yale R n s 39:548 spring '50 180w

MISROCK, HENRY. God had seven days. 279p $3 Doubleday
50-5988

Jimmy Richardson, hopelessly crippled war veteran, makes a bargain with God, in return for a miracle Jimmy will henceforth live a Christian life. How God performs the miracle and how Jimmy, in spite of oppositions, tries to live up to the bargain, forms the story.

"The lack of sharpness is due to a vague interpretation of Christianity based on the sentimentalization of the Sermon on the Mount. Misrock timidly treats dissenting Christian sects as of equal worth. Other minuses are the overly pat picture of a materialistic America and a collection of undistinguished characters. A good try but unfortunately it does not add up to anything."
— Cath World 171:153 My '50 210w
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 16 '50 30w
Kirkus 18:5 Ja 1 '50 180w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Jl 23 '50 220w

"Combining fantasy and realism, Henry Misrock has produced a book that is both entertaining and thought provoking. Fast paced and witty, this satire is laced with irony and sustained to the end by scalding scorn. For this is the story of a miracle—and of what follows when self-interest takes over." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p34 F 26 '50 270w

Reviewed by Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 33:34 Mr 25 '50 270w

Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Mr '50

MITCHELL, BROADUS, and others. Economics; experience and analysis. 884p $5 Sloane

330.973 Economics. U.S.—Economic conditions. Economic conditions 50-7973

"A survey of economic knowledge. The book is divided into six parts—the economic experience of Europe and America, economic theory past and present, the American economy, economic life in America, and international economics. The appendix contains a list and descriptions of easily accessible economic journals, periodicals, and reports." Current Hist

+ Current Hist 19:231 O '50 40w

"Written to appeal to the intelligent layman, nontechnical, with an essentially modern viewpoint." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 75:1297 Ag '50 80w

MITCHELL, CARLETON. Yachtman's camera; photographed by [the author] designed by John R. Whiting. 148p $5 Van Nostrand

797.14 Yachts and yachting—Pictorial works 50-10671

"A photograph album, with a well-integrated running text, that extols the pleasant life of those who pay good money to go down to the sea in ships." New Yorker

Kirkus 18:549 S 1 '50 110w

"Mr. Mitchell, who took the photographs, says he has tried to capture the 'feel' of sailing, and he has succeeded; what is just as important, he has captured the look of it. The book would make a handsome gift for a blue-water sailor."

+ New Yorker 26:159 N 25 '50 60w

"Pictorially, 'Yachtsman's Camera' is a work of art. He has photographed all angles of this popular sport, including small and large boats, as well as those designed for pleasure and those for commerce. In the text he has painted a delightful picture of the joys of sailing, with just enough about this race and that cruise to interest everyone." P. A. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 120w

MITCHELL, HELEN, and WILSON, W. N. Ships that made U.S. history. (Whittlesey house publication) 94p il $2.50 McGraw

973 Ships. U.S.—History, Naval 50-5637

Brief narratives about ships which have played important roles in the development of our history. Partial contents: The Mayflower's historic voyage; "I have not yet begun to fight!"; Pirate fighters; Steamboat pioneers; "Old Ironsides"; "A signal victory on Lake Champlain"; Steamboats on the Mississippi; The Gloucester schooner; "Remember the Maine!"; Outwitting enemy U-boats; Drama on the Missouri's deck. For young readers. Index.

Booklist 46:205 F 15 '50

Bookmark 9:164 Ap '50 60w

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun p15 Je 13 '50 30w

"Brief, but vivid, word sketches and drawings by a distinguished marine painter make this a fine introduction to our great naval history." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 12 '50 210w

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Ag 19 '50 170w

Kirkus 18:63 F 1 '50 110w

"Boys of any age that can read well will love this book, with its twenty brief chapters in large type and forty fine sketches by Mr. Wilson." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 26 '50 90w

"This book achieves its greatest excellence in those chapters devoted to a single ship or to a single captain. . . The chapters devoted to a group of ships, such as 'Pirate Fighters' and 'Steamboat Pioneers,' are weaker. Yet such weakness is only comparative. Young people of 10 and up will find this a beautiful, heart-warming book." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p22 F 19 '50 190w

"The text is short and crisp. It does not attempt to tell much more than the bare outline of the story. The drawings are vigorous, attractive, and convincing in background. This is history in a form that will, almost certainly, appeal to boys and girls of varying ages." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 33:47 Mr 11 '50 120w

Springf'd Republican p6D F 19 '50 140w

MITCHELL, MRS LUCY (SPRAGUE). Our children and our schools; a picture and analysis of how today's school teachers are meeting the challenge of new knowledge and new cultural needs. 510p $4 Simon & Schuster

372 Education—U.S. Teaching 50-13617

"Four years ago the Bank Street Schools, an outgrowth of the old Bureau of Educational Experiments, cooperated with the New York City Board of Education in a project designed to apply modern education methods to a large city school system. The project sought an answer to the question: 'How can our schools be improved?'. . Lucy Sprague Mitchell's book is not an attempt to answer this question dogmatically, but to express 'what kind of thinking about children and teachers our schools are leaving and toward what kind of thinking they are moving.' " N Y Times

Booklist 47:71 O 15 '50

Bookmark 10:5 O '50 40w

Reviewed by Laurence Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 10 '50 230w

Kirkus 18:254 Ap 15 '50 210w

"The discouragingly few laymen whose curiosity about the state of our schools is great enough to sustain them through the heavy going may find Mrs. Mitchell's report rewarding. The professional educators will find helpful classroom transcripts, workshop reports and other first-hand material." Judith Crist

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 22 '50 460w

" 'Our Children and Our Schools' is more than a report of an unusual laboratory experiment. It offers valuable help to school administrators, prinicipals and teachers who might wish to apply such a program to their schools. Mrs. Mitchell includes transcripts of classroom work, examples of student projects and other helpful first-hand materials." Leonard Buder

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 27 '50 240w

School & Society 72:206 S 23 '50 50w

MITCHELL, MAIRIN. Maritime history of Russia, 848-1948; with maps specially drawn by J. F. Horrabin, and others selected by the author, some from original sources. 544p il $5 Macmillan

947 Russia—History, Naval. Russia—Foreign relations [50-1526]

"Less a history than a panorama, [the book] attempts to present a rounded view of the past history, present status and future prospects of Russia on the water." N Y Times

"The lack of published documents is not, however, the principal reason for the shortcomings of Mairin Mitchell's book. Its title is a misnomer. It is not a maritime history of Russia in any accepted sense, but rather a miscellaneous collection of information on seas, rivers, and lakes of Russia and on Russian ex-

MITCHELL, MAIRIN—Continued
plorations in the Pacific and in the polar regions, combined with some geopolitical observations. . . There are, however, some interesting reproductions of old maps, paintings, prints, and a few photographs. The badly organized volume is peppered with factual errors, some of which show a rather remarkable ignorance of the history of the events discussed." D. F. White

— + Am Hist R 55:905 Jl '50 700w

Foreign Affairs 28:685 Jl '50 10w

"There is one good section on early explorations and the sea-passage around Siberia—but not a word about the naval combats in the Baltic during the Great Northern War, or the battle of Navarino. The whole thing makes up a strange grab-bag of facts, semi-facts and unsupported opinions." Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p22 Mr 19 '50 360w

"Miss Mitchell's publishers claim that this is the first comprehensive work to be produced in English on the maritime history of Russia. I must emphatically disagree. That book has yet to be written." Richard Chancellor

— Spec 184:154 F 3 '50 850w

MITCHELL, ROSAMOND JOSCELYNE, and LEYS, MARY DOROTHY ROSE. History of the English people. 612p il $6 Longmans

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Social conditions

"The plan has been to describe the social history of England from the Norman Conquest to the latter nineteenth century, with a foreword on pre-history, Romans, and Saxons, and an epilogue on the twentieth century. The first book is concerned with 'Medieval Society'; the second, entitled 'The New Rich,' runs from 1349 to 1558; a third, 'New Horizons,' takes us on to 1689; and the last 'from Dutch William to the Jubilee,' is styled 'Sensibility.'" (Times [London] Lit Sup) Indexes.

Current Hist 19:356 D '50 50w

"Miss Mitchell and Miss Leys are English scholars and know their land so well that they have been able to translate all of the pertinent details of life and manners into a readable and unorthodox 'history' that will be useful as it is delightful. . . Altogether an intriguing book that will be of immense use to the secondary school student, and to the adult reader for pleasure." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 75:2003 N 15 '50 140w

Reviewed by F. M. Powicke

Spec 184:386 O 13 '50 900w

"Decisive without being pontifical, and learned without aridity or loss of proportion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 29 '50 2300w

MITTELHOLZER, EDGAR. Morning in Trinidad [English title: Morning at the office]. 250p $2.75 Doubleday

50-7594

A novel picturing one morning among the personnel of an office in Trinidad. There are two white men, but the other members of the staff are colored in various degrees. There is very little plot, the action being motivated by the racial and sexual reactions of the staff members.

"Mr. Mittelholzer, who knows the West Indies as a native, has written a story that is an illuminating picture of the life of the West Indies, often humorous, and filled with some quite real pangs of sorrow for such victims of circumstances as these. It has only one real fault, that the tragedy of Horace, the studious, intelligent, ambitious black boy, is not quite strong enough to make the reader sense the heartache fully." Kelsey Guilfoil

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 21 '50 400w

"This is a book that will appeal to a very limited audience. . . Competent enough, but unresolved, it reads as though intended for a setting for a story that never materializes."

— + Kirkus 18:145 Mr 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 28 '50 120w

"Aloof and amused, determined to keep his animalculae well under the microscope, Mr. Mittelhölzer unwisely slips the book itself on the slide. By introducing an author who expounds his own particular method of writing fiction he wrecks his careful perspective and dissolves his novel." Antonia White

— New Statesman & Nation 39:552 My 13 '50 180w

"The story of 'A Morning in Trinidad' is a simple one, and Mr. Mittelholzer recounts it in a quiet, deceptively simple fashion. Yet he provides fresh, clear insight into how completely the virus of racial superiority can infect a mixed society, especially when pigmentation is an unmistakable index to class." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 7 '50 320w

"It must be said that Edgar Mittelholzer handles his promising material too methodically to raise the pulse rate. The young Negro's impulse is too frail to carry the burden of a whole novel: the book becomes a matter of addition, not accretion." Jane Martin

N Y Times p20 My 14 '50 270w

"His narrative thread is far too fragile to bear the weight of his elaborate array of individuals, nor is he able to adhere consistently to the attitude of mingled irony and compassion that, according to one of his characters, is the ideal one for a novelist to adopt."

New Yorker 26:109 My 27 '50 120w

"[The author] is at his best when duplicating the typical dialogue of secretaries in the powder room or around the water cooler; the idle chatter, the values, the latest office gossip. But somehow all the petty occurrences don't quite seem to add up to anything in the end." E. O. T.

— + San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 2 '50 310w

Sat R of Lit 33:32 Jl 15 '50 130w

"Mr. Edgar Mittelhölzer's novel about Trinidad is a distinguished piece of work. Both in presenting his scene and suggesting character he shows himself a writer of real promise. . . His attitude is humane and his touch is light. He comes near faltering in the figure of Mortimer Barnett, a local West Indian writer, whose charm and gifts seem to threaten unreality for a page or two at the end of the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Ap 28 '50 480w

MLAKAR, FRANK. He, the father. 313p $3 Harper

50-8544

A novel of sin and repentance, beginning and ending in a Slovenian village, with the midwestern United States as the scene of the main action. It is the story of the Slovenian Osip, who killed his father in order to get his savings. In America, Osip and his wife Lenka made a fairly comfortable living. But the shadow of his sin followed Osip relentlessly, until he returned to his own country in hope of peace. There vengeance took its terrifying toll.

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 13 '50 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

Kirkus 18:285 My 15 '50 270w

"A remarkable first effort whose only distinct failing is an excessive and unnecessary use of psychoanalytical explanations. Mlakar has a knack for packing archaic terror into his simplest phrases. The very crudity of his prose seems well calculated to heighten his effect. In fact it is Mr. Mlakar's mastery of the idiom of primitive fear which lends the novel its vague, yet frightening authenticity." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 23 '50 700w

"Unhappily the author impedes his story with flashbacks and overwriting. He winds up for a fast-ball delivery, but the result is more like the sort of thing Dizzy Dean was getting by on when all he had left was soft stuff. If you can't be fast you'd better be foxy, and Mr. Mlakar just isn't throwing them either way in this one." Nelson Algren
N Y Times p12 Jl 30 '50 320w

"Mr. Mlakar, American born in 1913 but a Slovene by ancestry, has great talent and shows it here. His handling of a difficult theme is surprisingly sure for a first novelist, and he writes with a kind of rugged power that takes no account of mere smoothness. Better, he has a profound understanding of human beings, their weaknesses and their fears, and of Man's common inner awareness—seldom acknowledged because to acknowledge is to give in and die—that even his strength is pitiful. In short, Mr. Mlakar is a novelist with this first book. He will bear watching." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 26 '50 800w

"A first novel of distinct promise and haunting impact. . . The writing of 'He, the Father' is lucid and unencumbered, the characterization most vivid. There is a certain shapelessness in the plot but it seems to me deliberate, an organic extension of the lumbering and difficult theme." J. G. Hitrec
+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 Jl 22 '50 800w

"Author Mlakar has wasted some of the force of this first novel in plodding, wooden writing, but, nonetheless, he has put together a powerful, Dostoevskian story. And at the core, despite its burdening trappings of auto-psychoanalysis, it is as simple, and final, as a folk tale."
+ — Time 52:72 Ag 7 '50 500w

MOBERLY, SIR WALTER HAMILTON. Crisis in the university [pub. for the Christian frontier council]. 316p $2.50 Macmillan

378.42 Colleges and universities—Great Britain [49-3415]

"In this discussion of the contemporary situation of British universities the author makes a searching diagnosis of their failure to fulfil their proper function in a world shaken by insecurity and desperately needing fresh moral leadership. The author writes in the conviction that the universities can rise to the call put to them." Publisher's note

"Though an individual work and not a collective production, the book, Sir Walter points out, is the result of conferences of university teachers held under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement and the Christian Frontier Council. . . All this must add to the representative quality of its opinions. It is representative also of the very best that academic culture, in particular Oxford's Humaner Letters, can give." Philip Leon
+ Hibbert J 47:404 Jl '49 1200w

"Sir Walter, who has not yet retired from the chairmanship of the University Grants Committee, has practised what he preaches in writing this courageously controversial book." D. M. Emmet
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 26 '49 350w

Reviewed by F. Clarke
New Statesman & Nation 37:476 My 7 '49 1200w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 72:151 S 2 '50 270w

Reviewed by E. W. Heaton
Spec 182:582 Ap 29 '49 900w

"Since 1935, when he became chairman of the University Grants Committee, Sir Walter Moberly has had an unequalled opportunity for knowing the innermost thoughts of teachers and administrators and chiefly through the Student Christian Movement, he has kept in touch with the universities' transitory population. As mediator between the State and universities, as the paymaster who dispensed increasingly great sums without strings tied to them, his reputation stands high in the universities and his critical testament will carry weight. If the book suffers at all, it is from the range of his experience and the large number of opinions he has taken into account. It is very much a chairman's book and lacks the forceful Latin clarity that Ortega y Gasset, for example, was able to give to his Mission of the University by concentrating upon a single theme."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 9 '49 4200w

MOCK, MRS ELIZABETH (BAUER). Architecture of bridges. 127p 170pl $5 Museum of modern art

624 Bridges 50-6795

Pictures of bridges dating from primitive times to the present. Each picture has a brief description, and some have plans. The author is on the faculty of the School of architecture of the University of Oklahoma. She is the daughter of J. L. Bauer, former state highway engineer of New Jersey. Glossary.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

"Basically this is a picture book—and a very fine one—but most of its appeal and usefulness resides in the instructive and stimulating captions that Mrs. Mock has written. They are not arty, as is usual in similar books, but strike sensible degrees of emphasis between the necessary anatomy of bridges and their architectural aspects."
+ Eng N 145:44 Jl 6 '50 120w

"Original and distinguished book. . . Here is a book of pictures of unexpected charm, selected and presented with care, and fitted with captions that are witty and provocative as well as informing. . . 'The Architecture of Bridges' is an adventure in understanding and appreciation, the leisurely perusal of which offers more than the close study of many similar books." Frederick Gutheim
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 2 '50 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:66 S '50

"There is an abundance of photographs, at least one for each bridge; all have been eminently well chosen for the interest they hold. The result is not only an album of absorbing interest to pore over; it is also instructive. Without much effort the reader gains a knowledge of bridge construction that will sharpen his awareness and appreciation of such structures for the rest of his days."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:46 N 4 '50 150w

MODELL, MRS MERRIAM (EVELYN PIPER, pseud). Motive. 242p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 50-5452

Detective story.

"Hollywood, The New Yorker and the Kinsey Report all have a share in this uncommon mystery whose sum if not quite that of 'The Innocent' happens to be mature and telling in a fashion one can't often expect or require of a mystery." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p4 Mr 17 '50 170w

"Gruesomely fantastic tale involving characters widely off the normal beam."
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 2 '50 50w

Kirkus 18:11 Ja 1 '50 100w

"Not always plausible, but plenty of suspense."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 9 '50 130w

"A triumphant fusion of psychological novel, sociological study and pure detective story." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p39 Ap 16 '50 200w

"We read it. We couldn't help reading it. But we're irritated, nevertheless." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 19 '50 180w

MODERN wonder book of knowledge; the thrilling stories of twentieth-century industry, science, nature, transportation, communication, and other marvels of the world. 690p il $4.95 Winston

609 Industrial arts—History 49-7780

"This book is evidently a version of Wonder Book of Knowledge, first published in 1917 under the editorship of Henry Chase Hill by the American Industries Bureau. Taken over by the Winston Company, it continued under the same editorship but under a changed title beginning in 1930: New Wonder Book of Knowledge. New editions of this title were copyrighted nearly every year until 1944. The 1934 edition, edited and revised by Will H. Johnston, was reviewed in the July 1935 issue of Subscription Books Bulletin [entered in Book Review Digest under Hill, H. C.]. . . The volume, not an 'encyclopedia' in the usual sense, is composed of 52 chapters called 'stories' which cover the following general fields: the physical universe, natural resources, power, structures, manufactures, communication, transportation, applied arts, and specific inventions and discoveries . . . with questions introducing the various aspects of the subject." Subscription Bks Bul

"Arrangement of the material follows no definite pattern, except that related subjects are loosely grouped to make smoother transitions for those who will read the entire book. An excellent thirteen-page index and occasional cross references serve as guides to the reader in search of specific information. . . While not a true encyclopedia in comprehensiveness or arrangement, this volume will prove a useful reference tool for schools. It will also provide fascinating reading for teen-aged boys and girls." E. H.

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 24 '49 230w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 5 '50 170w

"Information is written in a popular and simplified style and, although apparently accurate, does not attempt the logical coverage or explanation, as claimed on the book jacket, of a topic such as would occur in an encyclopedia article, e.g., The Story of Radio. The book can, therefore, be recommended for browsing by the layman and young reader, but not as a reference tool."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 21:40 Jl '50 700w

MOHOLY-NAGY, DOROTHEA MARIA PAULINE ALICE SIBYLLE (PIETZSCH). Moholy-Nagy, experiment in totality; with an introd. by Walter Gropius. 253p il $6.50 Harper

B or 92 Moholy-Nagy, László 50-8091

Biography by his widow, of a Hungarian artist who was for many years connected with the Bauhaus in Germany, and, after an interval in England, with the New Bauhaus in America.

Booklist 46:315 Je 15 '50

"His wife's profusely illustrated study of his evolution as man and artist is frankly personal. She includes quotations from lectures, letters and intimate conversations which never have been printed before. Only occasionally, as for example in his death scene, will the reader question her taste in revealing so completely the inner fabric of their mutual life. But this still is an exciting book, written with speed and a kind of intuitive brilliance." Katharine Kuh

+ Chicago Sun p4 Je 18 '50 450w

"Sibyl Moholy-Nagy had been closely associated with her husband's work since their first meeting in a Berlin film office in 1931. Her extremely lucid account of his career is a skilful melding of excerpts from original letters, documents, and speeches and her own carefully considered and clearly written text." F. A. Sweet

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 4 '50 460w

"The devoted wife of Moholy-Nagy has written more than a biography, more than a catalogue of achievement. She has re-created vision, accomplishment, nightmare, friends, feuds, inspirations, and has given one the feel of an era in the account of one man. Many illustrations make for further vividness." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:1295 Ag '50 100w

Reviewed by B. H. Hayes

N Y Times p7 Je 25 '50 310w

"The book will have immense appeal for all who knew [Moholy-Nagy] and regret his early death in 1946, and for those who wish to understand an artist influential in our period." G. L. M. Morley

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 2 '50 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p647 O 13 '50 1050w

MOLL, ELICK. Night without sleep. 212p $2.75 Little

50-9319

Richard Bowen, an alcoholic who has once been a successful author, wakes up from a nightmare to the realization of an even worse one. He believes that he has killed one of the three women in his life. Bit by bit he pieces together what he can of the hours he cannot remember, until he reaches the solution of the mystery.

"Elick Moll has made his theme into a great novel of power, suspense and undeniable brilliance that should give any reader a night without sleep. The havoc Bowen's blackout caused is described with a skill and force that give promise of great things to come from Elick Moll." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 3 '50 300w

Kirkus 18:362 Jl 1 '50 170w

"Almost slick writing, with an appeal to those who want their psychiatry in fiction form. But not needed in most collections." R. E. Kingery

Library J 75:1292 Ag '50 100w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ag 20 '50 500w

Reviewed by B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p11 S 3 '50 230w

"Mr. Moll's story is concerned with little more than a desperate man's attempt to reconstruct the happenings of twenty-four tragic hours in his life, but it is written with a feeling and penetration certainly unusual in this kind of fiction."

+ New Yorker 26:88 Ag 26 '50 110w

"A rapid, high-keyed, spine-chilling story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 18 '50 750w

"Richard's nightmare is fraught with clichés used by every alcoholic and neurotic character in slick fiction. If you're curious to discover whom Richard Bowen murders you needn't fear spending a 'Night Without Sleep' after solving the mystery." J. M. Grant

Sat R of Lit 33:34 S 9 '50 140w

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Lucy's Christmas; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 46p $2 Houghton

50-14374

One April day when all the Bracketts had gone to town, their house and barn burned to the ground. The rest of the year they spent at a lumbering camp in the Maine woods, but at Christmas they were able to return home —and that was because of Lucy's "note."

Booklist 47:161 D 15 '50

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 17 '50 20w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 30w

Kirkus 18:466 Ag 15 '50 130w

"All the family will enjoy this story of the sturdy Bracketts who meet their troubles cheerfully. Nine-eleven-year olds can read it for themselves. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 75:1911 N 1 '50 90w

"Before the surprise, we see and feel the Maine woods, the good neighbors, the logging, all done with this writer's memorable kind of realism. This is not to be missed, one of those books that makes you, too, long to help make a grand Christmas for somebody else." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Hearld Tribune Bk R p20 N 19 '50 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p60 D 3 '50 110w

"The drawings of the Maine woods in winter, of the little railroad station, and the village are completely faithful to the background and lovely in design. This New England reviewer finds both text and pictures very refreshing."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:43 D 9 '50 200w

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Uncle Andy's island; il. by Joshua Tolford. 243p $2.50 Houghton

50-217

Mark Reynolds was the leader in all the mischief to be found in Kettle Cove, Maine. When he heard that his adored Uncle Andy, a war hero, was coming home to stay, and wanted a reliable boy for a helper, Mark decided to reform. In this book for ages nine to twelve the results of Mark's struggle are retold.

"Excellent characterization."

+ Bookmark 9:166 Ap '50 80w

"This is really a good story for 9 to 12 year olds. Full of the tang of the sea with its dangerous fogs and squalls; the vivid, down-to-earth quality of the Maine folk; the excitement of lobster and herring fishing; the novelty of a pet seal; and boys will take to Mark, a very real boy." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 30 '50 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 26:196 My '50 100w

"The story is slight with a mild Tom Sawyer slant, but the information about lobstering, herring runs, seals and boats and the feel of the salt air of the Maine coast make this a delightful book. The dialogue is atmospheric, too, with plenty of 'ayus's' and 'don't mind if I do's.' Good fun."

+ Kirkus 18:61 F 1 '50 100w

Reviewed by Louise Davis

Library J 75:634 Ap 15 '50 100w

"Recommended as good, realistic Maine fiction." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 80w

"A perfectly delightful story. . . Most lively boys of ten or so, who are good readers, and girls too, up to twelve, will meet a kindred spirit in Mark. Possibly he may work his way into a class with 'Trigger John's Son' and 'Tom Sawyer;' at least his story is a candidate for honors among books for younger boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 5 '50 270w

"A respect for young people adds stature to this story. . . The characters ring as true as the twang of their New England talk." C. E. Zagat

+ N Y Times p22 My 28 '50 160w

"Honest, salty masculine stuff, by an author who knows boys and the scrapes they can get into."

+ New Yorker 26:180 D 2 '50 60w

"In this story of the Maine coast Mrs. Molloy has another fine book to her credit. Here is more evidence of her keen understanding of people of all sorts and kinds."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:34 My 13 '50 240w

MOLLOY, ROBERT. Pound foolish. 307p $3 Lippincott

50-10386

This is the story of Henri Lemay, a southern gentleman of the old school, living in Charleston in 1914.

Booklist 47:86; 97 N 1 '50

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 26 '50 550w

Christian Science Monitor p8 D 23 '50 330w

Kirkus 18:659 N 1 '50 130w

"Human understanding and a quality of warmth make this unpretentious book readable and appealing. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 80w

"'Pound Foolish' is a bit on the pastel side and as fluffy as the beruffled shirtwaists that Leonie and her gyurl friends were wearing that summer of 1914, but its particular brand of southern charm is undeniable, its people are nearly all endearing, and its episodes, even when practically preposterous, are funny." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 26 '50 650w

"Because a novel's theme is murky, because it lacks an over-riding unity, does not mean that it cannot have moments of excitement. However, Mr. Molloy does not have the narrative skill to hold his readers even episodically, or, if he does, he has not shown it here." G. M.

N Y Times p36 N 26 '50 300w

MOLNAR, FERENC. Companion in exile; notes for an autobiography; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 363p $3.50 Gaer

B or 92 Bartha, Wanda 50-5701

"A memoir of Wanda Bartha, Mr. Molnar's secretary and companion who died in 1947." New Yorker

"Disheartening indeed is the obligation to bring in a negative report on a new book by one of the most distinguished of modern European dramatists. . . But honesty forces the admission that it would have been kinder to Molnar's reputation had this morbid and traumatic book been withheld from the public." Fitzroy Davis

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 5 '50 550w

"Highly recommended for theatre and literature collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:496 Mr 15 '50 40w

"This is an odd and pitiful book, pitiful no less for its revelation of the tragedy of exile than for its revelation of self-pity in the author. . . The book is not written in continuous narrative, but is made up of short sections describing incidents of their exile or the trivia of their lives, and also revealing without restraint Molnar's grief after her death." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 5 '50 700w

"This is an unusually tender book. No émigré will read it without being moved. No woman reader will fail to envy its unassuming heroine for being loved so much and so terribly missed. But although all the props for a masterpiece are here, it is far from that. For in a book dedicated to a woman's memory, the author has introduced too many anecdotes about himself and others in his theatrical or political worlds. Some of the stories are excellent. Most of them, taking up a third of the book and told in an after-dinner speaker's manner, ramble into dull by-paths." H. E. Jacob

+ — N Y Times p22 F 26 '50 600w

"The book is a hymn of the author's grief over the loss of a loved friend and it requires all his literary skill, wit, and grace to keep the detailed account of the young lady's death, funeral, and interment, and of the afterlife she leads in his fantasies and dreams, from being grotesque or maudlin. . . An odd and moving book."

New Yorker 26:103 Mr 4 '50 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 7 '50 150w

"'Companion in Exile,' for all its tragic melancholia, is filled with charming and revealing things. And it is amazing how touching Molnar can be when merely describing the stores and cafes on a New York street Wanda Bartha had loved. For all of his tragedy, there is still magnificence in Ferenc Molnar, and great human warmth." Richard Watts

MOLNAR, FERENC—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 33:52 Ap 15 '50 750w

MONAGHAN, JAMES. This is Illinois; a pictorial history. 211p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press
977.3 Illinois—History—Pictorial works 49-11864

Pictorial history of the state of Illinois from early times to the present. Mr Monaghan is state historian in charge of the Historical Library.

"His photographs of the crowds attending the funeral train of Lincoln and of the Chicago fire are particularly striking moments in a vivid collection." Allen Taylor
+ N Y Times p13 D 25 '49 140w

"The sociological aspect predominates, as it should—as it cannot help doing, indeed, in a soundly compiled picture book. Illinois is people and the camera proves it." J. T. W.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 Mr 11 '50 140w

MONASH, PAUL. How brave we live. 243p $3 Scribner
50-5613

A first novel. It is composed of the stories of a group of present-day Greenwich Villagers, characterized by one of their number as "the generation that doesn't have the courage to get lost."

"On the surface, Mr. Monash, a young and bouncy writer, puts [his] characters through their paces with bawdy cynicism; basically he is concerned with differentiating between the essentially honest and the essentially false. Conventional morality is flouted; but not without a sense of groping for a new, unhypocritical morality, a real and workable integrity. The resulting book is by turns tender, sordid, and gay—but never totally irresponsible."
Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 11 '50 180w

"The gross, ungainly, even grotesque in these lives give this a caricatural focus in spite of the occasional, interlinear sympathy. (Public Libraries will want to exercise caution.)"
Kirkus 18:9 Ja 1 '50 170w

"Mr. Monash describes their misfortunes with a sharp eye for the ludicrous; and there is a satirical bite (and a bawdiness) to his prose which recalls the work of Nathaniel West. For readers who enjoy Huxley, Sartre and Camus, Kersh; and those interested in new talents." H. W. Hart
Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 80w

"'I often get a sense of the end of our civilization through what is happening to the people I know well,' mourns the narrator. But the capacity to produce such a penetrating novel about them as Mr. Monash's is in itself evidence of vitality."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 12 '50 250w

Reviewed by Gerald Sykes
N Y Times p43 Ap 16 '50 230w

"It's apparent from the first that Mr. Monash's wryness is only partly genuine, and that he believes these latter-day representatives of the lost generation tradition to be pretty significant folk—a conclusion not entirely warranted by their haphazard and self-consciously scatological deportment."
New Yorker 26:115 Mr 25 '50 160w

"Mr. Monash, like the people of whom he writes, has talents; and his problem, like theirs, is to discipline those talents and direct them with enough vision to give them validity for others." Leonard Amster
Sat R of Lit 33:29 Mr 18 '50 240w

MONGAN, AGNES, ed. One hundred master drawings [presented in honor of Paul J. Sachs]. 208p $7.50 Harvard univ. press
741.94 Drawings 49-50323

"The nucleus of this book was a loan exhibition of seventy drawings held at the Fogg Art Museum late in 1948 to celebrate the seventieth birthday of Professor Paul Sachs. To these have been added thirty drawings acquired by the Museum and the Sachs collection during the past decade. The drawings shown here range from unknown masters of the fourteenth century to Toulouse-Lautrec. . . On the page facing each drawing is comment by one of a group of fifteen distinguished museum directors and university professors. There is also an introductory essay, 'Drawing and the Man of Letters.'" (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:782 My 1 '50 150w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander
+ Sat R of Lit 33:44 Ap 1 '50 140w

"Most of the works reproduced are of exceptional quality, but not all; and in any case a reader may still feel that a series of learned comments on masterpieces is not enough. An elegantly written article by Jean Seznec on 'Drawing and the Man of Letters' is included in the volume and is decidedly worth reading. Plates, printing and paper are of the highest quality throughout."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p528 Ag 25 '50 1050w

"This rich picture book, one more admirable contribution in the field of drawings, constitutes a fitting tribute to the teacher of Paul J. Sachs on the occasion of his seventieth birthday. . . The book is addressed to the art lover and to former students of Dr. Sachs rather than to scholars, but the descriptions are accurate and the documentation is full enough to satisfy collectors and students as well."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:4 Mr '50 210w

MONRONEY, ALMER STILLWELL MIKE, and others. Strengthening of American political institutions. See Strengthening of American political institutions

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Woodrow Wilson, boy president; il. by Syd Browne. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 186p $1.75 Bobbs
B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow—Juvenile literature 50-9475

Story of Woodrow Wilson's boyhood in Augusta, Georgia. Two final chapters cover very briefly his later years. For younger readers.

"A fine addition to the 'Childhood of Famous Americans Series.'" Nelle McCalle
+ Library J 75:1835 O 15 '50 90w

"This title proves surprisingly readable, and the odd subtitle 'boy president' proves a prophetic part of a Southern boyhood in which a serious, bookish boy became a leader through his superior brains. However, I would think this one of the several of the series whose hero could wait for a fuller understanding when boys have more background to bring to it." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 90w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 12 '50 60w

MONTAGU, ASHLEY. See Ashley-Montagu, M. F.

MONTGOMERY, JAMES STUART. The incredible Casanova. 437p $3.95 Doubleday
B or 92 Casanova de Seingalt, Giacomo Girolamo 50-6313

This biography of the eighteenth century amorist is based upon Casanova's own memoirs, which in the original were in twelve volumes. No index.

Chicago Sun p22 Ap 23 '50 180w

Reviewed by J. A. Clark
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 28 '50 550w

"Is for my money quite dull, and although this is a considerable curtailment of Casanova's own memoirs which loitered through twelve volumes, this is still quite an extensive recapitulation of the progress of this rake with a formality more typical of his century than ours."
Kirkus 18:44 Ja 15 '50 160w

"As Mr. Montgomery rarely indicates the sources that he has drawn upon it is difficult to distribute the credit for the occasional annotations. Using his editorial prerogative he has inserted paraphrases and interpolations to link the long passages taken from the Casanovian narrative, but his comments remain in general more sententious than informative." Geoffrey Bruun
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 2 '50 600w

"Mr. Montgomery knows the material thoroughly and is a skilful narrator. But he has not faced the problems of a real biography of Casanova. All the various facets of Casanova do not, in sum, explain his character. The international background of his life is for the purposes of Mr. Montgomery's book, a mere backdrop for the bedroom." Rene Fulop-Miller
N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '50 700w

"The story of Casanova as Mr. Montgomery has found him is written for entertainment and leans perhaps too heavily on the love affairs of a man afflicted with a touch of satyriasis. But this is the Casanova of his own memoirs, his own creation newly brought to life. The reader who would like to plunge deeper into the subject will look in vain here for a bibliography." Harrison Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:50 Ap 15 '50 1000w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Sudden vengeance [Eng title: Frequent hearses]. 247p $2.50 Dodd 50-6529

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p6 Mr 24 '50 150w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 23 '50 50w

"[The book] runs on more formal lines than any previous Crispin. The detection is quite straightforward, with a valid motive and the decisive clue well camouflaged." Ralph Partridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:254 Mr 4 '50 240w

"Fen is neither as literary nor as witty as usual in this latest adventure, but he's a good hand at solving a murder, just as Edmund Crispin is invariably a good hand at writing a pleasantly literate mystery."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 9 '50 180w

N Y Times p31 Mr 26 '50 140w

"In spite of his weakness for literary reference, Professor Fen is an alert sleuth. . . A sound, if conventional, piece of mystification—or 'baffler,' to employ its native idiom."
+ New Yorker 26:122 Mr 25 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 30 '50 110w

MONTROSS, LYNN. Reluctant rebels; the story of the Continental congress, 1774-1789. 467p $5 Harper

973.312 U.S. Continental congress. U.S.—History—Revolution 50-5857

An account of the organization, membership, and work of the First Continental Congress of 1774, and of the Second of 1775 to 1789. The material is divided into five parts: Rebellion; Independence; Alliance; Victory; and Union. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Montross has been content for the most part to follow closely in the footsteps of other historians and he has not used newspapers or other sources not immediately available in any good reference library. . . The result, as might be expected, is a volume which will attract scholars neither by the novelty of its views nor by the registration of new facts. Unfortunately, it lacks the stylistic brilliance which might set apart a book of this nature. In a generally exact and painstaking narrative, there are a few factual slips and dubious judgments that will not escape the scrutiny of scholars." J. C. Miller
Am Hist R 55:917 Jl '50 350w

Booklist 46:244 Ap 1 '50

"Montross writes with an eye for the human, the colorful, the dramatic. His scholarship is trustworthy but unobtrusive, and his story of the early years of the nation should have a wide appeal to the general reader." R. B. Nye
+ Chicago Sun p5 Jl 23 '50 390w

"An interesting, and well founded book, written largely from the actual journals, letters, and correspondence of the congress and its various members." R. J. Graf
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 5 '50 550w

Current Hist 18:229 Ap '50 40w

"A book of people as well as events, of struggle as well as achievement, the research and scholarship here while not subordinated to are nevertheless vitalized by the brightness of style which makes for lively reading."
+ Kirkus 17:683 D 15 '49 210w

"You come away from Mr. Montross's readable book with a vast respect for the hard-working men who labored mightily in what the author calls 'a laboratory of administration' for fifteen crowded years." McAlister Coleman
+ Nation 170:233 Mr 11 '50 600w

"Mr. Montross's 'scholarship is trustworthy but never obtrusive,' says the jacket, failing to add that it is antiquated and uninformed. Almost none of the penetrating and revolutionary studies published in the last fifteen years is mentioned in the long but out-of-date list of authorities. . . Furthermore, Mr. Montross has not asked any searching questions of his material, with the result that the general reader does not learn why the Revolution took place, why some rebels were 'reluctant,' what the imperial problem was, how it was solved by the Northwest Ordinance, or the answers to other questions he naturally expects to get. These strictures should by no means obscure the fact that here and there Mr. Montross offers valuable perceptions." Carl Bridenbaugh
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 12 '50 800w

"In general, 'The Reluctant Rebels' by Lynn Montross, differs relatively little in substance and interpretation from Mr. Burnett's 'The Continental Congress,' but is a much better book. Mr. Burnett's work is depressingly dull. Mr. Montross is one of the most refreshing writers of history I have read. He has the 'instinct for the jugular,' a strong sense of logic, impartiality and a style easy and sparkling, yet not flashy. Having praised the book so highly, I must caution the general reader that the author, in dealing with matters not covered by the volumes of source material chiefly used, is undependable, particularly in the chapter, 'The Egg of Sedition,' giving the background of the First Continental Congress." Bernhard Knollenberg
+ — N Y Times p6 F 19 '50 850w

"Mr. Montross's book demonstrates how an amateur guided by intuition may prove more sure-footed than a professional weighted down with the apparatus of scholarship. But specialists may properly criticize his unawareness of a completely different interpretation of the period from his own." R. B. Morris
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:13 Mr 11 '50 950w

Wis Lib Bul 46:18 Ap '50

MOODY, RALPH. Little Britches; Father and I were ranchers; il. by Edward Shenton. 260p $3 Norton

B or 92 Ranch life 50-8857

When Ralph Moody was eight years old, his family moved to Colorado because the father was threatened with tuberculosis. For three years they worked hard to make a go of ranch life and in the end were defeated, but in those years the boy had learned to be a man and was able to take his father's place when it became necessary.

Booklist 47:11 S 1 '50

Bookmark 10:31 N '50 40w

"You will search long among current books to find a more disarming and refreshing account of family life than Ralph Moody has set down in 'Little Britches.' It lacks the brilliance of Clarence Day's 'Life With Father' and the saltiness of the Gould-Coffin books about Maine boyhoods, but there are a solidity and goodness about it that make it thoroly enjoyable." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 20 '50 450w

"This is a gallant book—from the first sentence until the last. It is a true story, written in the first person, written without sentimentality but with extraordinary drama." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 22 '50 420w

"There is enough action, color and variety to hold the interest of older boys and girls, as well as adults, and enough depth to give the book lasting value." S. M. A.

+ Horn Bk 26:485 N '50 120w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 26:502 N '50 50w

"Real stuff here with none of the artificiality of the more eccentric domestic chronicles."

+ Kirkus 18:375 Jl 1 '50 200w

"Enthusiastically recommended for young and old." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:1287 Ag '50 110w

"'Little Britches' has the elements of a sentimental Western classic: hardship, resourcefulness, moralizing, pathos and much practical information about how ranchers lived and did things in the early 1900s. . . Where the emphasis switches from actual reminiscence to fictitious elaboration I don't know and it doesn't matter. . . The author's simplicity is sometimes precious and he pushes primitiveness pretty hard." T. H. Ferril

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 13 '50 850w

"The ranch episodes are the book's high spot, though the father-son relationship gives the volume substance, for Father Moody was full of apt advice for a son who often needed but seldom welcomed it. The result is a little sententious, but that, too, is a part of this story, which is told in broad strokes rather than with fine shadings." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '50 370w

"A most appealing book. . . I believe its genuineness and its simplicity will build up a large audience of enthusiastic readers." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 17 '50 1000w

"You can call this book regionalism or you can forget there is such a thing as regionalism, and either way you will get satisfaction. Actually there is more West in this little fragment of autobiography than there is in most Westerns. This is a quiet, compensating piece of work, written with great skill and restraint. It has reality and authenticity, not merely in its recital of incident, but in its basic approach to people." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 Ag 19 '50 360w

Springf'd Republican p6D O 8 '50 120w

MOOK, HUBERTUS JOHANNES VAN. Stakes of democracy in southeast Asia. 312p $3.75 Norton

950 Asia, Southeastern. Malay archipelago—Politics 50-7424

"This book presents a survey of the rise and fall of western imperialism over the seven nations of southeast Asia; namely, Ceylon, Burma, Thailand [Siam], Indo-China, Malaya, the Philippines, and Indonesia. Particular attention is devoted to the Dutch empire in the orient and the rise of the United States of Indonesia. The author, Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook, was a former lieutenant governor of Indonesia." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Reviewed by H. J. Friedericy

Ann Am Acad 271:234 S '50 490w

Booklist 46:300 Je 1 '50

"'The Stakes of Democracy in Southeast Asia' presents a sane and factual account of the present democratic experiments in a large section of the orient. It skillfully appraises the economic problems and the dangers of communism to the new governments." Kenneth Colegrove

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 7 '50 500w

"This is not an impartial account of the Indonesian story. The author avoids any suggestion of Dutch economic interests, and he is considerably less impressed by the republican capabilities than many neutral observers. Nevertheless, its manifest sincerity makes it a corrective for some of the sweeping generalities with which the Dutch claims have been dismissed. Mr. van Mook's warnings command respect, and his proposals deserve attention." M. B. Jansen

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 My 1 '50 950w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 40w

Foreign Affairs 29:160 O '50 40w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 8 '50 450w

Reviewed by W. L. Briggs

New Repub 123:18 Ag 7 '50 500w

"Until a short time before the creation of the United States of Indonesia, Mr. van Mook served his country as chief negotiator in the Indonesian arena. This background, combined with the author's broad knowledge of Far Eastern problems, lends authority and significance to his views. . . Critics of Dutch policy will detect in the van Mook thesis occasional outcroppings of personal bitterness and a tendency to put more emphasis on the shortcomings of the Indonesian nationalists than on those of the Dutch. But it needs to be recalled, also, that Mr. van Mook often disagreed sharply with his own government. Although in general he expresses the Dutch point of view, he has an appraising and critical eye for the basic weaknesses of both sides." Arch Steele

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 23 '50 900w

"Mr. van Mook has often been portrayed abroad as a symbol of die-hard Dutch colonialism; in the Netherlands itself he has many times been accused of selling Holland's birthright in the Indies. This book fails to support either of these contentions. It is obviously the work of a man deeply concerned about the land in which he was born, and the future stability of the whole area now in the shadow of Communist China. If viewed as the work of a protagonist rather than a historian, it provides valuable material for Americans to whom Southeast Asia becomes daily more vital." Martin Ebon

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 30 '50 450w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 28 '50 650w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow

Sat R of Lit 33:12 Jl 22 '50 800w

Reviewed by R. O. Winstedt

Spec 184:571 N 24 '50 750w

"There are illuminating sidelights on recent developments in Burma, Indo-China and the Philippines in this book, but its chief importance is as the best analysis we have had from the enlightened Dutch viewpoint of contemporary events in Indonesia." G. G. Stevens

+ Survey 86:467 O '50 650w

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson

Yale R n s 40:162 autumn '50 290w

MOON, GRACE (PURDIE) (MRS CARL MOON). One little Indian [story by Grace Moon; il. by Carl Moon]. [30p] $2 Whitman, A.

50-6281

Ah-di is a little Indian boy living near the desert in the American Southwest. This is the story of what happens to Ah-di on the day he is four years old.

Booklist 46:279 My 1 '50

Kirkus 18:96 F 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by Anne Izard
Library J 75:703 Ap 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 2 '50 100w

"This story lacks the humor and vitality that little children like but it does give a word picture of a little Indian boy on his fourth birthday. The illustrations are excellent. We wish that color had been omitted. The color is crude, while the soft black and white is harmonious and pleasing." M. G. Davis
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:46 Mr 11 '50 90w

+ Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 5 '50 60w

Wis Lib Bul 46:27 Ap '50

MOON, HENRIETTA JONES. See Jones, H.

MOON, PENDEREL. Warren Hastings and British India. (Teach yourself history lib) 361p il maps $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Hastings, Warren 49-10373

"This is not a life of Hastings. It is an interpretation of the salient episodes in Hastings' career by a former civil servant in India." Am Hist R

"Mr. Penderel Moon brings to his Warren Hastings the same warmth of touch and felicities of style which made his Strangers in India so moving and so apposite a book for young students confronting Indian problems for the first time. . . As befits the series to which it belongs, the book is without notes and the apparatus of scholarship, but it is a scholarly work, nevertheless, based upon thorough familiarity with the sources." Holden Furber
+ Am Hist R 55:668 Ap '50 200w

Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 169:627 D 24 '49 210w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Sat R of Lit 32:13 D 31 '49 50w

MOON, PHILIP BURTON. Artificial radioactivity. 102p $2.50 Cambridge

539.7 Radioactivity [50-1208]

"This short monograph gives a good account of certain radioactivity decay processes and briefly sketches methods of measuring radioactivity. The whole volume consists of four chapters, the first of which is a brief introduction delimiting the subject matter to be covered. . . The second chapter outlines methods of detection and energy determination of beta particles, electrons, gamma rays, and x-rays. The so-called beta decay processes which include the emission of negative and positive beta rays and the capture by the nucleus or orbital electrons are covered in the third chapter. . . The fourth and last chapter is a parallel exposition of nuclear isomeric transitions." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"This little book should be of real interest to radio-chemists and nuclear physicists because of its careful and thoughtful treatment of a selected list of topics in the field of artificial radioactivity." W. F. Libby
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:2313 My '50 200w

"This monograph is written in a simple, lucid but condensed style and much of it should be intelligible to one without a great deal of background in nuclear work. However, it was presumably meant for and should appeal most to those who are students and research workers in the nuclear fields." I. Perlman
+ Chem & Eng N 28:498 F 13 '50 300w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1051 Je 15 '50 90w

MOORE, BARRINGTON. Soviet politics—the dilemma of power; the role of ideas in social change. 503p $6; text ed $4.50 Harvard univ. press

947.08 Russia—Politics and government. Communism—Russia 50-9233

"The most urgent need of our day is to sort out communism from Russianism. Barrington Moore, a Harvard sociologist and an associate of that university's Russian Research Center . . . shows what communism in Russia today really amounts to in intention and in fact, and how it came to be what it is. Throughout his analysis he hardly speaks of communism as such, but communism is under our eyes in every single sentence. For what Mr. Moore is writing about is the governmental system of the Soviet Union, and this, and nothing else at all, spells what we mean by communism." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"This book, written under the auspices of the Russian Research Center at Harvard University, offers a unique key to Soviet strength and weakness. It explains the problems with which the Kremlin itself has to cope, as well as those which its peculiar social and political technique raises for the outside world. It is unique because no other book published in this country or abroad gives so comprehensive, so well balanced and integrated an appraisal." Paul Wohl
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 S 23 '50 2050w

"The book is a valuable contribution to the understanding of Communism at work. It is written in a readable style and is based on a painstaking study of primary sources. In some places the author goes too deeply into rather unimportant details concerning the differences in ideas and plans of various factions within the Communist party. Too many times he has difficulty determining how much of the credit for social change was due to conflicting ideas and how much it was due to the pressure of objective circumstances. One has however, to acknowledge that no satisfactory tool for the analysis of problems of this kind exists." N. S. Timasheff
+ — Commonweal 52:634 O 6 '50 600w

Current Hist 19:229 O '50 50w

"Recommended for every serious reader trying to form his own opinion of Soviet Russian enigma." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 130w

"Professor Barrington Moore has rendered a great service in tracing with care and precision the successive historical steps by which the original dream was transmuted into present realities. . . One criticism of this excellent and useful historical study may be justified. Mr. Moore makes no real distinction between the adjustments which a utopian creed must make to the perennial factors in man's social life which it had disregarded . . . and the 'adjustments' which lead to a complete corruption of its original promise and purpose." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Nation 171:270 S 23 '50 1350w

"Mr. Moore's task, as he sees it, is to analyze the genesis and development of Soviet political ideas and to parallel this with a closely documented study of their practice. His approach is inspired but never dominated by the still rudimentary, but infinitely promising, science of applied anthropology, to which he brings in varying degrees a scientist's cold passion for verifiable fact, the reassuring amplitude of the true skeptic, the burrowing patience of the scholar and the detached common sense of an artist." Edward Crankshaw
+ N Y Times p3 S 17 '50 800w

MOORE, DAVID WILLIAM. Scarlet Jib; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 178p $2.50 Crowell 50-5871

The story of Daniel Peabody who signed as a cabin boy on the brig, Scarlet Jib, and found himself on a craft manned by ex-pirates. The time is the year 1790.

Booklist 46:338 Jl 1 '50

"Good plot with satisfactory ending."
+ Bookmark 9:164 Ap '50 40w

"Except for the captain, and a wonderful, melancholy cook, the characters are two dimensional, but the story is fast-paced, and the dialogue among the swaggering sailors and the pirates is handsomely snarled in approved tradition. The hard-boiled comics addicts will think our Dan a bit of a softy, and the ending too apt, but in the main this provides good bridging for those who want reliable blood and thunder. The Henry Pitz illustrations contribute their dramatic values."
+ — Kirkus 18:22 Ja 15 '50 190w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy
Library J 75:568 Ap 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 23 '50 50w

MOORE, MRS DORIS (LANGLEY-LEVY). Woman in fashion. 184p 109il $5 Batsford
391.2 Costume. Fashion 50-6226

More than a hundred photographs of feminine costumes, dating between 1800 and 1927, selected from the author's extensive collection. Most of the dresses are worn by well-known women of today, but a few are modeled by children. Among those included are: Vivien Leigh, Ruth Draper, Margot Fonteyn, Moira Shearer, Beatrice Lillie, and Joyce Redman. The text is a discussion of the author's theories on women's fashions. Index.

"All who take an interest in costume, whether that interest be frivolous or serious, will be delighted by Mrs. Langley Moore's new book. . . The Woman in Fashion may be recommended on the strength of the illustrations alone; but these are introduced by a lively, sensible, and well-written essay." Quentin Bell
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:74 Ja 21 '50 380w

New Yorker 26:125 Mr 18 '50 200w

"This is a capital book. It supplies a genuine addition to our knowledge and understanding of period costume. The text and the illustrations are equally important and deserve close study. It is well known that the author possesses a fine collection of dresses of the last century and a half; her understanding of the subject is, therefore, based on more than book-reading. The present volume is distinguished from similar books written by women by the fact that she searches for the causes of feminine fashions." C. W. Cunnington
+ Spec 183:862 D 16 '49 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p836 D 23 '49 310w

MOORE, MARY OLGA (MRS CARL FRANKLIN ARNOLD). I'll meet you in the lobby. 250p $3 Lippincott
B or 92 49-50429

Autobiography of a Wyoming girl, in which she describes her background, her college days, her work on various newspapers, and life in Washington, where she and her husband lived and where she now functions as a lobbyist.

Booklist 46:113; 171 D 1 '49; Ja 15 '50

Bookmark 9:210 Je '50 40w

Canadian Forum 30:144 S '50 200w

"Miss Moore is a sparkling raconteur; her perception of current problems shrewd and accurate; and showing thru her clever commentary is a deep conviction of the worth of what she is selling. 'I'll Meet You in the Lobby' is a mighty fine job of lobbying—for America." Olive Carruthers
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 19 '50 220w

"There is nothing startlingly revealing in this book. Miss Moore treads lightly in regard to her colleagues, her employers and the legislators she is paid to influence. She tells agreeable stories about people and places in Washington without being gossipy or malicious. And by exact and always humorous exposition of the day-by-day job of a lobbyist, she succeeds in giving an aura of respectability to a profession sometimes regarded as faintly disreputable." Joanna Spencer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 19 '50 380w

"Miss Moore's treatise, while it is quite gay and diverting, never gets around to saying anything very new or important about Washington's second biggest industry." Cabell Phillips
N Y Times p30 Ap 16 '50 460w

New Yorker 26:125 Ap 22 '50 200w

"It is all interestingly told." E. K. P. Stokes
+ Sat R of Lit 33:52 Ap 15 '50 270w

MOORE, MERRILL. Clinical sonnets; a book about proper and improper Bostonians. 72p $2.50 Twayne 811

The author is a Boston psychiatrist and sonneteer. This book is "a selection of sixty-two brief character sketches of people he has known, all kinds of people, but for the most part odd, pathetic and frustrated." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p5 F 13 '50 100w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 74:1908 D 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 169:602 D 17 '49 70w

"Anyone looking for the sonnet form as he has known it had better look elsewhere. Dr. Moore rhymes as he chooses or not at all. The main point about these pieces is that they should be read, as Dr. Moore says in his preface, 'conversationally, as if you and I were together.' Approached in this way, they are like E. A. Robinson's sketches with much of the poetry missing, but with acute insight expressed with wit. This is very good conversation indeed, well worth reading and a good deal of fun, but most of it is too true to be funny." M. I.
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 29 '50 190w

"Dr. Moore, unlike poets who attempt to edit and excise their own daily production, offers us everything and bids the reader select for himself. And there is some rich poetry imbedded in these diagnostic statements. Yet even these lines taken out of context lose luster in quotation." A. M. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:34 Jl 1 '50 300w

Reviewed by H. C. Paine
Springf'd Republican p10C My 14 '50 60w

MOORE, ROBERT FOSTER, and BIBA, CAROL. Blueprint your career; a guide to success. 151p $2.75 Stackpole & Heck
371.425 Applications for positions. Profession, Choice of 49-10496

This book offers to pre-college students, as well as undergraduates and graduates definite methods for planning and charting a business or professional career in such a way as to ensure success. The author is Director of personnel and placement at Columbia University.

Booklist 46:43 O 1 '49

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 F 18 '50 210w

Kirkus 17:492 S 1 '49 130w

Management R 39:498 Ag '50 140w

MOORE, W. G. Molière: a new criticism. 136p $2.50 Oxford

842 Molière, Jean Baptiste Poquelin

"This criticism seeks to interpret the structure and performance of Molière's work solely against the background and conventions of the Paris theatre of the time. W. G. Moore, an English college tutor and university lecturer, points out that actually little is known about Molière as a man other than that, besides writing, he was a professional actor and manager. Therefore, he says, it is wrong to assume anything about his philosophy and his associations. This viewpoint, Mr. Moore adds, allows us the freedom to interpret the 'comedies as comedies and their author as an artist.' " N Y Times

"A stimulating book." J. Chiari
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 3 '50 340w

New Statesman & Nation 39:382 Ap 1 '50 360w

"This is not a book for those casually interested in Moliere. It is directed primarily to the bilingual student of the works of France's great seventeenth-century playwright. Such specialists should find this a provocative and enlightening study." Lewis Funke
+ N Y Times p22 Je 4 '50 350w

Sat R of Lit 33:33 S 23 '50 230w

"The author says that the occasion of his book was 'pedestrian and professional,' and it is a fair description of its merits. It will not make the reader feel that he can hardly wait for his next vacation to go and see Molière played in Paris, nor will it send him rushing to his texts to test the writer's interpretations. It is a useful handbook and a welcome corrective to the extravagances of some of Molière's critics which will not prevent the adventurous student from arriving at a more imaginative interpretation of the dramatist's work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p858 D 30 '49 950w

MORAVIA, ALBERTO, pseud. See Pincherle, A.

MORAY, HELGA. Untamed. 313p $3 Putnam 50-6366

The story of a beautiful, passionate Irish girl, Katie Kildare. Migrating to South Africa a hundred years ago Katie grew up with the frontier, lost two husbands, and finally gained the man she had loved for many years, the Dutch leader, Paul Van Riebeck.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 19 '50 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 30 '50 180w

"Helga Moray is clearly no stranger to South Africa, but she tosses so many ingredients into her story that the concoction is a trifle indigestible. By the way, the discovery of gold and diamonds did not come about at the time of the Trek, but followed it by a generation or more. Yet she serves up both simultaneously for good measure." John Barkham
N Y Times p41 Mr 19 '50 250w

"Helga Moray has transplanted to a South African setting a typically Wild West story, with its torrid heroine and dashing hero engaged in unbelievable action. A former stage and screen actress, Miss Moray might have written an entertaining novel, within the limitations of its pattern, had she not been obviously influenced by cinematic sensationalism and banality." Ray Pierre
— Sat R of Lit 33:19 Ap 1 '50 230w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Home electrical repairs; il. with 160 drawings by [the author]. 210p $3 Crown

621.328 Electricity in the home 50-8212

"This book will show the home mechanic who has a knack with tools how to make all the minor repairs and a few of the major ones. The repairing of flashlights, door bells and chimes, frayed lamp cords, and other simple things is well covered. Also, the reader is introduced to some of the complexities of house wiring and shown how to replace and also install sockets, switches and outlets." (Library J) Index.

Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 10w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1194 Jl '50 110w

MORGAN, SIR FREDERICK EDGWORTH. Overture to Overlord. 302p $3.50 Doubleday

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Europe 50-5008

"The author was Chief of Staff to the Supreme Allied Commander—long before a Supreme Commander was named—and was charged with planning in detail the invasion of Europe, later known as Operation Overlord. He tells the story of how that plan grew in C.O.S.S.A.C. headquarters, which for some time consisted mainly of himself, and discusses its attendant complications and frustrations, and, in gingerly fashion, the conflicts and jealousies between the British and the Americans." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 46:198 F 15 '50

Bookmark 9:157 Ap '50 50w

"This is a book for students of military history, though it is vividly enough written to interest laymen. . . General Morgan was a man behind the scenes from first to last, but had he not set the stage properly, the show on D-Day would not have come off. General Morgan helped to make history, and this is his story of how it was done." R. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 23 '50 200w

Foreign Affairs 28:679 Jl '50 40w

"A distinctly man-in-the-street accounting, from England, this should be sure fire in its human as well as military aspects."
+ Kirkus 17:618 N 1 '49 220w

"While never forgetting his nationality, Sir Frederick gives full credit to the Americans in such a way as to indicate that he must indeed be a great man. One of the important and certainly one of the best written memoirs of World War II." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:106 Ja 15 '50 110w

Nation 170:140 F 11 '50 90w

Reviewed by Aylmer Vallance
New Statesman & Nation 39:376 Ap 1 '50 1050w

"Fascinating reading. General Morgan writes with a British urbanity he can hardly have learned at Sandhurst. No other modern general has admitted so frankly how much of his most essential business was carried on, as he puts it, 'with one foot slightly raised upon a brass rail.' He seems genuinely to have liked Americans, from President Roosevelt to the taxi driver who, not knowing who his fare was, stopped his car in the middle of a bridge to lecture him on the unwisdom of a cross-Channel invasion." Joseph Barnes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 8 '50 1250w

"This story of COSSAC ranks with the best books on the war. COSSAC was predecessor to SHAEF. . . I know of no writer on war who has been able to give the extreme complexities of military planning such interest and drama as General Morgan here does." J. I. Greene
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 15 '50 1200w

"General Morgan writes easily and well, with humor and candor, and his book should be of interest to the thousands of ex-soldiers who are probably curious to know why they were catapulted onto the beaches of Normandy instead of, say, the coast of Belgium or of Norway."
+ New Yorker 25:89 Ja 14 '50 160w

"General Morgan has made a happy and brilliant contribution to the record of World War II in 'Overture to Overlord.' He is a genuine authority on the subject, for he not only directed the writing of the score of the overture but rehearsed the orchestra. General Morgan overcame the normal reticence of the military mind and let his report become both delightfully personal and philosophical. It is, in addition, an invaluable contribution to the history of our times." H. C. Butcher

MORGAN, F. E.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 Ja 14 '50 600w

Reviewed by C. M. Woodhouse
Spec 184:582 Ap 28 '50 800w

"General Morgan's style is pedestrian and sometimes uncomfortably flippant, but he knows how to tell a story economically and effectively, and he has a remarkable story to tell here."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p211 Ap 7 '50 800w

MORGAN, MRS HELEN L. Liberty maid; the story of Abigail Adams. 252p $2.50 Westminster press

B or 92 Adams, Abigail (Smith)—Juvenile literature 50-7109

This fictionized biography of Abigail Adams is written for grades seven to nine. It covers mainly the events of her life from 1758, when she was fourteen, until 1776, several years after she married John Adams. A final chapter gives a brief glimpse of the year 1818.

Booklist 46:292 My 15 '50

"A conscientious, quietly done biography of Abigail Adams. . . Excellent supplementary reading."
+ Kirkus 18:66 F 1 '50 160w

"Teen-age readers will appreciate Nabby's courageous and intelligent part in the war effort and in her husband's fast-growing public career. Recommended." Virginia Haviland
+ Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 80w

"Not recommended." F. W. Butler
— Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 60w

"This account is sprightly and appealing, with authentic period atmosphere and conversation which never sounds forced and stilted. There is some fictionalizing in the addition of dialogue and a few incidents, but this is based soundly upon the Adams letters and diaries." Margaret Scoggin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 7 '50 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 My 21 '50 200w

MORGAN, MRS MANIE (KENDLEY). New stars; life and labor in old Missouri; as arranged by Jennie A. Morgan; ed. with an introd. by Louis Filler. 301p $3.75 Antioch press

B or 92 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives. Missouri—History 49-49222

Recollections of the Civil war days in Missouri, Kansas, and Kentucky, based on the memoirs of a southern woman who was thirteen years old in 1861. At the age of eighty-eight she dictated these reminiscences to her daughter.

"Mrs. Morgan's book is the intimate, warm narrative of a girl whose family transplanted a bit of Kentucky into Missouri and who met and adapted herself to changing conditions, even to the point of eloping with a Union officer." F. D. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ja 8 '50 150w

Current Hist 18:99 F '50 50w

"As in most such narratives, there is considerable garrulity. The story leaps, halts, wanders in circles; but, first to last, much is remembered that has entertainment and historical value." N. K. Burger
+ — N Y Times p33 F 19 '50 230w

"The historian, poet and novelist have worked the Civil War field so thoroughly that sometimes the readers are ready to cry quits. And then along comes a little gem—a diary, a sketch, or a few letters—and we are left with the feeling that the subject has merely been touched upon thus far. Such a gem is 'The New Stars,' Manie Kendley Morgan's diary." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 12 '50 300w

"An authentic picture of family and community life against a background of turbulent border history." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 Mr 18 '50 140w

"Historically this is a valuable document, yet it is also interesting reading." H. S. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 15 '50 300w

MORGAN, WILLIAM SACHEUS. Philosophy of religion; a consideration of the more profound aspects of religious thought. 413p $6 Philosophical lib.

201 Religion—Philosophy 50-9827

"In his preface the author states that the philosophy of religion is presented in this book from the viewpoint of a unitary conception of the universe and that the universe is such a whole that its divers phenomena may be most satisfactorily explained under the guidance of the principles of unity and continuity. In his search for this unitary conception the author examines the writings of the ancient Greeks and a host of modern philosophers, but the writings of the mediaeval philosophers have not been used." Library J

"The book is not easy reading, and requires on the part of the reader some knowledge of the philosophic jargon." R. P. Breaden
Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 130w
School & Society 72:191 S 16 '50 40w

MORGENSTERN, JULIAN. As a mighty stream; the progress of Judaism through history. 442p $4 Jewish pub.

296 Jews—Religion. Jews—History 50-5884

"In fourteen essays and addresses Dr. Julian Morgenstern, president emeritus of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, expresses his conception of Judaism in history—its God-directed origin in ancient times, its expression in the Bible, its progress through the ages. Nor is Dr. Morgenstern's long view confined to the past; the present and the future fall equally into the field of his interest. Something of the author's own active and varied career as scholar, teacher and citizen is revealed, too, in the numerous personal recollections which he records in these pages. His interests have not been narrow or parochial." (N Y Times) No index.

"A broad survey and interpretation of the whole course of Jewish history might be either superficial or partisan, or both. But it can be neither when it is done by the distinguished president (now emeritus) of Hebrew Union College, one of the outstanding Jewish scholars of the century." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:678 My 31 '50 100w

"While the layman will be able to read the book without difficulty . . . he will not be able to appreciate the vast erudition reflected. Lay readers will be interested mainly in the realistic discussion of the nature and destiny of Judaism. . . Scholars will also be interested in following the analysis of these problems by one of their eminent colleagues, but in addition they will enjoy the refreshing boldness with which Dr. Morgenstern accepts the new light of scholarly research on the Bible and Jewish history. One encounters penetrating summaries of what is known about every age of Hebrew and Jewish history, but notably those of the biblical period. . . Since the book is constructed from addresses of a popular nature delivered over a period of some thirty years—some of which, to be sure, have been expanded—it has no footnotes. The historical judgments recorded are thus left unsupported. On the whole, this is satisfactory, for the facts used are accepted by most scholars. But where Dr. Morgenstern states as a fact his view that Jerusalem and the temple were destroyed a second time in 486 B.C. without providing the evidence, a good many readers will be left puzzled." S. V. McCasland

+ — Crozer Q 27:250 Jl '50 1200w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p33 Mr 19 '50 180w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v 4. Coral sea, Midway and submarine actions, May 1942-August 1942. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 307p pl maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Here is an author who knows the conflict in the Pacific. He writes not only with clarity, vigor, and authority but with a good amount of brine in his pen. The author is strongest when he discusses the American side of the story, but he also displays a broad understanding of Japanese strategy, tactics, and operations. The best part of the book is the three chapters on Midway, which, like the others in the volume, are vivid and full of punch, with enough of the human element in the narrative to keep the story dramatic, fresh, and alive." G. W. Prange
+ Am Hist R 55:642 Ap '50 1550w

Reviewed by Paul Farrell
Commonweal 51:494 F 10 '50 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 24 '50 480w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:495 D '49 280w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v5, Struggle for Guadalcanal, August 1942-February 1943. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 389p pl maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

" 'For us who were there, or whose friends were there,' says Captain Morison in conclusion, 'Guadalcanal is not a name but an emotion.' To this one must say amen, while noting that emotion has not impeded the production of a fine volume on the bitterest and most complicated six months' fighting of the Pacific war." J. A. Field
+ Am Hist R 55:645 Ap '50 750w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin
Atlantic 186:74 Ag '50 2350w

Reviewed by Paul Farrell
Commonweal 51:494 F 10 '50 90w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 18:40 Ja '50 60w

Foreign Affairs 28:680 Jl '50 30w

"In this fifth volume of his definitive and unofficial naval history, Harvard's renowned historian, Samuel Eliot Morison, recounts the story of Guadalcanal. As usual, his story is magnificently told." Scott Newhall
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 18 '49 1050w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs
Spec 184:22 Jl 7 '50 800w

"Professor Morison's clear narrative of complex and confused battles could hardly be bettered."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Je 2 '50 450w

"Like others in the series, this volume is addressed to the general reader. From the point of view of the historian, the book lacks the objectivity normally associated with serious research. Yet it makes a contribution to the history of the war against Japan, and will play an important part in the work of future historians of that great naval conflict."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:69 Mr '50 300w

Wis Lib Bul 46:17 Ja '50

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v. 6, Breaking the Bismarcks barrier. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 463p il maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

The sixth volume in this series contains the story of the struggle for the Pacific from July 22, 1942 to May 1, 1944. Maps and photographs illustrate the book. Index.

Booklist 47:154 D 15 '50

"This reviewer participated in many of the campaigns described in this fascinating book. It fills in many details which have never been fully covered before due to the censorship in effect at the time and the impact of the dramatic reconquest of the Philippines and the Okinawa campaign which occurred soon afterward. Every veteran who went thru the Solomons and New Guinea actions will be particularly interested in this story, as well as anyone who enjoys an exciting tale of the valor of the American forces." Frederick Sherman
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 26 '50 1050w

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 16 '50 320w

"Morison can make what might be stale history lively reading."
+ Kirkus 18:584 S 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 75:1656 O 1 '50 90w

"This is a book meant to be studied, and desirably to be carefully studied together with Captain Morison's volumes on the Coral Sea action, the conquest of Guadalcanal and the yet-to-come 'New Guinea and the Marianas.' " Walter Karig
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 26 '50 1050w

"It is a great virtue of this book that it draws together all fragments of action—air, sea, land and amphibious—into a clear and intelligible pattern." D. S. Ballantine
+ N Y Times p32 N 26 '50 800w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. Ropemakers of Plymouth. 177p il $3 Houghton

677.71 Plymouth cordage company. Cordage 50-14847

A history of the Plymouth (Massachusetts) Cordage company, from its small beginnings in 1824, to 1949. There is an appendix showing "useful knots and how to tie them." Index.

Kirkus 18:274 My 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:977 Je 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Gerald Sykes
N Y Times p12 S 24 '50 450w

"You wouldn't think a 'History of the Plymouth Cordage Company' would be very interesting, but it is, because Professor Morison is a gifted writer and because that particular rope manufactory has had a lively, salty career."
+ New Yorker 26:147 O 14 '50 180w

"The history of a business is apt to be rather dull, and to tell the truth, there are spots in this book that the most ardent Morison fan will read hurriedly, to say the least. The liveliest parts of the book concern the use of rope in the old days of sail and the details of ropemaking, but on the whole this is an item for specialists in New England history and economics." J. W. H.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 10 '50 100w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p30A D 17 '50 200w

MORISON, STANLEY. Typographic arts; two lectures. 106p pl $3.50 Harvard univ. press
655.1 Printing 50-5263

Two lectures on printing as an art. The first lecture: The Typographic Arts, delivered before the Royal college of art in Edinburgh, is a historical survey of printing from the viewpoint of design. The second: The Art of Printing, the annual lecture on Aspects of art for the British Academy in London, discusses the influence of calligraphy and inscription on printing, and the status of modern photographic technique. Index.

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 19 '50 210w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1186 Jl '50 120w

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 10 '50 30w

"The difference of approach in the two lectures rather spoils the unity of the book, but Mr. Morison's exposition, to his academic audience, of the relation between pure calligraphy and type design is done with assurance and mastery of the subject." Michael Swan
New Statesman & Nation 38:736 D 17 '49 750w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Ballad of New York, New York, and other poems, 1930-1950. 93p $2.50 Doubleday
811 50-9720

A selection from the poems the author has written during the past twenty years. Some are reprinted from earlier volumes, some from magazines, and some are new.

Booklist 47:73 O 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50

Kirkus 18:444 Ag 1 '50 60w

"A raffish and amiable liking for the pleasures of this world animates many pages of Mr. Morley's new collection. Yet he is also quick to smite sin as he sees it when it rears its durable head." Charles Poore
N Y Times p12 N 19 '50 320w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 18 '50 700w

" 'The Ballad of New York' has the accent of a man who thoroughly enjoys himself. One gathers from these pages that Mr. Morley finds his own mind a congenial and witty companion, pleasant to walk down a street or a country lane with, continually and freshly stimulating. . . N'Yawk is okay with Mr. Morley, he assures us a little too loudly. I find him more convincingly himself as the kinsman of Herrick and 'Old Sweetheart Geoff,' and in those poems which display his wit rather than his ability to wise-crack and out-Nash Ogden—where the humor is not so broad as it is sharp and incisive." S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 33:34 S 30 '50 700w

MORRIS, LLOYD R. William James; the messages of a modern mind. (Twentieth century lib) 98p $2; college ed $1.50 Scribner
191.9 James, William 50-9828

A study of the ideas of William James and their influence on American thoughts and ideals. Chronology. Bibliography of the works of William James. Index.

Booklist 47:77 O 15 '50

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 O 8 '50 350w

"William James was one of the most remarkable figures in a very remarkable family circle, but in this dusty ideational study he has no family and very little life. Lloyd Morris could hardly write a dull or a bad book, but he has in this case unquestionably written the wrong book."
New Yorker 26:165 N 4 '50 180w

"Since [Mr. Morris] is a practised writer and seems to have been impressed as deeply by James the philosopher as by James the man, he has succeeded in making the theories both clear and interesting. Having said this roundly, I hope it will not erase the praise if I go on to two small cavils. The reader is likely to gather from the general absence of criticism that all along the extended front on which James did battle with darkness he not only advanced to new positions but effectively held them against the enemy. The fact is, though one would hardly learn it here, that he did hold some but that many others were blown sky-high. . . My second murmur about this good little book is that it casts James over-dramatically in the character of a rebel." Brand Blanshard
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:11 N 11 '50 700w

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 30w

MORRISON, LILLIAN, comp. Yours till Niagara falls; il. by Marjorie Bauernschmidt. 182p $1.75 Crowell
808.81 Children's poetry 50-6508

Sayings and rhymes on friendship, love, marriage and success, selected from autograph albums.

Booklist 46:249 Ap 1 '50

Bookmark 10:11 O '50 40w

"Folklore and Americana mixed with nostalgia for the adult, but sheer entertainment for the teen-agers." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 26:399 S '50 40w

"Original and amusing."
+ Kirkus 18:179 Mr 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:646 Ap 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson
Library J 75:882 My 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 9 '50 160w

"This collection will cause a good many grown-ups to sigh nostalgically. . . This is authentic Americana, funny, simple and engaging." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 9 '50 170w

"The collection is, in its way, quite a social history of the last hundred years or so."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 My 13 '50 140w

MORRISON, THEODORE. Dream of Alcestis [poems] il. by Marvin Bileck. 119p $3 Viking 811 50-10245

A narrative poem which has as its subject the story of Alcestis, Admetus, and Hercules.

Booklist 47:153 D 15 '50

Kirkus 18:502 Ag 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 171:536 D 9 '50 50w

"Professor Morrison has hold of a classic myth with plenty of modern implications. He manages to keep it moving. His descriptive passages are cleanly and sometimes powerfully contrived. But as poetry nothing happens and the characters fail to come to life because the dialogue is neither elevated enough to have a hypnotic effect nor sufficiently earthy to be convincing." Selden Rodman
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 3 '50 400w

"A narrative poem which is characterized by grace, simplicity, humor and dignity." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p28 D 3 '50 330w

MORSE, MURRAY. Cadets at Kings point. 242p $2.50 Aladdin
49-11183

"Three boys of different backgrounds are the heroes in a struggle with a bully in this school-sports story of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. Football plays a major part in the story." Library J

"This happens to be the first story I have read [about] the famous Merchant Marine Academy, and for that reason I found it unusual and good reading. Too bad both title and jacket convey the impression of its being a factual information book, for it is an excellent school story, football story."

+ Kirkus 17:429 Ag 1 '49 140w

"Neither style nor plot adds anything new to literature for this age group, but Kings Point is a novel and lively setting, and the friendship of Jim, Lee and Salty is a fine one. Slight romance may deter some boys, but on the whole the book can be recommended highly for boys of 12-16." Clara Adams
+ Library J 75:113 Ja 15 '50 100w

"Stereotyped characters and handling of situations mar what could have been a good sport story in an interesting setting." Eleanor Kidder
— + Library J 75:113 Ja 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Felix Riesenberg
San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 13 '49 60w

MORSE, RAY. See Morse, M.

MORT, PAUL R., and VINCENT, WILLIAM SHAFER. Modern educational practice; a handbook for teachers. 437p $4.50 McGraw 371.3 Teaching. Education 50-8545

"[In this book] a team of creative writers in education, have turned to stimulating practices of teachers in the field to illustrate basic psychological and social principles for building better instructional services to children. By providing a rich pool of experiences which make purposes meaningful, the authors seek to challenge teachers to profit from the inventiveness of their colleagues." (El School J) List of visual materials. Index.

"The elementary-school staff member who is seeking to improve his teaching can find in this reference concrete suggestions from teachers like himself, who have not been satisfied with what they were doing and have sought better answers in the continuous process of adapting, trying, evaluating, and readapting their work to their pupils and to their communities. It is evident that this volume has not been planned to serve as a textbook but as a ready reference and aid to the teacher concerned with modernizing his teaching." J. E. Baker
+ El School J 51:108 O '50 650w
School & Society 71:400 Je 24 '50 40w

"It is most stimulating to find an entire book devoted to actual practices which have been reported or observed in classrooms. Careful reading of some of the better descriptions will take one's imagination into a classroom where the teacher and pupils are having an adventure together. As a whole, the book will be of continuing value to the imaginative teacher who is willing to study the basic psychological and sociological principles involved, run through the examples of practice described, and then energetically apply the same process of thinking and doing to his own class." F. S. Albright
+ School R 58:561 D '50 1050w

MORTENSEN, BRITA M. E., and DOWNS, BRIAN WESTERDALE. Strindberg; an introduction to his life and work. 234p $2.75 Cambridge
B or 92 Strindberg, August [50-5053]

"The first half of the book is biographical, revealing a life of spiritual violence and tragedy, to which at last was joined great physical suffering. . . The second half deals, in successive chapters, with the plays, the novels, the short stories, placing them in the context of his life, showing their impact on Swedish audiences and readers, estimating their place in European letters. Finally, there are two chapters on the directly autobiographical works, and on [Strindberg's] poetry, his criticism, and his correspondence. A select bibliography of writings on Strindberg in English and in other languages is added, with a list of translations of his works into English." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The whole volume of Strindberg's works cannot be compassed in a fairly small book, but the important unfamiliar and untranslated writing is examined, and there is an illuminating picture of the poverty and unpreparedness of the Swedish literary scene in Strindberg's day which so greatly aggravated his loneliness. . . The authors do not deny the use of knowing the relation of his life to his work, but they have so obstinately refrained, in their biographical chapters, from dwelling on the more fantastic facts of his life that these become almost extravagantly muted. English readers, however, who know enough about his life already, and would enjoy less prejudice and more appreciation than the knowledge encourages, will find this an extremely welcome book." A. M. P.
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '50 300w

"A terse, scholarly, balanced Introduction to the subject." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:142 F 4 '50 800w

Reviewed by T. Q. Curtiss
N Y Times p7 Ja 29 '50 450w

"Mr. Downs gives a short and adequate account of his life on the one hand; Miss Mortensen presents a fair and interesting picture of his literary work on its own merits and demerits, and not merely as an expression of the author's own tortured life."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 3 '50 850w

MORTIMER, CHAPMAN. Stranger on the stair. 164p $2.50 McGraw 50-14492

A short novel in which a young artist, Charles, goes to live in the Paris slums. There he befriends a boy, Tonton, but later takes his young mistress from him. The result is tragedy. The stranger on the stair is Charles' disapproving brother, to whom Charles' friend Edouard tells the story of Charles' death.

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 22 '50 450w
Kirkus 18:527 S 1 '50 170w

"The book has a collective, penetrating effect. The technique brings people into being quickly, giving them at once the individuality which in the slum is their banner, and the misfortune which is their cross. It is a good talent which Mr. Mortimer has begun to use." Thomas Sugrue
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 15 '50 500w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 22 '50 90w

"There is no question that Mr. Mortimer can write. He has a distinctive ability to draw—and the word is used deliberately—his characters so that they are almost visible to us; we all but see them during the narrative, but beyond them we do not see enough. It is too much like looking at night into a brightly lighted room where no one has drawn the shades." P. T.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:34 D 23 '50 450w

"I incline to think that even with the help of Standard English grammar, A Stranger on the Stair would not deserve high praise. . . This book's extremely visual approach suggests a film-script, and it is very easy to imagine it one of those French films that are so highly praised over here and so very properly ignored in France." Marghanita Laski
Spec 184:626 My 5 '50 270w

"The novel is short and Mr. Chapman Mortimer's style perhaps a trifle too austere and mannered at present; but he has a painter's sharp eye for descriptive detail: dusty boxing-gloves hanging 'like an improbable fungus' on the wall: a flame rising up 'in a fine jet, like a long, slim petal'; his will be a talent to watch when he has broken away from the self-imposed restrictions of French 'form.' "
Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 17 '50 210w

MORTIMER, JOHN. The silver hook [Eng title: Answer yes or no]. 250p $3 Morrow 50-10202

The hero is an English barrister who works mainly in the divorce courts. The novel shows Ransom's experiences when he falls in love with one of his clients, a young woman who is seeking a divorce from her sadistic husband.

"A thoughtful reader will find the author's attitude penetrating and equitable, his treatment three-dimensional and light-handed."
Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '50 250w

Kirkus 18:485 Ag 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 Je 23 '50 240w

"Though it begins well and looks like being a 'handmade' piece of work, it seems, unfortunately, to have been finished on the machine. Most of it, however, is above the level of the average competent novel. It is highly readable and contains some well-observed characters and some neat caricatures." Antonia White
+ — New Statesman & Nation 40:22 Jl 1 '50 150w

"The everyday people and the issues in this book are shown with refreshingly unassuming candor and commonsense. The directness and explicitness with which Mr. Mortimer tells the story, which has many glints of humor, make 'The Silver Hook' an unusually effective and enjoyable novel." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 31 '50 500w

Reviewed by Alan Abelson
N Y Times p14 D 17 '50 200w

"There's a happy ending, not too patently contrived, and Ransom is four-dimensional throughout. His clients are moving and pathetic in the extreme, all of them sinning against each other and in their better moments aware of the blame to be shared. The book has a nice quality of warmth." Josephine Lawrence
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 N 25 '50 600w

"Its fault is a certain thinness, a feeling that the theme hasn't quite enough meat in it for a full-length novel." Marghanita Laski
Spec 184:26 Jl 7 '50 130w

"Professional in manner and closely knit."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 23 '50 360w

MORTON, ANTHONY, pseud. See Creasey, J.

MORTON, STELLA (MRS E. L. DOVER). This brittle glory. 315p $3 Morrow 50-14109

"Do married women gladly renouce a career, fame and wealth for love of husband and family? Around this age-old disputation Stella Morton has constructed her story." Library J

Booklist 47:137 D 1 '50

"The style has a fascinating momentum, some English scenes are well done; the characters, except for Deborah, incline toward standard patterns but are presented with vigor." W. K. R.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:435 Ag 1 '50 150w

"First part of the story is loosely constructed and moves slowly but both tempo and writing improve as plot progresses. Characterization not too convincing. However, plot holds interest and book should prove popular reading. Recommended." E. P. Nichols
+ — Library J 75:1507 S 15 '50 130w

"In this highly romantic and ably told novel, Mrs Morton sets the stakes high. . . The extremes in the situation doubtless add glamour to the theme and may prove heartening to women who face a similar situation at a more mundane level. The violence of the antithesis, however, gives the book the character of a 'problem' novel rather than a story of individuals." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 O 8 '50 500w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 10 '50 100w

MOSES, JULIAN MORTON. Collectors' guide to American recordings, 1895-1925; foreword by Giuseppe De Luca. 199p pa $3.75 Am. record collectors' exchange, 825 7th av, N.Y. 19

789.9 Phonograph records 50-5022

"This is a thorough revision of the pamphlet published by Mr. Moses in 1936. The material has been greatly expanded until it covers the entire period of acoustic recording, and all the important standard (that is, lateral-cut) American brands are included. Every acoustic record that ever achieved the Victor Red Seal, we are told, plus some that were assigned numbers but never issued, will be found listed here." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Indexes.

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

"Mr. Moses' book is itself something of a collectors' item, not only because of its usefulness to record collectors, but also because it is the only book of its kind in existence. . . For the reader who doesn't collect rare records, a nostalgic thrill awaits on almost every page of this unique compilation." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 2 '50 190w

"Corinne Rider-Kelsey, for years the highest paid church singer in New York and famous as a recitalist, is not even mentioned. Admitted, the music she recorded is not notable. Dan Beddoe, the famous oratorio tenor, is entitled to attention for his Victor recordings, but gets no credit for the more interesting Welsh songs he sang for green label Columbias. In short, our fund of information is greatly increased but the last word has by no means been said. . . The notes on the various artists could be more informative; birth and death dates would have given more meaning to the recording dates." P. L. Miller
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:289 Mr '50 380w

New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 10w

MOSHER, ROBERT H., ed. Specialty papers: their properties and applications; prepared by a staff of specialists. 512p il $10 Chemical pub. co.

676 Paper. Paper making and trade 50-8166

"Information on the products of the paper-converting industry is here brought together for the first time in the English language. The raw materials and manufacturing processes, and tests used for the evaluation of the products are all thoroughly covered in chapters by the editor and other contributors, all technologists experienced in the production of papers. The papers discussed include fancy packaging, decorative, functional and protective, cover, asphalted, waxed, gummed, carbon, printing, metal-foil, and others." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The book appears to be the only full-scale treatment of the subject; hence it should find extensive use as a reference book in collections on manufacturing and merchandising."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:60 Jl '50

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:391 S '50 120w

MOSK, SANFORD ALEXANDER. Industrial revolution in Mexico. 368p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

330.972 Mexico—Industries and resources
50-4219

The author "takes Mexico's industrial revolution apart, gives due credit, suggests needed warnings. He describes the emergence of a new and agile group of Mexican industrialists who got their start during the days of shortage in the war years. . . Mr. Mosk holds that 'the Government must face the question whether the rate of industrial development should be reduced substantially until the rest of the economy has sufficiently developed to support it.' " (N Y Times)

Foreign Affairs 29:164 O '50 20w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
N Y Times p4 Jl 9 '50 750w

"An invaluable aid to understanding recent developments in Mexico." S. R. Ross
+ Pol Sci Q 65:638 D '50 700w

MOSS, WILLIAM STANLEY. Ill met by moonlight. 192p il maps $2.50 Macmillan

940.544998 World war, 1939-1945—Crete. Kreipe, Karl 50-9218

An account of the abduction of Major General Karl Kreipe, commander of the German forces on Crete, on April 26, 1944. He was captured by two young Englishmen and a handful of guerrillas. The author is one of the English officers. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 47:59 O 1 '50

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 1 '50 450w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 21 '50 1200w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 26:503 N '50 60w

Kirkus 18:506 Ag 15 '50 120w

New Statesman & Nation 39:382 Ap 1 '50 230w

"An engaging bit of derring-do, as told through the copious diary notes and snapshots of the young captain of the Coldstreams who was co-leader of the exploit." Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S 3 '50 450w

Reviewed by G. Y. Wells
N Y Times p6 O 22 '50 470w

New Yorker 26:121 S 23 '50 160w

"This amazing story is marvelously well told, in an exuberant, racing style that makes it impossible to lay the book aside once the first page is read." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 17 '50 600w

"It is difficult to see how the Second World War can produce anything better in its kind than this little masterpiece—a twin masterpiece of action and narrative. . . The authenticity of every word in the story, and the integrity of the participants, are alike beyond question in a book for which all emotional epithets are inadequate." C. M. Woodhouse
+ Spec 184:388 Mr 24 '50 700w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 24 '50 130w

Time 56:88 S 4 '50 550w

"Although there is much praise of local helpers, the book is badly marred by some unnecessarily hurtful descriptions of the manners and appearance of the Cretans, without whom obviously nothing would have been accomplished and who later had to face the consequences. In spite, too, of some friendly comment on the captive general, there is certainly little chivalry in the derisive descriptions of some of his reactions. All, however, who like a really good adventure story with the settings of Conrad (though without his characterization), and who can pardon plenty of youthful self-consciousness, will enjoy this exciting account of a feat which demanded an extreme of daring and determination."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p223 Ap 14 '50 1150w

MOSTELLER, FREDERICK, and others. Pre-election polls of 1948; report to the Committee on analysis of pre-election polls and forecasts. 396p $3; pa $2.50 Social science res. council

324.73 Public opinion polls. Presidents (U.S.)—Election 49-11319

"Shortly after the Presidential election of November 1948, the Social Science Research Council appointed a Committee on Analysis of Pre-Election Polls and Forecasts to evaluate the procedures and methods of interpretation which resulted in the failure of the polling organizations to predict accurately the outcome of the election. The principal basis of the Committee's report was an extensive analysis of the polls prepared by the technical staff of the Committee and now published as the text of this volume." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Indexes.

Reviewed by Nathan Kayfitz
Am J Soc 56:200 S '50 1350w

"I heartily recommend this volume, and particularly the chapter by David Truman on 'Political Behavior,' to all pollsters and their critics alike." Peter Odegard
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:459 Je '50 2250w

"In its theoretical analysis of sampling methods, in its comments on research problems, and on the mistakes made by the polling organizations, the report is straightforward and valuable. But there is no general explanation of the failure of the polls, no appreciable success in weighing the individual factors which contributed to the failure, nor, indeed, any assurance that future election predictions will be more reliable than those of 1948."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:518 D '49 340w

"The question remains: Has this group of experts told us why the polls failed? Reluctantly, we reach the conclusion that they have not." H. L. Childs
Yale R n s 39:550 spring '50 650w

MOTT, GEORGE FOX, and others, eds. New survey of journalism; with a foreword by Grant Milnor Hyde. enl & rev ed 444p il $3.50 Barnes & Noble

070 Journalism 50-3312

Revised and enlarged edition of the Survey of Journalism (Book Review Digest 1938). "Rather than a survey this is a comprehensive study of the entire field of Journalism. Designed as a textbook for students and a 'practical reference guide for young newsmen and writers' it also serves admirably to give laymen a good understanding of journalism as a field of activity. The press as an institution is analyzed, vocational opportunities are considered, historical development is recounted and each phase of activity in the field is discussed expertly with examples." (Library J) Bibliographies. Glossaries. Index.

"Well indexed, with a complete glossary of the jargon of the trade and an extensive selected bibliography this is a worthy addition to any library's collection of useful arts or vocational materials." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 75:982 Je 1 '50 130w

"It provides a very good foundation for newspaper work in all its branches and offers a vast amount of accurate and eminently sensible information. The organization is excellent, the examples well chosen, and the spirit of a newspaper is presented as well as possible. No one could become a newspaperman just by reading the book, but he would get a running start." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 240w

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN, Controlling factors in economic development. 397p $4 Brookings

338 Economics. Economic policy. Business cycles 49-5544

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"The book will probably be relatively effective. It is clearly written and organized. It speaks the language of the day. Indeed, to some it will seem to share too much of the Keynesian ideology. Thus it seems to treat consumption spending as the one great independent variable. It deals with savings and investment accordingly." L. H. Haney
+ — Ann Am Acad 267:227 Ja '50 360w

"Although Mr. Moulton does not succeed in destroying the case against private control of production, he does make a number of valid criticisms of socialism as it has so far appeared in action in various parts of the world, and socialist readers will be well advised not to ignore these merely because they are made by an opponent. They spring in large part from the undoubted fact that a wholly satisfactory means has not yet been evolved in large scale practice by which common ownership becomes sufficiently resilient to admit of the socially useful development of individual initiative." George Woodcock

MOULTON, H. G.—Continued

+ — Canadian Forum 29:285 Mr '50 490w

Foreign Affairs 28:505 Ap '50 20w

"Moulton writes with clarity and simplicity and with a welcome freedom from jargon. Some of his clarity is obtained, as I have indicated, by avoiding difficulties. Sometimes, too, his efforts to achieve clarity for the lay reader result in a certain slowness in the development of his argument which is tedious to a professional economist who would like to move along rather faster. This book, however, is probably not primarily directed to the professional but to the business community. For such readers it is admirably calculated to please." B. C. Keirstead

+ — J Pol Econ 58:180 Ap '50 1550w

"I am sure that Dr. Moulton did not intend this result, but his book, notwithstanding his intentions, gives aid and comfort to all those who believe that consumer purchasing power is the source of economic progress and prosperity, that lack of purchasing power is the primary cause of depression, and that purchasing power in the form of wages is a legitimate first charge against profits." F. D. Newbury

Management R 39:298 My '50 900w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:34 Ap 29 '50 320w

"This book has few errors. It is written in 'words of one syllable.' Technical jargon is carefully avoided. In a word, Dr. Moulton's triumph is to make an admittedly difficult subject really understandable to the general reader." J. S. Prentice

+ — Social Educ 14:282 O '50 400w

"The book will prove intelligible and provocative to the general reader as well as to the professional economist."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:481 D '49 280w

MOWRER, EDGAR ANSEL. Challenge and decision; a program for the times of crisis ahead, for world peace under American leadership. 291p $3.75 McGraw

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. International federation 50-10638

"Mr. Mowrer believes that the decision for world leadership rests with the United States if we are to offset the challenge of physical, spiritual and moral extinction at the hands of Soviet communism. He expresses simply and clearly the need for a 'Great Policy' that will aim at 'an immediate Peace Coalition and an ultimate federation' of non-communist countries to the end of containing and weakening the 'Expansionist Bloc.'" (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:151 D 15 '50

"Worthy of consideration for all libraries." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 75:2076 D 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 171:647 D 16 '50 550w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 19 '50 950w

"Mowrer's book may not be a guide to practical politics, but it should stimulate discussion." S. K. Padover

N Y Times p3 D 17 '50 750w

"There is infinite value in looking ahead and in charting the path toward a still greater unity of purpose which shall abide and which conceivably can save the world from its present grave peril. There is value in devising new instruments of freedom . . . and in testing their workability. Mr. Mowrer's plan, close to that of the United World Federalists, is well and hopefully argued. More power to it!" M. S. Watson

+ Sat R of Lit 33:13 D 9 '50 750w

School & Society 72:351 N 25 '50 30w

MOYZISCH, L. C. Operation Cicero; with a postscript by Franz von Papen; tr. by Constantine Fitzgibbon and Heinrich Fraenkel. 209p $2.75 Coward-McCann

940.548743 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service. Spies 50-10307

"An Anglo-German spy story set in war-time Ankara. 'Cicero' was the British Ambassador's valet. Moyzisch, the author, was an underling of Kaltenbrunner attached to Von Papen's staff. Late one night in autumn 1943 Cicero approached Moyzisch with a sensational offer. He was an Albanian, he said, who hated the British. He was prepared to sell to the Germans for an initial sum of £20,000 photographs of highly secret documents which he had the means of extracting from Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen's private safe. . . The leakage was eventually betrayed to the British by Moyzisch's secretary, after incalculable harm might have been done. What happened to Cicero after that we are not told." New Statesman & Nation

---

Booklist 47:113 N 15 '50

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 5 '50 320w

"This book is not only enthralling, it is also history—history about which questions have been asked in the British House of Commons within the past two weeks. A prologue by von Papen attests its accuracy." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '50 700w

"Read as a story of espionage, it is revealing inside material, but the point of view seems still too Teutonic to be taken at face value."

Kirkus 18:575 S 15 '50 150w

"This is a very good spy story, written as a spy story and not as a piece of history. It has all the necessary fictional elements—the atmosphere of suspense and mystery, vivid personal descriptions, a temperamental blonde secretary, and a fast pace."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 12 '50 550w

"Moyzisch's account is written shortly, soberly, and with much fascinating detail. Von Papen says that 'apart from a few details' the book is perfectly correct. It would be interesting to hear Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen's version of this extraordinary story." Nigel Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 40:304 S 23 '50 500w

Reviewed by Allen Dulles
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 29 '50 850w

"Because of the nature of [the author's] duties, the book lacks the political scope it might have had if written by von Papen. Still, as a genuine spy thriller, 'Operation Cicero' is top drawer." E. P. Heppner

+ N Y Times p6 O 22 '50 800w

"A very curious account of some international skulduggery, set down in a confused and portentous manner hardly likely to convince an even moderately skeptical reader that he has been let in on what the publishers call 'the truth about the war's most amazing story.'"

New Yorker 26:190 N 18 '50 210w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 3 '50 260w

"Eric Ambler might have clarified a few details, and Graham Greene would certainly have written a more precise prose; nevertheless, 'Operation Cicero' is one of the slickest spy stories I've recently come across, and, best of all, the author says it's true." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 N 25 '50 1100w

Reviewed by C. M. Woodhouse
Spec 184:321 S 22 '50 950w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 24 '50 170w

"Once the gist is known and the moral seen the book itself is disappointing. It has not the pith and wit of Mr. Nicolson; there are too many digressions for an Amblerian thriller; and it leaves far too many loose ends to pose as history. . . Like many people involved in spying, the author cannot look critically at his handiwork, and so we have to take on trust the importance of the information which he obtained. . . How could he, a junior official in Ankara, know what information might not already be known in Berlin, what documents might help to break British ciphers, what bits of the intelligence jigsaw were missing? For him to assume such knowledge is not even good journalism. It seems like naive presumption."

Times [London] Lit Sup p616 S 29 '50 1550w

MUEHL, JOHN FREDERICK. Interview with India. 310p map $3.50 Day

915.4 India—Description and travel. India—Social life and customs 50-8729

"The story of an American's six-month trip through the villages of present-day India. Mr. Muehl traveled to remote places where the people had never seen an outsider; had never heard of America. He went by camel, on foot, any way, to see how the people of India lived and felt about their country's independence. What he saw is disturbing, frightening, and very depressing. Little change has been made by the present government—the same old officials are in power, the same usurers squeezing the life out of the people, and the same poverty and disease are rampant as they have been for centuries." (Library J) Glossary. No index.

Booklist 47:74 O 15 '50

Reviewed by J. S. Hundel

Canadian Forum 30:189 N '50 410w

"Muehl, though a rugged traveler in the Richard Halliburton tradition, is more like a 20th Century Marco Polo in his concern with the economics, politics and even hygiene of the places he visits. Like Marco Polo, he opens up a world that most of us never have seen before." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun p5 Ag 1 '50 400w

Reviewed by P. M. Buck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 6 '50 500w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 50w

"This is an honest, understanding book. Parts of it are unpleasant, but all of it is interesting and thought-provoking. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:1178 Jl '50 140w

"Mr. Muehl is a gifted young American writer—clever, imaginative, skillful with words. . . The key to Mr. Muehl's book, intellectually, is that he was mystified by the death of Gandhi and by all the phenomena which surrounded it. . . In all this part of his book he shows that he could spend ten years in each of the six million villages of India . . . and he still would not know what makes India different from any other country. For, in fact, an enormous amount of the detail he amasses—and it is fascinating detail—is not peculiar to India at all. . . His book is eminently readable and filled with details of the choicest kind. Anybody would enjoy the story of his travels with a conjuring and dancing troupe, or his various encounters with camels, policemen, priests and beggars. . . But his economic and political preachment lies over the whole story from beginning to end." Vincent Sheean

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 30 '50 1050w

"It took a strong stomach, good nerves and an astonishing amount of humanity to write this unique book about village life in India. In its way, it may turn out to be a minor classic. The ingredients are there, all except one—a positive, serene philosophy of life, which is not to be expected at the age of 28. Mr. Muehl is all passion, all bitterness, all revolt. He writes of remarkable things with a dead-pan style, but there is a fiery protest behind it all that human beings should have to live in such misery as do the teeming millions in these villages. . . It is unfortunate that Mr. Muehl should have thought it necessary to introduce his book with a truly vicious picture of a Hindu ruler who is now a valued and valuable representative of India at the United Nations." H. L. Matthews

+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 30 '50 650w

"A thoughtful record of a tour of India by bullock cart, caravan, and dhow, and on horseback and foot. . . Although the general temper of the book, for all its burden of poverty, suffering, and death, is sanguine, the author's conclusions are a long way from optimistic. Without quite saying so, he gives the impression that the present government is so deeply committed to its blunders as to be practically useless, and that there is a strong possibility the Communists will win out in the end."

+ New Yorker 26:86 Ag 26 '50 160w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 6 '50 800w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer

Sat R of Lit 33:9 Ag 26 '50 1000w

MUELLER, GUSTAV EMIL. Education limited. 141p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press

370.1 Education—Philosophy. Education—U.S. Materialism 49-50259

"Presents a critique of the American educational system from the view of a man who was educated in Switzerland, and we come out second best. Professor Mueller is sharp in his criticism of naturalism or pragmatism in our educational system. . . He defines liberal education in this way: 'Liberal education at its best is love in historical identification, abundant experience, freedom through distance, and self-discipline.' He finds little true 'liberal' education in our colleges today. Commercialism, pragmatism and naturalism have distorted the American university, almost beyond repair, he fears." (N Y Times) No index.

"While Mueller may have succeeded in arguing very persuasively that education must be limited, he has done this only within the limitations of a roughly outlined philosophic scheme which seems to represent some form of absolute idealism with strong suggestions of existentialism." M. H. Thompson

Ethics 60:299 Jl '50 1900w

Reviewed by B. H. Bode

New Repub 123:19 Ag 21 '50 550w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine

N Y Times p7 Ja 1 '50 180w

"There is vibrancy and depth of penetration in this study. It all adds up to no procedures in or out of the classroom. But it does add up to the heightened perceptiveness of the reader if, by good fortune, he is a teacher. . . This author is in a new situation—one characterized by its own peculiar dynamisms. For myself, I can only wish more 'constitutive power' to him in his influence on the American campus." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 S 9 '50 800w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 72:281 O 28 '50 180w

MUENCH, MRS JOYCE (ROCKWOOD), and MUENCH, JOSEF. Grand canyon; a pictorial interpretation. 101p $2.75 Hastings house

917.91 Grand canyon 50-8991

"A pictorial interpretation" of the Grand Canyon, consisting of 116 photographs, some text, and end paper maps.

Booklist 47:59 O 1 '50

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 120w

MUIR, FLORABEL (MRS DENIS A. MORRISON). Headline happy. 248p $3 Holt

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-10507

The autobiography of the Los Angeles correspondent for the New York News, who has a penchant for the "blood, lust and bullets" type of reporting.

"Florabel knows them all, from the paddy wagon set to cafe society. She's rough and

MUIR, FLORABEL—Continued
tough and honest and a great credit to the profession she loves." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 12 '50 360w

Kirkus 18:582 S 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 75:1823 O 15 '50 100w

"Fortunately for the people who tend to believe what they read in their newspaper, her immensely successful career and methods are not typical. For exactly the same reason that we all enjoy crime stories, 'Headline Happy' has a racy and distasteful fascination."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p44 D 3 '50 370w

"Miss Muir seems to have been very much in evidence at every major scandal in the last twenty years. . . She is evidently a woman of considerable stamina and she writes with a lack of elegance that ultimately inspires one to awe." Jane Cobb
N Y Times p44 N 26 '50 130w

MULAC, MARGARET E., and HOLMES, MARIAN S. School game book; il. by George E. Mathews. 131p $2.50 Harper

793 Schools—Exercises and recreations. Games 50-5726

Games and recreations for the classroom: guessing games, party activities, dramatic games, musical and rhythmic games, number and word games. The games are graded and require only the equipment found in any classroom. Index.

Booklist 46:213 Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor
Christian Science Monitor p6 S 30 '50 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 9 '50 110w

"Simply and clearly written, graded according to classes, and indexed for quick reference, it is a very exciting little book, which will be welcomed by every person working with children. My guess is that the children will soon be borrowing it from their teacher's desk to have fun with at home." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 12 '50 150w

School & Society 71:79 F 4 '50 40w

MUNBY, ALAN NOEL LATIMER. Alabaster hand, and other ghost stories. 192p $2 Macmillan

[50-30386]

"By using incidents within the range of human experience, an English author has created some rather scholarly ghost stories which appear to be legends and local tales about things seen and heard in the dark. Having none of the usual chills and horrors, this is for a fairly special audience." Booklist

Booklist 47:137 D 1 '50

"The writing in this collection of stories of the supernatural by an English college librarian is of a uniformly high quality. But the same cannot be said of the content, or so it seems to us." Robert Cromie
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p47 D 3 '50 180w

"Like 'The Turn of the Screw,' and like M. R. James' yarns, these under rather than overstate. Seldom does the hero or the reader so much as see an actual ghost. The chill is conveyed by indirection, in the traditional English manner. The lurking evil is usually suggested rather than defined. The horrors are there, but the reader must exercise his imagination." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 11 '50 450w

Reviewed by Sylva Norman
Spec 184:56 Ja 13 '50 100w

MUNCH, EDVARD. Edvard Munch, by Frederick B. Deknatel; with an introd. by Johan H. Langaard. 120p 79il col pl $3.50 Chanticleer

759.81 Paintings, Norwegian 50-9239

"The life and work of a Norwegian artist little known in this country until his work was introduced at an exhibit in Boston last spring. A beautifully made book, with black-and-white and color reproductions; bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 47:130 D 1 '50

"Well-made and, of course, well-written book. . . Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:1905 N 1 '50 110w

"The main essay here [is] informative and well written. . . The short introduction is by the director of the Oslo Municipal collections; and there is also a useful bibliography. But in other respects the book is rather inadequate. For one thing, it was evidently planned to accompany an exhibition, so that the catalogue at the end is not a full one and the text often refers to pictures as if they were illustrated when they are not." J. W.
Manchester Guardian p2 S 26 '50 150w

MUND, VERNON ARTHUR. Government and business. 659p maps $4.75 Harper

338.973 Industry and state 50-3947

"The primary purpose of this book is to explain the many ways in which business and economic life are shaped and directed by government—either to promote the social welfare or to enhance the business incomes of politically important groups. Consideration is also given to an evaluation of the various forms of government intervention from the standpoint of economic welfare. The treatment is interdisciplinary in nature and brings together materials from the fields of economics, political science, business, and constitutional law." (Pref) Indexes.

Reviewed by C. B. Hagan
Am Pol Sci R 44:1042 D '50 230w

"For those who like to emphasize the prevention of monopoly and restraint of trade and unfair methods of competition this should be an excellent text. It is scholarly in its treatment, well written, and elaborately documented." F. P. Hall
+ Ann Am Acad 271:205 S '50 450w

Current Hist 19:231 O '50 70w

"Professor Mund has written an admirable book on business elephantiasis. His coverage is broad: it would be difficult to discover a serious omission in the field of government control of business. But his emphasis is on the monopoly blight. . . . But here are a few reservations. In view of the history of the last seventy-five years the author seems a little optimistic concerning the likelihood of the emergence of real competition. His therapy is sound; but will the patients accept it?" S. E. Harris
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 S 2 '50 650w

MUNRO, WILLIAM CARROLL. Gift of glory. 276p $3 Scribner

50-5353

Purports to be the story of a famous American playwright, who, thru the efforts of his managing second wife had become almost a legendary figure. The narrator, however, had known him when he was a plain little man who delivered milk and worked sometimes in the summer theater where his wife acted. The real story of Louis Scotosi, who loved his dipsomaniacal first wife, is quite different from the one given out by his second wife.

Booklist 46:246 Ap 1 '50

"A disillusioned novel of a literary celebrity which has some biting portraits and wry character sketches."
Kirkus 18:30 Ja 15 '50 210w

"This brutal tale of New York in the twenties will appeal to the tough minded reader whose taste runs to the seamy side of life." H. R. Forbes
Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 70w

"Mr. Munro is an effective storyteller. He writes briskly, with suspense and frequently with biting humor, about the motley collection of people, scenes and events. . . The novel has the speed, variety and concreteness of a good conventional movie." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 12 '50 600w

"It never rises above the narrative level—or above the author's evident dislike for his chief character." Boris Todrin
N Y Times p35 Mr 26 '50 230w

"There is a lack of balance in the book which destroys the effect of what might have been a dramatic and appealing novel about the genius who is defrauded of everything but his post-mortem fame. The fact is that the reader finds it difficult to believe in the dramatic talents of Louis Scott. He is never seen at work; all of his vitality, his heart and his love are on Mr. Munro's stage given to the girl who had married and then destroyed him. It is a bitter novel about a man who reveals none of the qualities of genius and about a reputation that never could have been acquired." Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:33 Mr 11 '50 750w

MUNSTERBERG, HUGO. Short history of Chinese art. 227p pl $5 Philosophical lib; Mich. state college press, Mich. state college, East Lansing, Mich.
709.51 Art, Chinese 49-50236

A brief history of Chinese art from prehistoric times to the Manchu dynasty. The author is associate professor of fine arts at Michigan state college, and a specialist in Oriental art. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Munsterberg's short history of Chinese art fulfills the promise implied in its title only on the score of brevity and conciseness. In dealing with the art itself, it too often glibly advances half-truths and false inferences. Apparently the author lacked the supplementary background and experience to carry it off. . . Occasional shrewd insights and some passages of brilliant synthesis make this little book rewarding for a specialist who can recognize the many errors and sidestep them but it seems definitely unsuitable for uncritical amateurs and students, who would be apt to gain from it some serious misconceptions." Schuyler Cammann
— + Am Anthropol 52:421 Jl '50 600w

"A volume that is both concise and full of information; moreover, he has related Chinese art monuments to the historical background, religious movements and literary works of each period. . . A 'short history' provokes criticism more than any other type of art historical writing. Many non-professionals will want just such a book as this—but the present reviewer still questions the ability of any authority to condense the millennia of Chinese art production into a small volume, as he would question a similar attempt in European art." Alfred Salmony
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 15 '50 500w

MURDOCK, GEORGE PETER. Social structure. 387p $6 Macmillan
392 Sociology. Anthropology. Family. Marriage 49-9317
For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Despite its over-reliance on its sample, its over-dependence on statistics and the undue influence upon it of Hull's rat's-eye view of human nature, this is an important volume, one that summarizes the state of knowledge on important issues in a difficult field, that defines and clarifies concepts, tests old theories and breaks new ground." M. E. Opler
+ — Am Anthropol 52:77 Ja '50 1550w

Reviewed by Llewellyn Gross
Am J Soc 55:498 Mr '50 2350w

"Despite some limitations, mostly not the author's, the book represents a major advance. It is a mature work, obviously the product of long reflection, careful logic, and systematic handling of empirical data. Its ideas and procedures are presented with clarity and frankness, and with telling use of the theoretical literature. It is a work of genuine scientific craftsmanship." Kingsley Davis
+ — Am Soc R 15:138 F '50 1700w

"That the book will be used by students of social institutions in the future will be apparent to all who consider its scope. For if it does not resolve the problems of which it treats, its numerous hypotheses, its methodological usages, and its sweeping conclusions will be subjects for analysis by others who are concerned with the question of scientific law in human society, in terms of the regularities that are to be discerned in the ways men order their mutual relations as members of the social aggregates they comprise." M. J. Herskovits
Ann Am Acad 267:235 Ja '50 700w

"Not only from the point of view of methodology, but also because of the new conclusions which the author draws from his work, this book will be indispensable to all students of culture and social organization." John Gillin
+ Social Forces 28:336 Mr '50 300w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:383 S '49 240w

MURPHY, EDWARD FRANCIS. Song of the cave; a tale of Ruth and Noemi. 214p $2.50 Bruce pub.
Ruth—Fiction 50-9050

"This Biblical novel is about Ruth, the great-grandmother of David, and her journey from her pagan homeland with the aged Naomi. In Ruth, the author sees a link between the Jews and the Gentile world, presaging the all-embracing love of Jesus Christ which was to come." Chicago Sun

Booklist 47:97 N 1 '50

"Father Murphy, S.S.J., has enlarged several biblical tales into novels. The result here is not great art but it is a pleasing, active, easy-to-follow story that bears kinship to the brighter biblical pageants done in parish auditoriums. Father Murphy unerringly follows the biblical account, creates, when necessary, new characters and situations that fit smoothly into place. . . Wholesome reading that most importantly, will stir you to search out the original, sweetly compelling story of Ruth and Naomi." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 172:73 O '50 250w
Chicago Sun p5 Ag 29 '50 50w

"Father Murphy has not hesitated to draw upon his imagination to fill out the lacunae which exist in the biblical version of the story of Ruth; but his imagination never goes beyond the credible." August Derleth
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 16 '50 400w

MURPHY, HENRY CLIFFORD. National debt in war and transition. 295p $3.50 McGraw 336.73 Debts, Public. World war, 1939-1945—Finance. Finance—U.S. 50-6930

"More than the history of the debt of the United States during World War II, this account of the financing of a war places major emphasis 'upon the considerations of public policy underlying the actions of the authorities.' . . Part I reviews the history of the growing debt during the depression years, and the development of borrowing techniques during the defense period, 1939-41. Part II discusses the merits of financing a war by borrowing or by taxation, by compulsory lending as against voluntary lending. . . Part III has chapters on The War Loans, How Quotas Were Set, Free Riding, The Savings Bond Program, The Wartime Pattern of Interest Rates. Part IV, The Tide Recedes, presents an overall view of war financing, a brief examination into the experience of other countries, and an appraisal of the United States war borrowing program." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by C. C. Abbott
+ Ann Am Acad 270:170 Jl '50 450w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:320 S '50 280w

MURPHY, HOWARD ANSLEY. Teaching musicianship; a manual of methods and materials. 275p $4.50 Coleman-Ross co, inc, 25 W. 45th st, N.Y. 19

780.72 Music—Instruction and study
50-13542

"A book for the instructor of music, in training or in the field, 'based upon a belief that understanding is essential to true musicianship and that it is best developed through an organized study of music itself.' Combines the philosophical approach with the practical. Written after years of successful teaching experience, wide reading, and study." Library J

"A must for teachers college, university and college libraries." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 75:1298 Ag '50 100w

"In proposing the paramount value of 'why' in the teaching situation, the author has here stated that 'how' for teaching the components of musicianship, from elementary through college levels. As the title implies, the term 'theory' is eschewed for the broader connotations of 'musicianship'—a point meant to bear significantly on much-needed reforms in curriculum organization and classroom approach in music study." William Graves
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:572 S '50 550w

MURRAY, MARGARET ALICE. Splendour that was Egypt. 354p il $10 Philosophical lib.

913.32 Egypt—Civilization. Egypt—Antiquities
49-11954

"A general survey of Egyptian culture and civilisation." (Subtitle) The author, who was an assistant to Sir William Flinders Petrie, the famous Egyptologist, tends to specialize on facts concerning royalty in ancient Egypt. She deals with social conditions, religion, art and science, and language and literature. Maps on lining papers. List of kings. Bibliography. Index.

"Dealing as it does with a culture rich in objects that have survived, this book is a treasury of fine photographs and illustrations. . . This book is superb when surviving objects are being described and the life of the time indicated by these objects is being detailed. The literature is always extremely well handled and the translations are usually fresh and forceful. . . Yet in the whole field of religion one gets the impression that the author has little understanding of the material she is dealing with. The 'positivist party line' is a rather barren dogma for interpreting the great religious documents of Egypt or of any other culture." T. A. Brady
+ — Am Hist R 55:878 Jl '50 360w

Booklist 46:218 Mr 1 '50

"Miss Murray has done a fine job of culling the enormous field of Egyptology to bring its best fruits within the scope of the intelligent but busy reader." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 15 '50 150w

"For the general reader, to whom it is addressed, this is an interesting and enlightening presentation of an ever fascinating subject. The author, a fellow of University College, London, succeeds admirably in bringing the mummies to life. The many well chosen illustrations of all phases of Egyptian art and culture are a great help." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:273 Mr 1 '50 270w

Reviewed by Phyllis Thompson
Ethics 60:231 Ap '50 120w

"The author's deep enthusiasm has produced a book of emotional appeal but not necessarily an accurate survey of 'the splendour that was Egypt.'" J. A. Wilson
J Religion 30:278 O '50 450w

"Widely known illustrated books on ancient Greece and ancient Rome are now paralleled by Dr. Margaret Murray's The Splendour that was Egypt with its rich collection of illustrations and its simple and direct statements. Dr. Murray helped Sir William Flinders Petrie for many years, and is now a veteran among students of ancient Egypt. . . Dr. Murray usually avoids discussions of divergencies of view which could easily become deterrent to the type of reader for whom the book is intended." H. J. Fleure
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 16 '49 420w

MURRAY, MAX. Neat little corpse. 240p $2.50 Farrar, Straus
50-7148

Mystery story.

"The author's touch is appropriately light and his assembly skates along on a very high polish. I didn't care for it." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun p5 Ap 28 '50 80w

Kirkus 18:116 F 15 '50 70w

"Max Murray shows himself to be an author of high style, gentle humor and etched characterizations. 'The Neat Little Corpse' is not only a delightful tale but is also a lesson for authors of less wit on how to write the familiar old family plot."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 30 '50 180w

"As a mystery the new Max Murray is one of the season's flat failures—an inept and unedited farrago of suppressed evidence, nebulous motivations, and events that remain incomprehensible even after their 'solution.' . . No matter how little sense it all makes in the end, you'll have a highly agreeable time reading it." Anthony Boucher
— + N Y Times p16 My 28 '50 100w

"Highly agreeable." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 21 '50 100w

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. Mystery of Keats. uniform ed 260p $3 British bk. centre

821 Keats, John
[50-2681]

"Twenty-four years ago Mr. Middleton Murry published in 'Keats and Shakespeare' one of the outstanding works in literary criticism of our time. He elucidated the 'prophetic' quality in Keats's life and work, the presence of the power which Keats himself discerned in Shakespeare and followed in his own career: 'Shakespeare led a life of allegory: his works are the comment on it.' Now, Mr. Murry supplements his early study with a number of essays, some elucidating the poems and some following the pattern of the earlier book, by relating Keats to Milton, Blake, and Wordsworth. I found of greatest interest two human studies, one of Fanny Brawne, and the other of Fanny Keats." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 47:132 D 1 '50

Reviewed by B. I. Evans
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 10 '50 310w

"When Locker-Lampson talked with Fanny Keats about her dead brother John, the mingled love and awe which he heard in her voice prompted his memorable comment: 'She spoke of him as of a mystery.' He meant 'mystery' in its archaic sense. . . Mr. Murry's volume admirably retains the 'mystery' being informed and unified throughout by a seasoned scholar's conviction that whatever we know of the meaning and worth of Keats, our knowledge 'has still far to go before it is commensurate with what he really was.' . . A handsome and until now unpublished gray wash drawing of Keats by the artist Haydon serves as frontispiece to this fine book." Carlos Baker
+ N Y Times p22 My 14 '50 370w

"As a critic of Keats Mr. Murry has penetrated more deeply than anyone else of our time into the implications of his subject; but as an advocate he limits his effectiveness by ignoring those aspects of Keats's poetic personality which arouse disquiet and even distaste."
Times [London] Lit Sup p858 D 30 '49 800w

MUSIC EDUCATORS' NATIONAL CONFERENCE. Piano instruction in the schools; a report and interpretation of a national survey; ed. by William R. Sur. 63p il pa $1 The conference, 64 E. Jackson blvd, Chicago 4

786.3 Piano—Instruction and study

"Contains information concerning an aspect of music instruction not frequently brought to the attention of a reading public which has otherwise been convinced of the importance of music in the community. It presents the result of a national survey proving that class piano instruction in the public schools is on a sound basis and is an important part of music education. Part One is an interpretative and detailed account of the survey. . . Part Two is a tabulated report representing 45.8% of the schools systems of the country. Charts are presented showing geographical aspect, age groups of students, types of equipment, success, problems, and procedure. An appendix lists schools offering the instruction, members of the national committee, and a short bibliography." Music Lib Assn Notes

"For any group interested in inaugurating class piano instruction in its school system the information contained in this book would be of inestimable value." Margaret Tolson

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:121 D '49 280w

Reviewed by V. H. Talley

+ School R 58:180 Mr '50 900w

MUSKAT, MORRIS. Physical principles of oil production. 922p il $15 McGraw

622.338 Petroleum. Petroleum industry and trade 49-48197

"The particular subject of this book is what the oil industry calls 'reservoir engineering.' It is concerned with the physical principles and facts underlying the drilling of oil wells, reservoir behavior, and the efficient and economical extraction of oil. The book deals also with physical characteristics of porous rocks and their entrained fluids, core analysis, and hydrodynamic principles of fluid flow. The expected performance of gas-drive and water-drive reservoirs is discussed. The latter portion of the book treats of secondary-recovery operations, condensate-producing reservoirs, well spacing, and the estimation of the recoverable reserves in oil fields." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Indexes.

"The author has endeavored to keep as closely as possible to hydrodynamic and other principles which are scientifically sound. The theoretical material is solidly buttressed by facts gathered from experience in oil fields. The book is addressed to engineers and conservation officials who are concerned with oil field exploitation."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:100 N '49

"The fourteen chapters of this scientific treatise contain valuable data well presented. The book will be welcomed by petroleum technologists, mining and mechanical engineers, geophysicists, and physical chemists as an excellent contribution to the technology of oil production."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:124 Mr '50 230w

MUSMANNO, MICHAEL ANGELO. Ten days to die. 276p il $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Hitler, Adolf. World war, 1939-1945—Germany 50-8036

"This is a carefully pieced together and heavily documented account of the days in the Reich Chancellery bunker-hide-out immediately preceding the suicides of Hitler and Eva Braun and the fall of Berlin. From eye-witness reports, on-the-spot investigations, testimony given at the war-crimes trials, personal interviews with survivors and supporters of the Nazi hierarchy, the author has vividly recreated the decline and fall of [Hitler]." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 46:334 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 4 '50 450w

"Judge Musmanno delights in the fruity phrase and pulp metaphor. Writing in the historic present, with the use of the interior monologue and giving a free rein to undocumented fancy, he has landed himself in a half-world between fact and fiction with nothing novel to add in the way of history and nothing to convince by way of rhetoric." Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 16 '50 420w

Kirkus 18:230 Ap 1 '50 130w

"[The author's] diligence in getting material may be lauded, but the book does not stand up as a documented account. There is too much introspection and musing on what must have happened, too much adjectival description. The result is poorly balanced between literary effort and historical portrayal which is neither good literature, nor good history." H. L. Roth

Library J 75:861 My 15 '50 100w

"All of this makes grim reading now that the mists of time have obscured, a little, the fantastically terrible truths of the Nazi regime. But it is salutary to recall these things. 'That unlimited authority and power are poisons which destroy judgment and reason is a demonstrable fact,' writes Judge Musmanno, 'as conclusively established as any chemical formula tried and tested in the laboratory.'" H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 4 '50 800w

"Judge Musmanno is convinced that Hitler and Eva Braun committed suicide two days after their wedding, which took place in the bunker. The trouble is that his rendition of these and other events occurring during the period is too flamboyant for his already fantastic subject matter."

New Yorker 26:70 Jl 1 '50 160w

"Musmanno also has an impressive record as a writer, having produced seven books and a brace of screen plays; but, unfortunately, this does not show in 'Ten Days to Die.' Actually, the book is important in spite of the style and not because of it, for Musmanno has hung some shabby adjectives and metaphors on an intrinsically dramatic story. . . But, as stated, the book is an important one, despite the style, and contains many data for the first time disclosed or for the first time assembled in chronological narrative." Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 4 '50 700w

Reviewed by J. M. Grant

Sat R of Lit 33:30 My 27 '50 230w

MUSSELMAN, MORRIS MCNEIL. Get a horse! 304p il $3.95 Lippincott

629.209 Automobiles. Automobile industry and trade 50-4556

This "story of the automobile in America" is a popular history of the transition from horse and buggy days to the automobile era of today. "He records all the major milestones, from the first plans drawn by George Selden of Rochester (1877), the first model of the Duryea brothers (1893), the water-cooled engine (1895), the steering wheel (1900), the windshield (1905) . . . the electric self-starter (1912), right down to such latter-day innovations as free-wheeling (1930) and automatic transmission (1940s)." (Time) Copiously illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

Bookmark 10:5 O '50 20w

Reviewed by Jack Star

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 20 '50 150w

"This is a saga of the automobile from its inception a half century ago until today. It's pleasant reading for everyone who likes a motor car. This is history written by a humorist. . . Sixty-three photografs in the book are by themselves about worth the price. The camera reproduces the vehicles and motoring fashions of 40 years ago. You'll chuckle." Hal Foust

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 20 '50 350w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 26:503 N '50 40w

MUSSELMAN, M. M.—Continued

"Mr. Musselman remarks in his foreword, 'This book hits only the high spots, but I hope it hits the most interesting ones.' In the opinion of this reviewer, 'Get a Horse!' fulfills its author's hope, and ought to satisfy the expectations of its readers. It reports briskly and informatively on the history of the horseless carriage." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 20 '50 420w

"It is a book for high-spots readers: a group to which it will presumably appeal, for it has not only the virtue of being spotty but also of being comfortably familiar—a beguiling combination." D. L. Cohn

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 20 '50 370w

New Yorker 26:121 S 9 '50 140w

"It's a narrative that will fascinate almost any reader—men for the most part, I should guess—old enough to remember when the book's title was a current ribaldry." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 14 '50 1000w

Reviewed by W. C. Richards

Sat R of Lit 33:18 S 16 '50 1200w

Time 56:86 Ag 21 '50 500w

MYERS, BERNARD S. Modern art in the making. (Whittlesey House publication) 467p 218il 6 col pl $7 McGraw

759.91 Painting—History. Modernism (art) 50-8135

"The artist reflects the social and political currents of the times, and his escape from reality today is actually his protest against the chaos of the world and his own lack of recognition by society. That is the thesis of the author of this history . . . of painting from David and the French Revolution to current trends in France, Germany and the United States." N Y Times

Booklist 46:349 Jl 15 '50

"Scholarly and well documented history." George Biddle

+ N Y Times p24 S 10 '50 440w

"Dr. Myers succeeds admirably in establishing the creative artist as a vital force in ideological development of our culture. His portraits of the significant artists and art movements go beyond the usual documentation into the psychological, social, and political forces which motivated them. It is a revealing 'behind-the-scenes' account of the modern creative artist's struggle for freedom of expression." Ralph Wickiser

+ Sat R of Lit 33:70 O 7 '50 900w

"As meaningful to the layman as it is to the student of modern art, this publication succeeds in expressing clearly a subject that has too often been cloaked in the mystery of complicated and obscure terminology."

+ School Arts 50:8a S '50 130w

MYERS, BYRONA. Turn here for Strawberry Roam; drawings by Anne Marie Jauss. 134p $2 Bobbs

50-6921

A story about two discarded toys, a velvet squirrel and a leather mouse. Their adventurous spirit took them from a trash box in an alley to a home of their own in the country, a fireplace oven. For ages 5 to 8.

"Jolly drawings enhance this original book."

+ Bookmark 9:188 My '50 40w

" 'Turn Here for Strawberry Roam' is one of those books to sigh with delight over if you're looking for a story to read aloud to the 5 to 8-year-olds." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun p3 Ap 29 '50 180w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 21 '50 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '50

"A pleasant, imaginative story. . . Recommended." F. M. Hensey

+ Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 80w

"The neighborly grasshoppers and chipmunks are all so domestic, so concerned—as are Golly and Squirrel—with household furnishings, that they lose the characteristics of their own kind. The toys lose their toylike quality, and all the creatures are too human. The story is pleasantly written, but it hasn't the perfect balance between reality and fancy which distinguishes the best fantasy." E. L. B.

— + N Y Times p18 Je 4 '50 150w

Wis Lib Bul 46:23 Jl '50

MYERS, JOHN MYERS. Last chance; Tombstone's early years. 260p il maps $3.50 Dutton

979.1 Tombstone, Arizona 50-5638

"The discovery of silver in 1877 and the flooding of the mines in 1886, marked the birth and death of Tombstone, Arizona. In this brief period the population grew from a handful of prospectors to a wide-open mining city of 10,000 inhabitants. This phenomenal development, the flamboyant lawlessness which resulted, and the dramatic but short-lived parts played by the city's more colorful characters, are chronicled in this volume." Library J

"Authentic Americana which makes excellent true adventure reading."

+ Kirkus 17:687 D 15 '49 220w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 75:320 F 15 '50 130w

"Mr. Myers' book is a well-written and serious attempt to give a biography of Tombstone, not just an account of the violent episodes that have been re-hashed times without number. As such it is a welcome addition to any shelf of Western Americana." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 5 '50 900w

"Written with painstaking research and commendable respect for verifiable records. The result is as gaudy as anyone could wish, but it probably comes as close to the whole truth about Tombstone, the Clanton gang, the Earps, and the bloody two-year reign of terror as any history of that time and place ever will. And it is as readable as the most biased Tombstone book yet published." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p7 F 12 '50 800w

"Mr. Myers tells Tombstone's story with all the narrative snap of the expert yarner, but with scrupulous regard for facts and interpretation." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 15 '50 850w

Reviewed by D. L. Morgan

Sat R of Lit 33:50 My 13 '50 800w

Wis Lib Bul 46:18 Ap '50

MYERS, LOUISE KIFER. Teaching children music in the elementary school. 327p $5 Prentice-Hall

780.72 School music 50-9194

"This book is a guide for teaching the phases of music usually directed by the elementary classroom teacher. . . The stress is on the contribution music can make (1) toward the physical, intellectual, social, and emotional growth and development of children and (2) toward a fuller understanding of a major curriculum area with which children are engaged, while, at the same time, (3) planning for their growth in music through interesting, meaningful experiences." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:131 D 1 '50

School & Society 72:96 Ag 5 '50 30w

MYERS, MRS MADELEINE M. Pocketful of feathers. 159p $2.50 Westminster press

50-2846

A junior novel, for ages fourteen to sixteen. It describes the efforts of two teenaged sisters to earn enough money to pay the taxes on their much-loved summer home.

The situation is complicated by the fact that their father has been seriously ill, and he and their mother have gone away for a few months' change.

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 10 '50 200w

"Frothy but fun."
+ Kirkus 18:135 Mr 1 '50 190w

"Good boy and girl relationships and family feeling, and excellent character development." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 75:568 Ap 1 '50 80w

"The relations of the five young people are well handled, and the country atmosphere is good." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 16 '50 140w

"A pleasant style and a knowledge of how young people talk and think make this a good story for lighter moments, with just enough romance to appeal to young girls." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p16 Je 18 '50 150w

"Charming story for intermediate girls."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 19 '50 200w

"A new idea and a good story should make this book a successful one." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 33:50 N 11 '50 190w

MYERSON, ABRAHAM. Speaking of man. 279p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Man. Eugenics 50-14341

An American doctor and psychiatrist has written his credo, backed by half a century in his chosen field. There is a biographical sketch of Dr Myerson by his daughter-in-law. Bibliography of works of Abraham Myerson.

Booklist 47:155 D 15 '50

"'Speaking of Man' is a general book—of all mankind. It is also a specific book—of one life richly lived, now fully sharing via the printed word." W. N. Krogman
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 12 '50 360w

Kirkus 18:582 S 15 '50 130w

"No wonder Mr. Knopf urged and begged Dr. Myerson to write this book! It is stimulating and so useful in these days when the layman needs 'germs of hope' written with 'wit, wisdom and warm compassion.' . . General purchase and for the smallest library." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 75:1656 O 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by A. E. Cohn
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 3 '50 800w

"Reading Myerson's book is like participating in a lively and provocative conversation on man and his mysterious existence." Martin Gumpert
+ N Y Times p34 N 19 '50 460w

"Though it is not in any sense a perfectly finished piece of work, this book in its best parts reflects a wise man of fine-grained sensibilities, who, though probably more disenchanted with the human scene than most, made almost a religion out of intellectual honesty and his belief in the value of life."
+ New Yorker 26:169 D 9 '50 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 3 '50 370w

N

NABUCO, CAROLINA. Life of Joaquim Nabuco; tr. and ed. by Ronald Hilton; in collaboration with Lee B. Valentine [and others.] 373p $5 Stanford univ. press

B or 92 Nabuco, Joaquim 50-8549

Biography of the first Brazilian ambassador to the United States, written by his daughter, who is official hostess in the Brazilian embassy at Washington, where her brother serves as their father's successor. Index.

"She has written so detailed and footnoted a biography that it is practically a source book for 19th century Brazilian history." A. F.
+ Commonweal 53:214 D 1 '50 190w

"This biography is the work of Nabuco's daughter and has both the virtues and the weaknesses of a book written in filial devotion. One learns much about the father, but there is always the uneasy feeling that a less reverent handling of the material would have yielded a more robust portrait. The translation, a somewhat hurried work of collaboration, is competent but a bit pedestrian." Hubert Herring
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 D 3 '50 750w

"As this reviewer sees it, Miss Nabuco's account of her father's career, although curiously impersonal, reveals more about the real differences between Latin and North American customs, manners, values and culture than any other book he can recall." Duncan Aikman
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 6 '50 850w

"The first few chapters of this biography attempt to paint the scene and to prepare the reader for what is to follow; unfortunately they are slow-moving and pedantic. But once we plow through these early parts, the book begins to convey real meaning. Nabuco's letters and his diary form the best portions and they are so timely they might have been written today, instead of at the turn of the century." H. C.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 24 '50 300w

NACHMANSOHN, DAVID, ed. Metabolism and function; a collection of papers dedicated to Otto Meyerhof on the occasion of his 65th birthday. 348p il $7 Elsevier

612.0153 Metabolism. Meyerhof, Otto 50-4416

"This book . . . was originally published as Volume 4 of the Biochimica et Biophysica Acta. Aside from the introduction and the chapter by A. V. Hill, which includes a few personal remarks on the influence of Meyerhof's work on the development of Physiology and Biochemistry, the entire volume is given over to original papers written by students of Meyerhof or workers who have had close association with him or his work. Some of the papers are written in German or French but most of them carry a summary in each of the three languages. . . This book serves not only as a tribute to a great scientist but as a review of important new developments in metabolism and as an introduction to the work in progress in thirty or more of the leading laboratories in this field." Am Chem Soc J

"Seldom has one volume carried contributions from a more illustrious group of workers on cellular metabolism. . . For students of metabolism the book will be a necessary reference but even for those less well acquainted with physiology it will supply stimulating reading." C. A. Elvehjem
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:2821 Je '50 140w

"The book has no more than the usual quota of minor errors. However, those who are given to reading summaries in their favorite language would do well to check crucial points in the body of the paper. . . Like 'Perspectives,' this volume will provide inspiring reading for years to come." H. A. Lardy
+ — Chem & Eng N 28:1772 My 22 '50 350w

NADEAU, REMI A. Water seekers. 309p il map $3 Doubleday

627.1 Water supply—Southwest 50-8919

A history of South California's struggle to meet its increasing demands for water. Describes the long fight to gain control of the Owens Valley water rights, and the more recent water projects by which Los Angeles has sought to provide water for its millions of users. Bibliography. Index.

NADEAU, R. A.—Continued
Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 14 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:322 Je 1 '50 150w

"All in all an excellent account of a little known chapter in the history of California." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 75:1178 Jl '50 100w

"Although Mr. Nadeau presents his facts with admirable objectivity and every page reflects his desire to be fair, he nevertheless accepts the official Southern California position on almost every issue discussed. . . But Mr. Nadeau's assignment was to tell a story and not to solve a problem and he has told the story very well." Carey McWilliams
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 23 '50 1300w

"Mr. Nadeau, a young southern California historical writer, tells [his story] in sprightly detail and with admirable objectivity—all the facts, for the first time, correlated. Mr. Nadeau observes that while the quest for water is most acute in the Southwest, it has become nationwide in view of our growing population and increased industrialization." Gladwin Hill
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 30 '50 470w

Reviewed by Harold Gilliam
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 6 '50 750w

NAEVE, LOWELL, and WIECK, DAVID. Field of broken stones [with a pref. by Paul Goodman; 53 il. by L. Naeve]. 231p $3 Libertarian press, box A, Glen Gardner, N.J.

355.22 Prisons. Conscientious objectors

"Lowell Naeve spent almost five years in jail during World War II after destroying his draft card; but however little he fought overseas, he certainly helped make Danbury Federal Penitentiary a hot battlefront on home grounds. Some struggles were purely in his own behalf. . . Most of his struggles, however, were for fellow convicts. The author describes how he beat his steel locker, . . hung placards from his cell window, staged parades before the warden's office, time after time went on hunger-strikes, and underwent 144 days of solitary confinement—all this so that a mental patient would be released from his chains, or a man taken 'out of the hole,' or yard exercise permitted certain prisoners, or Jim Crow stopped in the Danbury mess hall." N Y Times

Booklist 47:113 N 15 '50

"Naeve refused to register for the draft because he did not believe 'in wars and killing people.' His reasoning is often as immature as the drawings that decorate his pages, but his story is interesting for two reasons. First, it gives us an inside look at some of the brutal practices that still are the shame of our prisons. Secondly, it shows how poorly we have succeeded in making clear that our government under law is the best guarantor of freedom society has devised." Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p5 Jl 11 '50 400w

"The story is told with surprising good nature. It is evident that there are no invented horrors. The author, a young artist, does not expend much wordage in telling what he thinks about the system. He describes its day-to-day workings and leaves it to the reader to decide what he thinks about it." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:893 Jl 26 '50 210w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham
New Repub 122:19 My 29 '50 650w

"Almost any kind of a reader will find 'A Field of Broken Stones' absorbing and agree that its author is one of the most courageous and likable human beings he has ever encountered. Nevertheless, this book is even more significant than its immediate subject matter. It is appallingly timely." Christopher Isherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 23 '50 950w

"The writing is generally not too moving, but Mr. Naeve's drawings are exceptionally good." Charles Spielberger
N Y Times p22 Je 4 '50 230w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 26:125 My 13 '50 650w

"Whatever one may think of Naeve's personal and social attitudes, his story is a fascinating one." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 33:35 Jl 22 '50 240w

NAFZIGER, RALPH OTTO, and WILKERSON, MARCUS MANLEY, eds. Introduction to journalism research. 142p $2.50 La. state univ. press

070.72 Research. Journalism 49-50325

A volume of articles by teachers and specialists designed "to stimulate interest in [various] aspects of research [and] to promote and to extend the application of sound research methods to the study and practice of journalism." Contents: History and journalism research, by M. M. Wilkerson; Research in legal problems of communications, by F. S. Siebert; Journalism research and statistics, by C. R. Bush; The questionnaire interview, by Earl English; Content analysis in mass communication, by Fay Day; The experimental method and communications, by C. L. Allen; Conclusion, by F. L. Mott. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"This is a book of questions rather than answers, trying to point out what would be profitable avenues of research for journalism students. The approach is somewhat more from the point of view of the sociologist than the newspaper man, but then it is a university publication" John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 29 '50 70w

Current Hist 18:99 F '50 50w

Social Studies 41:192 Ap '50 10w

NAGEL, CHARLES. American furniture, 1650-1850; a brief background and an illustrated history; with sixty-nine reproductions in color and monochrome and 18 drawings in line. (American crafts ser) 110p $2.95 Chanticleer

749.21 Antiques. Furniture 50-6204

A background history of American furniture covering the years 1650 to 1850. The book "does not deal with individual 'masterpieces' of American furniture nor with specialized and 'unique' pieces but discusses standard forms (tables, chairs, beds, etc.) in terms of their construction and the prevailing fashion." (Sat R of Lit) Brief bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:263 Ap 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '50

"Delightful pictures of chests and chairs, four-post beds, and work tables. Material on Charles Eastlake and John Belter should prove especially useful as information on the 'battle of styles.' . . Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 80w

"As a small, general guide to styles and changes in styles in America Charles Nagel has produced a genuinely helpful handbook for the beginner. . . By and large, Mr. Nagel gives the reader a clear picture of the whole room of both the wealthy and poor colonial as well as a fairly complete description of the 'makings' of the furniture, even to the woods used and décor applied. Unfortunately, the individual craftsmen and master cabinetmakers are only mentioned in passing." R. L. Howell
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:40 Jl 1 '50 320w

NAIMY, MIKHAIL. Kahlil Gibran: a biography; with a pref. by Martin L. Wolf. 267p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Gibran, Kahlil

"This book is an English translation of the biography in Arabic which was published at Beirut, Lebanon, in 1934, with a preface by Martin L. Wolf. The author, one of the closest associates of Kahlil Gibran, poet, artist and mystic, wrote the book in order to counteract the legends which grew up rapidly after Gibran's death in New York City in 1931. It contains many extracts from Gibran's writings." Library J

Booklist 47:114 N 15 '50

Reviewed by R. P. Breaden
Library J 75:1656 O 1 '50 120w

NAPOLEON I, emperor of the French. Memoirs; ed. by Somerset de Chair. 605p il maps $7.50 Harper

B or 92 France—History—Consulate and empire, 1789-1815 50-10376

While he was in exile on St Helena Napoleon dictated his memoirs to the members of his staff. "When the work was published, in 1823, it was a jumble of seven volumes that must have discouraged even the most avid Bonapartist. Mr. de Chair has rearranged it, cut out the longer irrelevancies, and presents a cogent story in one book." (New Yorker)

"Memoir literature is notoriously poor as a source of fact, particularly when it is written as a justification for greatness. As it stands, the initiated reader will use salt continuously. Despite this endemic weakness, the 'Memoirs' present an impressive picture of the workings of an amazing mind." R. M. Brace
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 15 '50 380w

"The book, as a source, is usable, but only with the utmost caution. Scholars, of course, will prefer the original text." Albert Guerard
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 N 12 '50 700w

"The style is clear and trenchant; the extent and diversity of his knowledge amazes one. His personal life, however, is scarcely alluded to. What emerges is the portrait of the conqueror, the dictator, the force that won a continent and lost it. Still, the personality is here. Hence the book exercises a fascination which the personality has always had, even over his most passionate detractors." Frances Winwar
+ N Y Times p21 O 8 '50 700w

"It is a great story, though hardly objective, for Napoleon dictated this history in more senses than one."
New Yorker 26:146 O 14 '50 220w
Time 56:108 O 23 '50 600w

NASH, BRADLEY DE LAMATER, and LYNDE, CORNELIUS. Hook in leviathan; with an introd. by Arthur Krock. 234p $3 Macmillan

353 U.S. Commission on organization of the executive branch of the government. U.S.—Executive departments 50-6744

"A critical interpretation of the Hoover Commission report." (Subtitle) "After brief summary of Commission's conclusions there follows a discussion of its findings concerning office of the president, integration of departments and agencies of federal government and the individual departments. Work is mainly a very readable digest of the Report of the Commission and its task forces, with some critical comment." (Library J) Index.

"This book can be strongly recommended to the general reader. It will not be helpful to the person who has read the Commission's reports. Some teachers will find it useful for assignment or suggested reading; others will prefer to use selected numbers of the Commission's reports." E. S. Redford
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:771 S '50 290w
Booklist 46:298 Je 1 '50

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 9 '50 400w
Foreign Affairs 29:151 O '50 10w

"A well-informed appraisal, in rather dull governmental prose, for a small audience."
Kirkus 18:84 F 1 '50 150w

"Strongly recommended for public and education libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:563 Ap 1 '50 100w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '50 550w

"Although the report, in full, ran to two million words, the Messrs. Nash and Lynde have succeeded in putting their brief in only two hundred and twenty-six pages, and have written it in clean, non-bureaucratic English. A very able job."
+ New Yorker 26:121 Ap 8 '50 130w

Reviewed by C. B. Coates
Pol Sci Q 65:284 Je '50 3450w

"'A Hook in Leviathan' is really two books in one. It is an objective explanation of the public housekeeping proposals recommended by the Hoover Commission. And it is a convincing explanation of the necessity for governmental efficiency if American policies, both internal and external, are to prove themselves." Charles Raudebaugh
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 16 '50 750w
Springf'd Republican p8D Ap 2 '50 120w

"It is, of course, understandable that in reducing the 3,400 pages of the reports of the Commission and its task forces to less than 250 pages, much had to be omitted. . . The chapter on the limitations of reorganization is a valuable one. . . The book will probably find most use among teachers, students of public administration, and well-informed general readers."
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:208 Je '50 210w

NASH, HENRY SYLVESTER. Atoning life [the presiding bishop's book for Lent]. 112p $1 Harper

232.3 Atonement 50-5313

A book on "the lines of approach to the Atonement," originally written in 1908 (Book Review Digest 1908). The author was a professor at the Episcopal theological school at Cambridge.

"[The book's] timelessness is no less amazing than the author's ability, in clean, forceful and simple language, to state the most profound truths. Blessedly free from certain complicated words that of recent years seem to have attached themselves to theological writings, it will be read with profit and appreciation by laity and clergy alike; it is neither technical nor sentimental." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 164:17 F 15 '50 250w

"This is a book to read and to ponder; it will make our own conviction stronger and clearer, and it will point the way towards significant Christian action." W. N. Pittenger
+ Crozer Q 27:172 Ap '50 400w

"It is essentially a preacher's book and not one that will be widely read by the laity. To be sure the message of the book is timeless, but it is not couched in a form or style which is apt to capture the attention of the layman."
Kirkus 18:54 F 1 '50 140w

NASH, OGDEN. Family reunion. 146p $2.50 Little

811 50-10762

A selection from Ogden Nash's verses, chosen from those of his twenty-years' output to make a book for the family.

Booklist 47:133 D 1 '50

"The poems in this book are drawn, with revisions, from ten previous books by Ogden Nash. They are prefaced by a foreword so disarming, so genuinely modest, and at the same time so penetrating and intelligent that the foreword itself is virtually a sufficient review of the book and in better prose than book reviews generally exhibit. One is tempted to quote Mr. Nash in full and let it go at that." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 10 '50 850w

"For anyone benighted enough not to possess a copy of Nash, this is a good one to begin the study of a poet whose themes sometimes clash with Eliot's. Those who have one, or two, even three (I've lost count) of his previous books, will find here, among old favorites, many that will become their new." Lloyd Frankenberg

NASH, OGDEN—Continued
+ N Y Times p4 N 19 '50 200w
New Yorker 26:172 D 9 '50 110w

NATHAN, MRS ADELE (GUTMAN). Building of the first transcontinental railroad; il. by Edward A. Wilson. (Landmark bk) 180p $1.50 Random house
50-10703

A history of the first continental railroad, written for young people. "The history that is in this book is mostly from the stories of different people, many of whom were on the spot when the Pacific railroad was built. Some of them were written by 'Old Timers'—eye witnesses—and were published in the magazines and records of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroad Companies. Some of them were printed in magazines and newspapers of the day." (p.viii)

Booklist 47:121 N 15 '50

"Excellent book. The difficulties of planning, financing, and building the road to the far west are set down with a realism that is refreshing and rings true." C. I. J.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 12 '50 150w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 120w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p6 N 12 '50 30w

New Yorker 26:190 D 2 '50 40w

"Out of deep love for the Iron Horse, and from a starry vantage point in the company of railroad enthusiasts, Adele Nathan approaches a perennially fascinating story with a viewpoint as fresh as today's Denver Zephyr."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 19 '50 350w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1949-50; a record and an interpretation. (V8) 289p $4 Knopf
792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)

The eighth annual report in the series on the New York theatre season. Index of plays.

Booklist 47:131 D 1 '50

"This is an immensely clever book, by an immensely clever man. Come to think of it, America ought to be proud of her dramatic critics." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 16 '50 180w

Kirkus 18:552 S 1 '50 120w

"Recommended for large theater collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 30w

Nation 171:662 D 16 '50 90w

"He is, this 'average' Mr. Nathan, probably the most durable thing in the American theatre. He has affected it profoundly, and always for the better. He continues to be (if he will pardon a word which used to be a fighting one) as constructive a force as has been exerted on the native drama." Richard Lockridge
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 24 '50 550w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p14 O 29 '50 460w

"He may be feeling his age, but he certainly doesn't show it. There is no visible softening of his prose; the violent and funny poke he takes at old-time vaudeville, for example, proves him immune to any trace of nostalgia, and he greets Christopher Fry almost as enthusiastically as he hailed Sean O'Casey many years ago."
+ New Yorker 26:166 N 4 '50 160w

"Irreverent and streamlined, Mr. Nathan's criticism is just about the most entertaining being written in English today." F. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 10 '50 200w

NATHAN, ROBERT. The green leaf. 185p $3 Knopf
811 50-7023

From his poetry of the last thirty years the author has selected the poems he "wishes most to have remembered."

Booklist 46:300 Je 1 '50
Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 30w

"The collective impact of that poetry by which Robert Nathan is willing to be remembered is rather unexpected, altho all of its elements have been foreshadowed in his novels. Of course, it is adroit poetry; Mr. Nathan is perhaps our master stylist, but it is something more than that. It has power and earthiness; it speaks boldly and plainly. The novels are like stained glass, richly colored with fantasy; the poems are plate glass, thru which the reader sees plainly." Russell MacFall
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 14 '50 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '50

"This is seldom great poetry—but it does not pretend to be. And the lack of pretentiousness, the simply understood emotions should rank it fairly high as well as make it popular."
+ Kirkus 18:90 F 1 '50 120w

"His poems, so often marked by lyrical grace, breed affection—they are companionable pieces with meanings which require no search." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 75:565 Ap 1 '50 140w

"A book wholly composed of masterpieces would be a monstrosity. Several pieces here are well this side of timelessness. The long narrative poem, 'Morning in Iowa,' fails to attain to general unity in spite of excellent parts." Robert Hillyer
+ — N Y Times p33 Ap 16 '50 380w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:113 My 20 '50 180w

Reviewed by L. T. Nicholl
Sat R of Lit 33:33 My 20 '50 440w

NATHAN, ROBERT. The married look. 195p $2.50 Knopf
50-13123

A fantasy in which a scientist, after twenty years of marriage, suddenly realizes that he has lost sight of his youth and his wife's. In an attempt to recall his Ruth's face he goes thru a period of reaching back into the past. The result is a happy one for both husband and wife.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 186:74 S '50 390w
Booklist 47:13 S 1 '50
Bookmark 10:8 O '50 30w

Reviewed by Mary Sandrock
Cath World 172:153 N '50 170w

"Nathan's style, so simple and beautiful that it assumes an almost poetic rhythm, is misleadingly guileless. This is not a book to be hastily read."
+ Chicago Sun p12 Ag 22 '50 240w

"Truly this is a good story to place alongside 'Portrait of Jennie.'" Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 27 '50 500w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '50 260w

Kirkus 18:340 Je 15 '50 140w

"A short book with a fine philosophy. Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 75:1293 Ag '50 50w

"'The Married Look' is one of Mr. Nathan's shorter, smaller yet wholly characteristic efforts—a pretty piece out of the fabric of his life's work as a novelist. Beautifully written, carefully sustained in tone, 'The Married Look' is at times wholly suffused with romance, at others, licked over lightly by it as by a lambent flame." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 20 '50 750w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p20 Ag 20 '50 350w

"This doesn't add up to a very stirring romance, to be sure, but it will undoubtedly induce in Mr. Nathan's followers the mildly lachrymose condition they seem to enjoy."
New Yorker 26:86 Ag 26 '50 110w

"Mr. Nathan is, I should say, at his tender best. Whimsical enough, stepping neatly over the line into fantasy and then back again at will, romantic in Mr. Nathan's own special sense, this is a short novel that will make its friends by the thousands." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 31 '50 700w

"Written with Mr. Nathan's usual cool, quiet precision, his customary thoughtfulness and compassion." Gouverneur Paulding
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 O 14 '50 600w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 S '50

NATIONAL PRESS PHOTOGRAPHERS ASSOCIATION. Complete book of press photography; ed. by Joseph Costa. 206p il $5 The association, 235 E. 45th st, N.Y. 17

778 Photography, Journalistic 50-10702

"Articles by photographers and editors present a working view of scope and techniques of photo-journalism. Illustrated with many photographs captioned and annotated with technical data. For students or those interested in the craft." Booklist

Booklist 47:112 N 15 '50

Reviewed by John Silence
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 8 '50 100w

"The photographs are excellent, as might be expected. The articles are written by men who are prominent in press photography, and many contain authentic practical information. Others—too many unfortunately—are too brief and like something whipped together quickly to fill an assignment." R. R. Hawkins
+ — Library J 75:1831 O 15 '50 130w

"The NPPA labored for two and a half years to produce their book, and the product is well worth the trouble, for it is a sure bet to become a bible in its field." D. O.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 22 '50 450w

NATIONAL RECREATION ASSOCIATION. Community sports and athletics. 500p $4 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 49-11312

"After presenting the history and objectives of sports the book stresses organization and administration of sports in all of their details. It also emphasizes various forms of competition and gives specific information on procedure. Part Five dealing with special program features offers a rich contribution as leadership is finding more and more that through special feature programs greater interest and finer values may develop." (Social Forces) Index.

"The National Recreation Association again has made an outstanding contribution to the recreation world in producing the book. . . There has long been a need for a publication of this type and recreation leadership will find the book of very practical service." H. D. M.
+ Social Forces 28:467 My '50 220w

"Recommended for all libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:14 Ja '50

NATIONAL SOCIETY OF COLLEGE TEACHERS OF EDUCATION. Improvement of practical intelligence. See Raup, R. B., and others

NEAL, HARRY EDWARD. Writing and selling fact and fiction. 192p $2 Funk, W.

808.3 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Short story 49-49303

A successful short story writer and teacher "offers solid and definite facts to the 'would be' literary lion. . . He delivers valuable advice to aspiring authors on how to sell their work, he analyzes material that has been sold, produces the magic formula and shows how to use it in three simple words—write, write, write." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography. Index.

"Plenty of good sound advice, here, done in breezy, slangy, informal style (which, somehow, seems wrong for the subject)."
+ — Kirkus 17:571 O 1 '49 120w

"The author's style is informal to a degree that may trouble some, but his ideas and his approach are easily understood, and they are all frankly presented with the idea of increasing the income of anyone interested in article or short story writing." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 5 '50 170w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
+ Springf'd Republican p3D F 12 '50 120w

NEAL, ROBERT MILLER. High green and the bark peelers; the story of engineman Henry A. Beaulieu and his Boston and Maine railroad. 275p $3.50 Duell

656 Beaulieu, Henry A. Boston and Maine railroad 50-9655

This book is all about a vacation a mid-West college professor spent visiting the Boston & Maine Railroad. Spurred on by a lifelong ambition to ride in a cab, helped out by a chance acquaintance with a B & M engineman, the author wangled an invitation from the B & M public relations man to do a book on this, one of his favorite roads. The book tells not only of riding in a cab but of viewing many of the other jobs of running a railroad.

"The book will tell you a great deal about the B & M and the men who make the wheels turn. . . I would carp at two things. One is the lack of pictures. . . Also, I think the chapter arrangement is too erratic. . . But I am indebted to him for one major piece of information. At last I know how curved track is laid." H. S. Hayward
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 23 '50 750w

"A fascinating subject though somewhat inexpertly handled, but informative enough for railroad enthusiasts."
+ Kirkus 18:405 Jl 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 130w

"I hope that a large number of B & M patrons will read Mr. Neal's book. It is a warm-hearted yet not blindly adoring story of an old Yankee institution that is doing its best, which is apparently good enough, to survive in an age which the loud heralds of 'Progress' assure us has made all railroads obsolete. The B & M doesn't take any stock in such prophecy, and I am happy that Mr. Neal has given such eloquent notice of the road's means and methods of survival. The only unfortunate thing about this book is its fantastically ill-chosen title." Stewart Holbrook
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 24 '50 450w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer
N Y Times p43 O 15 '50 320w

"The great and predominant merit of Mr. Neal's book is that it escapes completely the category of the corporate biography inspired by the advertising department which has been written about many railroads in recent years. By avoiding this snare Mr. Neal automatically places himself among the honest railroad historians such as Stewart Holbrook and Alvin Harlow even if his product is by no means in their class of scholarship." Lucius Beebe
+ Sat R of Lit 33:22 O 28 '50 850w

"A vastly entertaining and informative book." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p5C S 24 '50 500w

NEALE, JOHN ERNEST. Elizabethan House of commons. 455p il $5 Yale univ. press

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament. House of commons. Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603 50-5593

A picture of the English House of Commons during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. "The author draws vivid pictures of the old county families and their peregrinations after seats. Their names are as familiar today as they were then. The evolution of the boroughs, their types and patrons and the election methods, the fine quality of the House and its procedure, together constitute a picture of the social life of the day." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"It is a pleasure to review a book like this, a book so learned, so informative, so ably constructed, so gracefully written. Mr. Neale, long the leading authority on the Elizabethan House of Commons, has produced a work of major historical importance that will remain a classic in its field and a model of readable scholarship." D. H. Willson

+ Am Hist R 55:885 Jl '50 550w

Am Pol Sci R 44:508 Je '50 30w

"Here is a book which everybody can read with interest. It is one of those not too numerous studies which add a great deal to our knowledge of a limited period, without losing literary distinction and a universal appeal." B. Wilkinson

+ Ann Am Acad 270:186 Jl '50 500w

"Professor Neale's long awaited Elizabethan House of Commons is undoubtedly one of the most important works to have appeared in the field of English history for some time. The author's reputation as an authority on this subject has been long established in academic circles by his numerous articles and papers published over the last quarter century, while to a wider public his name is famous as that of the author of the best biography of Queen Elizabeth. The present work will have appeal more to the serious student of history, but it by no means lacks the magic touch that made the biography so readable. . . The book is enhanced by three illustrations and a folding map showing the residence of members sitting for parliamentary boroughs in 1584. Copious references throughout indicate the author's wide range of sources, but some readers would have liked to find a fuller discussion of the source materials than is contained in the very brief note on the subject." J. B. Conacher

+ — Canadian Hist R 31:71 Mr '50 1100w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 10 '50 600w

Current Hist 18:356 Je '50 30w

"Professor Neale has produced a convincing and illuminating story that will not be superseded for many years, drawing especially on Star Chamber reports and the theses of earnest young students whom he has supervised. There is no bibliography, but the footnotes are adequate for scholars, if incomprehensible to the many." Maurice Ashley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '49 450w

"Professor Neale has an eye for the picturesque; and he has the gift of dramatic narration in a high degree. The result is an indispensable work, of which one can only complain that, published without its successor, which is to fill this framework with the exciting tapestry of parliamentary history and constitutional struggle, it has a certain static character, the appearance, as it were, of being painted with a flat brush. But it is always interesting and illuminating." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:518 N 5 '49 1050w

Reviewed by Caroline Robbins

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 17 '50 1150w

"Readers of that scholarly yet exciting life of Queen Elizabeth by the Astor Professor of English History in the University of London will look forward to this latest work in the field in which he is an authority. If they find it less exciting than his former volume it is because the theme does not offer the same opportunities for drama inherent in the life of the remarkable woman who dominated her age. . . Politics was never a clean game; for those who want to know to what lengths politicians of even a great and a glorious age could go, this study is an eye-opener." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p33 F 19 '50 230w

Reviewed by J. H. Hexter

+ Pol Sci Q 65:469 S '50 650w

Sat R of Lit 33:51 My 6 '50 230w

"Students of Parliament of all ages, and especially those who have read Professor Neale's Queen Elizabeth, must have looked forward eagerly to this book since its first advertisement. They will not be disappointed. This is a wine which Professor Neale has blended and refined from his experience of a life-time spent in the Elizabethan vineyard. It carries all the qualities which wide knowledge and fine scholarship can give it." Strathearn Gordon

+ Spec 183:470 O 7 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 21 '49 6400w

NEARING, HELEN KOTHE (MRS SCOTT NEARING), and NEARING, SCOTT. Maple sugar book; with decorations from old prints. 271p $3.75 Day

633.64 Maple sugar. Country life 50-6156

"A plain practical account of the art of sugaring designed to promote an acquaintance with the ancient as well as the modern practice, together with remarks on pioneering as a way of living in the twentieth century." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:271 My 1 '50

"It is a cheering book in gloomy times. There's a springtime lift in the cry, 'Sap's running.' To produce maple sirup and sugar is a wholesome thing. So is it to have produced this book." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 12 '50 450w

"The only fault I found with this book is the lack of a diagram to make clear the system of piping used by the Nearings. Their prose is clear enough, but even an ex-sugar-maker had great difficulty in getting the pipes straight—if he did. A popular yet authentic book on maple sugar has been needed, and this is it." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 12 '50 850w

"Finality is not the sole virtue of the Nearings' book. It is scholarly, in the best sense of a generally reader-repelling word, the result not only of long personal experience but also of daunting and omnivorous research, and it is well documented. Besides all this, 'The Maple Sugar Book' is instructive, quietly inspiring and written with simplicity and apparent ease and, needless to say, a joy to read." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 5 '50 600w

New Yorker 26:123 Ap 8 '50 120w

"Apart from its value as a practical guide, this altogether admirable treatise should serve as a model of how to do a how-to book." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 Mr 11 '50 700w

Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 12 '50 600w

"The account is notable for its completeness, its meticulous documentation when historical matters are involved, and the direct presentation. Particularly interesting is the way the authors supplement and give background to their own experiences with records and writings of early travelers and agriculturists, some dating from the seventeenth century, thus making the account a literary as well as expository exercise."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:220 Je '50 220w

NEF, JOHN ULRIC. War and human progress; an essay on the rise of industrial civilization. 464p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

901 War and civilization. Industry—History. Civilization 50-10527

"Described as a synthesis of industrial, cultural, and military history, this sweeping study by Dr. Nef of the University of Chicago traces the relation of war to commerce, art, the industrial revolution, and the ambitions and passions of men. It is more factual than theoretical, which only makes it more absorbing reading." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 53:178 N 24 '50 1400w

"This is a notable book on a subject of supreme importance to all mankind." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:2001 N 15 '50 100w

"Mr. Nef has made a rare combination of what the profession calls 'economic history' and 'intellectual history,' a combination which results, quite obviously, in an enrichment for history pure and simple. He has the historian's gift for picking the concrete, representative, illuminating detail." Crane Brinton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 24 '50 850w

"Mr. Nef's conclusions are unequivocal. Far from aiding or stimulating technical or industrial progress, warfare generally has had a crippling and retarding influence. . . To a layman like the present reviewer, these conclusions seem more applicable, in the matter of scientific progress, to earlier periods of history than to the present time. . . Also, one feels that he is unduly enamored of the glories and advantages of civilization in the eighteenth century. . . Yet these are, admittedly, minor flaws in a historical analysis of lasting value." Grayson Kirk
+ — N Y Times p3 D 10 '50 800w

School & Society 72:399 D 16 '50 30w

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL. Independence and after; a collection of speeches, 1946-1949. Am ed 403p $3 Day

954 India—Politics and government 50-8463

The volume consists of 59 speeches divided into the following topical groups: On Independence, On Mahatma Gandhi, On Communalism, On Kashmir, On Hyderabad, On Education, On Industry, On India's Foreign Policy, India and the Commonwealth, India and the World, and Miscellaneous.

Booklist 46:351 Jl 15 '50

Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 30:211 D '50 420w

Reviewed by P. M. Buck
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 16 '50 450w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 19 '50 380w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 40w

"In lucid, eloquent style, they convey a vivid picture of Nehru's personality as a nationalist political leader, and show effectively the Indian point of view on questions common to most countries in the world. This is a picture of India from the top, looking down at the many problems yet to be solved. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:1178 Jl '50 120w

"Mr. Nehru is not a rhetorical virtuoso like Winston Churchill. As a rule he speaks extemporaneously and relies very little upon oratorical devices or embellishments of language. But neither is he too matter-of-fact or pedestrian to arouse the imagination. He possesses a mind which is sensitive and literate far beyond what we are accustomed to find in men of great power, and it is for this reason, plus the unmistakable accent of sincerity when the heart itself speaks, that his addresses on all these subjects are worth careful reading." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 9 '50 1350w

Reviewed by Robert Trumbull
N Y Times p1 Jl 9 '50 2050w

New Yorker 26:75 Ag 12 '50 140w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 23 '50 600w

"Both the orthodox left and the orthodox right will be made uncomfortable by Jawaharlal Nehru's latest book to reach America. . . The new collection of speeches should swiftly take its place on that same shelf of classics containing Nehru's earlier books. For, as in the case of so much of his previous writing, it includes both indispensable historical record and eloquent exposition of the ideas of perhaps the most fearless and civilized practising political philosopher of our day." Dorothy Norman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 Jl 22 '50 1500w

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL. Visit to America. 182p il $2.50 Day

308.1 India—Politics and government 50-7675

A collection of the speeches made by Nehru on his recent visit to the United States and Canada. Some of the speeches were prepared, but others were extemporary. In nearly all of them he discussed the problems of India or of Asia in general.

Booklist 46:285 My 15 '50

Reviewed by Mildred Fahrni
Canadian Forum 30:119 Ag '50 350w

Chicago Sun p5 Je 20 '50 90w

Foreign Affairs 29:160 O '50 20w

"A worthwhile record of how one world leader feels. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:558 Ap 1 '50 140w

"Most of the speeches were delivered extemporaneously. They do not make what is popularly regarded as 'exciting' reading, but 'in their conversational passages there is much quiet wisdom." A. T. Steele
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 4 '50 550w

"A reader who takes the trouble to go on through this slim volume will be well rewarded. You get the essence of a lifetime of thought and experience applied to the problems of India and Asia. The great message that Nehru brought and the one that he kept hammering upon in almost every speech was the 'renaissance of Asia.'" H. L. Matthews
+ N Y Times p4 My 7 '50 650w

New Yorker 26:111 My 27 '50 140w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 25 '50 250w

NEHRU, KRISHNA. See Hutheesing, K. N.

NEIDER, CHARLES, ed. Great short stories from the world's literature. 502p $3.50; college ed $1.75 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 50-5394

"Forty-five stories from various modern languages, many of them anthology favorites, but some new to such collections: Proust, Gide, Saint Exupery, with others by Sartre, Silone, Svevo and Sholom Aleichem." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The book has most definitely a 'looking back' quality: of the forty-five writers represented only nine are living, while a full sixteen had expired even before the beginning of this century. Within these limits the book is an interesting collection, most useful to those whose reading and collecting in the short story field has been limited." Hyperbole Prat
+ — Canadian Forum 30:164 O '50 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 9 '50 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 14 '50 70w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ap 29 '50 180w

NEILL, HUMPHREY BANCROFT. Inside story of the stock exchange; a fascinating saga of the world's greatest money market place. 345p $6 Forbes

332.61 Stock exchange 50-8037

"A popularly written story of the New York Stock Exchange, its origin and development, and how it has carried out its role in the financing of American business. Colorful plungers, booms and busts, how the market has reacted to events. . . The author is a former trader, investment counsellor, author of several books and issuer of the bi-weekly 'Neill Letters of Contrary Opinions.'" (Library J) Index.

Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 20w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 16 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:985 Je 1 '50 80w

NELSON, BENJAMIN N. Idea of usury, from tribal brotherhood to universal otherhood. (History of ideas ser) 258p $3 Princeton univ. press

332.83 Interest and usury 50-5223

"An interesting dissertation on the topic based on the Deuteronomic injunction against usury among brothers, but not among strangers. Professor Nelson (Minnesota), traces the ethical evolution of civilization through its attitude toward this problem, reviewing arguments of saints, religious leaders and others, pro and con." Current Hist

Reviewed by F. L. Baumer
+ Am Hist R 55:884 Jl '50 480w

Am Soc R 15:326 Ap '50 230w

"Here we have an American scholar with a real mastery of foreign languages and a firm grasp of a remote subject. In a sense he deals with the history of usury differently than it has hitherto been treated, and his ethical point of view is most interesting. . . The whole book is written with great moral earnestness and a rare knowledge of Catholic and Protestant sources; it contains a unique bibliography of fifty-six pages. . . No Catholic college should fail to possess this informative book." Erik von Kuehnelt-Leddihn
+ Cath World 171:398 Ag '50 260w

Current Hist 18:166 Mr '50 50w

"This excellent monograph traces with great skill and sensitivity the career of the famous passage of Deuteronomy 23:19-20, which prohibits the taking of interest from one's brothers but permits such taking from strangers." Alan Gewirth
+ Ethics 61:83 O '50 1150w

"Mr. Nelson is writing intellectual, not social nor economic history. As such his study is a model. It is based upon what looks like an exhaustive analysis of hundreds of texts and yet the author never gets lost in their detail. He has read not only all the primary sources—at any rate it would be difficult to imagine any that he has not read—but has also modestly gone through a great number of dissertations on these primary sources. It is rare that a reviewer has the pleasure of reading so rewarding a book." G. B.
+ J Philos 47:452 Jl 20 '50 240w

"Whether the grand argument, viz., that the demise of Deuteronomy at the hands of Calvin accounts for the rise of the modern ethic, can be sustained is at least debatable. But the author has built a strong case and has added a very significant book to the discussion of this problem." S. E. Stumpf
J Religion 30:284 O '50 450w

"Professor Nelson has done an exceedingly thorough piece of work. The general reader may well be discouraged by the 345 footnotes, many of them extended. If he can steel himself against reading these, he will find that the text proper is a most interesting exposition."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:166 Je '50 240w

NELSON, C. S. and STUFFLEBEAM, GEORGE TEELE, eds. Traffic dictionary; a handbook of domestic and foreign trade and transportation terms, phrases and abbreviations; 4th ed, enl. and rev. by George T. Stufflebeam. 292p $3.75 Simmons-Boardman

380.3 Transportation—Dictionaries 50-8273

"A practical handbook for anyone concerned with traffic or transportation, domestic or foreign. It contains definitions of more than 1800 everyday traffic terms, 1200 vital abbreviations, 1000 names and reporting code marks of every North American railroad, private car lines, steamship lines. In this enlarged revised fourth edition, the author has included a wealth of new, up-to-date material." Special Libraries

Booklist 46:356 Jl 15 '50
Special Libraries 41:259 S '50 70w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Dead giveaway. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

50-5425

Detective story.

"Light, unpretentious and like the best of its predecessors mild and ingratiating, partly for the pleasant and credible Steve and partly because his author sketches cast and setting with deft assurance and a neatly managed narrative." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p5 F 24 '50 60w

"Entertaining frolic with police as well as murder suspects in wacky roles."
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 19 '50 60w

Kirkus 17:680 D 15 '49 70w

"There's an orthodox puzzle in Nelson's book, but he makes the San Francisco police sound like a small town constabulary, and that's a premise which seems highly doubtful."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 Ap 2 '50 130w

"Mr. Nelson has built his plot neatly and he writes smoothly and with some humor. However, the victim so richly deserves his fate and the suspects all look so guilty that it is hard to care." Hillis Mills
N Y Times p25 Mr 12 '50 150w

"High grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 F 18 '50 40w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Murder comes high. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

50-9376

Mystery story.

"Routine, without much suspense or excitement."
Kirkus 18:372 Jl 1 '50 60w

"An involved plot, but the interest is carried by good characterizations and intelligent talk."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 8 '50 170w

"This one, except for its Colorado mountain settings, is completely drab. A routine murder, involving people whose characters and motivations are never wholly clear is solved without ingenuity or credibility. A nice exemplar of the hack machine-made mystery novel, irritating because its author has shown he can do much better." A. B.
— N Y Times p40 O 15 '50 110w

"Good detail and a rapid style don't keep this story from seeming two-dimensional; too much talk, maybe and not enough feeling." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 8 '50 190w

NELSON, LEONARD. Socratic method and critical philosophy; selected essays; tr. by Thomas K. Brown III; foreword by Brand Blanshard; introd. by Julius Kraft. 211p $3.75 Yale univ. press

193.9 Philosophy 49-7660

"A volume of essays by a German philosopher with an English-sounding name which clarifies a basic philosophical issue. At the base of all intellectual reasoning, Nelson declares, there is an immediate knowledge which is derived from nothing else; and if this is overlooked, a 'logical dogmatism' arises. Leonard Nelson (1882-1927) was Professor of Philosophy at the University of Göttingen; and his philosophical position was largely built on the philosophy of Jakob Friedrich Fries (1773-1843) in whom Nelson tried to arouse renewed interest. Nelson himself showed much courage in promoting a universal political outlook in Germany at a time when such tendencies had become unpopular; he passed on before Hitler came to power, but none of his pupils who remained in Germany compromised with the Nazis." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by H. W. Steiger
Christian Science Monitor p11 F 2 '50 1100w

Reviewed by F. H. Heinemann
Hibbert J 48:395 Jl '50 120w

"Professor Kraft, a former student of Nelson, has written an informative and useful Introduction, which helps the reader to appreciate his teacher's singular position in pre-Hitler Germany." E. N.
+ J Philos 47:722 N 23 '50 800w

School & Society 69:182 Mr 5 '49 50w

NEMEROV, HOWARD. Guide to the ruins; poems. 54p $2.50 Random house 811 50-7311

"Second volume of poems, selected from those written after the appearance of Nemerov's novel, The Melodramatists. . . To use the poet's own line, these poems seem to evince a 'sarcastic triumph of the mind,' in the hard rational fixation on symbols and attitudes concerned with decay." Kirkus

Kirkus 18:224 Ap 1 '50 110w

"Like his first volume of poems, 'The Image and the Law,' and his novel, 'The Melodramatists,' Howard Nemerov's latest book is the work of an original and sensitive mind, alive to the thousand anxieties and agonies of our age. Unlike his earlier work, however, these poems are not marred, in the main, by an intrusive verbal cleverness." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p12 My 21 '50 190w

"Among the forty poems in Mr. Nemerov's second book there are several kinds. They are written in formal or near-formal verse, and are concerned chiefly with the contemporary scene, 'the ruins' of a post-war world. In the absence of many positive qualities, their striking characteristic is chiefly their conventionality. They employ conventions of tone, meter, and attitude." Arvid Shulenberger
Poetry 76:368 S '50 550w

"That Mr. Nemerov has an instinct for perfection is quite apparent in his war lyrics. These are organically sustained. . . But [he] suffers from a dichotomy in personality. He must be modern and his modernity consists also of a studied carelessness in expression. . . It is incredible that a skilful poet would knowingly obtrude such haphazard writing on the public. In the name of modernity, it is done by design. Had Mr. Nemerov rewritten his poorly-made poems 'Guide to the Ruins' would have been an excellent book." I. L. Salomon
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:33 Jl 1 '50 330w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:287 S '50 210w

NESBITT, ALEXANDER. Lettering. 300p il $6 Prentice-Hall
745.6 Lettering 50-13108

"The history and technique of lettering as design." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:92 N 1 '50

"After tracing accurately and concisely the history of letters, this attractive quarto provides a practical course in lettering and poster design. Fine illustrations."
+ Bookmark 10:6 O '50 30w

"A tremendous amount of research and art work has gone into this study and it may well become the last word in books of this kind for years to come. Students and professionals in art, design, advertising and the kindred crafts will find this volume most interesting, helpful and profitable and no doubt will marvel at the precise and deft plates executed by the author, who proves himself a true craftsman in lettering." Gary Sheahan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 22 '50 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p35 D 10 '50 100w

NETTL, PAUL. The other Casanova; a contribution to eighteenth-century music and manners. 293p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.
780.94 Casanova de Seingalt, Giacomo Girolamo. Eighteenth century. Music—History and criticism 50-7642

"Casanova's place in the artistic life of his times, his friendships and patronage of various dancers, actors, singers and composers, among them Da Ponte, Mozart's librettist. (Publishers' Weekly) Bibliography. Index.

Chicago Sun p22 Ap 23 '50 20w

"The style of the book is difficult to follow and the translation into English in many places faulty." H. E. Bush
— Library J 75:868 My 15 '50 110w

"Subtitled 'A Contribution to Eighteenth-Century Music and Manners,' this strained and singular book is not a serious study of Casanova, who, indeed is absent altogether from more than half of its length. A translation, and couched in reasonably good English, it nevertheless reads bumpily and produces the most scattered and inconclusive of effects. . . 'The Other Casanova' contains pieces of splintered information that might be difficult to locate elsewhere, but unfortunately they are presented in so confused a manner as to remain scarcely more than hints to be confirmed in source material." Herbert Weinstock
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Je 11 '50 270w

Reviewed by H. E. Jacob
N Y Times p23 Ag 20 '50 230w

"A book which contributes much to a deeper insight into a period and one of its most legendary personalities." C. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 27 '50 300w

NEUMANN, WILLIAM LOUIS. Making the peace, 1941-1945; the diplomacy of the wartime conferences. 101p pa $1 Foundation for foreign affairs, 1136 18th st, NW. Washington 6, D.C.
940.532 World war, 1939-1945—Peace. World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history 50-5702

"Making use of documentary materials generally available and of the memoirs of leading political figures, [the author] has attempted to reconstruct the course of negotiations between the three major Allied powers during the period from August, 1941 the (Atlantic Conference), to February, 1945 (Yalta)." Am Hist R

"The author of this little book has rendered a very useful service to all who may be interested in the background of the peace that has thus far failed to materialize. . . The summary account which he presents of necessity omits much detail but is done with complete objectivity and good judgment. It is useful reading for anyone who wants to know more about how the world came to be involved in the mess in which it now finds itself." L. M. Goodrich
+ Am Hist R 56:168 O '50 320w

Am Pol Sci R 44:510 Je '50 20w

"From the opening page discussion is provocative. . . The entire work is the profoundly depressing picture of high tragedy." L. M. Sears
Ann Am Acad 271:186 S '50 410w

NEVILLE, MARGOT, pseud. of MARGOT GOYDER and NEVILLE (GOYDER) JOSKE. Murder of a nymph. 223p $2.25 Doubleday 50-5551

Detective story.

Booklist 46:233 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p5 F 24 '50 30w

"Fascinating police work saves tale from doldrums of boring nonchalance and monotonous drinking of insipid set of characters." Drexel Drake
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 5 '50 70w

Kirkus 17:662 D 1 '49 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 19 '50 130w

"With this book, Margot Neville joins the ranks of solid writers in the mystery field." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p14 F 12 '50 130w

"Well plotted and entertainingly written, and, except for the homicide, an attractive picture of Australians at play."
+ New Yorker 25:96 F 4 '50 130w

Sat R of Lit 33:45 Ap 8 '50 40w

NEVIN, MRS EVELYN C. Underground escape. 191p il $2.50 Presbyterian bd. 49-10637

"A runaway slave, a boy who was loyal to a friend, a dauntless member of the Underground Railway and a glimpse of both sides of the abolition cause—these are the features of this story of the eighteen-sixties. When Meshach is seized in Boston by his Southern master, Danny realizes what it means for one man to own another. His first thought is to free his friend, and this idea goes with him to Kansas and later to Savannah." Horn Bk

"With touches of humor, understanding of boy nature and a good perspective, Mrs. Nevin tells a realistic story of events in the years just preceding the Emancipation Proclamation. Danny is ten years old when the story opens, but his experiences will be enjoyed by older readers." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 26:106 Mr '50 120w

"Good enough story, though not tops, with a new angle on the period."
+ Kirkus 17:512 S 15 '49 130w

"Recommended for junior high up." C. W. Field
+ Library J 75:502 Mr 15 '50 70w

NEVINS, ALLAN. Emergence of Lincoln. 2v 472; 524p maps $12.50 Scribner

973.6 U.S. History—1815-1861. U.S.—History—Civil war—Causes 50-9920

Altho these two volumes are complete in themselves, they are a continuation of the author's two previous volumes entitled Ordeal of the Union (Book Review Digest 1947). They cover the four years preceding Lincoln's election. Annotated bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:53; 73 O 1 '50; O 15 '50

"When writing about a Nevins' book, I never seem to retain the cold objectivity and calculated indifference which mark sofisticated, sparkling criticism. For me, Allan Nevins is a fine writer, with a lilt to his prose and the breath of life in his characters, as well as a thoroly sound scholar. All of his works have been extremely significant, for they are illustrative of the highest degree of American scholarship at its most lucid. . . These two volumes seem to me to be a real bookreader's bargain." R. J. Graf
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 15 '50 650w

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
Christian Science Monitor p7 O 14 '50 1600w

Kirkus 18:576 S 15 '50 240w

"An annotated bibliography and a good index make these authoritative and well-written volumes welcome to librarians." J. G. Tobin
+ Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 320w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin
Nation 171:512 D 2 '50 900w

"Mr. Nevins, with apt allusion, sometimes with deadly parallels and modern instances, has presented the unsparing record. For our own generation, to which it seems specifically directed, this successful and enlivened evocation of another crisis is at once convincing, sobering and definitive." D. C. Mearns
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 15 '50 1000w

"A tremendous amount of detailed research has been presented with the skill that makes the name Allan Nevins synonymous with history at its best. The story has been told many times but never with such penetration and completeness. Moreover, the author knows that so-called objectivity is as subjective as can be. He appraises his characters in their situations as he sees them and frankly judges their capacities." Jay Monaghan
+ N Y Times p1 O 15 '50 1750w

New Yorker 26:138 O 21 '50 150w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 5 '50 1200w

"The progress of Mr. Nevins volume by volume is impressively sustained. Scholarly accessories (maps, charts, illustrations, tables, informative appendices, and bibliography) are well handled. The style, always invitingly readable, abounds in passages of pictorial description; brisk narrative, and dramatic portrayal." J. G. Randall
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 O 14 '50 1350w

NEVINS, ALLAN. New deal and world affairs. (Chronicles of America ser) 332p il textbk ed $2.25; subs ed $6 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 50-8828

A history of foreign relations under the New Deal, from 1933 to 1945. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Powers
Atlantic 186:78 O '50 90w

Booklist 47:35 S 15 '50

"Good, clear-cut, intelligible diplomatic history, written from a standpoint which is approximately that of the Roosevelt administration." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:1201 O 11 '50 250w

"Although The New Deal and World Affairs contains nothing startling in the way of new historical interpretation, it is an eminently competent, fair, and intelligent evaluation of the hectic 1933 to 1945 period." R. H. Boyle
+ Commonweal 52:611 S 29 '50 700w

Current Hist 19:165 S '50 20w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 171:271 S 23 '50 270w

Reviewed by Karl Schriftgiesser
N Y Times p7 S 10 '50 270w

Reviewed by Harvey Wish
Sat R of Lit 33:21 N 18 '50 380w

NEVINS, ALLAN. The United States in a chaotic world. (Chronicles of America ser) 252p il textbk ed $2.25; subs ed $6 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 50-8829

This volume in the Chronicles of America series is concerned with American participation in world affairs during the years 1918 to 1933, when diplomacy was involved in dealing with the consequences of World war I. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Powers
+ Atlantic 186:78 O '50 90w
Booklist 47:35 S 15 '50
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 67:1201 O 11 '50 250w
Current Hist 19:165 S '50 20w
Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 70w
Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 171:271 S 23 '50 270w

"In his succinct 'The United States in a Chaotic World' [Mr. Nevins] corrects many popular misconceptions about our relations with the rest of the world. . . Each [of this series] is well illustrated. Together they form an accurate, thrilling account of the tumultuous years through which most of us have lived, throwing the events and the personalities we have known into the perspective of history. They seem none the less disturbing, and inspiring, for that." Karl Schriftgiesser
+ N Y Times p7 S 10 '50 270w
Reviewed by Harvey Wish
Sat R of Lit 33:21 N 18 '50 380w

NEW Federalist, by Publius II: Owen J. Roberts, John F. Schmidt and Clarence K. Streit. 109p $1.50 Harper

341.1 Federal government. International federation 50-8732

"The New Federalist seeks to fill a growing need resulting from the rapid rise of the movement for international federal union, whether on an Atlantic, a European, or a world scale. It aims to clarify basic federal prinicples, to distinguish a federal democracy from a unified democracy and from a league or alliance, to call attention to neglected features of federalism which events have made important now . . . The articles were [first] published monthly in the magazine Freedom & Union, of Washington, D.C., between October 1946 and February 1949. . . In this collection the individual contributions are identified." Editor's foreword

---

Am Pol Sci R 44:1056 D '50 20w
Current Hist 19:290 N '50 70w

"While many doubts can be raised, and omissions pointed out, everybody should become acquainted with concept of Atlantic Union as only thus can one arrive at a rational judgment. Recommended." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 130w
Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 123:29 S 25 '50 470w

"The authors, in putting out this small volume, are apologetic in comparing it with the original American Federalist. They need not be, for though they may not command the towering genius of a Hamilton or a Madison, they are dealing with a subject of even more importance to the world than the formation of 'a more perfect union' on the North American Continent. Whatever the prospects for their plan or whatever flaws and unrealities may be detected in it, it is a high-minded enterprise, intelligently planned." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 9 '50 650w
Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 5 '50 1000w

"The writers are particularly well qualified to discuss this subject, since Mr. Roberts is a former justice of the U. S. Supreme Court; Mr. Schmidt an outstanding student of federal union principles, and Mr. Streit the author of Union Now, one of the most thought-provoking books of recent years." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 240w

NEW junior classics; ed. by Mabel Williams and Marcia Dalphin; with introd. by William Allan Neilson; introd. to first ed. by Charles W. Eliot; with over 1000 il in color. de luxe ed 10v $52 Collier

808.8 49-6417

"The New Junior Classics is substantially the same as the 1938 edition in content. . . Some stories have been shortened but none were found that had been rewritten, a fact which was also true of the 1938 edition. Ten stories have been dropped from the 1949 edition and 16 have been added. . . Volume 10, Poetry, Reading Guide, Indexes, contains the same selection of poetry found in the 1938 edition. The thirty-page Reading Guide includes a summary of the type of work found in each volume. Lists of selections which appear in The New Junior Classics and other books for further reading follow this explanatory digest. Separate author and title indexes and an alphabetically arranged list of artists giving brief characterizations follow the Guide. The Reading Guide and Indexes have been brought up to date to include the new authors, illustrators, and titles represented in this edition." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The addition of 16 new stories and the deletion of ten old ones helps to modernize the collection for older boys and girls. Many children's librarians will feel that other newer authors could have been substituted for Eliza Orne White, Lucy Fitch Perkins, and Ralph Henry Barbour. The bulk of the selections are of very high quality, however, and it is felt that a sound selection of children's literature has been made in the set. Selection seems to have been made principally for the child age eight to twelve and over-all for the child six to fifteen years of age. . . Older children usually prefer to read, and most librarians usually prefer to have them read, the original editions rather than selections appearing in sets of uniform volumes. The collection is recommended for the home in which a well-edited set of books introducing the best literature for children is desired."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 21:25 Ap '50 800w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). T-Bone, the baby-sitter; story and pictures. [30p] $1.75 Harper

Cats—Legends and stories 50-9922

T-Bone was a large, lazy cat who was an excellent baby-sitter when he was calm. But one day he awoke feeling skittish and what happened then led to temporary exile. But the poor baby was so sad that T-Bone was summoned back, and the baby's first word was "Kitty."

Booklist 47:81 O 15 '50

"A book of great charm, with Mrs. Newberry's invariably entrancing pictures." Marcia Winn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 60w
Reviewed by A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 26:456 N '50 50w
+ Horn Bk 26:466 N '50 80w
Kirkus 18:350 Jl 1 '50 70w

"The story and pictures by Mrs. Newberry about her own little girl and her cat T-Bone make this a must for Newberry-lovers. . . Recommended." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 75:2018 N 15 '50 80w
Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 N 12 '50 90w

"T-Bone asleep in various spots is not the model some of the cats in Clare Newberry's previous books have been, but T-Bone awake is all cat and a good companion for his predecessors." A. N. F.
N Y Times p35 N 12 '50 140w

"The large charcoal drawings, with their soft flush of rose—especially those showing T-Bone chewing up a pink feather hat to the baby's delight—are among Mrs. Newberry's very best."
+ New Yorker 26:174 D 2 '50 70w

NEWBY, PERCY HOWARD. Maria Edgeworth. (English novelists ser) 98p $2 Swallow, A.

B or 92 Edgeworth, Maria 50-8858

A biographical and critical study of Maria Edgeworth, which stresses the importance to her writings of her didactic father, Richard Lovell Edgeworth. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:77 O 15 '50

NEWBY, P. H.—Continued

Manchester Guardian p4 My 9 '50 200w

Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 171:232 S 9 '50 340w

"Mr. P. H. Newby pays constructive attention to Maria Edgeworth's quality as a writer, presenting her less as a female phenomenon than as a novelist who inspired Scott and influenced Turgenev, and who has still, even in these neglectful days, a most fresh and racy flavour." Margaret Lane
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:554 My 13 '50 130w

"The warmth of Mr. Newby's appreciation, and still more his well-chosen quotations, make one want to read more Edgeworth." Lillian De La Torre
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 6 '50 300w

Reviewed by James Gray
Sat R of Lit 33:32 O 28 '50 230w

Reviewed by C. E. Vulliamy
Spec 184:582 Ap 28 '50 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Ap 28 '50 480w

NEWCOMB, REXFORD. Architecture of the Old Northwest territory. 175p il maps 96pl $20 Univ. of Chicago press

720.977 Architecture—Northwest, Old 50-9051

"A study of early architecture in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and part of Minnesota." (Subtitle) Contains a survey and illustrations of the development of architecture in the Old Northwest territory from early days to the Civil war.

Booklist 47:72 O 15 '50

"Not only his best book to date, but what is probably the finest monograph in existence on any aspect of our architectural history." Wayne Andrews
+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 D 9 '50 360w

NEWHALL, NANCY (WYNNE) (MRS BEAUMONT NEWHALL), ed. Time in New England [phot. by Paul Strand]. 248p $6 Oxford

917.4 New England—History—Sources. New England—Views. Photography, Artistic 50-10407

An "autobiography" of New England done in photographs and excerpts from the writings of three centuries of New Englanders. The arrangement is roughly chronological, and by subjects such as: wilderness; foothold; Quakers; witchcraft; Revolution; the sea; abolition; tenacious roots.

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 N 18 '50 950w

"Admirably assembled texts and inimitable photographs add up to the perfect gift-volume for New Englanders and their admirers." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:2079 D 1 '50 80w

"To gather a portfolio of 106 photographs of New England, with an accompanying text, and produce a book which is fresh and different, is something of an accomplishment. . . This is a stimulating, beautiful and different book." W. P. Eaton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 3 '50 800w

"An exciting new form of book making which I fear will have many imitators, who won't realize that successful execution depends upon imagination and deftness—which few copycats have. Should I be deprived of all but one book about New England, I'd ask my jailer for this one." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p21 O 29 '50 550w

NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST, and ZUTTER, LA VADA. Crafts for everyone. 2v 92, 93-210p il ea $2.25; school ed in 1v $3.50 Int. textbook

680 Handicraft. Arts and crafts [50-7245]

"Presents a wide variety of practical and ornamental crafts, with detailed drawings and easy to follow written instructions. Entire pages are devoted to step-by-step diagrams and drawings and many of these are accented with attractive touches of bright red. Included in the materials for project-making are: wood, metal, leather, plastics, textiles, paper, and native materials. Handicraft instructions for objects range from such practical items as coffee tables and stools to the ornamental, with directions for making bracelets and rings, butterflies imbedded in plastic paperweights, and all kinds of yarn and stocking dolls." (School Arts) Bibliographies. List of supply houses.

"A page of diagrams and one of instructions are given for each project; they are generally clear although those for the more complicated crafts such as metalworking and woodworking seem sketchy."
Booklist 46:330 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1665 O 1 '50 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 18 '50 70w

"Order your copy today and keep it handy in your classroom or library—it will give you many useful ideas and helpful suggestions."
+ School Arts 50:2 O '50 100w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 My '50

NEWMAN, BERNARD (DON BETTERIDGE, pseud). Flying saucer. 250p $2.50 Macmillan 50-5009

Novel about a hoax perpetrated by a scientist, a writer, and an ex-detective. In order to bring about a unity of the peoples of earth they simulate a shower of rockets, which fall on an English village, in America, in Russia. Then the Martians threaten to bomb us, unless we ship them all our gold. The hoax is successful, and peace returns to the earth.

Booklist 46:189 F 1 '50

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p6S F 3 '50 50w

"Mr. Newman writes with considerable fluency, but the main personalities in the book [with the exception of himself] are stock characters; exposition is thrown at the reader in chunks, and the explanation of atomic energy beginning on page 108 happens to be completely wrong. But much must be forgiven a man who is forced to write books between murders and rampaging elephants." Fritz Leiber
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 5 '50 650w

Reviewed by Richard Gehman
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 Ap 16 '50 200w

N Y Times p31 Ja 29 '50 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 15 '50 70w

"It's an adult, intelligent and plausible yarn, written with considerable humor and satire." L. W. A.
+ Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 29 '50 210w

NEWMAN, HAROLD W. European travel guide. 323p maps $2.95 Holt

914 Europe—Description and travel 50-7111

"A compact, up-to-date guide with general information on things to know beforehand about ship, plane, railroad, and automobile travel, and systematic information on transportation, meals, etiquette, tipping, accommodation, clothing, shopping, and special events in separate countries. The guide to things to see and do is selective." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:273 My 1 '50

Kirkus 18:155 Mr 1 '50 140w

"Mr. Newman is at his best when planning the trip, and he offers sound advice on foods. He includes a thorough treatise on motoring abroad, which you won't find anywhere else except the AAA's own guidebook, and there are some sensible notions in the back of the book about returning to the United States with the blessings of the customs, health, and immigration people." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ap 22 '50 170w

NEWMAN, WILLIAM S. Pianist's problems; a modern approach to efficient practice and musicianly performance; with a pref. by Arthur Loesser; il. by John V. Allcott. 134p $2.50 Harper

786.3 Piano—Instruction and study 50-5354

"Those essential principles of practice, technique, and musicianly playing that can best be had from a book, leaving the lesson time freer, for intangible problems. . . Includes strong arguments for playing by ear, sight reading, ensemble playing, and building a library. In fact, all the material the teacher would like to give the student from his own experience, if there were three times as many lesson hours." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:215 Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 12 '50 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

"Sound, intelligent in presentation, down-to-earth, everyday—above all, musicianly. An annotated bibliography. . . The author is an experienced pianist and historian." George Hanson
+ Library J 75:322 F 15 '50 100w

"Mr. Newman has furnished students and teachers of piano with a thoughtful, practical, and stimulating guide to overcoming many of the obstacles that beset aspirants to that instrument. There is much material in this book that will help to make musicians instead of mere piano players." Margaret Tolson
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:293 Mr '50 900w

"The material of this little book, while valuable, could scarcely be called 'new'. . . On the credit side, the presentation shows a long experience in teaching, a conscientious approach to the student, and a carefully thought-out schedule of study. Dr. Newman is especially helpful in his suggestions on fingering, staccato, and practice habits. For the inexperienced, he has some excellent advice on how to deal with stage fright. On the whole, his approach to the development of musical understanding is good groundwork." Rosalyn Tureck
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:32 Ap 1 '50 650w

NEWSWEEK (periodical). History of our times; covering the events of 1949 [editorial bd, Malcolm Muir, chairman; editors: Tom Mailey, Dorothy Woolf]. 466p il $6 Funk

909.82 Current events. History, Modern

"The men and women who edit and write Newsweek have covered the year 1949 in book form as they cover each passing week in magazine form. They have broken the story of the year down into four main sections—National Affairs, International Affairs, Business, and Arts, Sciences and Entertainment—and into well over a hundred subsections, omitting only the four or five 'Signed Opinion' features that Newsweek itself regularly carries. The result is a more factual, detailed and varied summary of recent events than any individual could produce." N Y Times

Booklist 47:134 D 1 '50

Kirkus 18:273 My 1 '50 110w

"Recommended particularly for school libraries and student use." R. P. Tubby
Library J 75:977 Je 1 '50 110w

"'We hope,' writes Malcolm Muir, chairman of Newsweek's editorial board, in his brief foreword, 'to publish this History annually.' . . Mr. Muir cannot hope more ardently than I do that his plans come true. Such volumes will become more and more valuable as time passes. Moreover, as this series takes shape, its editors and writers will learn by doing. Wisely, they have stuck in their first volume to the formula they have already mastered in their magazine. The same wisdom, as volume succeeds volume and as the response of readers and reviewers piles up, will undoubtedly lead to modifications." Quincy Howe
+ N Y Times p24 Ag 20 '50 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ag 13 '50 100w

NEWTON, ERIC. Meaning of beauty. (Whittlesey house publication) 205p il $3.50 McGraw

701 Esthetics

"This is basically an inquiry into the nature of visual beauty—what does the quality of beauty in a painting, in any work of art, consist of and what is the emotion that this beauty itself produces? What is 'good taste' in art?" (Publisher's note) The author is art critic for the London Sunday Times. No index.

"The great merit of the book is its extremely practical approach. . . One thing which will endear him to many is the way in which he sweeps aside all that has been written on 'colour harmony.' He is undoubtedly correct in thinking that this large literature is of no use to either artist or art critic." Stephen Bone
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 4 '50 470w

"Mr. Newton has written a very clear and extremely persuasive book on a difficult subject. . . This is a very enjoyable book; and it is uncommonly well produced." Herbert Read
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:279 S 16 '50 650w

"He gives us at most a few brilliant sidelights on the revolutionary aspects of modern painting. He shows why the Philistine and the esthete are equally wrong in singling out only one aspect of a painting like the Gorgons of Avignon. He does not tell us how we can enjoy the picture." Gilbert Highet
N Y Times p31 N 5 '50 900w

New Yorker 26:158 N 25 '50 120w

"After perusing this discourse an amateur in aesthetics may well feel that he comes out 'by the same door where in he went,' but he should nevertheless have profited by the experience and be better able to analyse his reactions to a work of art. Reluctantly, one admits a suspicion that Mr. Newton has rather too much gift of the gab, and that his copious metaphors, of pearl necklaces, onions, telephones and so on, may induce more confusion than clarity of thought; but his background of knowledge is always impressive, and the knowledge is applied freshly and acutely."
+ — Spec 184:252 Ag 25 '50 370w

"The book is easy to read, commonsensical in that it nowhere outrages common sense, but of uncommon sensibility. The illustrations make their points decisively. The argument is made light and swift by copious analogy, yet the limits of every analogy are immediately recognized."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Jl 28 '50 1000w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Everyday religion. 240p $1.25 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Sermons 50-7150

Dr Newton wrote a weekly column for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin which he called The Saturday Sermon. This is a selection from those brief inspirational sermons. Index.

Bookmark 9:183 My '50 30w

"Now that we shall hear his voice no more, any new book by Dr Newton will be a cherished possession or a welcome gift."
+ Christian Century 67:499 Ap 19 '50 70w

"This would be the most suitable book for personal or family devotions."
+ Kirkus 18:309 Je 1 '50 110w

NEYHART, LOUISE ALBRIGHT. Henry Ford, engineer [il. by Joshua Tolford]. 210p $2.75 Houghton

B or 92 Ford, Henry—Juvenile literature 50-8859

Biography of Henry Ford in which the author traces the development of the Ford car and follows the achievements of its maker at the same time. For grades 7-9.

Booklist 47:17 S 1 '50

"Much controversial material has been omitted. Ford is here presented sympathetically and emerges a real human being, from whose philosofy of living any of us can learn much of value. Joshua Tolford's many illustrations and diagrams are expertly drawn and informative." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 15 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:357 Jl 1 '50 240w

"Sketches accompanying the text are both enlightening and amusing." B. W. Schein

+ Library J 75:1839 O 15 '50 80w

"This is the first biography of Henry Ford for young people, and the first illustrated story of the development of his famous car. Any boy and some girls over twelve will be fascinated by it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 3 '50 270w

"This is not a critical study, since many controversial and less admirable aspects of Ford's life are either ignored or glossed over. It is, however, an extremely well-written biography of a major figure in our industrial development. Many boys, especially those interested in mechanics or science, will be fascinated by the detailed description and by Mr. Tolford's superb illustrations." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p30 S 24 '50 180w

"It is a satisfying biography, an informing record of a period in our history, and a good-looking, well-made book."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:62 N 11 '50 140w

NICHOLSON, JOHN ANGUS. Philosophy of religion. 419p $3.75 Ronald

201 Religion—Philosophy 50-7613

"This volume is designed to introduce students to the philosophy of religion. It seeks to do this by presenting the interpretation of religion given by each of four important thinkers of modern philosophy—Spinoza, Kant, Comte, and Bergson. These philosophers were chosen because their respective interpretations have been particularly influential in determining conceptions of religion that are prevalent at the present time... In addition to the expository part, the volume contains selections from the works of Spinoza, Kant, Comte, and Bergson... The careful study of these selections is prescribed as a means of enhancing the student's understanding and appreciation of these authors. . . They have been chosen so as to include problems in the philosophy of religion that were not discussed at all or were only lightly touched upon in the exposition." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"All in all, this seems like a usable textbook for college upper-classmen. It should leave the student with a sense of being oriented in this field, so that he can see not only the problems that have to be faced but the success that has been achieved in clarifying them." J. B. Alexander

+ Christian Century 67:1049 S 6 '50 1000w

School & Society 71:302 My 13 '50 30w

NICOLL, ALLARDYCE. World drama; from Aeschylus to Anouilh. 1000p il $7.50 Harcourt

809.2 Drama—History and criticism 50-6848

"Comprehensive volume on the theater, tracing its development and evaluating, with frequent quotations, the work of individual dramatists and movements in various countries. Illustrations. Full index." Bookmark

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

Bookmark 9:184 My '50 30w

"This reviewer sincerely and unreservedly recommends Professor Nicoll's book. Practically speaking, it is doubtful whether so much helpful information, so well-organized (together with index and numerous illustrations), is elsewhere obtainable under a single cover. 'World Drama' is probably unique and (if you act quickly) definitive." B. R. Crisler

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '50 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '50

Kirkus 18:233 Ap 1 '50 110w

"Highly recommended to theatre and drama collections regardless of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:405 Mr 1 '50 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 6 '50 270w

"Allardyce Nicoll set himself a difficult task: to survey the whole of drama from its miscellaneous beginnings to its present global diversity, and in so doing to consider it as theatrical experience, literature and a way of interpreting life. The accomplishment is impressive. Mr. Nicoll, Professor of English at Birmingham University, has planned skillfully and written with clarity and grace." G. L. Joughin

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 16 '50 450w

"This volume is certainly the most readable of any of Mr. Nicoll's numerous works on the theatre and will assuredly find its way to the book shelves of the theatre specialist and advanced student. It is particularly successful in relating drama to other types of literature but less so in placing it on the stage. A play is only a play when it is acted. This book is bound to cause comment and disagreement, particularly from the adherents of those playwrights who may consider their gods scanted and summarily dismissed. Personally I found it a stimulating and worth-while book." George Freedley

+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 Jl 8 '50 550w

"The title of the volume, oddly enough, is misleading. This is really a history of the drama of the West, as the author frankly admits when, having dealt with the neo-romanticism of Rostand and Maeterlinck, he suddenly turns to those Eastern flowerings that produced Kalidasa, the Chinese Sorrows of Han and the No plays of Japan. . . If judgements—for this is far more than a mere record of names and titles and dates—are apt to be unadventuresome, and the style a little ponderous . . . none will complain of Professor Nicoll's allegiance to the principles of the Athenian drama." Charles Morgenstern

+ Spec 184:394 Mr 24 '50 800w

" 'World Drama' is unquestionably the most thorough work of its kind in the English language. It is difficult to imagine that many readers will have the stamina to read the book from cover to cover. . . But this book is our best reference work on the world's dramatic literature and is indispensable to any library, private or public, that lays any claim to usefulness. . . It is as a work of criticism rather than as a history that the informed reader, not to mention the specialist or the partisan, is apt to look somewhat askance at 'World Drama.' " John Gassner

+ — Theatre Arts 34:2 Jl '50 2000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 13 '50 900w

"A clear vigorous survey of drama from Aeschylus to Tennessee Williams, appealing, not only to the student, but to the average intelligent theater-goer. . . Excellent for all libraries."

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:25 Je '50

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. Faith and history; a comparison of Christian and modern views of history. 257p $3.50 Scribner

901 History—Philosophy. Christianity—Philosophy 49-8484

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"This book is in part based on lectures intended for clergy, but the view of things disclosed in it is of interest to anyone with metaphysical concerns. In it Niebuhr's eloquence and breadth of knowledge once more become apparent, the former in his curious ability to express himself fairly clearly by means of words such as 'redemption,' 'mystery,' 'dimension,' and 'destiny,' which reverberate mystically, the latter in his bold generalizations about human events and the theories men have constructed to make sense of them. The book contains some clever discussions of particular topics, such as Marxism and the revived Roman Catholic theories of Natural Law, but its main interest lies in the author's reasoned claim that Christian faith alone is capable of descrying the coherence of history." H. B. Acton

+ Ethics 60:218 Ap '50 2200w

"That there is increasing interest in the problems of the philosophy of history is borne out by the number of thoughtful and exciting studies which have appeared in the last few years. Niebuhr's work takes its place among those of high vision and sober analysis." N. W. Klausner

+ J Religion 30:228 Jl '50 2000w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 39:72 Ja 21 '50 500w

"This book, like the world we live in, is for the tough-minded." K. D. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:42 F 18 '50 280w

"A most timely book. Though at times repetitive and somewhat heavy in style, it is packed with penetrating criticism and fine constructive thought. It must be either accepted or answered; it cannot be ignored." Hugh Lyon

+ Spec 184:122 Ja 27 '50 750w

"A most penetrating and wide-ranging study. It is greatly to be hoped that it will be widely read and deeply pondered. It is not easy reading. The subject is difficult and the author's style occasionally becomes obscure. But the book is a great book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 20 '50 1100w

"The book is at once a brilliant piece of Christian apologetic and a searching criticism not only of secular alternatives to Christianity, but also of almost every type of Christianity itself against which secularism has protested with elements of validity. The discussion probes deeply the perennial problems of time, of necessity and freedom, of the moral meaning and moral ambiguities of history, of moral absolutism, legalism, and relativism."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:328 S '49 390w

NIMS, JOHN FREDERICK. Fountain in Kentucky, and other poems. 72p $2.75 Sloane

811 50-6019

A second volume of poems by the young Catholic author of The Iron Pastoral (Book Review Digest 1947).

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun p5 Ap 10 '50 70w

"What distinguishes this distinguished book of poems from almost all others published this year is: Without giving up the wit, the complexity, the intellectual density of modern poetry, this book asserts, as so few do, a trust in human emotion." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 5 '50 500w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 52:370 Jl 21 '50 300w

Kirkus 18:130 F 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 75:565 Ap 1 '50 30w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 170:581 Je 10 '50 250w

"From Mr. Nims's pages no cliché ever lifts a familiar head. And since a poetry of implication too often leaves the reader with more latitude for conjecture than he needs, Mr. Nims, by bringing his compositions as a whole into sharper focus, would add much to our appreciation of his work." Ruth Lechlitner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 25 '50 500w

"The gift for language is the primary requisite for a good poet, and John Frederick Nims has it. His lines have a verbal density, are good and hard, smart. . . . Despite the extreme competence of his poems, and their modern elegancies of idiom, only a few poems in his new book achieve validity." Jose Garcia Villa

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 5 '50 380w

Reviewed by Richard Wilbur

Poetry 77:105 N '50 850w

"Two years ago John Frederick Nims was acclaimed for his first book of poems, 'The Iron Pastoral.' This second volume is even more extraordinary, for many of the poems in 'A Fountain in Kentucky' will outlive our time. The academicians will be outraged by the nimble Mr. Nims, who writes in a language that sounds magnificently new. A Catholic poet, he is not pietistic; a student of the classics, he is not a prissy stuffed-shirt. No subject is too mean for him to transmute into poetry. In his esthetic the poem is the becoming, the substance of his material determining its organic form." I. L. Salomon

+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 Mr 11 '50 550w

"The book is not in the tragic mood only; it would be impossible for Mr. Nims to write a whole book without whimsy, humor, or light satire. The two translations from Horace are skillful and elegant. And Arbiter Elegantiarum, perhaps a bit too chirpy, is a most amusing application of the spirit of Petronius to that of a 'beerjoint' in which a juke box is making music for a modern couple."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:161 Je '50 280w

NIN, ANAIS (MRS IAN HUZO). Four-chambered heart. 187p $2.75 Duell

50-5129

A novel of the lovers, Djuna and Rango, who live on a barge in the Seine. Rango's wife pretends to accept the situation, but thru her feigning of illness and subsequent insanity she nearly wrecks Djuna's life.

"The climate of The Four-Chambered Heart is one of pure feeling; the book's voice is that of the heart and the instincts. The effects achieved by Miss Nin's writing—poetic prose of singular vitality and beauty—reminded me, rather strongly, of the dance. The Four-Chambered Heart evokes the grace-in-motion and the elegant patterns, the emotional directness and the dreamlike aura, of a classical ballet." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 185:86 F '50 800w

Chicago Sun p9 Ap 16 '50 60w

"Strip this tale of its trappings, pierce through the much touted prose (which turns out to be ordinary, even trite phraseology set to self-conscious rhythm), and there is left only sterility."

— Christian Science Monitor p11 F 9 '50 480w

Kirkus 17:633 N 15 '49 130w

"Miss Nin's flavorful words are as piquant and stimulating to one's mental taste as exotic, highly seasoned foods to one's palate. Her constant psychoanalyzing of characters never lags. In these two characteristics lie the fascination of her writing. . . The characterizations are fuller, less impressionistic and less sketchy than in her previous writings. The story is closer knit, attaining a wholeness, an entity absent from Miss Nin's other books. There is the same swiftness of rhythm and fluidity of movement—Miss Nin's artistic label. Libraries will find it of limited appeal." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 74:1818 D 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 12 '50 850w

"The author has drawn heavily on psychoanalysis—on Freud and on Jung as well. It is a pleasure to note that her knowledge is not flaunted, but creatively used." Rene Fulop-Miller

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 29 '50 600w

"Miss Nin's feverish, female writing is an excellent conveyor of the agonies implicit in such a situation, but when she stands up out of her book, as she frequently does, to muse

NIN, ANAIS—Continued
aloud about love, death, guilt, sacrifice, and other matters, one feels distinctly that too much is too much, even of a good thing."
— + New Yorker 25:85 Ja 28 '50 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 19 '50 400w

"The gentleman is something of a tramp. Even so, there is a queer sort of fascination about his story."
Sat R of Lit 33:28 Mr 18 '50 150w

"Piles a mountainous icing of surrealist imagery and rubbery aphorisms on a little cake of plot no bigger than a thumb."
— Time 55:90 F 6 '50 330w

NIVEN, WILLIAM W. Fundamentals of detergency; under the sponsorship of the American institute of laundering. 256p il $5.50 Reinhold

668.1 Cleaning compounds 50-5727

"The chemical and physical principles which underlie surface activity and detergent action are discussed for the benefit of chemists and other persons in such industries as laundering, textiles, and printing inks, where detergents are used in important processes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"This book has been needed for years as an answer to people who ask 'What is detergency?' The number of errors is not unusual. The most serious one noted was reference to cation-active agents as highly toxic. This is hardly warranted in view of a representative one being National Formulary for use at 0.1% on mucous membrane. . . The researcher in detergency and others will profit by reading it." F. D. Snell
+ — Chem & Eng N 28:1327 Ap 17 '50 140w

Reviewed by A. H. Pope
Chem Eng 57:298 Je '50 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:19 Mr '50

NIXON, JUSTIN WROE. Responsible Christianity; leaven of a free society. 190p $2.50 Harper

261 Christianity. U.S.—Religion 50-7151

A discussion of the challenges to the Christian faith in our present age. The author is a faculty member of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity school. Index.

Bookmark 9:210 Je '50 30w

"A thoughtful and urgent discussion."
+ Christian Century 67:618 My 17 '50 120w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Churchman 164:17 Je 15 '50 240w

"This is a thought-provoking book. Clergymen and theologians of the liberal school of thought will welcome it."
+ Kirkus 18:311 Je 1 '50 110w

NOBLIN, STUART. Leonidas LaFayette Polk, agrarian crusader. 325p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Polk, Leonidas LaFayette 49-49244

Biography of a nineteenth-century farmer, editor, and crusader for agricultural and political reform. Born in North Carolina Leonidas L. Polk exemplifies a type of Southerner not often written about: "the strong solid, middle-class farming group who contested the planters' economic and political dominance both before and after the Civil War." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Noblin makes an interesting, though not entirely convincing, case for the contention that Polk was North Carolina's 'most significant citizen between 1865 and 1900.' . . Of such materials as are available, Mr. Noblin has made good use. He has succeeded in constructing a valuable portrait of a neglected agrarian leader." C. V. Woodward
Am Hist R 55:1002 Jl '50 190w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p32 N 27 '49 180w

"Dr. Noblin, as assistant professor of history and political science at North Carolina State College, has a proprietary as well as a sympathethic interest in his subject, since the college is the realization of one of Polk's high-minded dreams. His factual, readable treatise does not lose sight of the man in his competent and lucid presentation of the larger implications of Polk's career as an agrarian reformer, and as a sterling exemplar of a noble and notable social consciousness."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 O 7 '50 260w

"Well-documented from primary sources including some of the private Polk papers, this carefully written biography emphasizes the contributions made by Polk to the cause of modern agriculture."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:45 Mr '50 240w

NOGARA, BARTOLOMEO. Art treasures of the Vatican. 308p 57 col pl 200il $7.50 Tudor

709.456 Art—Vatican (city). Art, Italian. Christian art and symbolism 50-10579

"The almost incredible collection of art treasures in the Vatican are recounted by the director general of the pontifical monuments, museums and galleries in brief historical introductions which authoritatively correlate the vast diverse collections. Each section . . . is described and explained with brief data on the forming of the collections. The illustrative material is well selected, including many details from the masterpieces, and the color reproduction is superior to most color work of the kind in books. The running narrative is given in French, Italian and Spanish as well as English." N Y Times

"No one should be better qualified to write a catalog of the art treasures of the Vatican than Bartolomeo Nogara, the director general of pontifical monuments, museums, and galleries. He has handled his subject with thoro understanding." Gary Sheahan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 3 '50 60w

"Altogether this may be regarded as the definitive general handbook on the Vatican treasures." Howard Devree
+ N Y Times p21 O 22 '50 190w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). John Brown; decorations by Robert Burns. 181p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Brown, John—Juvenile literature 50-9596

A character study of John Brown written for young people. "Deeply religious, he felt himself dedicated to one thing only in life, the freeing of the slaves, and he lived with a fanatical determination to achieve this end." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:119 N 15 '50

"The author has caught the strength and magnetism of this God-driven man and captures the force of a magnetic personality with a vision and a religious dedication."
+ Kirkus 18:521 S 1 '50 150w

"Dramatic story well written." C. W. Field
+ Library J 75:1914 N 1 '50 60w

"This is a readable biography of a man famous in our history whose life has not before been written for young people." Siri Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 15 '50 170w

"Mrs. Nolan invents conversation and explanation with the freedom of a novelist. Young people should be warned that this fascinating biography presents but one of many possible interpretations of the life and career of John Brown." R. A. Brown
N Y Times p42 O 22 '50 180w

NOLAND, EDWARD WILLIAM, and BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT. Workers wanted; a study of employers' hiring policies, preferences, and practices in New Haven and Charlotte. 233p $3 Harper

658.3 Employment management 49-8068

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes
Am J Soc 55:594 My '50 650w

"The pertinence of the general observations is not challenged; for the most part they are timely and stand the test of experience. It is only the absence of a solid connecting link with the statistical data presented that is called into question. Despite these questions, one can conclude that a sound research project has been well begun, with a great need remaining for similar studies in a more representative group of industrial communities, and a stimulating and informative report has been set before the businessman, union leader, and industrial expert, all of whom will find the volume highly enlightening." J. W. McConnell
+ — Social Forces 28:344 Mr '50 1350w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:384 S '49 320w

NOLL, EDWARD M. Television for radiomen. 595p il $7 Macmillan

621.388 Television 49-50326

"The author has assumed that his readers will be familiar with standard radio principles and terms but will be novices in television. Accordingly, there is a full exposition of basic television principles, followed by detailed discussions of television circuits and components, installation, adjustment and trouble-shooting. Although the chief viewpoint is general, numerous points are directly related to receivers now on the market. There is one long chapter on the mathematics of television, but the remainder of the book is non-mathematical." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:214 Mr 1 '50
Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:110 Ja 15 '50 130w

"The comprehensiveness of this work makes it useful as a library and shop reference book."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:10 Ja '50

NOON, JOHN A. Law and government of the Grand River Iroquois. 186p pa $2 Viking fund, inc, 14 E. 71st st, N.Y. 21

970.3 Iroquois Indians 49-5345

"The positive sanctions of the Iroquois system of social control ramified religion and economic, social, and political organization. From his data on tribal history and ethnology and from his casebook, Mr. Noon has constructed a theory of the Iroquois legal system. Three premises underlie it: the all-inclusive nature of rules, their transcendency, and their tendency to develop in crises. The chapters treat the appointive and legislative powers of the council, the development of constitutional law through judicial decision, the social control of citizenship, property and inheritance, and the confederacy's coordination of society." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography.

"This great conscious or unconscious familiarity with law in its everyday operations has made it very difficult even for students of jurisprudence to provide us with any satisfactory definition of law. It is not too surprising, then, that Noon's attempts in this direction are not completely successful. . . In several instances Noon uses English terms having little or no usage or meaning outside the law to describe situations, and uses them with such imprecision that confusion results." C. F. Harding
Am Anthropol 52:396 Jl '50 600w

"This is a brilliant study. . . It records a notable chapter in judicial history that hitherto has barely reached beyond the inner circle of tribal life." E. S. Carpenter
+ Canadian Hist R 31:78 Mr '50 650w

"Well written, the book will be of interest to jurists and to social scientists."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:472 D '49 350w

NORDIN, JOHN A., and SALERA, VIRGIL. Elementary economics. 844p maps $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall

330 Economics 50-4220

"A textbook for beginning students. The national income; the behavior of economic units, as: banks, labor unions, business firms; division of social product, as: wages, rent, interest, products; business fluctuations and stabilization policies; government regulation of business; international trade and finance; economic systems. No bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:1413 S 1 '50 60w
School & Society 72:80 Jl 29 '50 30w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Mr Upstairs and Mr Downstairs; introducing Jane Jonquil and her father; pictures by Margaret Bloy Graham. 52p $1.75 Harper

50-9127

Jane Jonquil's father was always in a great hurry in the morning but at night he had time to tell her stories and make up poetry. This book contains some of the stories and poems as well as accounts of what Jane and her father said and did when they took walks together.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 10w

"Jane herself takes part in each story, as a very little girl would, by questions and suggestions. As a boy once said about certain other quiet stories, 'they aren't exciting like shooting someone. The excitement is mental.' Margaret Bloy Graham's pictures are amusing and right." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 70w

"These stories give us variety of theme and mood, the only connection being the happy relation of child and father. The pictures, very modern, remind us a little of the work of Francois. They add to the charm of a pleasant new book for small girls." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 10 '50 220w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times p50 N 26 '50 170w

"Perhaps the very best of the stories is the one about the wooden horse. It will probably be a favorite with boys and girls who are just beginning to read to themselves. Like all the other stories, it will be lots of fun to read aloud. . . Margaret Graham is a newcomer to the field of children's books. Her drawings exactly suit Mr. Jonquil's stories."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:45 N 11 '50 230w

NORRIS, FRANK CALLAN. Nutro 29. 307p $2.75 Rinehart

50-7231

A satire-fantasy describing what happens after Drs Hightower and Murch invent a food pill which acts as a food substitute.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 18 '50 400w
Kirkus 18:145 Mr 1 '50 130w

"Coast-to-coast dislocations nearly wreck Mr. Norris' novel. In order to follow them all, he abandons Dr. Hightower and introduces a number of widely dispersed sub-characters. Dr. H. comes back eventually to witness the final convulsions of the Nutro era. . . But while he is away, the middle chapters sag markedly. Despite its swayback, however, 'Nutro 29' is probably the wittiest and most entertaining satire of the season." Richard Match
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 14 '50 850w

"Mr. Norris' shmoo-type plot is something less than airtight. . . However, the author tells his story in a bright, hard, up-to-the-minute prose and peoples it with a dozen fetching characters." David Davidson
+ — N Y Times p20 My 7 '50 360w

NORRIS, F. C.—Continued

"Although he does at times show a considerable gift for amusing irony, the author unfortunately gets a little too carried away in describing the cataclysms that he believes his economically dubious hypothesis entails and in spinning out the tedious love affair of his principal character."

— + New Yorker 26:119 My 20 '50 140w

"'Nutro 29' often gets so involved with the plot device that some of the main characters get lost in the shuffle." I. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 16 '50 300w

"The reader could, perhaps, overlook the fact that the novel, as a novel, falls apart and concentrate instead on what the publishers announce as the book's 'provocative satire.' Unfortunately, Mr. Norris's satiric gifts are no stronger than his sense of structure. After some genuinely amusing opening scenes, in which the author's blunderbuss is delicately trained upon the news magazines and their methods of gathering and presenting news, the novel's satiric purposes appear to have been forgotten. Or perhaps the author confused farce with fancy." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R of Lit 33:14 Je 24 '50 650w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 33:16 D 30 '50 180w

"Novelist Norris, a senior editor of Newsweek, has set out to write a satire of the times, and he has not quite achieved it; satire calls for a steady hand, rapier that can reach bone. He does show that he can wield the needle of burlesque with some of the best in the business."

+ — Time 55:97 Je 5 '50 440w

NORTHEN, MRS REBECCA TYSON. Home orchid growing. 286p il $6 Van Nostrand

635.93415 Orchids Agr50-437

"It has been my endeavor to help the amateur with his problems as far as possible. This book is designed not only to give the beginner a start but to advance him through the years into every phase of orchid growing. More than that, it gives him, along with the methods, a background in the functions and needs of the plants so that he will be able both to recognize problems and to solve them on the basis of his knowledge." (Pref) The author is a trained biologist. Bibliography. Appendix has a key to the tribes and genera of the orchid family, and a list of sources of orchid plants and supplies. Index.

Booklist 46:283 My 15 '50

Kirkus 18:153 Mr 1 '50 270w

"A fascinating book on a fascinating subject." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:876 My 15 '50 110w

NORTON, FREDERICK HARWOOD. Refractories. 3d ed 782p il $8.50 McGraw

669.8 Refractory materials 50-250

"The standard American treatise on firebrick and related ceramic products which are used in furnace linings and other places where exceptionally high temperatures must be resisted. It includes an outline of the development of the refractories manufacturing industry in the United States; nine chapters on present day methods of manufacture of refractory materials; eight chapters on the properties of refractories; and seven chapters on their uses. Developments in the field in recent years have been numerous, and they account for most of the new material in this edition. Chapters have been added on refractories in nuclear power production and in gas turbines and jet propulsion engines. The useful bibliographies have been revised." (Library J) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1932, 1943.

"Norton's book is an excellent introduction to the field of refractories. It is a research man's approach which is of course fitting in a sphere which is being so largely modified by research." R. E. Birch

+ Chem & Eng N 28:2202 Je 26 '50 360w

"In general, the index could be expanded to advantage. The book is readable and authoritative and warrants purchase by the worker in refractories even though he may already have an earlier edition." G. J. Easter

+ — Chem Eng 57:300 Jl '50 650w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:110 Ja 15 '50 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:9 Ja '50

NORVELL, GEORGE WHITEFIELD. Reading interests of young people. 262p $3.50 Heath

028.5 Books and reading 50-7965

"Carried on over a twelve-year period, Norvell was able, with the assistance of over 50,000 New York state pupils and 625 of their teachers in all types of communities and sizes of schools, to bring together an astonishing total of 1,590,000 individual opinions on 1,700 literary selections. Yet, despite the magnitude of the job entailed, the survey is somewhat narrow because it concerns itself only with what pupils say they enjoy reading, or find interesting, or like best of the materials with which they have come in contact in the classroom." School R

Booklist 47:126 D 1 '50

"Real criticism of this book would involve analysis of the 1,700 titles offered for the voting. I suspect that this would show too little relation to the modern world of writing and living, which actually is rather well represented in many modern textbook anthologies and 'social studies' readers. . . Such a book is valuable to clear the air and help in reconsideration of the aims in presenting all sorts of reading to all sorts of boys and girls. Stepladders we do need, up to the best. But the best must be made known." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 N 19 '50 750w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

— School & Society 71:392 Je 24 '50 450w

"Norvell's study, even though it is concerned only with what pupils say they find interesting among the materials with which they have come in contact in the classroom, is a valuable addition to the field of children's reading-interest studies." W. J. Moore

+ School R 58:430 O '50 1250w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). The legacy [Eng title: A town like Alice]. 308p $3 Morrow

50-6909

This story of Jean Paget, a London typist unknown to fame in her native country, falls into two parts, held together by the fact that an uncle had left her a fortune and the man who became her trustee became interested in her life before and after she received the legacy. First there is the story of Jean's experiences in Malaya during the war when she was an unwanted prisoner of the Japanese, and then comes the story of her return to Malaya and eventually to Australia, to pay her debt of gratitude to the Malayans and to the Australian soldier who had once befriended her.

Booklist 46:194; 336 F 15 '50; Jl 1 '50

Bookmark 9:244 Jl '50 50w

"Mr. Shute's thorough, vivid Malaya and Queensland, his wholesome Jean, her Australian man, and let's not forget old Strachen, all add up to bracing and benign entertainment." Mary Sandrock

+ Cath World 171:392 Ag '50 170w

Chicago Sun p5 Jl 11 '50 100w

"Mr. Shute's skill in telling Jean's remarkable and what would be, in other hands, fantastic story makes 'The Legacy' one of the most exciting tales of the season." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 11 '50 650w

"Jean is something of a one-woman Point Four program. Of Jean and Joe Mr. Shute writes, 'They spent that day in a curious mixture of lovemaking and economic discussion,' and this describes the latter portion of the book. Some readers may feel that both the love and the economics become a shade too coy, but such criticism smacks of quibbling. What shines through the book is real human warmth. . . And Mr. Shute can still tell the story at hand as well as any one writing today." Ruth Chapin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 10 '50 420w

"The author, a technically highly skilled storyteller, eventually lets money and geography all but overwhelm the basically sound plot and rather thin characterization. . . The formula contains a pinch of social consciousness and a dash of sex, enough to titillate the average slick-paper magazine reader at whom it is presumably aimed." Paul Farrell

Commonweal 52:301 Je 30 '50 320w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 26:502 N '50 90w

"This is not top Shute, but still good reading."

+ — Kirkus 18:212 Ap 1 '50 280w

"This is a fascinating story. . . Recommended." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 75:862 My 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 75:1841 O 15 '50 70w

"A Town Like Alice is neither well constructed nor aesthetically very interesting, but it has an extravert gusto, sympathy, common sense, and carries the message that after all well-intentioned enterprise and perseverance are sometimes crowned with success." Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 16 '50 230w

"It is evidence of Mr. Shute's high skill as a storyteller that after the climax of liberation in Malaya he is able to recapture the reader's interest and tune it to frontier life in Australia and an adventure utterly divorced from that which occupies the first part of the book. The personality of Jean, as he has created it, brings off the trick." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 11 '50 750w

Reviewed by M. J. Tweedy

N Y Times p22 Je 18 '50 420w

"This is an honest, matter-of-fact story about plain and worthy people. Although it is actually a love story, the only touch of pure romance is supplied by Jean's lawyer, a widower of seventy, whose hopeless love for his client lends a becoming depth of melancholy and extra emotion to the whole thing."

New Yorker 26:95 Je 17 '50 120w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 2 '50 700w

"Nevil Shute's former books have marked him a direct-line descendant from those elite among the ancient wandering minstrels who could, from a first quiet sentence, implant irresistible urge to hear a tale. In its beginning 'The Legacy' carries this authority; unfortunately, before the end tale-spinning magic is not enough. For here has been attempted a hybrid creation and the two elements fall apart from an unseemly mid-point divide." Kathleen Sproul

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:21 Je 17 '50 700w

"Lively, fluent, inventive, spirited, a storyteller with a swift and sympathetic eye for character and the surest instinct for avoiding the heights and depths of story-telling, Mr. Shute deserves, I think, every bit of the popularity which A Town Like Alice will earn. . . The Malayan scenes are wonderfully good in their acutely simple way; the Australian scenes carry just a hint of too idyllic sentiment. But it is all very, very readable." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec 184:836 Je 16 '50 180w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 250w

"The only thing that saves the book from absurdity is Novelist Shute's lively discernment about people & places. The villagers who shelter Jean in Japanese-occupied Malaya are real farmers in a real village. The London office of Jean's solicitor is perfectly authentic, and in Australia the reader can almost hear her husband's cattle moo. But Jean is as unconvincing as a Horatio Alger hero."

— + Time 55:100 Je 12 '50 390w

"Mr. Shute, with his high moral purpose and happy ending, is perhaps reminiscent of the nineteenth-century didactic novelist, or the contemporary Soviet Russian writer whose aim is to 'improve' reality rather than merely to reflect it. The simple, robust, expanding Australian scene is particularly suitable to such treatment. His method, however, is that of a highly skilled entertainer. He tells his story in a smooth, straightforward colloquial style, using a favorite device of Mr. Somerset Maugham's: an impersonal, detached narrator who is Jean's London solicitor."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Je 16 '50 330w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Jl '50

NOSS, JOHN BOYER. Man's religions. 812p $4.50 Macmillan

290 Religions 49-9011

"This book has been written to meet two specific needs: that, first, for an introduction to the world's religions containing adequate amounts of descriptive or interpretative details from the original source materials; and that, second, for a presentation of man's most noteworthy faiths in a time-setting that will do justice to their development as well as to their origins." (Pref) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"Prof. Noss has written a conscientious, well balanced survey of mankind's major religions. His book can be recommended as a reliable guide for beginners in the subject and as a text for college and seminary courses in the history of religions." C. H. Hamilton

+ Christian Century 66:821 Jl 6 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Joachim Wach

J Religion 30:153 Ap '50 250w

"This would be an admirable text-book for college students, but should appeal also to those of the reading public who desire an accurate, scholarly and yet simple account of the religions of mankind."

+ Kirkus 17:545 O 1 '49 190w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry

Sat R of Lit 33:20 Ja 21 '50 180w

School & Society 71:190 Mr 25 '50 70w

NOTOPOULOS, JAMES ANASTASIOS. Platonism of Shelley; a study of platonism and the poetic mind. 671p $7.50 Duke univ. press

821 Plato. Shelley, Percy Bysshe. Literature, Comparative 49-49153

A study of the way in which Platonism "the most poetical of all philosophies" works upon the creative process by giving what "Horace has called 'rem,' substance to the poet's imagination, thought, and emotion." The author applies his study particularly to Shelley. Index.

"All students of Shelley, and indeed lovers of great poetry, will be profoundly grateful to Professor Notopoulos for the care and delicacy with which he has discovered and explained the various channels by which Plato's thought flows into Shelley's mind, and then displayed the results of this fertilization in Shelley's poetry and prose. . . Only a very diligent scholar could possibly have assimilated all the voluminous reading needed for a study of the influence of Plato upon Shelley; and only a very sensitive critic could have completed this analysis of Shelley's poetry without making us feel that such theme hunting can be as painful and as killing as vivisection." Gilbert Highet

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 5 '50 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 13 '50 850w

"Professor Notopoulos has done great scholarly and critical service both to the philosopher-poet Plato and to the poet-philosopher whose works are so substantially informed by the thought of the master."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:14 Mr '50 230w

NOVAK, JOSEPH. Par golf in 8 steps. 131p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

796.352 Golf 50-3650

"[This work] is profusely illustrated, with a center section of 64 photographs, in addition to its 126 pages of text. Joe Novak, the author, is president of the PGA, who gave up the tournament trail to concentrate on teaching. The eight steps—four in position, four in the swing—apply to all phases of hitting a golf ball, from driving to putting." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 46:349 Jl 15 '50

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 26 '50 90w

"Good text for instructors." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1191 Jl '50 30w

Reviewed by Tom Meany
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Jl 16 '50 270w

NOWINSON, MRS MARIE L. Legacy of Gabriel Martel. 311p $3 Appleton

50-9721

The story of a lawyer who in his career chooses to follow the precepts of Christian ethics rather than to work for material success. The story also shows how the father's life affected the lives of his four children.

Booklist 47:156 D 15 '50

"In preparation for the novel Mrs. Nowinson is said to have read law for two years which may account for the long, tedious rehashings of Gabriel's cases. The novel, like Gabriel, is higher in intention than performance." Mary Sandrock
Cath World 172:155 N '50 240w

"The sympathetic reader, of course, will see in the life of Gabriel Martel the kind of steadfastness and sacrifice and faith that makes saints, and makes the world better. This theme, doubtlessly, helped the judges to select this novel for the Christophers' $10,000 fiction award. It would have been better served, however, if the characters and scenes in the story were fully realized. Technical imperfections rob the book of effective impact despite the high purposes of the author and those who made the award." Lloyd Wendt
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 8 '50 410w

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 18 '50 420w

"Having faults of unevenness and excessive patness, the book is still a good selection for the Christopher award because it does what it sets out to do: a character is shown in relation to his church, his family, and his community, and is shown through the medium of his profession, the law. He is not a plaster saint. The book does not preach. It reflects a particle of truth in its own way, and is thus, a good novel." Joan Rice
+ — Commonweal 53:46 O 20 '50 500w

"An inspiring sort of book, without at any time being a preachy one. Of special, but certainly not exclusive, Catholic interest."
+ Kirkus 18:566 S 15 '50 260w

"'The Legacy of Gabriel Martel' is a religious novel, an honest reverent probing of religious ideas. It deals with death but—more importantly—with life and its meanings, and comes to brave, clear-eyed conclusions." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 8 '50 850w

"It is not an easy parable, but it is a true one, even though, as here presented, the story evolves out of the moral rather than the other way around. And Martel himself is a strangely humorless, wooden figure. The lesser characters are more convincing." N. K. Burger
+ — N Y Times p35 O 1 '50 140w

"Because this is a first novel interested readers will have to make allowances for its dryness and naivete. Mrs Nowinson spent five years completing this story which won her the $10,000 Christopher Award for Fiction. Since the award is made only to a book embodying Christian principles, it is certain the contest judges were convinced of Gabriel Martel's spiritual message; but its truth, value, and meaning will have to be determined by the individual reader." J. M. G.
Sat R of Lit 33:38 N 18 '50 220w

NURA, pseud. See Ulreich, N. W.

NUTE, GRACE LEE. Rainy River country; a brief history of the region bordering Minnesota and Ontario. 143p il maps pa $2 Minn. hist. soc.

977.678 Rainy River valley 50-3757

"This historical sketch of the Rainy River region is a companion volume to Dr. Nute's popular The Voyageur's Highway which appeared in 1941. The earlier study was concerned with the borderland east of Rainy Lake; the present one is devoted to the evolution of the area between that lake and Lake of the Woods. After a short acount of the geological history of the region, Dr. Nute traces the careers of the successive groups of men who have dwelt in it and lived off its abundant natural resources. Furs, fish, and timber have been its three staple products and if the first is no longer important commercially, fishing and lumbering, particularly the latter, remain its basic industries, though the country is perhaps more widely known as a paradise for tourists." Canadian Hist R

"Based on careful research, clear in style, rich in incident from the region's colorful past, well illustrated with photographs, drawings, and maps, Rainy River Country is a welcome addition to the growing number of regional histories." W. R. Graham
+ Canadian Hist R 31:328 S '50 200w

"This neat little history, though not written for the summer trade, will not do them a bit of harm. There is a good collection of photographs."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:39 Ag 5 '50 180w

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Champions of the quarter tracks. 240p il $5 Coward-McCann

636.168 Horse racing Agr50-439

"Containing all available facts concerning the most illustrious names to have graced the history of short racing as conducted at recognized meets throughout the United States and arrived at, according to time and weight carried, from the official records of the American quarter racing association." (Subtitle) Index.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:786 My 1 '50 20w

N Y Times p44 Ap 16 '50 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 23 '50 240w

NYGAARD, NORMAN EUGENE. They sought a country. 211p $2.50 Longmans

50-5476

In 1869 the Torgersons and Trygvesons left their small Norwegian farming community to come to America. The story is of their struggles to make their way in a new land, and of Olaf, the industrious one who watched over Torger, the impulsive.

Booklist 46:232 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon
Christian Century 67:432 Ap 5 '50 210w

Christian Science Monitor p4 Ap 8 '50 170w

Kirkus 18:4 Ja 1 '50 110w

"For the unsophisticated woman reader or for young people." M. E. Monroe
Library J 75:172 F 1 '50 80w

"'They Sought a Country' is a familiar story, but one always worth retelling."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 5 '50 200w

"Were it not overloaded with hearty good fellowship, sticky-sweet kindness and Horatio Alger embellishments, this might have been an interesting family tale." Edward Stansbury
N Y Times p26 F 12 '50 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 30 '50 220w

"Mr. Nygaard, the author of this simple little book, must be a happy man. His writing is rather unconvincing whenever it touches on the darker sides of human existence. He loves to see his characters happy and he knows well how to convince the reader of man's talent for happiness." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 33:34 Mr 11 '50 250w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 F '50

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1950; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell. 325p $3.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: The blue-winged teal, by Wallace Stegner; The magnolias, by G. B. Leiper; Be nice to Mr Campbell, by Robert Lowry; The captain is impaled, by Nelson Algren; Death under the hawthorns, by Peggy Bennett; New shoes, by John Berry; Summer evening, by Kay Boyle; Vega, by John Cheever; Mrs Ketting and Clark Gable, by Ann Chidester; The sardillion, by Elizabeth Enright; The Hardys, by William Humphrey; The lady, by Donald Justice; The hunt, by Susan Kuehn; Comes a day, by Speed Lamkin; Seventy thousand dollars, by Edward Newhouse; Not a soul will come along, by Elizabeth Parsons; The wounded, by Clay Putman; The ruin of soul, by L. W. Robinson; For Esmé—with love and squalor, by J. D. Salinger; Death of a prize fighter, by Robert Switzer; Their losses, by Peter Taylor; Give my love to Maggie, by Lilian Van Ness; Seasmiles, by A. G. Winslow.

Booklist 47:62 O 1 '50

Kirkus 18:397 Jl 15 '50 240w

"I think that the most remarkable thing about the book is that while the stories vary enormously in style and technique there is a vision of life which underlies them all and is common to them all so that they might almost have been the product of a single mind. As Hamilton Basso, one of the judges of the current collection, puts it, 'The stories share a common theme, namely, the trap that it is to be alive.' " J. J. Maloney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 22 '50 800w

Reviewed by Milton Crane
N Y Times p50 N 12 '50 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 3 '50 220w

"This selection of the 'Prize Stories of 1950' follows by a few months publication of Martha Foley's collection of 'The Best American Short Stories, 1950.' . . The collections are surprisingly similar in tone and feeling. And, to dispose of the obvious question, the 'prize' stories appear, for the first time in this reviewer's memory, to be at least as good as the 'best' stories, and the collection as a whole considerably more lively and diverse in scene and character if not in mood." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 S 23 '50 950w

OAKLEY, AMY (EWING) (MRS THORNTON OAKLEY). Our Pennsylvania; keys to the Keystone state; il. by Thornton Oakley. 467p $4.50 Bobbs

917.48 Pennsylvania—Description and travel 50-10342

A travelog on the state of Pennsylvania, giving scraps of history, travel, and legend about the Keystone state. Illustrated with drawings. Index.

"Put down in such haphazard fashion, and with so little grace, that it is difficult to read, and of little importance." Katharine Shorey
— Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 80w

"Mr. and Mrs. Oakley have turned out many travel books together but none better than this one. . . The book bulges with goodness. It is encyclopedic in range and yet remains charmingly personal." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p21 O 29 '50 500w

O'BRIEN, GRACE. Golden age of Italian music. 191p il $4.25 Philosophical lib.

780.945 Music—Italy. Music, Renaissance 50-9829

A survey of the development of music in Italy during the Renaissance and to the end of the eighteenth century. The book is in three parts, (1) Development, (2) Maturity, and (3) Influence of Italian music in other countries. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by George Hanson
Library J 75:1827 O 15 '50 130w

"Within its compass this is a rewarding critical study. The author discusses only vital steps in the musical development in Italy from the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries, but her discussion has authority and accent." K. O'D. Hoover
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:61 Mr 25 '50 270w

"The strength of the book is in its amplification of the lesser figures, in its detailed description of the social conditions at the Italian courts, in its setting of the historical context in which the music appeared. In all such cross-references to social, political and cultural history Miss O'Brien provides a valuable supplement to the text-books of musical history. Her fifteen illustrations are a further help to the same end."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 12 '50 650w

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY, ed. Where I found Christ; the intimate personal stories of fourteen converts to the Catholic faith. 271p $2.50 Doubleday

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Converts 50-9175

Fourteen converts to the Roman Catholic faith describe their conversions. They are: Katherine Burton, Duane G. Hunt, Lucile Hasley, Avery Robert Dulles, Elizabeth Laura Adams, Edward O. Dodson, Dorothy Day, David Goldstein, Jocelyn M. C. Toynbee, Daniel Sargent, Dale Francis, Raïssa Maritain, Christopher Hollis, Thomas Merton.

"The book forms an interesting and enlightening comment on the characteristics of the Church which stand out as prevalent motives of conversion."
+ Cath World 172:160 N '50 140w

"The book is no doubt designed for searchers for the truth in the hope that these testimonies may help them along the way to Rome. The editor has an opening and closing chapter of interpretation in which this purpose is made quite clear. But Protestants might also profit by reading this book through discovering what these fourteen people found lacking in the Protestant churches."
Kirkus 18:594 O 1 '50 200w

"The accounts vary in style and, possibly, in value. Yet all are sincere." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p23 Ag 20 '50 140w

O'BRIEN, KATE. That lady; a romantic drama. 143p $2.50 Harper

822 Philip II, king of Spain—Drama 50-6805

A play about the Princess of Eboli and Philip II of Spain, based on the author's novel For One Sweet Grape (Book Review Digest 1946).

Booklist 46:259 Ap 15 '50

Kirkus 18:84 F 1 '50 30w

O'BRIEN, KATE—Continued

"[The play] is romantic but extremely undramatic and windy. Recommended only to those theatre and drama collections desiring completeness." George Freedley

— + Library J 75:698 Ap 15 '50 40w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 My '50

O'BRIEN, ROBERT WILLIAM. College Nisei. 165p $3.50 Pacific bks.

325.252 Japanese in the U.S. Students 50-5088

"Presented in a brief and non-complex fashion, this is an account of one aspect of the 'evacuation and internment of American citizens by their own Government in wartime.' This study treats the mechanics of Nisei students relocation and gives some consideration of its reciprocal effects. Postwar distributions of the students in colleges and universities show a marked dispersion to all parts of the country from the prewar concentration of the Pacific Coast. This scattering contributed a great deal to inter-racial education and helped speed up the assimilation process. More attention is devoted in this book to postwar adjustment than to the disparaging damage of the evacuation." (San Francisco Chronicle) Indexes.

"There are only a few errors in the whole work. . . What contribution this book makes to the professional literature remains to be seen, although the reviewer believes that it will not be substantial." F. E. LaViolette

Am J Soc 56:298 N '50 420w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 12 '50 130w

"In this short volume, Professor O'Brien gives us a valuable insight into the relocation policy as it affected Nisei students who left the various internment centers for college work during the war period. . . Professor O'Brien deserves the thanks of both scholars and community leaders for pointing out new methods and procedures for aiding the acculturation process." R. A. Schermerhorn

+ Social Forces 29:94 O '50 650w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Cock-a-doodle dandy. 104p $1.50 Macmillan

822 [49-6054]

"A symbolic play of Irish life. Its only scene is the front garden outside Michael Marthraun's house in the small parish of Nyadnanave. The time is the present. The play is written in the Irish dialect laced with the familiar quotations which give O'Casey's autobiographies their quasi-folk flavor. The theme is the theme of Sean O'Faolain's recent book, 'The Irish': How can a man live a full life in the Ireland of today?" Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 46:332 Jl 1 '50

Bookmark 9:216 Je '50 10w

Chicago Sun p9 Ap 16 '50 70w

"Although the theme is a serious one, O'Casey has a lot of fun with it. Like the Irish people, he likes to treat a serious thing as a joke and a joke as a serious thing. A grand commotion enlivens much of this new play." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 F 25 '50 1000w

"The play is a fairy story all really happening to people real and alive. It is a sheer delight to read, especially for the incomparable comic richness of the speech. Whether it will preserve its flavor on the stage, which usually compels us to take things more literally, remains to be seen." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 9 '50 350w

"Much of the grand humor in the play is of the visual, slap-stick variety, albeit the best of it sparkles in the arguments of Michael and Sailor Mahan; few can equal O'Casey's drawing of two oul' ones sitting down to a bit of argufyin'. Much of the symbolism is visual, too, extended to light and color and the objectification of thought and feeling in many bits of funny business. O'Casey's satire on Eire's banning of books, movies and plays is lively and much to the point." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p12 F 19 '50 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 9 '50 40w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Collected plays. 2v 314;354p set $5 Macmillan

822 [50-617]

Contents: v 1, Juno and the paycock; The shadow of a gunman; The plough and the stars; The end of the beginning; A pound on demand; v2, The silver tassie; Within the gates; The star turns red.

"After a generation, how fresh O'Casey's Irish plays are, how the characters even today seem to walk out of the printed page as large as life. From the exciting but still tentative 'Shadow of a Gunman' with its flat ending, through the tremendous 'Juno and the Paycock' marred by occasional lapses of craftsmanship, to the full final mastery of 'The Plough and the Stars,' one finds everywhere above the obvious and incidental plot the vital amazing characters that O'Casey created; created in the full sense of the word—for he gave them a life of their own, independent of himself." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 F 25 '50 900w

Manchester Guardian p5 D 28 '49 250w

"Little remains to be said, in a brief review, about the Irish plays of Volume One. Deservedly world famous, they are securely among the best plays of our time. Few living dramatists have been capable of the living texture, of the powerful and beautiful performances of, for instance, 'Juno and the Paycock' and 'The Plough and the Stars.' Coming to the later plays, passing 'The Silver Tassie,' we have another O'Casey sensibility and nature to examine. Where before he spoke out of his bestirred-up total poet's self, out of his total devils and angels, mixed and conglomerate, literally 'beyond himself,' now it is with the mere angel's tongue of 'literature' that O'Casey chooses to speak. . . Of course, there is the greatest beauty and worthiness in everything that O'Casey writes." Clifford Odets

+ N Y Times p5 F 5 '50 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 9 '50 120w

Reviewed by John Garrett

Spec 184:248 F 24 '50 650w

"The literary affiliations of Mr. O'Casey may be traced without much difficulty, but the problem of his development still remains tantalising. We may blush at his purpureal passages, sob in spite of ourselves in pit or stall at his most affecting moments, but his sheer exuberance, his variety of invention and his diversity of technical skill are quite irresistible."

Times [London] Lit Sup p806 D 9 '49 1000w

O'CONNELL, CHARLES. Victor book of overtures, tone poems, and other orchestral works. 614p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

785.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Orchestral music 50-8136

Based on an earlier work, The Victor Book of the Symphony, originally published in 1934. "The scope of the present volume is indicated by the fact that the original book, which included symphonies, concertos, and all other forms of orchestral works, listed 316 titles, while on the following pages will be found almost exactly the same number of titles—that is, 318—devoted to the shorter forms alone. The author has availed himself of the accounts of something over a hundred of these given in his older book, now out of print. Wherever more recent scholarships has turned up new facts, appropriate revisions have been made. [However] entirely new material constitutes the major portion of this volume." (Publisher's pref) Discography.

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50

Kirkus 18:199 Mr 15 '50 70w

"The author talks to his readers on an untechnical, program-note level. He sketches swiftly, taking apparent pleasure in short-circuiting the aura that surrounds his subjects: Mozart was a spendthrift; Offenbach's real name was Levy; Beethoven, if he were alive today, would probably be a parlor-pink, etc." Carter Harman

N Y Times p15 Je 18 '50 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 30 '50 220w

O'CONNOR, BETTY, ed. Better homes and gardens storybook; favorite stories and poems from children's literature, with illustrations from famous editions. 151p $2.95 Meredith pub co, 1716 Locust st, Des Moines 3, Iowa

808.8 50-9504

Fifty favorite stories and poems, some of them with copies of the original pictures and decorations. Partial contents: The little red hen, by H. D. Fish; The story of little Black Sambo, by Helen Bannerman; The owl and the pussy cat, by Edward Lear; The tale of Peter Rabbit, by Beatrix Potter; The wonderful tar-baby story, by J. C. Harris; The king's breakfast, by A. A. Milne; Rain, by R. L. Stevenson; The Brownies' circus, by Palmer Cox; The elephant's child, by Rudyard Kipling; The flag goes by, by H. H. Bennett; The lion and the mouse, by Aesop; The night before Christmas, by C. M. Moore.

Booklist 47:15 S 1 '50

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 12 '50 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '50

"Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 75:1514 S 15 '50 90w

"Such a book will bring the pleasure of many pieces of good books and the work of a variety of famous children's artists to many thousands of homes which never would buy all of the books themselves. It is a hodgepodge, but a very happy one, and useful for any pre-school shelf." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 O 8 '50 300w

"It would, of course, be more fun to meet Peter Rabbit and Little Black Sambo for the first time in the original handy-sized editions, but for the family which is limited as to budget or shelf space this is a fine sampler of classics and near-classics. It is liberally illustrated in line and color, in most cases with the original pictures—and great care has been taken to preserve their charm." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p34 O 8 '50 150w

New Yorker 26:186 D 2 '50 120w

Springf'd Republican p8B S 3 '50 90w

O'CONNOR, GEORGE W. Railroads of New York. 144p il $4 Simmons-Boardman

385 Railroads—New York (city) 50-147

"A picture story of railroading in and around New York city." (Subtitle) The author is a former New York railroad man.

"The author of this book has done a good job. The photographs are interesting, and the same can be said of the supplementary facts and anecdotes. This is probably the only book of the kind in which New York City's subway trains are treated from the rail fan's peculiar viewpoint."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:73 S '50

"The introduction to each section gives data dear to the heart of the camera-carrying species of railfan. . . The photographs that make up the bulk of the volume vary from good to poor, and the reproduction is not of a very high quality. In an envelope inside the back cover are two clear maps, one of the subway and elevated lines, the other of the New York harbor terminals." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 9 '50 90w

O'CONNOR, WILLIAM VAN. The shaping spirit; a study of Wallace Stevens. 146p $2.75 Regnery

811 Stevens, Wallace 50-7455

"A critical evaluation of Wallace Stevens' poetry and the dominant theme in his writing, the relationship between imagination and reality." (Publishers' Weekly) Bibliography.

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 29 '50 120w

"This study of Wallace Stevens affords a key to his obscure castle. And perhaps surprisingly, when one has entered the marmoreal facade of his measured and classical rhythms (with the aid of Mr. O'Connor's illumination) one finds within more of the Dionysic force, more color, more belief in the imagination as the supreme shaper, than would have seemed possible. For Stevens admirers, this fine little book provides this key. It is interesting, provocative; it will stimulate rereading for those familiar with Stevens, and persuade others to venture into the field of a fine contemporary talent. The book is modestly written, with no fanfare of intellectual subtleties; a first rate piece of literary interpretation, which ranks high in the none too crowded realm of criticism."

+ Kirkus 18:160 Mr 1 '50 150w

"Once we accept, in the present study, the premise that Wallace Stevens is the most important poet of the century save Eliot, the analysis of his work that follows seems worth while and even brilliant. If one does not accept the premise, the study may seem extraordinarily humorless and even irrelevant." Selden Rodman

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 4 '50 900w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '50 700w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 26:130 O 28 '50 50w

"The Shaping Spirit is an uncommonly successful beginning in the study of a poet who both needs and deserves close and intelligent investigation. As Mr. O'Connor says in his prefatory note, 'There will be later books about him, written with a knowledge of his completed work and in the perspective of time.' These later books will have to provide a less random exposition of Stevens' theory of imagination; they will also undoubtedly avail themselves of the genuinely valuable details provided by the sensitive and perceptive author of this book." F. J. Hoffman

+ Poetry 76:355 S '50 800w

"It is a considerable temptation to any student of Wallace Stevens to let this poet speak for himself: and so it is probably inevitable that some of the wisest words in Mr. O'Connor's study are Stevens's own. Nor has he fallen, in his own style, under the spell of Stevens's word-magic (though this may be just as well). However, Mr. O'Connor does make clear what the poetry of Wallace Stevens is driving at." G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 33:19 Jl 1 '50 550w

Reviewed by L. L. Martz

Yale R n s 40:152 autumn '50 240w

O'DONNELL, BERNARD. Old Bailey and its trials. 226p il $2.50 Macmillan

343.1 Trials. London. Central criminal court [50-14043]

"A history of the Central Criminal Court in London, with special emphasis on the gradual changeover from the highly arbitrary variety of justice dispensed there in the seven-

O'DONNELL, BERNARD—Continued
teenth century to the more humane and even-tempered present-day type." (New Yorker) Photographs.

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 S 10 '50 200w

"As entertainment, 'The Old Bailey and Its Trials' somehow fails to come off. Perhaps it is the horror which one feels at some of the realistic descriptions of early forms of punishment, or perhaps the repetitive quality of some of the narration, which leaves the reader dissatisfied." Covington Hardee
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 23 '50 270w

"Mr. O'Donnell lingers rather too long, though understandably, in the early, picturesque era, when highwaymen, perjurers, imposters, and people who had only filched a bit of ribbon were being sentenced within the walls of the original Old Bailey. In dealing with more recent trials, he has managed to steer clear of the merely flashy ones and has stressed less well-known cases that hinged on interesting or debatable points of law."
New Yorker 26:85 Ag 19 '50 140w

"In its way a modern counterpart of The Newgate Calendar, it will fascinate those who have a taste for crime so long as it's true. . . In general, Mr. O'Donnell is best when he is writing the history of the Court, and least effective in his narratives of actual cases, when his weaknesses in technique lead him to write, much too often, 'but I am anticipating my story'—almost always a tacit confession that the writer isn't up to the discipline of organizing his material." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '50 800w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:48 O 14 '50 230w

"The Old Bailey is weakest where it might have been richest: in Author O'Donnell's sketchy, fleshless recounting of the trials that took place there through the centuries. . . Like the unblindfolded statue atop the 'new' Old Bailey (erected in 1907), Justice finally has her eyes open in 20th Century England. But just to keep his fellow countrymen from congratulating themselves, Author O'Donnell reminds them that only a century or so ago a nine-year-old boy could be sentenced to death for stealing tuppence."
Time 52:72 Ag 7 '50 900w

O'FAOLAIN, SEAN. Summer in Italy. 248p il $3.50 Devin-Adair
914.5 Italy—Description and travel 50-7277

"A leisurely, rambling commentary on a 1948 tour of the cities of the north and central portions of Italy. The itinerary followed is common but the Irish writer's observations on people, architecture, and art—what they mean to each other today—and his habit of inserting Irish contrasts are original." Booklist

Booklist 46:273 My 1 '50
Bookmark 9:210 Je '50 30w

"An amusing, wholly unpredictable, humorous, description of persons and places. . . No intelligent reader, whether familiar or unacquainted with Italy, will put this book down quickly, although some will be annoyed, at least occasionally. It is O'Faolain at his best."
+ Cath World 171:320 Jl '50 110w

"Sean O'Faolain has written many first rate short stories, a novel or two, some biografies and other books about Ireland and the Irish. But this new book of his, this warm, passionate book about Italy is better than any of them, fine as most of them were." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 23 '50 300w

"On one score alone, a political point, will substantial disagreements arise. Whatever be the merits of the Italian bourgeoisie, it has unified Italy. To constantly bemoan that fact is as futile as was the determination of the Congress of Vienna to ignore the French Revolution. But this is a picayune point in a work that is throughout so perceptive and so sincerely charming. Mr. O'Faolain has served Italy and himself well." Serge Hughes
+ — Commonweal 52:180 My 26 '50 460w

"A book of greater interest to those who have known the country than to those who plan to go, nevertheless this 1948 travelogue is not only civilized but also essentially non-political."
+ Kirkus 18:154 Mr 1 '50 200w

"It was not Italy's long history, its art and its architecture that most attracted O'Faolain. Like every Northerner, accustomed to rain and cold, he was overwhelmed first by the climate, the sun, the blueness of the sea, by the golden hills and the cypresses, and then, and ever after, by the people, by their inexhaustible zest for living. . . This passion for life, so wholeheartedly embraced and so well described by O'Faolain, should make 'A Summer in Italy' an invaluable gift for the thousands of pilgrims and tourists bound this year for Rome." James Stern
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 14 '50 650w

"This is a book of travel, which, like D. H. Lawrence's 'Twilight in Italy,' is both a portrait of a place and a man, a book which shortens the distance between art and the daily life it sublimates." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p3 My 14 '50 750w

"Although Mr. O'Faolain classifies as a traveller rather than a systematic one, and remarks that the observations made by the former must inevitably be somewhat superficial, this record of a recent summer's ramble through most of Italy contradicts his contention at almost every point. . . In short, his original resolution—not to think while in Italy—has been pretty well tossed to the winds, with highly agreeable results."
+ New Yorker 26:122 My 6 '50 110w

"A Summer in Italy is not only an excellent, heartfelt guide to most of the principal cities of the peninsula, it is also admirably designed to salve the blows of disillusionment that many a pilgrim to Italy this Holy Year is sure to suffer."
+ Time 55:101 My 8 '50 700w
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Je '50

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. Causeway to the past. 223p $2.50 Duell
50-5858

Mystery story.

Kirkus 17:680 D 15 '49 90w

"The obviousness of the plot and of the characters in it rob this mystery of most suspense. The reader is always way ahead of Jeff."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 12 '50 150w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
N Y Times p30 F 26 '50 180w
New Yorker 26:127 Mr 18 '50 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 26 '50 130w

"Swift action and high-tension suspense climax in thrilling gun fight."
Sat R of Lit 33:43 F 25 '50 50w

O'FINN, THADDEUS pseud. Happy holiday! 217p $2.50 Rinehart
50-10279

Detective story.

"The murder plot is strained and the romance almost unbearably coy."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 31 '50 200w

"Reporter Clancy tells the story, without blue-penciling—and a dull, long-winded job it is. Any similarity that may exist between Mr. O'Finn's overpopulated dramatis personae and living people is hardly noticeable." H. M.
— N Y Times p39 N 26 '50 180w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 19 '50 80w

"Outstanding for most irritating heroine-suspect of the year, and little else, except confusion."
— Sat R of Lit 33:38 N 4 '50 40w

O'FLAHERTY, LIAM. Two lovely beasts, and other stories; il. by John H. De Pol. 274p $3 Devin-Adair
50-8649

"A collection of short stories. Liam O'Flaherty has been compared to the Russian writers but his kind of pessimism is peculiarly his own and Irish to the core." Library J

"Two of the stories move from Ireland to the tropics, they are the least successful pieces but the same bitterness is there. In a few cases, the concern is with the horse owners and barristers. But the main attention is given to dour men and women of the west who fish the cold seas or grub the thin earth. These effective pictures are masterfully drawn in harsh, lean language." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 171:472 S '50 210w

Reviewed by J. M. Flynn
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ag 6 '50 380w

"Of the best stories collected in Two Lovely Beasts, this can be said: when Liam O'Flaherty writes of the Irish farmer and the animal, he does so in short stories which are the equal of any written today, in a style alive with the voices of the people." Kelly Cook
+ — Commonweal 52:418 Ag 4 '50 600w

"Sensitive material for the discriminating reader."
+ Kirkus 18:314 Je 1 '50 100w

"This will be wanted for Irish literature shelves as well as short story collections." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 100w

"There are a few stories in the book that are inconsequential, a few that are thin, but enough of the genuine O'Flaherty to make us wish that a good storyteller could be forever at the top of his bent." Milton Rugoff
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 30 '50 750w

"Born of the rock of Aran, Liam O'Flaherty has summed up the life of his breed in a magnificent sheaf of short stories. No one—not even Synge—has written better of the Irish peasant of the West, struggling with harsh land and bitter sea." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 16 '50 1000w

"Mr. O'Flaherty's observations on old age, madness, and death are never anything but trite, except in the case of the title sketch, which is a genuinely emotional account of a poor widow's vain efforts to save herself and her children from the poorhouse."
— + New Yorker 26:67 Ag 5 '50 50w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 12 '50 260w

"Liam O'Flaherty has always had a special and distinguished place among the Irish writers who have continued the Irish revival. His prose may be less melodic than that of O'Casey, his humor less beguiling than that of Frank O'Connor and less tender than O'Casey's, and his descriptions of nature less gentle than those of Sean O'Faolain. But his harsh style has a brilliant precision of its own, his humor its own wry flavor, and—as an Aran Islander—he views the natural world as a place of fierce and ruthless struggle. . . All of this adds up to a writer of power, to whose new production many readers look forward. This latest collection of his short stories must be reported a disappointment." E. J. Fitzgerald
— + Sat R of Lit 33:11 Ag 19 '50 600w

"In the intellectual twilight of the placid, humdrum Ireland that De Valera made, Liam O'Flaherty has become all quaintness and whimsy—and a little lost."
Time 56:96 Jl 17 '50 390w

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING, ed. Technology and international relations [by] Bernard Brodie [and others]. 201p $4 Univ. of Chicago press
609 Technology. International relations
49-8410

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"As a pioneering attempt to deal with a highly important subject [this volume] merits attention and should prove valuable in stimulating political scientists to give further attention to the impact of technological progress on international developments. . . In view of the promising nature of the subject dealt with and the competence of the authors concerned, it is particularly regrettable that Technology and International Relations is, as a whole, disappointing. In the reviewer's opinion the book's basic weakness stems from its uncertainty as to the audience it is intended to reach. . . The fact remains, however, that the book represents a highly worthwhile and ambitious effort to explore the political implications of the major technical changes of recent years, and a number of its chapters make notable contributions to this subject." W. N. Hadsel
+ — Am Pol Sci R 44:227 Mr '50 340w

"The lectures were addressed to laymen, and the book should be worthwhile reading for almost any educated reader interested in the social impact of science and technology."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:30 Mr '50
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:372 S '49 440w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. My world is an island; il. by Paul Galdone. (Whittlesey house publication) 270p $2.75 McGraw B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
50-6573

Record of the author's experiences on a little island off the coast of Maine, where she and two friends bought an old house and expended their combined energies into making it into a home.

Booklist 46:209; 244 Mr 1 '50; Ap 1 '50

"I expect there are some for whom this is just the dish, who will eat it up. For my part, a lake dweller, I view it with a faintly alarmed respect. Also, even where New England reserve might be expected, these books have a way of dragging me struggling, considerably farther into the intimacies and minute details of family life than I care to go on short acquaintance." Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 9 '50 450w

"Racy and vivid, this account of adventures and misadventures on a Maine island is refreshing entertainment and furnishes all would-be Robinson Crusoes with a realistic picture of what awaits them." C. B. Burnett
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 13 '50 450w
+ Kirkus 18:155 Mr 1 '50 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 75:695 Ap 15 '50 100w

"Miss Ogilvie writes with humor about 'gracious living.' She gives patient minutiae of little things heard, seen—birds, storms. She records a passion for not only her own small island but for Criehaven, which she left. Indeed, she makes a case for all islands, as more manageable than larger frames of reference, and she takes your mind off continents and millenniums, and exploits her own content with persuasive vivacity." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 23 '50 400w

"Released from the requirements of fiction, her style becomes endearingly feminine, proliferating richly into sophomoric humor." William McFee
+ N Y Times p15 Ap 9 '50 100w

"It all makes pleasant, informal reading."
+ New Yorker 26:123 Ap 8 '50 120w

"'My World Is an Island' is written sensitively and with charm; the author's light touch in no way hides her deep feeling for islands. So pleasant does she make hers sound that she may well start a seaward movement among people who have not yet lived on an island; to the faint crackling sound, as she herself suggests, of modern sacroiliacs." Ruth Moore

OGILVIE, ELISABETH—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 Ap 8 '50 650w
Springf'd Republican p8C My 7 '50 150w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Italy [text by Marcel Brion and Philippe Lefrançois; foreword by Jean-Louis Vaudoyer; the section on Italian art by Jean Desternes; il. by Beuville and others]. (Whittlesey house publication) 478p maps $6 McGraw

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 50-7632

An introduction to the history, art and character of Italy. "A section on the Italian arts includes a number of pictures from the masters—Giotto, Fra Angelico, Botticelli, Bellini, Michelangelo. . . There is also a section on [Rome and] the Vatican before the book takes off for a tour of the provinces." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 46:302 Je 1 '50

"The Ogrizek volume is not so much a guidebook as it is a thorough study of the history and culture of a nation. It is so carefully bound and tastefully illustrated that it belongs to the permanent library." J. O. Supple
+ Chicago Sun p9 Ap 14 '50 90w

"Unlike all other guide-books of this kind, this one captures the spirit of Naples and Southern Italy. . . One wonders who chose the illustrations. They are quite chaotic, and the reader is never told whence they come, who made them, or seldom what they represent. Moreover, the text, from internal evidence, seems to have been written partly before the war. Cassino village no longer exists but is recommended to the tourist. So are Mantegna's frescoes in Padua (destroyed in 1944 by bombs)." S. S.
— + Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 11 '50 300w

"Like its predecessors on France and Switzerland, the text suffers from a stilted school-boy-type translation, but the material is excellent, well-chosen, and the illustrations in full color are superb. The historical material is deftly woven into the description of famous sites and buildings." Beach Conger
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 28 '50 60w
Sat R of Lit 33:64 My 6 '50 180w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. United States [text by Bettina Wilson and others; tr. by Janine Ribes; il. by Beuville and others]. (Whittlesey house publication; World in color ser) 518p maps $6.50 McGraw

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 50-13529

This story of the United States "is not a history, not a Baedeker, not an armchair travel book, but an informal combination of all three." (N Y Times) The book was first written and published in France and in French by Americans living there. The text has now been translated back into English. Many illustrations from photographs, old prints, and maps and pictures in color. Index.

Chicago Sun p8 Ag 27 '50 260w

"It is a not too well focused mental image of this country, softened perhaps by memories and occasionally sharpened by keen perception. It is highly personal; the authors' personalities do not come through the text but their opinions do, pointedly enough to give some chamber of commerce secretaries a bad time. . . The book is printed in offset which gives fine reproduction and warmth to its illustrations, most of which are in color, including many gay pictorialized maps." P. J. C. Friedlander
+ — N Y Times p19 Ag 20 '50 380w

"Perhaps this land is too large to be contained in one volume, for certainly the book is no 'guide to the forty-eight states' as the dust jacket contends. It is, rather, a pleasant skim of the history and atmosphere and idiosyncrasies of the regional areas of the land and some of its cities. . . It is gratifying to encounter a guide book which suggests restaurants in Washington, although its sections on New York night life are startlingly naive."
Sat R of Lit 33:25 Ag 26 '50 240w

"Statistics have little place in this readable book, with facts and figures presented only incidentally. Much of the descriptive writing is in a casual, sometimes rather cavalier style, with the historical as important as the contemporary." D. B. B.
Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 27 '50 360w

OHLIN, BERTIL GOTTHARD. Problem of employment stabilization. 173p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

338.91 Unemployment. Economic policy. Sweden—Economic policy 49-11701

"Lectures on the Julius Beer Foundation at Columbia, expanded from the Chichele Lectures at Oxford in 1947, by a Swedish economist, former Swedish Minister of Commerce. Discussions on the theoretical and practical effects of over- and under-employment on the economy, and measures which may be taken towards maintaining conditions at nearly-full employment which he regards as desirable. Illustrations from Swedish programs. Examination and disapproval of Keynesean theories." (Library J) Index.

"One approaches this little book of Ohlin's with considerable curiosity. Unfortunately, this curiosity remains unsatisfied. The book consists of seven lectures on various aspects of employment theory delivered by Ohlin in 1947. For the most part, they cast a gentle glow rather than a piercing light on the matters discussed. It is interesting, of course, to learn the author's conclusions on such matters as fiscal policy, buffer stocks, and so on; but our interest in these conclusions derives from our respect for their author. We can only hope that we shall soon be able to read a more detailed account; public lectures of this sort merely whet the appetite." Lorie Tarshis
J Pol Econ 58:359 Ag '50 1100w

"Will be of interest to economists." J. E. Cross
Library J 75:48 Ja 1 '50 80w

"This book is full of sound practical common sense and is remarkably free from the intricacies—as well as the niceties—of theoretical analysis. It presents the issues involved in employment stabilization in a clear and challenging way. If only the opponents of stabilization policies would or could state their arguments with equal clarity, progress toward agreement among economists would be furthered." Arthur Smithies
+ Pol Sci Q 65:464 S '50 750w

O'KANE, WALTER COLLINS. Sun in the sky. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 261p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

970.3 Hopi Indians 50-7404

A popular study of Hopi life and character. It is based on the author's visits to these Indians of northern Arizona. Index.

Booklist 46:301 Je 1 '50

"Delightful book."
+ Bookmark 9:210 Je '50 40w
Current Hist 19:40 Jl '50 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 16 '50 500w

"Mr. O'Kane's writing is rather flat in spots and at times, wishing to convey many items of information, he has let himself get crowded. There are also, especially in the latter part of the book, some passages of excellent writing. The book is profusely supplied with photographs, which are illustrative although not outstanding. The fault of the book lies deeper under the surface. . . Mr. O'Kane is beset by timidity, to the point of dishonesty. . . By a few lines of Victorian evasion, he dismisses the question of Hopi sexual customs with a false implication. . . At the heart of Hopi life is the doctrine known as the Hopi Path. . . If this doctrine has never been expounded to Mr. O'Kane then his contact with the tribe has been much too slight to justify writing a book about it. If he has failed to grasp its dominant importance . . . then he lacks perception. 'Sun in the Sky' will adequately tell the one-day visitor what of interest he may see among the Hopis. It offers little nourishment to one who seeks understanding of them." Oliver La Farge

— + Sat R of Lit 33:36 My 6 '50 600w

School & Society 72:15 Jl 1 '50 40w

"The art and craft teacher will be particularly interested in the clear photographs of jewelry, embroidery, painting, weaving, and pottery that show the details of their highly skilled craftsmanship. An appendix of symbolic decorations with their meaningful interpretation is useful in the classroom study and adaptation of these truly American designs."

+ School Arts 50:60a D '50 110w

OLIVER, MRS MARJORIE MARY. Horseman's island; il. by Bill Wickham. 155p $2.50 Westminster press

50-9219

Three English children go to an ancestral estate in Ireland to spend a holiday. Their adventures include the solving of a mystery.

Reviewed by Francis Cavanah

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 12 '50 150w

Kirkus 18:467 Ag 15 '50 90w

"Good information on breaking horses and riding is woven in pleasurably, and the horses are portrayed as fully and delightfully as the characters. . . Recommended for ages 10-11." E. E. Beatty

+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 80w

"There are many tips on riding, breaking and training horses, making it a book that young horse lovers 9-12 should enjoy."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 12 '50 60w

OLIVER, ROBERT TARBELL. Why war came in Korea. (Fordham univ. press bk) 260p $2.95 McMullen

951.9 Korea 50-9923

"Dr. Oliver discusses the historical background of the present problem, including Korea's long struggle for independence, its existence under Japanese rule and its perplexity under the dual Russian-American occupation. The book is not a study of the present war, but of its backgrounds, and of the signs of trouble which were there to be seen for many years." (Springf'd Republican) No index.

Booklist 47:73 O 15 '50

"The author presents much pertinent material on political and social conditions in Korea, particularly the Korea of 1945-1950. Some of his observations are unusually revealing of national manners and morals, including his remarks upon the importance of the family as a social unit." Kenneth Colegrove

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 29 '50 800w

"In general, this partisan account slights the real complexities of the situation. Nowhere is this more evident than in the rosy picture given of South Korea. . . Such extravagant claims do the author's cause a decided disservice." M. B. Jansen

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 2 '50 470w

"A book which crowds into a few pages as many erroneous statements of fact and as many tendentious judgments as does this one can hardly be recommended to a public already harassed by a barrage of unreliable information on events of the highest importance." H. C. Hinton

— Commonweal 53:44 O 20 '50 750w

"A timely and valuable source of material on the present conflict."

+ Current Hist 19:288 N '50 170w

Kirkus 18:621 O 1 '50 250w

"As he develops the Korean story, Mr. Oliver is bitter about the French in Indo-China, the Dutch in Indonesia, the British in their colonial possessions. As for American policy in the Far East, he believes it has largely been 'blundering good will,' full of mistakes 'of the head rather than of the heart.' . . This is a stimulating, argumentative book with many defects and many virtues." Frank Kelley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 O 8 '50 600w

"Mr. Oliver is an unbiased Rhee partisan, and he has no time for the contrary-minded. The result is a certain lack of balance in an otherwise valuable and concise report on Rhee, the Republic of Korea, and the Korean people. . . Mr. Oliver writes well and easily, and is thoroughly at home with his subject. Reflecting, as he apparently does, Dr. Rhee's opinions, Mr. Oliver has made an important contribution to understanding five significant years of Korea's long and troubled history." Stuart Lillico

+ — N Y Times p14 S 24 '50 450w

Reviewed by A. L. Grey

Sat R of Lit 33:15 N 25 '50 490w

"This is an up-to-the-minute analysis, by an expert on conditions in Asia, showing clearly the Communist challenge to the free nations. . . It is worth-while reading for those who wish to be informed on the problems connected with this important part of Asia." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p8D O 1 '50 230w

OLIVIER, STUART. Wine journeys. 312p $3 Duell

663.2 Wine and wine making. Voyages and travels 49-11996

A record of the author's "wine gypsyings" in France and the Rhine country fifty years ago.

"The memoirs, per se, in their undisguised sentimentality, overfond indulgence can only be irritating save to a few devotees. Offers no competition to the classic G. B. Stern Bouquet."

— + Kirkus 17:571 O 1 '49 100w

"Mr. Olivier is no writer. His book is written in a fearsome cliche-packed jargon that must have given at least one member of his publishing firm acute discomfort, if he read it. On the other hand, the subject-matter will interest the specialist in wines and the enthusiast on the subject. The author did travel widely in European wine areas in the fabulous days wine lovers still mention with respect and envy, and he managed to buy and add to his cellar some marvelous wines. The book has this much to recommend it. In the end, however, the sensitive reader will find, I believe, that Mr. Olivier is a bit too much for him in one respect. There are in his book just too many anecdotes of how cleverly the well-to-do young man waved his American dollars at land-poor Frenchmen and so acquired wines they had cherished." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 3 '49 700w

Sat R of Lit 32:62 D 3 '49 110w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B. O.

O'MALLEY, FRANK, pseud. See O'Rourke, F.

O'MALLEY, PATRICIA. Faraway fields; the career of an airline publicity girl. 244p $2.50 Dodd

49-11482

"Another aviation career story by an author experienced in this field. The heroine is an airline publicity girl whose work takes her from Washington, D.C., to Ireland and Paris. A bit of mystery is included as well as wedding plans." Library J

"An interesting tale which will be enjoyed by girls 12-16." E. E. Franhk

+ Library J 75:330 F 15 '50 50w

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 150w

O'NEILL, EUGENE GLADSTONE. Lost plays. 156p $3 New Fathoms press, ltd, 1430 Broadway, N.Y. 18

812 50-4125

"The plays are curiosities, never before published. . . One of the plays, 'Servitude,' is a three-acter; the other four, 'Abortion,' 'The Movie Man,' 'The Sniper' and 'A Wife for a Life,' are one-acters. All are purported to have been in the bottom of Mr. O'Neill's trunk when he first went to the Wharf Theater in Provincetown, Mass., to launch his now-famous career back in 1916." San Francisco Chronicle

"Crude and bathetic but the dramatic spark of greatness is there. Recommended to large university and public library drama collections." George Freedley

Library J 75:1048 Je 15 '50 60w

"Despite their artificiality, all five of them deal with issues that are not at all artificial. In later years, O'Neill stated his ideas more subtly, clothed them in more tangible flesh, but in these exercises he was at grips with the moral world that has occupied him ever since. Furthermore, these plays are constructed with extraordinary workmanship. They are firmly set on the stage, tightly organized, written so that every line works for its author. O'Neill may not enjoy having his exuberant innocence displayed at this late date, but he will not be embarrassed by his apprentice craftsmanship." R. H.

+ New Repub 123:21 Ag 28 '50 250w

"If the publication of these plays serves any purpose at all, it is to prove (if we needed any proof) that until he drew on his personal experiences as a seaman and a wanderer, O'Neill was a fumbling and uninspired young playwright. There is no word in the book, which has a short introduction by Lawrence Gellert, to inform us who 'found' these 'lost' plays, or why O'Neill consented to their publication after carefully losing them." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 25 '50 550w

"All, despite understandable limitations and weaknesses and being somewhat dated, not only are interesting historically, in light of the author's subsequent development, but also are interesting intrinsically and are extremely stageable." Saul Colin

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 18 '50 1300w

"Despite the collection's preface by Lawrence Gellert, which is prepared with exclamation marks, we can't see that its contents have much merit except as museum pieces. Writing them in his early and mid-20's, the growing giant was still developing his dramatic muscles (which he first flexed in 'Bound East for Cardiff' in 1919). In all of the five the contending forces of youth and maturity, of the hyper-melodramatic theater of the era and the Strindbergian naturalism which O'Neill was to master, are distractingly evident in his style." Luther Nichols

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 25 '50 250w

Reviewed by J. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 33:28 Je 17 '50 2250w

"The 'Lost Plays' adds nothing of importance to the study of O'Neill. In O'Neill's book 'Thirst' you will find early plays that are immature and not very interesting. Intrinsically, the 'lost' plays are dull, and my hope is that no one not already familiar with the later work will get his first impressions of O'Neill by looking at them. I feel sorry for anyone who thinks he has a treat in store for him, and I can imagine no one trying to produce any one of the five plays." B. H. Clark

— Theatre Arts 34:7 Jl '50 900w

O'NEILL, HESTER. Picture story of Hawaii; pictures by Ursula Koering. [49p] $2.50 McKay

996.9 Hawaiian islands—Juvenile literature 50-8271

Brief description of the Hawaiian Islands in text and marginal drawings, giving information on geography, customs, history, legends, industries, education, and government. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 46:339 Jl 1 '50

"The book is both entertaining and informative." A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ag 27 '50 190w

"The author has caught the beauty and serenity of the islands themselves."

+ Kirkus 18:98 F 15 '50 100w

"Highly recommended." C. W. Field

+ Library J 75:1307 Ag '50 70w

"Despite its defects, 'The Picture Story of Hawaii' will be welcome because of its timeliness and the fact that it will be a colorful supplement to the scanty number of books for children on the subject. Ursula Koering's explanatory pictures form a gay border for every page of text." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 16 '50 140w

Sat R of Lit 33:43 S 16 '50 110w

ORGA, IRFAN. Portrait of a Turkish family. 306p $4 Macmillan

915.6 Turkey—Social life and customs

"Born in 1908 in Istanbul, elder son in a wealthy family of old Turkey, the author spent an idyllic childhood there. Those days soon seemed as remote as ancient civilizations, but had been as real as their subtle perfumes. World War I, with its attendant brutalities, began the shattering of the Turkish nation and its centuries-old customs." Library J

Booklist 47:134 D 1 '50

Kirkus 18:625 O 1 '50 130w

"This book is a human document destined to deepen the compassion of American readers ready to share vicariously the experiences of this astonishing family. It should be in every public, college and religious library." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 100w

"Now and then, but not often, a book comes along that gives the reader a small delicious shudder, because it is so exquisite, so right. Irfan Orga's story of his family, before and after the rise of Kemal Ataturk, is such a book: replete with beauty and strangeness, amazingly gentle in its acceptance of destiny." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 26 '50 800w

"Although this book is not an outstanding autobiography and suffers from many shortcomings of style and taste, its subject-matter is so interesting and so little known by the American public at large that it deserves sympathy and attention." Jean De Seguey

+ — N Y Times p12 D 3 '50 460w

"As a family portraitist, Mr. Orga is not only skillful but exceptionally fortunate in his subjects. Both his mother and grandmother, who occupy the foreground of his work, could certainly be classed as remarkable women in any country and at any time."

+ New Yorker 26:74 D 23 '50 180w

"Mr. Orga describes his home in Istanbul with the zestful thoroughness of a nineteenth-century novelist. Indeed, he is something of a masculine, Muslim George Eliot. The purple passages, the rich writing, follow a twentieth-century pattern, but the characters stand out as sharply three-dimensional as the Poyser family, and their background of heavy walnut furniture, white china stoves, and silver trays of coffee becomes as familiar as the Staffordshire farmhouse." Barbara Worsley-Gough

+ Spec 184:264 S 1 '50 360w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 10 '50 120w

"No record of personal experience in such circumstances can be without interest, and the story contrives to tell itself in spite of a poorly constructed narrative and a style which gives proof of the difficulties besetting any foreigner who attempts to write in the English language.

The prose is less awkward in the pages dealing with the social round in Constantinople before the First World War."
Times [London] Lit Sup p544 S 1 '50 900w

ORME, ALEXANDRA. Comes the comrade! [Eng title: From Christmas to Easter]. 376p $4 Morrow

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish 50-6729

Beginning with December 22, 1944, this diary of a Polish woman, "Lida," married to a Hungarian aristocrat, covers the days to the 28th of March, 1945. During that time the Russians were supposed to have "liberated" that section of Hungary. At first Lida had welcomed the Russians, but as it became apparent that their ideas of liberation were very crude, she devoted all her time and intelligence to the task of keeping one step ahead of them.

Booklist 46:269; 285 My 1 '50; My 15 '50

Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 50w

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 171:478 S '50 150w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p4 My 23 '50 110w

"If one can imagine a group of Roman patricians caught by an invading flood of Goths and Vandals one can appreciate the situation which Mrs. Orme describes with a courage, wit and vivacity that should insure her book a large and appreciative audience. There could hardly be a better close-up view of the soviet overrunning of eastern Europe." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 28 '50 700w

"It is the vivid work of a nonprofessional writer who has the gift to observe and the faculty to retain; it is a document that helps to round out the picture of these postwar years; and it is the unwitting self-portrait of a personality as unconcerned about her inhibitions (or occasional lack of same) as she is ignorant about her limitations. . . Mrs. Orme has discovered a great deal about the Soviet army. She has failed, however, to see that, judging exclusively from her own casual remarks about Hungarian peasant life, there was rather a lot of 'liberating' to be drastically done in Hungary." Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p6 My 20 '50 1250w

Foreign Affairs 29:157 O '50 30w

Kirkus 18:49 Ja 15 '50 290w

"Frank, never offensive, this is a rare human document of magnificent courage and indomitable resourcefulness in the face of famine, terror, disease and destruction. Excellent translation from the Polish. Highly recommended." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 75:558 Ap 1 '50 130w

"Any one who wants to try to understand the Russian 'soul' will profit by reading 'Comes the Comrade' and give a sigh of relief when it is possible to say 'goes the Comrade.'" Lorine Pruette
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 21 '50 1000w

"This brisk and bubbly memoir may do more to acquaint Americans with the Russians than a shelf of keen analyses. We have long needed a credible eyewitness report on the incredible Red Army. True, no book can be quite convincing; one has to see the Russians before one can really believe. However, the next best thing will be this persuasive testimony from a woman who was 'liberated' by the Soviets in Hungary. She has emerged passably intact Now, in this volume, she offers down-to-earth evidence of her emancipators' astonishing antics." Hal Lehrman
+ N Y Times p4 My 21 '50 1400w

+ New Yorker 26:120 My 20 '50 1400w

"The story Mrs. Orme has written rather matches its subject matter. You like it, you don't like it, it moves you, it frightens you, you admire it, it disgusts you. But because it pictures a people we need to understand, it needs to be read." Eleanor Breed
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 17 '50 800w

"The credibility of the account is considerably weakened by strange contradictions. . . While the book fails to reveal the real meaning of the conflict that opposes Communist and Western psychologies, it contains several amusing episodes. . . The author is at her best when dealing with such episodes. But as a whole her book is rather disappointing—even for people who happen, as this reviewer, to have an excellent dentition and are almost six feet tall." Edmund Demaitre
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:31 Jl 22 '50 850w

+ Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 310w

ORMSBEE, THOMAS HAMILTON. Care and repair of antiques. 168p il $3 McBride

708.044 Collectors and collecting. Antiques 49-10941

"Advice for beginning collectors on judging the authenticity of an antique and its date. Basing instructions on his personal experiences the author gives practical methods for repairing and refinishing furniture, restoring prints, caring for glass, pewter, and brass." Booklist

Booklist 46:154 Ja 1 '50

Bookmark 9:105 F '50 30w

"Mr. Ormsbee is of the 'leave alone' school in restoration, altho he is sensible enough to recognize that most antiques will have to be repaired and put into shape for everyday use, and he is also not very confident of the skill of amateur repairmen. His opinions, however, sound as tho they had a solid financial wisdom and experience behind them, and they deserve respect." Russell MacFall
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ja 29 '50 200w

"A small book which contains much information not otherwise available. . . An index would certainly improve it still further in librarians' eyes." A. S. Plaut
+ — Library J 75:107 Ja 15 '50 130w

Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 120w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Mr '50

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). Best go first. 244p $2.50 Random house 50-9964

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:490 Ag 15 '50 70w

"Directly told and competent without any particular distinction."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 O 29 '50 150w

"An inventive chase story, with the reader solving the mystery step by step with the professionals." James Kelly
N Y Times p40 O 15 '50 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 5 '50 100w

"Excitement plenty but confusing."
Sat R of Lit 33:47 O 21 '50 60w

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). Bonus rookie. 179p $2.50 Barnes, A.S. 50-14743

"[The] team is the Phillies (thinly veiled) and [the] hero a shy Minnesota edition of Walter Johnson who won't let loose with his hard one for fear of committing manslaughter. When the boy finally shakes off his squeamishness and fires his fast ball through, everything that was wrong before gets right." N Y Times

O'ROURKE, FRANK—Continued

Booklist 47:100 N 1 '50

"Frank O'Rourke's byline on a baseball yarn is invariably a guarantee of good reading. This is no exception." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 22 '50 60w

Kirkus 18:474 Ag 15 '50 80w

N Y Times p8 N 12 '50 130w

"A solid no-nonsense baseball story." W. R. White

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 12 '50 50w

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). Greatest victory, and other baseball stories. 206p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

50-6235

Contents: The greatest victory; The last time up; The best position; Nothing new; Flashing spikes; Home game; Decision; One more inning; The last out; The twentieth game; Last accounting; Delayed decision.

Booklist 46:236 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 2 '50 100w

"These stories do not have the sensitivity and humor which characterize Ring Lardner's stories, but O'Rourke catches the drama of the nine-inning great moments, the kindly and sentimental cynicism and loyalty of the baseball players, and the sounds and color of a great crowd waiting under a hot sun for the pitcher to take the long walk to the mound. This collection is baseball writing in the grand manner with an appeal for the whole family from teen-age up."

+ Kirkus 18:136 Mr 1 '50 110w

"Human interest stories, permeated with a fine sense of sportsmanship. Excellent reading for baseball fans and young people." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:172 F 1 '50 70w

ORTON, WILLIAM AYLOTT. Economic role of the state. 192p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

338.91 Economic policy. U.S.—Politics and government 50-6330

"This book had its origin in a course of lectures given at the University of Chicago in October, 1948, on the Charles R. Walgreen Foundation for the Study of American Institutions. The text has since been revised and expanded, but the cardinal aim is unchanged; namely, a 'recurrence to fundamental principles.' That aim controls both the nature of the argument and the selection (or omission) of illustrative material." (Pref) Partial contents: The role of the intellectuals; The moral basis of the state; From humanism to paternalism; The debit account; Distributive justice in action; Commutative justice in action; Where lies security?

"Wise and witty lectures. . . Old-fashioned liberals will read this slim volume with pleasure. It is to be hoped that eager reformers, who would use the coercive power of the State to bring Utopia here and now, will not neglect it. . . [However] the reviewer is highly sceptical of some of Professor Orton's practical conclusions." J. V. Van Sickle

+ Am Econ R 40:671 S '50 750w

Reviewed by F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 44:1010 D '50 750w

Reviewed by K. C. Cole

Ann Am Acad 271:204 S '50 600w

Booklist 46:311 Je 15 '50

Current Hist 18:355 Je '50 40w

Kirkus 18:189 Mr 15 '50 220w

"Careful reading of this book leaves the reader in some doubt where William A. Orton would emerge with his principles, if he pursued his way painfully through the maze of realities to which they would have to be applied. But the book is short, the minor premises are largely lacking, and the reader has to be content with a few hints. . . I have two major objections to his deductions. His principles are not self-applying, but need to be adjusted to our complex world by careful planning. . . And he is unnecessarily antagonistic to the application of science to human problems." George Soule

N Y Times p15 My 21 '50 850w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Sat R of Lit 33:19 My 6 '50 800w

School & Society 71:158 Mr 11 '50 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:321 S '50 280w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

Yale R n s 39:733 summer '50 450w

ORWELL, GEORGE, pseud. (ERIC BLAIR). Burmese days. new ed 287p $3 Harcourt

50-3534

First published in this country several years ago (Book Review Digest 1934). The book pictures the life of the white man of the ruling class in Burma. Partly it is the story of the attempt of a corrupt native politician to get into the white man's club; partly it is about the courtship of one of the Englishmen and a girl recently out from England.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 185:78 Mr '50 370w

"The arrogant, lazy, whisky swilling Englishmen are, almost without exception, as unlovely a group as you'd ever meet. . . The women, including the heroine are pale and bloodless. Nevertheless, 'Burmese Days' is a well integrated, fast moving story of what life was like in a remote backcountry Asiatic station, and is well worth reading. It is the only one of the three that I can conscientiously recommend." Kelsey Guilfoil

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 22 '50 200w

Nation 170:110 F 4 '50 440w

Reviewed by James Stern

New Repub 122:18 F 20 '50 700w

"It is certainly an absorbing story, not as subtle as Forester's 'Passage to India' but more caustic, and in particular the character of Lieutenant Verall (who despised the club members from his own superior heaven of Army and blue blood) is a masterpiece of acid delineation." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 22 '50 240w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p4 Ja 22 '50 250w

New Yorker 25:94 F 11 '50 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 22 '50 500w

"'Burmese Days,' though a work of less breadth and subtlety, can take an honorable place beside 'A Passage to India' (which it suggests inevitably) for anyone wishing a complete study of a waning British colonial era." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 F 18 '50 180w

Time 55:87 F 6 '50 340w

ORWELL, GEORGE, pseud. (ERIC BLAIR). Coming up for air. 278p $3 Harcourt

50-5002

"The story is simple. Its central figure is George Bowling, a fattish, sedentary 45, happy enough with his lot as an insurance salesman. . . Then something happened to George. One of his bets paid off, and he had some cash that his wife knew nothing about. With this and his brand-new set of false teeth, he felt skittish for the first time in years. He could do a lot of things. What George chooses to do is to visit Lower Binfield, the village in which he was born. And this gives Mr. Orwell the chance to display, through George's recollections, a panorama of the years between the middle 1890's and the years just before World War II. Here it is—what it was and what it is, what has gone wrong with it, and a good deal about why." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 185:78 Mr '50 370w

"Excellent characterization and rueful humor."

+ Bookmark 9:108 F '50 70w

"Bowling is never completely believable; he is supposed to be obtuse, uneducated, but Orwell's Etonian background keeps breaking into Bowling's musings. Orwell is condescending; he apparently believes that cheap living quarters mean cheap mentalities. His depiction of middle-class life is sternly amoral. A cleverly written book that can be enjoyed as a biased sociological study of the England of a decade ago." Mary Sandrock

Cath World 170:474 Mr '50 290w

Reviewed by Edward Uzemack

Chicago Sun p6 Ap 2 '50 150w

"It would be hard to imagine that 'Coming Up for Air' would be accepted by any American publisher if it were submitted for publication under an unknown name. It is written in the first person and reads like an interminable monolog—a monolog all the worse in that the narrator seems to be talking to himself, rather than to an audience. Only in a few brief passages does it reach the level of true narrative. . . This graceless and heavy life history is scarcely redeemed by Orwell's views on the damage done to mankind by the encroachments of industrial civilization on the simple pleasure and pastimes of former days. For all his philosophy, George Bowling is a dull dog." Kelsey Guilfoil

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 22 '50 300w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 26 '50 240w

"Orwell never abandons his story. Throughout, he is loyal to his novel and to his characters. What he has to say about the good old days really fits in with the story he is telling. And he is as sentimental about poor old George Bowling as he is about the days before 1914." John Cogley

Commonweal 51:466 F 3 '50 850w

Kirkus 18:9 Ja 1 '50 250w

"This tale is for the GO admirers rather than the general novel reader." K. T. Willis

Library J 75:173 F 1 '50 150w

"The book has a few neat vignettes of middle-class life, but nothing that a good many contemporary English novelists have not done better."

— + Nation 170:110 F 4 '50 440w

Reviewed by James Stern

New Repub 122:18 F 20 '50 700w

"'Coming Up for Air' is, by any standards, a work of rare vigor and imagination. . . And if it confirms one's estimate of Mr. Orwell as a major prophet among the world's still lively minority of thinking men, it shows also an intermediate stage in a process that may yet prevent him from becoming a very great novelist—a certain hardening of earlier compassion into a mould of intransigence." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 22 '50 950w

"The feat is that Mr. Orwell makes the engaging Mr. Bowling plausible. A second, even more extraordinary feat, is that the sordid and hopeless story . . . is transformed into a charming, cheerful, minor masterpiece. It is a piece of magic that eludes the reader and one can only guess at the reasons for this strange phenomenon. The secret may reside in the character of Bowling. . . Or perhaps, though 'Coming Up' is as gloomy in its way as Mr. Orwell's much better known novel of totalitarianism, 'Nineteen Eighty-Four,' its wit and artistry is healthful enough to transmute the poisonous content into a unified work of delight." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 22 '50 250w

New Yorker 25:94 F 11 '50 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 22 '50 500w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Sat R of Lit 33:19 F 18 '50 600w

Time 55:87 F 6 '50 340w

ORWELL, GEORGE, pseud. (ERIC BLAIR). Down and out in Paris and London. new ed 213p $2.75 Harcourt

914.436 Paris—Social conditions. London—Social conditions 50-5265

An account of one man's poverty-stricken life as a dishwasher in Paris and a tramp in London. The book was first published here in 1933 (Book Review Digest 1933).

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 185:78 Mr '50 370w

"'Down and Out in Paris and London' relates what happened to a man without any practical training who became penniless in Paris, and his struggle to make a living in that city and in London. Altho the story contains many sociological details about the hotel and restaurant kitchens in which [the hero] worked, and the life of a tramp in England, it is repetitious and plotless, wearisome to an extreme degree." Kelsey Guilfoil

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 22 '50 70w

Nation 170:110 F 4 '50 440w

Reviewed by James Stern

New Repub 122:18 F 20 '50 700w

"'Down and Out in Paris and London' is grim stuff, sometimes a bit foolish, as when it solemnly discusses comparative values of English and French swear-words." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 22 '50 360w

"'Down and Out' is an excellent work of its kind: it has no narrative pretense but it is a model of the realistic approach." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 22 '50 250w

New Yorker 25:94 F 11 '50 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 22 '50 500w

"Some of the writing is splendid and vivid, with fascinating details of the life of the plongeur in Paris (a combination of bus-boy and dishwasher) and of the British tramp. . . The book . . . is graphic at times horrific, in its depiction of the extremes of privation. We feel it is all true and that he was there. Curiously, however, in the case of the narrator, there is an effect of a compulsive psychologic drive into this depth of abasement, for I never find myself convinced that he is forced inescapably into this state, without recourse or option." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 F 18 '50 320w

Time 55:87 F 6 '50 340w

ORWELL, GEORGE, pseud. (ERIC BLAIR). Shooting an elephant, and other essays. 200p $2.75 Harcourt

824 50-10343

"With the title essay there are eighteen gems of thought in this posthumous volume. Book lovers will delight in 'Books vs. Cigarettes' but there is a pertinent idea in each one of the sketches that range from literature to political theory and—just life." Library J

Booklist 47:133 D 1 '50

Reviewed by J. A. Clark

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 10 '50 550w

"What Orwell has left us is what we rightly expect of every good humanist, a renewed sense of the proportion of things. This sense does not require, and indeed it can be hampered by, recondite learning or subtle reasoning. In Animal Farm and Nineteen Eighty-Four he showed the political mania of our age in proper perspective; and in this collection of essays he speaks, not of cabbages and kings, but of equally disparate subjects in the same humanizing spirit." R. M. Weaver

+ Commonweal 53:283 D 22 '50 850w

Kirkus 18:650 O 15 '50 90w

"Don't miss this volume—and do go back and collect the six that precede it." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 75:1904 N 1 '50 110w

ORWELL, GEORGE—Continued

Reviewed by Christopher Sykes
New Repub 123:30 D 4 '50 650w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 40:388 O 28 '50 1150w

"The name piece [is] Shooting an Elephant. . . This dreadful little tale, surely one of the best things Orwell ever did, exemplifies his highest qualities both as a writer and a thinker —the simplicity of his style and his desperate refusal to humbug himself. . . Orwell's self-scrutiny is continually purified by its own intellectual level; one never feels that the pose is that of having no pose, and his astringent influence on the life as well as the literature of our age makes his death all the more untimely." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 3 '50 750w

"His descriptions in this volume of a political prisoner being hanged, or of how the poor die in a Paris hospital, not only disturb our political conscience but bring us into contact with the underlying terror of existence itself. At such moments Orwell is very near to being a writer like Tolstoy, and one feels that it was only a kind of perversity of his own nature that prevented him from being a consistently great writer. . . This selection of essays is so representative of Orwell's strengths and weaknesses as to resemble a slide rule which one can apply to take the measure of his achievement." Stephen Spender
N Y Times p4 O 29 '50 1000w

"Before he died early this year, Orwell was working on a collection of his essays. Shooting an Elephant, the portion he completed, is a trim little book of autobiographical reminiscence, literary criticism and incidental journalism. It has all the customary Orwell virtues: humor, moderation, intelligence. Though one of his minor works, it reinforces the impression left by Nineteen Eighty-four—that Orwell was one of the few genuinely important writers of these times."
+ Time 56:110 N 13 '50 800w

"Shooting an Elephant closes with excerpts from Orwell's column in Tribune, 'I Write as I Please.' Though there are pleasant things in these fragments of light journalism they are unsuitable for inclusion with the serious essays; and it is perhaps a pity that those responsible did not arrange for the politico-literary pieces . . . to be published separately with an appropriate introduction. These serious reflections are of far greater interest than the earlier 'realistic' sketches. They show Orwell's growth as a writer, and indicate what a loss his death has caused to the literary scene of our time."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p656 O 20 '50 1750w

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud). Modern parables. 153p $1.75 Doubleday 818 50-8628

Thirty-six stories reprinted from the author's newspaper columns. These true accounts demonstrate rules for constructive living.

"By and large the best stories deal with persons whose identities must be concealed under pseudonyms. Mr. Oursler is deft about his moral, letting the story disclose it without pointing it out, as is proper in a parable. His sincere religious approach fits his book in religious teaching." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 6 '50 280w

"The 'Parables' are all right, in an unimportant way." W. E. G.
Christian Century 67:869 Je 19 '50 80w

"While Oursler is a Catholic there is nothing sectarian about this book. Indeed it is only in the broadest sense a religious book. The stories will no doubt provide illustrative material for many a sermon, many a lecture. If the sermons and lectures are as well written as these parables, the hearers will sit up and listen. But if they are of the same spiritual depth, no one will find himself beyond the life lines."
+ Kirkus 18:310 Je 1 '50 220w

"There are sermons in stones, and Mr. Oursler finds them even in pebbles. These pebbly parables take up little space; they are as smooth as marbles and have a shining moral—be kind, be patient, judge not, fear not, miracles do happen."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Jl 16 '50 180w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson
N Y Times p17 Jl 23 '50 150w

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 20 '50 60w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 90w

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud). Why I know there is a God. 192p $2 Doubleday
231 God. Faith. Christian life 50-9261

"In offering this small volume to the public my intention is to help those who are seeking truth, by telling personal experiences of myself, and of others, of far greater usefulness in the world, who know God and love Him and serve Him. One can know there is a God most completely by loving God and serving Him, and so I have presented here examples of what happens when one dedicates a life to His service." (Introd) There are anecdotes about Albert Schweitzer, Madame Kasenkina, Branch Rickey, Jackie Robinson, and Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, among others.

Booklist 47:35 S 15 '50

+ Kirkus 18:594 O 1 '50 110w

"Highly recommended." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 140w

"Fulton Oursler seems to have an endless supply of good stories of the sort he included in 'Modern Parables,' stories of human experience that convince him of the existence of God. . . Mr. Oursler, with his usual power and clarity of expression, tells enough about himself to indicate his past and present attitudes toward Christianity." G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 27 '50 320w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver
Springf'd Republican p12C S 17 '50 550w

OURSLER, WILLIAM CHARLES. Murder memo to the commissioner; the Carl Houston case; documents included: Oct. 1949-Aug. 1950. unp il pa $1 Simon & Schuster
50-14307

Detective story.

Chicago Sun p4 S 12 '50 70w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 1 '50 60w

"The murder device is a little less than credible and the mystery is a little thin, but the tricky format of this Murder Memo is undeniably intriguing."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 1 '50 150w

"Carefully organized to tell a coherent story, these 'documents' have a fascination of their own. The solution to the locked-room killing is far-fetched, but just as a novelty the book is good fun." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p29 O 8 '50 220w

"This collection of photostats of simulated police reports, newspaper clippings, letters, and official memoranda is hardly a book (it costs only a dollar), but it makes an entertaining novelty, and almost all the material in it looks remarkably authentic."
New Yorker 26:124 S 16 '50 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 1 '50 100w

Springf'd Republican p12D D 3 '50 110w

OUSPENSKY, PETER DEMIANOVICH. See Uspenskii, P. D.

OVERHOLSER, WAYNE D. (JOSEPH WAYNE, pseud). Draw or drag. 172p $2.50 Macmillan 50-5515

Western story.

"Recommended to any one who likes better than average stories of early days in the west." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 26 '50 120w
Kirkus 17:664 D 1 '49 70w
Wis Lib Bul 46:29 F '50

OVERHOLSER, WAYNE D. (JOSEPH WAYNE, pseud). Sweet and bitter land. 218p $2.50 Dutton 50-8993

Western story.

Booklist 47:119 N 15 '50

"Here's a new western author and he's tops. Joseph Waynes' first range novel is one of the best of its kind, with fine characterizations, a good plot, and fast moving fists and sixguns." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 3 '50 60w
Kirkus 18:317 Je 1 '50 90w

"Better than average 'western' ". J. E. Brown
+ Library J 75:1411 S 1 '50 130w

OWEN, WILFRED. Automotive transportation; trends and problems. 154p $2 Brookings 388.3 Highway transportation 49-10272

"An analysis of the cost and quality of automotive transportation and the role of industry and government in providing service and meeting the demands of a nation relying on automotive transportation. Emphasis on automobile design and the provision of adequate highways." Booklist

"This is an interesting study. It has the advantage of being brief, but its brevity precludes a more convincing presentation of some of the author's points. One vital factor which bears directly upon the problem of highway transport, at least in its commercial phases, but which the author does not discuss, is the development of other means of transportation." T. C. Bigham
+ Ann Am Acad 267:249 Ja '50 360w
Booklist 46:115 D 1 '49

OWENS, LEE. American square dances of the West and Southwest; music arranged by Viola Ruth. 182p il $3.50 Pacific bks.
793.34 Dancing—Folk and national dances. Dancing—Square dances

Descriptions of thirty square dances, with instructions for calling the figures. Introductory chapters on calling, and the basic steps. Includes some music. No index.

Booklist 46:154 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 75:331 F 15 '50 40w
Wis Lib Bul 46:19 My '50

OWSLEY, FRANK LAWRENCE. Plain folk of the old South. 235p $3.50 La. state univ. press 917.5 South—Social life and customs
49-11743

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Professor Owsley writes with nostalgia and a delightful freshness concerning southern folkways—the devout religion, the wholesome amusements, the abundance of delicious country food, the singing school, etc. Absent from this charming picture are the low standard of living of the slaveless farmer. . . In regard to the literacy of the plain people of the South, Professor Owsley takes a much more favorable view than the unreliable census reports and the observations of contemporary observers indicate. In demolishing old stereotypes of the aristocrats, historians should be cautious in swinging to the other extreme of idealizing the life of the plain people. Plain Folk of the Old South, written with verve, makes some major contributions to southern history." Clement Eaton
+ — Am Hist R 55:617 Ap '50 480w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 18:41 Ja '50 40w

"Without question this study proves that there was an important agricultural middle-class in the Old South—and that many whites who were poor were not 'poor whites.' To this extent the analysis serves as a useful corrective to glib generalizations about class struggle and 'false consciousness' in the antebellum society. On the other hand, the work does not destroy—as it sometimes seems to imply it does—the equally valid fact that slavery and the plantation dominated the institutional structure of very large portions of the older settled regions. . . Without saying more, one can accept the study as a valuable aid to an objective picture of southern history, without accepting all the implications of its portrait of a harmonious middle-class (white) society." R. M. Williams
+ — Social Forces 28:449 My '50 600w
Social Studies 41:288 O '50 10w

"Mr. Owsley rejects any conception of the planters as a class who dominated, whose interests overbore those of the less fortunately situated. He shows occasionally a defensive attitude toward the South and sets up, perhaps, a few straw men to knock down. If he seems to underplay the crudities of life, however, it is in part because he does not deal with the true poor whites."
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:70 Mr '50 240w

OXFORD book of American verse; chosen and with an introd. by F. O. Matthiessen. 1132p $5 Oxford
811.08 American poetry—Collections 50-9826

An anthology of American verse representing the work of 51 poets in all. The editor included "fewer poets, with more space for each." Arrangement is chronological and more than half the book is devoted to poetry of the 20th century. Bibliographical note. Indexes of authors and first lines. An earlier Oxford Book of American Verse compiled by Bliss Carman was published in 1927 (Book Review Digest 1928).

Booklist 47:58 O 1 '50
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50

"Personally I like to think of the Oxford anthologies as golden treasuries of best poems, no matter who may have written them. The emphasis here is definitely on the poet, with enough of his work brought together so that one may come to know him. Such a plan really needs no defense and this new anthology, it seems to me, is worthy of its title and imprint." George McDonald
+ Library J 75:1669 O 1 '50 270w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 171:489 N 25 '50 410w

"No other collection now available has anything like the distinction of this one. It is far and away the best single-volume treasury of poems written by American authors. Here indeed is a book to be hailed as a national event."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 5 '50 700w

"The editor states it as a principle that he prefers to represent a few poets by a full selection from their works rather than to include the many poets who survive only through one or two anthology pieces. . . Another principle which proves cramping is the inclusion of long poems in their entirety. Anne Bradstreet, Bryant, Emerson and Lowell suffer from the application of this principle. . . To date this is the best comprehensive collection of American verse that we have. In England, probably for the first time, it will give such poets as Emerson and Whitman, Cummings and Frost, their proper stature." Selden Rodman
+ — N Y Times p3 O 8 '50 950w
New Yorker 26:159 N 25 '50 80w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Personalities in social reform. 176p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

301.1535 Social problems—Biography 49-50190

Studies of six social reformers: Sidney and Beatrice Webb, Walter Rauschenbusch, David E. Lilienthal, Mohandas K. Gandhi and Albert Schweitzer. "Bishop Oxnam lets each of these six persons speak for himself—through his speeches, his autobiography, or other writings. Each one's central thesis is then interpreted in light of its meaning and value to the peoples of the world." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Booklist 46:183 F 1 '50

Bookmark 9:105 F '50 40w

"A collection of authentic action-portraits of six major social reformers. Their vision of humanity's future was never more needed than now. Their faith has a contagious quality." Fred Eastman

+ Christian Century 67:703 Je 7 '50 700w

"The sketches would have gained appreciably in emphasis had the Bishop contributed an introductory chapter integrating the truths distilled from them, and developing their application to present-day society." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 26 '50 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Hallowell

Crozer Q 27:185 Ap '50 200w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:1903 D 15 '49 140w

Nation 170:140 F 11 '50 40w

"It must be said that anyone who has read a full-length book about or written by one of these persons will gain little from reading the slender chapter on them here. Taken together, however, they make an impressive roll-call, and some readers will undoubtedly want to become acquainted with these great leaders by beginning with this volume." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p45 O 15 '50 400w

New Yorker 25:90 Ja 14 '50 200w

"Bishop Oxnam makes these six persons come alive through his study of their life and work and from excerpts from their writings. It is a stimulating book." K. D. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:42 F 18 '50 140w

"Mixed with the more impressive passages are many fascinating insights into the very human qualities and all too familiar experiences of these reformers, so that even the reader who resists being influenced will be entertained." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey 86:160 Mr '50 550w

Wis Lib Bul 46:17 Ap '50

P

PAASSEN, PIERRE VAN. See Van Paassen, P.

PACH, WALTER. Renoir. See Renoir, P. A.

PACKARD, REYNOLDS. Kansas City milkman. 319p $3 Dutton

50-5952

A story of American newsmen in Paris, particularly the relationship between Clay Brewster, the old timer who tells the story, and Don Shelby, the newcomer.

"Painless but unimportant reading." Jack McPhaul

Chicago Sun p5 Mr 27 '50 90w

Kirkus 18:36 Ja 15 '50 190w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 2 '50 130w

Reviewed by Mary Johnson

N Y Times p20 Jl 9 '50 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 30 '50 250w

"Mr. Packard's prose is the everyday language of the professional journalist, straightforward, vivid, fast-paced. His Paris, Rome, Algiers, and Casablanca backgrounds are drawn in charcoal yet finely enough to make authentic settings for the movements of his characters." J. M. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 My 27 '50 230w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 23 '50 120w

PACKARD, VANCE OAKLEY. Animal IQ; the human side of animals. 192p il $2.50 Dial press

591.51 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Animal intelligence 50-5395

"Psychologists have been testing all types of animals—mammals, fish, snakes, insects—in an attempt to measure their intelligence. How much depends on their inborn instinct? How much is learned by repetition? Can animals reason? And will animal behavior unravel some of the mysteries of human behavior? This is a popularly written account of the testing of many animals and of their varied reactions." Library J

Booklist 46:196 F 15 '50

Bookmark 9:216 Je '50 20w

"This is a delightful little book which will provide an evening's entertainment for anyone over 10 years old—but also will provide a rude shock for anyone who thinks his pet animal has brains. Unless, that is, his pet is an ape, a raccoon, or possibly an elephant." J. T. McCutcheon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 12 '50 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '50

+ Kirkus 18:16 Ja 1 '50 170w

"Recommended for public libraries, young people's collections and school libraries." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 75:316 F 15 '50 100w

"Despite his jaunty and strictly journalistic method Mr. Packard seems careful of his facts, and he occasionally suggests reasonable doubts concerning the absolute adequacy of the methods." J. W. Krutch

Nation 170:189 F 25 '50 650w

"A fascinating book of experiments in animal psychology. Written with fine humor and wonderfully illustrated, the book will bring bitter disillusionment to many animal lovers." D. B. Thorburn

+ Sat R of Lit 33:12 Jl 29 '50 180w

Wis Lib Bul 46:13 Ap '50

PAINE, LANSING MORSE, and WEBSTER, ISABEL STEVENS. Start your own business on less than $1000. 302p $3.95 McGraw

658.1 Business 50-14896

Information on the various aspects of starting a small business, from choosing a location, to keeping records, taxes, and information on specific businesses. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:111 N 15 '50

Kirkus 18:451 Ag 1 '50 130w

"Can be recommended as a first approach to a choice of business." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 75:2005 N 15 '50 110w

PAINTER, SIDNEY. Reign of King John. 397p $5.50 Johns Hopkins press

942.033 John, king of England. Great Britain—History—John, 1199-1216 49-49221

"In this volume Professor Painter puts together all we know about the political and administrative history of the reign of King John of England, 1199-1216. He promises a companion volume . . . on 'England in the Age of King John,' to include those phases of cultural, social and economic history he has not been able to cover in this volume. Here he is concerned with the relations between John and his barons, with the administration of a growing state, with the quarrel between John and Pope Innocent III, and with the dramatic climax of the reign in Magna Carta." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Here is much hard scholarly work based upon long study of the chancery rolls. . . It is very intricate and to the twentieth century reader somewhat monotonous. Probably in seven centuries future readers will react similarly to the story of that political patronage which helps our American government to function today. The careful study of the baronial party prior to Magna Carta is particularly interesting as offering a description and explanation of the various ties which bound the group together." R. A. Newhall

+ Am Hist R 55:581 Ap '50 750w

"It seems most unlikely that we shall ever know much more about the political and administrative history of the reign of John than you will find in this volume. Nor is it likely, unless we attain more than human wisdom about politics, that we shall understand the politics of John's reign better than Professor Painter. A word that often comes a bit too easily in the historical profession really seems necessary here: this is a definitive study." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 26 '50 650w

"Earlier researches by Mr. Painter have given him a firm grasp of social, economic and political conditions in medieval England. . . Though addressing himself primarily to scholars, he has much to say about the colorful, not to say lurid, figure of King John and about the famous Magna Charta that should win the interest of a wider public." R. L. Schuyler

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 29 '50 1050w

Reviewed by J. R. Strayer

Sat R of Lit 33:49 My 6 '50 750w

"Dr. Painter expresses the hope that his history of the reign of King John can hold its place beside Sir Maurice Powicke's King Henry III and the Lord Edward. It can do that; but its readers must not expect a work of the same order or similar design. It is on the same level of scholarship, to wit, the highest. But it does not attempt that synthesis of all aspects of the reign . . . which made of Sir Maurice Powicke's books such an epoch in the presentation of the results of medieval research."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Jl 7 '50 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:70 Mr '50 250w

"Professor Painter's present volume is confined to the political and administrative aspects of the reign and he has reserved other topics for a later volume. He gives a clear and useful account of the fiscal problems of the monarchy and of the administrative innovations and experiments, but has disappointingly little to say here about the social changes and the nature and scale of the war." John Prestwich

Yale R n s 40:169 autumn '50 1000w

PALAZZO, TONY. Charley the horse [pictures by the author]. 56p $2.50 Viking

Horses—Legends and stories 50-7278

The story of what happened when Charley the milkman's horse realized his dream of becoming a race horse.

Booklist 46:292 My 15 '50

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun p3 Ap 22 '50 100w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Jl 16 '50 140w

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 7 '50 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '50

"Charley the Horse is a horse of such strong personality and character as to claim a place of his own among books about horses." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 26:97 Mr '50 350w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 26:282 Jl '50 90w

Kirkus 18:58 F 1 '50 110w

Reviewed by Louise Davis

Library J 75:625 Ap 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by C. B. Gilbert

Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 80w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 7 '50 260w

"The narrative is slight, its tomfoolery not wholly convincing. However, Tony Palazzo's pictures of Charley are so full of fun, so varied in mood, that we can't help believing in him." E. L. B.

N Y Times p18 Je 4 '50 130w

"Large, amazingly expressive drawings of Charley in three colors, including a fascinating one of the race track, illustrate this captivating story. No one, young or old, who has any feeling for horses will be able to resist this book."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 My 13 '50 150w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Je '50

PALMER, CHARLES B. Slightly cooler in the suburbs; il. by Carl Rose. 222p $2.50 Doubleday

817 Humor 50-7994

Chapters on the joys and nuisances of living in the suburbs. Partial contents: Well, we have to live somewhere; 1 1/2 baths; handy to station, schools; What'll we have for Sunday? The youngest suburbanites; Right from the Garden? Haw!; It is high time; Who's a statistic? Twelve months is enough, thanks. "Certain portions of this book have been published in the New York Times Sunday magazine and in Good Housekeeping."

Booklist 46:313 Je 15 '50

Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 40w

"In the light of my 25 years of devoting two hours a day going to and from work in Chicago, I am persuaded that the author of 'Slightly Cooler in the Suburbs' hasn't missed a bet. . . Here is a book to read aloud, to send to your suburban friends as a bread-and-butter token, or simply to chuckle over by yourself." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 28 '50 310w

" 'Slightly Cooler in the Suburbs' is that rare and most welcome of finds (particularly on a summer vacation)—a book with a laugh on every page, unforced, good-natured and sparkling from cover to cover." C. B. Burnett

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 2 '50 420w

"A disarming, appealing and generally amusing account of the commuters' circuit, this should invite an audience of fellow travelers."

+ Kirkus 18:227 Ap 1 '50 140w

" 'Slightly Cooler in the Suburbs' necessarily sticks to topics that are familiar—trains, schools, clubs, furnaces and flowers—but that is really the foundation of the fun." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 11 '50 270w

"It's a gay book. Not a dull paragraph in it. And about people supposedly too dull to write about. Just to give an idea of Mr. Palmer's originality, he has a tolerant chapter about the Long Island Rail Road. Here is a refreshing variety of humor. . . He doesn't try to be, just is, funny. And when he wants to, particularly when knocking the stuffing out of pedantic stuffed shirts, he writes with a bite." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p6 My 21 '50 850w

Reviewed by Lionel Olay

Sat R of Lit 33:34 Jl 8 '50 650w

Wis Lib Bul 46:25 Je '50

PALMER, ROBERT ROSWELL. History of the modern world. 900p il maps $6.75 Knopf

909 History, Modern 50-8330

"Sets forth in the main the growth of European civilization since the Renaissance. . . Palmer first devotes much attention to the history of Western and Eastern Europe, then in his later chapters brings into the story the history of Africa, the Americas and Asia as, with great skill, he traces the international movements and situations that have led to the interconnected world that is ours at present. He dwells largely upon political, social and economic developments and the history of ideas, and somewhat avoids cultural history. Four hundred cross references, interesting maps, discriminating illustrations and a 60 page bibliography are features." (Library J) Index.

PALMER, R. R.—Continued

Booklist 47:37 S 15 '50

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 30 '50 50w

"Lucidly written volume. . . Highly recommended for university, college and large public libraries." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 140w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p7 Ag 27 '50 650w
School & Society 72:254 O 14 '50 30w

PALMER, STUART. Green ace; a Hildegarde Withers mystery. 241p $2.50 Morrow 50-10204

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 D 3 '50 70w
Kirkus 18:491 Ag 15 '50 70w

"The characters are standard in a yarn competently told."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 N 19 '50 180w

"Stuart Palmer is as adept at the bones of plot construction as at the flesh of humor and character." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p38 N 19 '50 100w

"Miss Withers is an engaging sleuth, but the odds are against her in this far-fetched story."
New Yorker 26:136 O 28 '50 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 3 '50 70w
Sat R of Lit 33:55 O 28 '50 40w

PANLILIO, YAY (MRS MARCOS V. AGUSTIN). Crucible; an autobiography. 348p $3.75 Macmillan

B or 92 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Filipino 50-5373

A Philippine-American newspaperwoman, "Colonel Yay," here tells of her underground work with "Marking's guerrillas" fighting against the Japanese. Part of the book tells of her romance with Colonel Marking (Marcos V. Agustin).

Booklist 46:187 F 1 '50
Bookmark 9:157 Ap '50 50w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Chicago Sun p5S F 7 '50 550w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 19 '50 400w
Current Hist 18:228 Ap '50 50w
Kirkus 17:641 N 15 '49 170w

"Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:321 F 15 '50 100w

"In my opinion the best book that will be written on a subject deathless in Filipino memory but still little appreciated in America. I say the best book that will be written because, as far as I am aware, no other writer of the intelligence and ability of Yay Panlilio lived and fought in the mountains of the Philippines throughout the entire period of the Resistance." C. P. Romulo
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 12 '50 1350w

"The worst thing about 'The Crucible' is its title. Sometimes overexuberant, sometimes too chatty, it tells in its small way a pretty big story." Chandler Thomas
+ — N Y Times p6 F 5 '50 950w

"Colonel Yay's account of the romance, which was punctuated at intervals with exchanges of vituperation and hardware, has a far less authentic ring than does the rest of her memoir, a matter-of-fact relating of the rigors of guerrilla life, and of the personal tragedies that afflicted those fighters whose friends or relatives fell into Japanese hands."
+ — New Yorker 25:94 F 4 '50 140w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens
San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 5 '50 750w

Reviewed by C. P. Romulo
Sat R of Lit 33:22 F 11 '50 800w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p3D F 12 '50 300w

PANNELL, MRS LUCILLE, and CAVANAH, FRANCES, eds. Holiday round up; il. by Manning deV. Lee 335p $3 Macrae Smith co

394 Holidays 50-10063

Fifty-two stories for twenty-seven special days, including several Jewish holidays. They have been selected from the works of well-known authors.

Booklist 47:161 D 15 '50
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 12 '50 170w

"An excellent collection."
+ Kirkus 18:384 Jl 15 '50 190w

"Recommended, because the stories are above average and the explanation of the history or origin of the holidays which precedes each chapter, is valuable for reference." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 75:2082 D 1 '50 70w

"While the illustrations are a little heavy and static for the text, parents will be glad to have the book around when the children start to ask questions about why there is no school that morning."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 12 '50 120w

PANSHIN, ALEXIS JOHN, and others. Forest products; their sources, production, and utilization. 549p il $6 McGraw

634.98 Wood-using industries. Forest products Agr50-438

This treatise contains information on the kinds and uses of present-day forest products. The book is divided into four parts: Economics of forest utilization; Wood products; Chemically derived products from wood; Derived and miscellaneous forest products.

"The book uses selected readings more than direct references and provides the reader with a valuable list of general articles from which to obtain additional information." E. E. Harris
+ Chem & Eng N 28:3260 S 18 '50 300w

"The work should be very useful in libraries as a reference book for students writing papers, and general readers desiring information on the nature, economic importance, or marketing of forest products." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 100w

PARADIS, ADRIAN A. 75 ways for boys to make money. 138p $1.95 Greenberg

371.425 Occupations 50-7504

Practical book of ideas on how to make money, for ages nine to sixteen. The book is in three sections: Suggestions for the boy who wants to earn money; Job ideas; Job index.

Booklist 46:307 Je 1 '50

"Highly recommended." R. O. Bostwick
+ Library J 75:1199 Jl '50 100w

"There is sage advice on many sides of a money-making career. It all gets right down to brass tacks, and we only wish some boys in our own neighborhood would read it before offering some of the services they want us to let them do and usually do so poorly." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 2 '50 230w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p20 Ag 6 '50 130w

"A delightfully written book for boys containing unusual slants on building up a bank account and a pocketful of spending money."

+ Special Libraries 41:262 S '50 70w

PARIS [rev. by Georges Monmarché]. (Guides bleus: foreign ser; English ser) 475p $4.50 Nagel pubs, inc, 234 W. 44th st, N.Y. 18

914.436 Paris—Description

This guidebook to Paris aims to "give full details of the history, the whereabouts and the conditions" of the city. The book is "divided into three parts: Paris (The City), Greater Paris and the Museums. In this third section only the essential has been retained and the usual innumerable clogging details which befog the visitor's mind have been omitted. It should be mentioned too that most of the museums rooms are subject to periodical changes so that it is not always possible to denote the exact situation of all the selected items." (Pref) Includes maps, plans of buildings, and an index.

"Although the translation is sometimes a little short of atrocious, the visitor to Paris will need the new guide Bleu to that city, published this year for the first time in English." Beach Conger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 30 '50 60w

"Departs from formula to note with reference to the theatre, for example, that since the Liberation such playwrights as T. S. Eliot, Eugene O'Neill, Robert Sherwood, and John Steinbeck have found their way to the Paris boards. Moreover, the book tells you the difference between the fauteuils d'orchestre and the loges de face. To be sure, it includes typical guidebook descriptions such as 'From the Place de la Concorde we follow the Rue de Rivoli . . .' But, nevertheless, history has been brought up to date and the hotel in which the German garrison commander surrendered in 1944 is duly noted." H. S.

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ag 5 '50 140w

PARK, ROBERT EZRA. Race and culture [ed. by Everett C. Hughes, and others]. 402p $5 Free press

572.08 Culture. Race 50-5886

"The great contributions made to social thinking by Prof. Park are implicit in this book. His former students at the University of Chicago and at Fisk university have brought together a representative collection of his shorter manuscripts, most of them previously published in scientific journals. They are grouped in four parts—culture and civilization, race relations, racial attitudes, the marginal man. The aim of Prof. Park's studies was not so much to formulate rules of human behavior as to analyze and interpret the social adjustment systems already operative. This, he found, the more readily led to improvements in racial relations for 'ways of doing' were more acceptable than 'laws.'" Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Race and Culture may be used with profit in advanced courses for its theoretical framework and has value in the further construction of theories and in the design of research. Park's analytical scheme has not only yielded significant propositions, it also contains potentialities which await further exploitation." John Useem

+ Am Soc R 15:447 Je '50 600w

Reviewed by R. W. Logan

Ann Am Acad 270:177 Jl '50 460w

"This volume is a tribute to a man and to a way of life that he illumined. Robert Park was a 'friend to man,' to all men, regardless of creed or color. Because of this, the book, 'Race and Culture,' might well contain the aims and goal of our own democratic way of life: 'That all men are born free and equal.' In his writing, thinking, and being, Robert Park has worn a path for all to follow." W. M. Krogman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 19 '50 450w

"It is, for us all, always a thrilling adventure to reread the writings of Dr. Park. This is so, I suppose, because thereby we are redirected to and given a fresher, clearer view of the eternal themes and processes of human life which it is our business to isolate, explain, and control." A. W. Rose

+ Social Forces 29:212 D '50 600w

PARKER, ARTHUR CASWELL. Red Streak of the Iroquois; il. by I. Heilbron. 191p $2.50 Childrens press

50-7769

A story of how Red Streak, an Erie captive of the Seneca, became a leader in the Iroquois League of peace.

"Both informing and good reading."

+ Bookmark 9:214 Je '50 50w

Reviewed by Louise Davis

Library J 75:640 Ap 15 '50 60w

"A story that is realistic, fast-moving and intensely interesting. . . This is a treasure house of Indian lore." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 9 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:23 Jl '50

PARKER, ROBERT B. Ticket to oblivion. 252p $2.50 Rinehart

50-6314

The story of an American's adventures investigating Russian terrorists who are arriving in Paris on Hungarian vacation trains. With the help of a beautiful redheaded counter-spy and a group of Maquis he succeeds in preventing the Russians from stealing a shipment of French gold.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun p6 Mr 24 '50 100w

Kirkus 18:35 Ja 15 '50 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ap 23 '50 180w

Reviewed by Hillis Mills

N Y Times p31 Mr 26 '50 140w

New Yorker 26:123 Mr 25 '50 200w

"If you pause in the reading of this item and remark to yourself, or to anyone else who will listen, that it's strictly screwball, you'll be echoing the opinion of Peter Morrow himself. But, for one reason or another, you'll go along with Peter until the final page. At that point you'll probably decide that it was worth all the trouble even if it was screwball." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ap 23 '50 140w

"Knowledgeable spy stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ap 1 '50 40w

PARKMAN, SYDNEY MULLER. Life begins tomorrow. 302p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

50-7881

A story of the adventures of two groups of people (who finally merge) who are some of the very few survivors of a plague which wipes out most of the inhabitants of England and presumably the rest of the world as well.

Booklist 46:336 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 23 '50 300w

"A logical picture, and interesting reading for science-fiction minded fans."

+ Kirkus 18:184 Mr 15 '50 130w

"Mr. Parkman tells a rattling good story. In addition he offers many sound, if few original, speculations on the future of a world suddenly denuded of policemen, politicians, priests, physicists, parliaments and nearly everybody else. All this plus two more or less reassuring predictions: (1) Even without people, there'll always be an England, and (2) even when national and property quarrels are extinct, there'll always be girls to fight about." Richard Match

PARKMAN, S. M.—Continued
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Je 25 '50 450w

"Once the author has exhausted moral implications and described grisly horrors, he leaves the supercharged fantasy to deal briskly with romance and adventure among the survivors. The stage has been set for greater things and one feels let down by a prosaic ending." James Kelly
+ — N Y Times p27 Je 4 '50 110w
New Yorker 26:106 My 27 '50 120w

"There is certainly an abundance of realism in his story but the author has failed to create characters who are memorable in any way. If you've a strong stomach, however, you may possibly digest this novel without too many ill effects." J. M. Grant
Sat R of Lit 33:21 Jl 8 '50 180w

PARKS, JOSEPH HOWARD. John Bell of Tennessee. (Southern biography ser) 435p il $5 La. state univ. press
B or 92 Bell, John 50-7790

"Biography of the pre-Civil War senator, with detailed history of the politics of the four decades prior to the war. Bell's development and progress seem of lesser interest than the excellently detailed story of Southern and party politics and personalities, many of the latter among our best-known figures." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 44:775 S '50 30w

"Books are written to inform, to amuse, to thrill, and to enchant the reader. The biography of John Bell of Tennessee is a factual account of the life and public services of this influential Tennessean. The book is an important study, but not amusing. It is sound in scholarship, but not enchanting. It is informative but not thrilling." G. D. Harmon
+ — Ann Am Acad 271:197 S '50 600w
Current Hist 19:38 Jl '50 60w

"Rates among the best in a series that has won the high respect of scholars. . . Mr. Parks, by diligently searching the papers of Bell's contemporaries, has overcome to a remarkable degree the problem of material. Wisely he has refrained from calling on his imagination to provide the glamour that Bell never possessed." B. I. Wiley
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 9 '50 600w

"Unfortunately, few of Bell's personal papers have survived, and the author has not been able to throw much light on his private life. Consequently, this is a purely political biography of a man who was dignified and genteel but lacking in personal charm. The book is well organized, vigorous, and clear cut." T. P. Abernethy
+ Sat R of Lit 33:20 Ag 5 '50 700w

"Historians will be grateful for a competent treatment of John Bell's political career. Unfortunately, almost no records remain of his personal life. Lay readers, therefore, may tire of what is necessarily a report of wellnigh interminable political party battles."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:308 S '50 280w

PARMELEE, MAURICE FARR. Geo-economic regionalism and world federation. 137p $2.50 Exposition
341.1 Regionalism. International federation 50-5454

Arguments advanced for a world federation based upon geo-economic regionalism. In the author's plan "national and local governments would retain authority in all national and local matters. . . Affairs of regional scope [would] concern supervision over, or regulation of, the basic industries, such as: the conservation of natural resources, the exploitation of raw materials, the production and distribution of staple agricultural goods, the utilization of natural energy, the investment of surplus capital, the manufacture of finished goods, transportation and communication, and the maintenance of standards as to levels of living, labor conditions, and social security." (p.2) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 44:796 S '50 40w
Am Soc R 15:322 Ap '50 240w
Reviewed by Robert Strausz-Hupé
Ann Am Acad 270:152 Jl '50 490w

"Slender volume, full of provocative ideas and hard facts, will stimulate discussion between proponents and adversaries of world government. Recommended for larger public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 75:316 F 15 '50 140w
School & Society 71:125 F 25 '50 40w

"This latest work by governmental economist Maurice Parmelee adds nothing to the understanding of the theoretical foundations of regionalism and contributes a great deal towards the confusion of the concept." Sydney Lester
— Social Forces 29:101 O '50 290w

PARRISH, ANNE (MRS JOSIAH TITZELL). Story of Appleby Capple; il. by [the author]. 184p $2.75 Harper
50-10673

"The story of Appleby Capple and his search for a Zebra butterfly for his Cousin Clement is in twenty-six chapters, each chapter 'featuring' a letter of the alphabet. It begins with Appleby Capple himself and ends with the Zebra butterfly and the Zoo where a reunion of all the characters is held." Sat R of Lit

"All ages will enjoy the book's salty humor." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 180w
Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 26:457 N '50 80w

"The pictures will interest everyone from three years old on; the story may have to wait until the child is six or seven, but there is no limit at the other end of the age scale."
+ Horn Bk 26:467 N '50 100w
Kirkus 18:512 S 1 '50 130w

"It is a dream that out-dreams Alice and may prove either tedious or overwhelming, according to tastes. We are so used to easy books, thin books, obvious concepts, that some will complain of this as unclear and overloaded, which it is. However, there are those to whom it offers something very different, very special. It is the distillation of a most charming mind, amusing itself with weaving together its overacute observations of much of the world's loveliness into a witty dream-search with a beautiful, happy ending." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 12 '50 410w

"Each chapter is based on a letter of the alphabet, which allows for a great deal of imaginative fooling with mouth-filling words. It takes some concentration to follow this ingenious pattern, but it is so inventive and merry that it is well worth while. It would be great fun to read aloud. Children will love picking out the curious details in the lacy Victorian drawings." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p20 N 12 '50 200w

"We advise all mothers and fathers everywhere in the country to consider seriously its present and future value. It will make a beautiful Christmas present. Its value will increase with the years. Its cost is a small price to pay for the pleasure that it will bring."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 N 11 '50 450w

PARRY, JOHN HORACE. Europe and a wider world, 1415-1715. 200p $2; text ed $1.60 Longmans
325.34 Colonization. Commerce [50-3187]

"This work tells in outline the story of the colonizing activities of the principal European nations, including trade, missions and plantations, from the time of Prince Henry 'the navigator' to the Treaty of Utrecht; and traces the corresponding development of thought in Europe on the subject of the expansion of Christendom and the growth of European power overseas." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The author has the occasion to suggest that 'The Chinese Empire was by far the most powerful and most civilized state in the world' at the beginning of the fifteenth century. The very important role of minor states, Portugal and the Netherlands, is made clear. This is the greatest merit of the book, that, by treating the subject from a somewhat novel point of view, it promotes a juster understanding of what may well be the ultimately most significant single trend in the history of Europe and the world during the period with which it deals. It is a worthy addition to an excellent series of little books." J. H. Gleason
+ Am Hist R 56:166 O '50 200w

Reviewed by C. M. Woodhouse
Spec 183:702 N 18 '49 600w

PARSONS, JAMES J. Antioqueño colonization in western Colombia. 225p il maps pa $3 Univ. of Calif.

986 Colombia

"In this monograph the author gives a description of the characteristics of the Antioqueño people and the nature and progress of their remarkable geographical expansion that followed their transition from a mining to an agricultural economy at the end of the colonial period. This internal colonization of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries is summarized in a sketch map showing the movement out of the old core area of settlement in the auriferous crystalline highlands around Medellín southward onto the temperate middle slopes of the Cordillera Central and the Cordillera Occidental." Geog R

"The author has seen and described the people and their environment with great sympathy, almost like an Antioqueño, and thus, perhaps, not without bias. The graphic material is excellent and would have been complete if the general orientation map had included the communications network. In résumé, this book, a product of much scholarly research, is the best study on the Antioquia region since Manuel Uribe Ángel's 'Geografía y compendio historicó del Estado de Antioquia,' published more than 65 years ago." Ernesto Guhl
+ Geog R 40:686 O '50 1050w

"This regional study, with its base in a broad human geography, is an excellent culture history."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:71 Mr '50 200w

PARSONS, JOHN E. Peacemaker and its rivals; an account of the single action Colt. 184p il $4 Morrow

623.4434 Revolver 50-9423

"A detailed history written mainly from the gun collector's viewpoint of the single action Colt revolver. The history of this firearm is narrated, technical details are described, and there are numerous photographs of examples. Reference data, such as the annual production year by year, and the serial numbers of each year's production are abundant. Also there is a short chapter on the significance of the revolver in American history." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 70w

" 'The Peacemaker and its Rivals' is a contribution to firearms history which will rank with Dillin's 'Kentucky Rifle.' It is a 'must' for every gun-crank, collector, or student of handarms." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p10 S 3 '50 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 33:59 D 2 '50 230w

PARTEN, MILDRED BERNICE. Surveys, polls, and samples; practical procedures. 624p $6; college ed $5 Harper

307.2 Social surveys. Public opinion polls. Sampling (statistics) 50-6574

Discussion of the various techniques for sampling public opinion, and the relative merits of certain types for specific purposes. The author has had some twenty years of experience in planning and conducting surveys. She is now research associate at the University of Rochester. Bibliography. Index.

"This textbook will undoubtedly be widely used. Its timeliness, covering as it does the 1948 election and more recent events, makes it a live piece of instructional material. It is helpful in describing devices such as code cards and hand tallies, which are the standby for the many surveys which are not backed up by a mechanical installation and which may sometimes be more efficient than those produced with mechanical equipment." Nathan Keyfitz
+ Am J Soc 56:201 S '50 850w

Reviewed by N. E. Long
Am Pol Sci R 44:773 S '50 100w

"Earlier books cover certain segments of the subject matter of Dr. Parten's text, but none of those known to the reviewer could be regarded as a serious competitor in covering systematically the practical procedures of social surveys from start to finish. . . The exhaustive nature of the book, coupled with a hesitancy on the part of the author to evaluate examples as good or bad, means that instructors will need to give students more critical appraisals of the examples cited. . . Because the book is comprehensive in most respects, the less adequate coverage of rural social surveys and especially of the contributions to the field of surveys and sampling made by workers in land grant colleges and experiment stations will be readily noted by readers with rural interests. . . The weakest parts of the book are the chapters dealing with sampling and statistical measures of reliability." M. J. Hagood
+ — Am Soc R 15:450 Je '50 550w

Reviewed by H. L. Childs
Ann Am Acad 271:203 S '50 600w
Management R 39:500 Ag '50 110w

Reviewed by John Folger
Social Forces 29:210 D '50 500w

PARTINGTON, JAMES RIDDICK. Advanced treatise on physical chemistry; 4v; v. 1, Fundamental principles, the properties of gases. 943p $16 Longmans

541 Gases. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical (49-50157)

"The first-published of a three- or four-volume work which, when complete, will serve as a comprehensive and detailed reference tool for research workers and students in the field of physical chemistry. The present volume is essentially introductory in character, for although it deals primarily with the theories and laws relating to the properties of gases, it also includes a review of the elements of calculus, wave mechanics, and the fundamentals of thermodynamics. Emphasis is placed on descriptions of experimental methods and apparatus, and an effort has been made to tabulate numerical data not readily accessible in other publications." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliographical footnotes. Index.

"A real attempt has been made to give complete references to the literature and especially the early literature. The results of Professor Partington's historical research may very well prove to be the most valuable part of his treatise." W. R. Rodebush
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:3327 Jl '50 500w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:3 Ja '50

PARTRIDGE, ERIC. Dictionary of the underworld. 804p $9 Macmillan

427 English language—Slang 50-8598

"Mr. Partridge defines and illustrates in 800 pages some 20,000 words and phrases of underworld English of all countries and of four centuries. A subtitle describes with picturesque and Burtonian redundancy the population of this world: 'Crooks, criminals, racketeers, beggars, tramps, convicts, the commercial underworld, the drug traffic, the white slave traffic, spivs.' Mr. Partridge's main concern is with cant, the deliberately obscure terminology of a class or gang." Times [London] Lit Sup

PARTRIDGE, ERIC—Continued

"For the scholar, new fields of knowledge, plenty to argue about; for the student, the encouragement of seeing an intrepid explorer conquer another hinterland, where all had seemed so discovered already; for the average reader, a fun-fair, brash, bold, bewildering teeming with unexpected life and hints of the dark world that lies beyond the pages of Webster and the Shorter Oxford: perhaps he will come best out of it after all." Frank Hauser
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:182 Ag 12 '50 900w

Reviewed by John Lardner
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 24 '50 550w

"The book makes good browsing, particularly the etymologies, though the author seems to slip on some of those. This is understandable; origins are frequently obscure. . . Let no one write smugly, though, of Mr Partridge's latest work. It is delightful reading on almost every page and the miracle is that he did not miss more words or go wrong on more derivations. Like the Brothers Fowler, who wrote so charmingly of word usage, Mr. Partridge slyly gets in some wry touches of humor, though not all are quotable in a family newspaper. They are delicate enough, and Mr. Partridge has altogether expunged the short unmentionables. Only the onion-skinned could be offended." Meyer Berger
+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 23 '50 700w

"Mr. Partridge's splendid work serves to remind us that no American has yet done for American cant and slang what he has done for British. America, now the world's largest producer of cant and slang, has no proper dictionary of its own productions in either field. Until dictionaries of both and a comprehensive American dialect on historical principles are added to the 'Dictionary of American English,' the record of the bantling American language remains incomplete and one-sided. In the meantime every American who is interested in his language should be grateful to Mr. Partridge for his two superb stand-ins." Horace Reynolds
+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 S 23 '50 750w

"On the purely philological side, this book is full of delights and surprises, with a nimble display of scholarship—sometimes, perhaps, rather dextrous than convincing. . . The Dictionary is a great work, a solid contribution to literature as well as to sociology." C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 184:698 My 19 '50 550w
Time 56:68 Jl 31 '50 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 19 '50 550w

PARTRIDGE, ERIC. Here, there and everywhere; essays upon language. 188p $1.75 Macmillan

420.4 English language. Language and languages [A50-7333]

Fourteen short essays on philology. Three of the essays are reprinted from the author's Words, Words, Words, now out of print. Six of the chapters appear here for the first time. Partial contents: Inseparable nicknames; The word bloody; Euphemism and euphemisms; Slang and standard English; Soldiers' slang of three nations: 1914-1918; American name into American word; The language of the underworld; The nonsense words of Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll.

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 23 '50 410w

"These chips from the workshop of an eminent British lexicographer make reading that is both edifying and delightful." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 17 '50 650w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 110w

"All are entertaining, though some might be rather irritated by Mr. Partridge's somewhat cocky style and by his occasional hideous use of a word. But his enthusiasm is infectious; he appears to be convinced, like the Greeks, that words are not fortuitous, but take their shape and sound from some inevitable expression of the thing they denote. With this conviction words become living and exciting as he discusses them."
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:23 Jl 1 '50 200w

"'Here, There and Everywhere' is a sound little book, worthy of the sound scholar who wrote it." Dudley Fitts
+ N Y Times p29 O 1 '50 360w

"It's made to order for those who have learned to regard a word as something alive and real, a living and often growing entity, rather than as an arbitrary assembly of alphabetical symbols suspended in a vacuum." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 11 '50 950w

Reviewed by C. E. Vulliamy
Spec 184:698 My 19 '50 180w
Time 56:69 Jl 31 '50 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 19 '50 40w

PARTRIDGE, ERIC. Name into word; proper names that have become common property; a discursive dictionary; with a foreword. 644p $4.50 Macmillan

422 English language—Glossaries, vocabularies, etc. Names, Personal 49-50328

"[In this dictionary the author] is engaged in chasing and exhibiting the names which, originally proper, have lost their propriety in passing into common use." Spec

Booklist 46:228 Mr 15 '50
Bookmark 9:184 My '50 20w

"Mr. Partridge calls his dictionary 'discursive,' which means that when he has a good story to tell about a word, he tells it. He largely ignores scientific terms and trade jargon unless the word is one that is widely used in nonspecialized writing. His best rule, however, is that if he doesn't have something interesting to say about a word, he doesn't say anything." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 19 '50 200w

"The alphabetical arrangement of Mr. Partridge's book proves a temptation to random sampling. And there is hardly a page without its rewards." Ernest Pisko
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 3 '50 600w

"In his learned and enchanting new work which he subtitles 'a discursive dictionary,' Mr. Partridge traces the origin and absorption of proper name into the English—and American—languages. Scholarly, as one would expect from Mr. Partridge's previous work, and discursive, as he says, it is an admirable book to dip into; but it is impossible to stop there." Robert Armstrong
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:44 Ja 14 '50 800w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 17 '50 290w

"This is a humanistic book. In it is food for the philosopher and fun for the rest of us, for this new perdicious dictionary panders amiably to our love of inside stuff, our delight in being taken behind the scenes. To learn to recognize the gaming earl behind 'sandwich,' the Robert behind 'rabbit,' is to live more fully than we have lived before." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 15 '50 450w

"Like Fowler's 'Modern English Usage' which is a lovely bit of reading as well as a reference work, Partridge's lexicographical meanderings, (from the River Maiandros in what is now Turkey), are always delightful. And this particular book makes, perhaps, the best general reading of all he has done." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 1 '50 950w

"Delightful book. It is only human for a reviewer to pick up a book of this kind with the expectation, if not the actual hope, of finding omissions. It is a pleasure as well as a duty to report that this reviewer found none, if we except a few obvious bits of 'unprintable' slang—and those are pretty certainly to be found in the same compiler's 'Dictionary of Slang.' " Basil Davenport
+ Sat R of Lit 33:47 Ap 15 '50 850w

"Mr. Partridge, in his philological work, always combines true scholarship with a pungent originality, and his books have the double merit of being not only valuable to the student but also prodigiously entertaining to the common reader. . . In this amusing and erudite volume Mr. Partridge is altogether at his best." C. E. Vulliamy
+ — Spec 183:746 N 25 '49 800w

"The insertion of illustrative quotations is an excellent idea, but the division of the book into two parts—'border-liners and potential candidates' being relegated to an appendix which takes up one-quarter of the space—is less commendable. It is true that any consultation of the dictionary is liable, when the contents are so fascinating, to lead to half-an-hour's browsing, but for the reader in a hurry it is always irritating to have to look in two places for a word."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p735 N 11 '49 370w

PARVIS, MERRILL MEAD, and WIKGREN, ALLEN PAUL, eds. New Testament manuscript studies; the materials and the making of a critical apparatus. 220p pl pa $3 Univ. of Chicago press
225.58 Bible. N.T.—Versions 50-6832

"This is strictly for technical students in the field of New Testament manuscript research. It grows out of a celebration at the University of Chicago in 1948 in honor of Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed and the attachment of his name to the university's great collection of manuscripts which were, for the most part, assembled by him. It signalizes also the inauguration of an 'international project to establish a critical apparatus of the Greek New Testament.' " Christian Century

"This project, manned by an impressive list of scholars in this country and abroad and financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, can be expected to produce important results in the advancement and integration of scholarly research directed toward the production of the best possible text of the Greek New Testament. The nine papers in this volume are contributed by widely known scholars."
+ Christian Century 67:499 Ap 19 '50 180w

"What is most fascinating and significant about this volume is that it is currently being used as a guidebook in carrying forward a vast international, scholarly project of fundamental importance and of lasting usefulness." H. R. Willoughby
+ J Religion 30:276 O '50 900w

PASCHAL, NANCY, pseud. See Trotter, G.

PASHKO, STANLEY. A boy and his dog; il. by Leon Leiderman. 164p $2.50 Greenberg
636.7 Dogs—Juvenile literature 50-7992

A handbook for young dog owners. "Young readers are not only told how to acquire dogs, feed them, build them doghouses and care for them when they are ill, but how to deal with dubious parents. . . There is advice on housebreaking, teaching tricks, training watchdogs, raising dogs for profit and preparing dogs for shows. Above all, Mr. Pashko makes it clear that having a dog carries responsibility. Parents will appreciate this point of view." (N Y Times)

Booklist 46:321 Je 15 '50

"An admirable reference book in homes where a dog is kept, as well as a useful addition to public library shelves." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 26:289 Jl '50 80w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith
+ Library J 75:1310 Ag '50 40w

"Excellent handbook." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 2 '50 110w

"Here's a really useful book on the business of having a dog for a pet." Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p18 Je 25 '50 130w

PASTERNAK, BORIS LEONIDOVICH. Selected writings. 288p $1.50 New directions 891.71 49-11844

"Most European critics consider Boris Pasternak the outstanding Russian poet of the century. . . Two selections of Pasternak's poetry are offered in this volume, one group translated by the English critic C. M. Bowra and the other by Babette Deutsch. There is also a representation of Pasternak's prose. In 1931 he published his short autobiography Safe Conduct, which is included complete, in the translation of Beatrice Scott. And three of Pasternak's extraordinary short stories have been translated by Robert Payne." Publisher's note

"In presenting Pasternak to the American reader through these selections from the two-volume edition published by Lindsay Drummond in London, New Directions has made a commendable effort. Unfortunately, Pasternak's closely woven fabric of symbols and the musical dynamism of his lines defy translation (at least at the present hands), and the versions offered in the book fall far short of the original. The prose, however, is rendered more adequately, and one cannot fail to admire Pasternak's autobiographical sketches." Marc Slonim
+ — New Repub 122:20 Mr 20 '50 750w

"New Directions deserves commendation for this first substantial introduction of the writings of Pasternak to American readers. Regrettably, however, the volume has been sloppily put together. . . 'The Childhood of Luvers' is clearly a remarkable artistic performance, and it may be hoped that this first volume of Pasternak's works will help to arouse the interest of American readers in one of the great poets of our time." E. J. Simmons
+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 8 '50 800w

"Professor Bowra's translations of the first seventeen poems fail on the whole, I think, through the effort to convey the general sense at the expense of specific images and metric emphasis. Miss Deutsch approximates meter, image, metaphor, and even idiom, as closely as possible, and succeeds remarkably in reproducing the original statements, almost intact, and as free from awkwardness as English syntax allows without injury to the meter. . . While Mr. Pasternak's tradition and experience are distinctly Russian, his poetry is modern in temper, and its experience is common to that of civilization today." A. V. Krinkin
Poetry 76:238 Jl '50 1900w

PASTORE, NICHOLAS. Nature-nurture controversy; with a foreword by Goodwin Watson. 213p $3.25 King's Crown press
575.1 Scientists. Heredity. Man—Influence of environment 49-9899

"The object of this study is to investigate the relationship between the outlook of scientists on controversial nature-nurture problems and their attitudes toward social, political, and economic questions." (Introd) Twenty-four scientists are studied separately, beginning with Francis Galton and ending with John B. Watson. Bibliography. Index.

PASTORE, NICHOLAS—Continued

Current Hist 17:227 O '49 50w

"Interesting as thumb-nail sketches of the men included, the book makes out its thesis in a general way." H. T. C.

+ J Philos 47:506 Ag 17 '50 60w

"Dr. Pastore concludes that 'the two variables are interrelated in the thought patterns of the various scientists.' Hence the nature-nurture controversy is as much sociological in nature as it is scientific. He admits that the sampling may not be representative and that it is in some cases impossible to be sure that social views have been fully expressed. His choice was limited to the relatively few scientists who take definite positions on social and political matters. This scholarly book leads inevitably to the suggestion that a similar study should be made on the possible correlation between social outlook and contribution to research." Gerald Wendt

+ New Repub 122:27 F 13 '50 750w

School & Society 71:174 Mr 18 '50 40w

PATCH, HOWARD ROLLIN. The other world, according to descriptions in medieval literature. 386p $6 Harvard univ. press

809 Future life. Literature, Medieval 50-7559

" 'The Other World' is Paradise, Hades, Valhalla, Avernus, Tirna nOg, Avalon, Eden, the Happy Townland, the New Jerusalem—whatever places the dreaming minds of men have shaped for refreshment and peace in this life or in the life to come. In this study . . . Howard Rollin Patch, Professor of English at Smith, has collected and analyzed descriptions of these Paradises as they occur in the folklore and literature of the East and West. His emphasis is upon the ecstatic 'visions' of the Dark and Middle Ages." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Current Hist 19:106 Ag '50 30w

"For specialists in literature, religion, ritual, or art, this book is of prime value. Even the general reader will find much in it to reward his browsing, although he must be prepared to hurdle untranslated chunks of Latin, Old Norse, Old French, Old Spanish, and here and there a tag of Greek. And it must be admitted, as the author himself confesses, that so many descriptions of Paradise, taken together, work for monotony. . . It is to be regretted that there is an almost total lack of sociological and psychological interpretation of this fantastic material, and that the work terminates so abruptly with the end of the Middle Ages. Nevertheless, there are riches here almost beyond calculation, and they have not wholly lost their value for our time." Dudley Fitts

+ — N Y Times p36 Je 11 '50 450w

"The only comprehensive treatment of its subject in English."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:278 S '50 280w

PATERSON, NEIL. Behold thy daughter. 405p $3 Random house

50-5172

Tale of the Scottish fishing village of Kaysie a hundred years ago, and of Thirza Gare, daughter of a poor fisherman. Thirza knew what she wanted, even at the age of five. The need for an education was her first care, but from there she went on and up until she owned the fish curing firm, left her by her elderly husband. When she turned to smuggling and the Yankee captain who was her partner, Thirza met her match.

Booklist 46:167; 189 Ja 15 '50; F 1 '50

"Mr. Paterson has stretched 'Behold Thy Daughter' to 405 pages, something Hemingway, whom he admires, couldn't—or wouldn't—do. The story just isn't there for such treatment. And Thirza lacks the luster and reality of the glamorous hellion the author attempts to create. And Capt. Stullen, the American adventurer whom the book jacket describes as the man Thirza 'couldn't love and couldn't leave,' is a plastic villain who excites little interest." Richard Blakesley

— Chicago Sun p9 Ja 29 '50 350w

"A long novel, abounding in distinctly individualized characters, and myriad details of the Scottish background. Among the elements in its excellence are the highly important ones that Mr. Paterson writes wittily and well, and that he is able to keep his reader on Thirza's side, no matter what she does."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 2 '50 250w

"There's warmth, action and a variety of emotional shades to the writing to give this story a definite interest."

+ Kirkus 17:656 D 1 '49 170w

"A well-written, interesting novel. . . Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:105 Ja 15 '50 70w

" 'Behold Thy Daughter' presents a living portrait and imparts the savor of seacoast Scotland without the formidable dialect on which some writers depend too generously." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 5 '50 550w

"Mr. Paterson's portrait of Scotland in the last century makes a colorful background for this adventure story, written, one feels, with a certain consciousness of Hollywood. The result is an effective antidote to boredom, for those who are not too finicky about probability or the finer shades of characterization." Leslie Rofe

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 29 '50 150w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 184:126 Jl 28 '50 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 28 '50 150w

PATMORE, DEREK. Life and times of Coventry Patmore. 249p il $4 Oxford

B or 92 Patmore, Coventry Kersey Dighton [49-6556]

"This biography, written half a century after the death of one of the most enduring poets and most disputed legends of the Victorian age has a double distinction. Composed by his great grandson as a scholarly labor of love, it brings an unusual objectivity to the telling of the factual story and a critical understanding of the subjectivity of Coventry Patmore's emotional life. The biography has the narrative invitation of a family novel, and the story of kinship and friendship is closely woven into the tapestry of nineteenth century political, social and religious life, in England and in Rome. . . Much new material touching the friendship with Tennyson, the letters to and from Carlyle, and an awareness of his great-grandfather's political convictions as a neglected thread in his career as an Englishman, command attention." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Edmund Gosse and Basil Champneys wrote biographies of Patmore and there is a first-rate essay by Shane Leslie. That room to spare could be found for another book has been obvious ever since serious research on the lives of the great Victorians began. Derek Patmore has not said the final word, but he has come up with a great deal of hitherto unavailable material, some of it piquant and unconventional. . . What doesn't get into the book is Patmore's marvelous classical sense of humor, which associate him with Dryden and Pope." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 51:491 F 10 '50 650w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 5 '50 900w

PATRICK, MILLAR. Four centuries of Scottish psalmody. 234p il $4 Oxford

223.5 Bible. O.T.—Psalms. Church of Scotland. Church music [50-5048]

"For 300 years, conservative Scots have been faithful to their Psalms of David in Meeter . . . authorized by the church Commission of Assembly and the civil Committee of Estates to be used in all Scottish congregations and families after May first, 1650. Dr. Patrick's erudite exposition traces still an earlier century of evolution from the Genevan and English Psalters, and then details the history of the established Second Scottish Psalter." Churchman

---

"Dr. Patrick is a thorough expert in both literary and the musical aspects of psalmody. His work is a scholarly study of an important and interesting part of the stream of Christian history." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:791 Je 28 '50 1050w

Reviewed by Leonard Ellinwood
Churchman 164:17 F 15 '50 310w

"By far the larger portion of Dr. Patrick's book consists of a historical investigation of the early history of Scottish psalmody and of the process by which the present Psalter, now just three hundred years old, came into being. This investigation was undertaken, in celebration of the tercentenary, at the request of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland on the recommendation of the Chalmers Trust. The task has been nobly discharged. Dr. Patrick has long been known as the leading authority in this field, and the present work crowns a life-time of devoted research. It is excellently readable." John Baillie
+ Spec 183:786 D 2 '49 850w

"No one can read this book without recognizing the immense debt of gratitude he owes to Dr. Patrick for this clear, scholarly survey, so attractively written. Its judgments are sound, unbiased and gracious; and its facts skilfully and fascinatingly marshalled. Gratitude must also be expressed to the publisher for the admirable production of the book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ap 7 '50 1200w

PATTERN of the past: can we determine it? by Pieter Geyl, Arnold J. Toynbee and Pitirim A. Sorokin. 130p $2 Beacon press

901 Toynbee, Arnold Joseph. Civilization—Philosophy. History—Philosophy 49-11504

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"So much attention has been drawn in recent years to the impressive six volumes so far published of Toynbee's A Study of History and to more recent and concise expressions of his philosophy of history that a considerable academic or otherwise highly literate public may be presumed to have come to its own conclusions concerning the significance of his work. The present small volume . . . may, however, be expected to do something to inform a somewhat wider public, or another segment of the public, concerning the value and the limitations of Toynbee's ideas." F. N. House
+ Am J Soc 55:602 My '50 270w

"This is a weighty little book on Toynbee's Study of History. . . Geyl of Utrecht and Sorokin of Harvard vigorously attack Toynbee, the English historian, but from somewhat different viewpoints, that of the Hollander representing the historian, that of the American, the sociologist. . . Toynbee says little in this book except stoutly to deny that he follows Spengler, and stoutly to affirm that civilizations decay primarily from internal dry rot and not through outside agencies. His contribution to historical studies in this particular still remains superb, and, in the opinion of this reviewer, is well founded." W. P. Hall
Ann Am Acad 268:196 Mr '50 400w

"It is good reading matter for every student of religion, not only because it is an excellent example of the application of scientific methods to the analysis of the life of man, but also because its conclusions undergird some very fundamental principles of Christianity." K. F. Mather
+ Crozer Q 27:166 Ap '50 500w
Foreign Affairs 28:676 Jl '50 20w

"Faithful readers of the Toynbee literature in recent periodicals will not find much that is new in this little book, which contains Professor Geyl's article from the Journal of the History of Ideas and Professor Sorokin's review from the Journal of Modern History. These slices of hardly fresh bread envelop the thin meat of this particular sandwich, a mere twenty pages of popular dialogue between Professors Geyl and Toynbee." H. A. L.
— J Philos 47:475 Ag 3 '50 210w

PATTERSON, HAYWOOD, and CONRAD, EARL. Scottsboro boy. 309p $3 Doubleday

343 Scottsboro case 50-8070

"In March, 1931, nine Negro boys, stealing a ride on a freight train in Alabama, fought with some white boys. Unfortunately for them, they won. The whites complained, and when the train reached Paint Rock, all the Negroes were arrested and charged with attacking two white prostitutes, also stealing rides. Though they had not seen the girls until arrested, they were automatically found guilty and sentenced to death. Outsiders, interested in justice, intervened and the Scottsboro case was on. . . This is the story told by Haywood Patterson, one of the nine, to Earl Conrad." Canadian Forum

---

Booklist 46:328 Jl 1 '50

"Earl Conrad, author of Harriet Tubman, has accomplished a disagreeable but brave and important work." E. McN.
+ Canadian Forum 30:70 Je '50 380w
Chicago Sun p5 Je 27 '50 140w

"Adults are forewarned that 'Scottsboro Boy' is more than a story; it is a fearfully native recital by an untutored man of wrongs done him by his countrymen, and of his countrymen's compassion. Its language is a superb flow of vulgarity and depravity. What Patterson heard or felt in prison he remembers and recalls with frightening exactitude. What he saw he describes in the finished phrases of the damned, and his faithful Conrad omitted nothing from this biografical report of a cruelly framed man." Roscoe Simmons
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 11 '50 420w

Reviewed by Covington Hardee
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 8 '50 600w

"Patterson's story, told ungrammatically, simply, with quiet good humor (itself a miracle in the light of his experiences) is striking evidence of the truly tremendous courage of the man. It is also a crushing indictment of the hypocrisy of a people who mouth slogans of Christianity and democracy while tolerating the vicious pattern of racism in this country." G. H. Dunne
+ Commonweal 52:371 Jl 21 '50 1000w
Kirkus 18:158 Mr 1 '50 220w

"The book is highly subjective and Patterson's memory has undoubtedly been sharpened by his co-author, but the book is shockingly truthful. A useful and complete chronology of the case is appended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 75:861 My 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
New Statesman & Nation 40:210 Ag 19 '50 1050w

"Patterson's collaborator, Earl Conrad, is an experienced writer with several books to his credit. It was he obviously who organized and wrote 'Scottsboro Boy' in a kind of self-conscious laboring to transcribe the elisions and slurrings of the unlettered Southern Negro's speech, a straining for idiom, as if to give the narrative the effect of spoken words. This is an artifice, to be sure, but it sharpens the central impression, the great truth of Southern mass attitudes and hostilities which are fundamental to the injustices of the Scottsboro case." Tarleton Collier
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 4 '50 2150w

"This is the personal story of Haywood Patterson, one of nine Negro youths known throughout the world in the Nineteen Thirties as the 'Scottsboro Boys.' It is a piece of primitive writing and thinking based on an accumulation of so much evil among men that one finishes it with a kind of reader's trauma. . . It is not a nice story. It is a monolith of human degradation. His report of the sex life of prison inmates and the beatings administered by prison guards is sickening. His thought-processes are extremely one-sided, and as the years of injustice roll by he adopts completely the hardened criminal's attitude that only he can really understand the maddening imbalance of the scales. The reader soon begs for some touch of logic in Patterson's depiction of human beings, no matter what their depravity. . . One should not fail to mention that the book includes the magnificent opinion that Circuit Judge James E. Horton of Alabama wrote when he granted a motion for a new trial for Patterson." J. N. Popham

PATTERSON, HAYWOOD—Continued

N Y Times p14 Je 4 '50 450w

"Earl Conrad has done an excellent job of translating into the simplest possible idiom the enormous tragic indignation that inevitably consumes a thirty-seven-year-old man who has been obliged, because of a crime of which he says he was unjustly accused, to live since the age of eighteen under conditions he feels closely approximate barbarism."

+ New Yorker 26:108 Je 10 '50 200w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 25 '50 600w

"It is understandable that a Negro victim of white malice should not try to analyze the whys of his long mistreatment. His story is, on the surface, only an ugly account of unrelieved evils. . . But it is not understandable from the text why Haywood Patterson, whose memory for long-ago incidents even to degraded and inconsequential prison small-talk seems uncanny, should overlook an initial reason for the State of Alabama's adamant demand for an undeserved penalty. . . Throughout the sordid narrative Patterson credits the International Labor Defense with giving him the only effective help. Never does he even name the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. . . Yet Walter White himself went down to hate-charged Scottsboro as soon as the story became known. The NAACP employed the defendant's first counsel." Hodding Carter

Sat R of Lit 33:11 Je 10 '50 1100w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 184:216 Ag 18 '50 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p520 Ag 18 '50 1450w

PATTON, LUCIA. Little echo in the hills; a read-it-yourself story, pictured by [the author]. [32p] $1.50 Whitman, A.

50-6747

A read-it-yourself book for grades two to four. It describes a summer picnic shared by a family with two small children, as well as a friend of the family who was mapping the region, and his helper.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun p3 Ap 15 '50 40w

"A sterile story with uninteresting use of the words at the command of first and second year readers."

— Kirkus 18:205 Ap 1 '50 50w

"Another 'read-it-yourself' story in manuscript type. The many pictures, one on every page, and a real plot concerning a picnic, maps, a porcupine, and an echo will appeal to the beginning reader. . . Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 75:880 My 15 '50 60w

Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 90w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Je '50

PAUCK, WILHELM. Heritage of the reformation. 312p $4 Beacon press; lib ed $4 Free press

284 Reformation. Protestantism. Luther, Martin. Liberalism (religion). Calvin, John 50-7345

Essays on the "central problem in modern Protestant thought:" What is the Christian gospel for today? The author, who is professor of the Federated Theological faculty of the University of Chicago, divides his work into three sections: The reformation; Protestantism; Liberalism. Index.

Reviewed by I. G. Whitchurch

Ann Am Acad 271:221 S '50 350w

Booklist 46:346 Jl 15 '50

"Whatever one's own religious views, this book deserves to be studied with great care by all students of the Reformation, and of modern religious history. It is also of prime importance to everyone who wishes to comprehend something of the very serious religious thinking that is being called forth by our present critical situation. This is a book that will provoke much discussion and will arouse strong dissent in many parts, but it will also command high respect as a first-rate, honest statement of opinion by an outstanding scholar." R. M. Saunders

+ — Canadian Hist R 31:320 S '50 650w

"A more completely objective account of certain aspects of the Reformation could doubtless be written by a less profound and earnest theologian, but probably only at the cost of a superficiality which is too high a price to pay for objectivity. So far as I know, there has not been for a generation a book about the Reformation which is more rewarding for the thoughtful reader, both as an interpretation of the minds and hearts of the great Reformers and as a stimulus and guide to reflection upon the present problems of Protestantism." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 67:950 Ag 9 '50 1150w

Reviewed by E. L. Allen

Hibbert J 48:399 Jl '50 140w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p31 Je 11 '50 270w

"The work of a scholar bringing his knowledge and understanding of the past to bear upon contemporary life. In some ways it would be a stronger book if it were briefer, now and then it is trite and wordy. But in the main it is a valuable contribution to the study of the bearing of Reformation thought and insight upon the troubles of our own time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p361 Je 9 '50 1000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:295 S '50 250w

PAUKER, JOHN. Yoked by violence. 45p $2 Swallow, A.

811 49-11205

"Budapest-born, Yale-educated John Pauker indicates, in much of his work, the cleavage between old world superstitions and new world intellectual fears. His satiric fables, with their caustic, fast-paced lines, exploit contemporary dangers and fallacies." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This writer has some learning, imagination, wit, ear, and a tendency, occasionally, to push the detail of a conceit farther along into catalogue than it can really stand." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 69:601 D 17 '49 110w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p50 D 4 '49 290w

"John Pauker, in spite of a meretricious orchestration, can, on occasion, emerge as a brilliant, although anonymous soloist. His vice and virtue walk hand in hand. . . If algid, the wit is (admired quality!) bright. Perhaps the real trouble is that Pauker, as his aliases, 'Thomas Rowley' and 'Jethro Somes,' might suggest, is a sly one. . . Somewhere, though, beneath the folderol, subtends an honest Mr. Pauker whose sense of reality is immaculate. I hope that this real Pauker will extricate himself and make the poet's fighting peace with his times, for, as bad as the world may appear, it is the only environment." J. R. Squires

+ — Poetry 76:303 Ag '50 100w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 8 '50 30w

PAUL, CHARLOTTE. Hear my heart speak. 272p $3 Messner

Spence Atkins returned from the war in 1918 a victim of shell shock, the only sign of which was his loss of speech. But that loss followed him for years despite his mother's faith and help; despite the understanding of his friends in the little Wisconsin town where he lived. The cure, when it finally came, brought happiness to both Spence and his mother.

Booklist 46:210; 262 Mr 1 '50; Ap 15 '50

"A triumph for faith and science but a dismal failure for literature." Mary Sandrock
Cath World 171:395 Ag '50 100w

"'Hear My Heart Speak' is a book for those who want their reading to be a pleasure rather than a chore."
+ Chicago Sun p22 Ap 23 '50 290w

"Courage, honesty, the ability to face defeats, are all traits of which we see less and less in life as well as in fiction; hence Spence Atkins, who is no titan of a man, but simply an average American youth, might stand as the symbol for many unvoiced and unsung heroes who live their lives out without benefit of the public scribe. One could have wished for a stronger vehicle in which to convey his story." August Derleth
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 23 '50 450w

"It may be the novel that is so hard to find —the one that Mother will enjoy."
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 My 6 '50 270w

"A quiet, slow-moving but appealing chronicle of small town life—for older girls, especially." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 26:398 S '50 50w

+ Kirkus 18:114 F 15 '50 170w

"Excellent characterization and picturesque descriptions make a fine first novel." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 75:560 Ap 1 '50 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 23 '50 140w

Reviewed by Leon Dorais
N Y Times p27 My 21 '50 100w

Springf'd Republican p6D Jl 16 '50 150w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Ap '50

PAUL, ELIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud) Springtime in Paris. 364p $3.50 Random house

914.436 Paris—Social life and customs. France—Politics and government 50-8815

A series of sketches of life in the rue de la Huchette, revisited after ten years' absence. By the author of The Last Time I Saw Paris (Book Review Digest 1942).

Booklist 46:325; 352 Jl 1 '50; Jl 15 '50

"The book is generally unrewarding, for its concern with 'an obscure quarter of Paris' while accounting for some originality, is also the source of its weakness. . . The final picture of the city is inconclusive and controversial." J. F. X. Irving
— Cath World 172:157 N '50 400w

"For Paul fans, there are some quaint characters in precious adventures. But for those who want to understand what is going on in France, there is little."
Chicago Sun p12 Ag 15 '50 140w

"A book which is both entertaining and illuminating in a way that a more serious minded, critical, or photografic study never could be." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 13 '50 700w

"Those readers who happen to enjoy Mr. Paul will return with him after an absence of ten years, during five of which the City of Light had been again submerged in the Dark Ages. Guided by him they will get a clear, lovingly delineated, but objective picture of Paris resurrected. . . Missing from his gallery are portraits of typical 'good Frenchmen'—and particularly of the admirable Frenchwomen, who with quiet heroism kept their households fed, their children decently clothed, their ideals untarnished through the cold barbaric years. Without these characters facts remain unprophetic." Kathleen Cannell
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '50 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50 20w

"Companion piece to the enchanting The Last Time I Saw Paris and with much of its charm, albeit at times a disturbing portrait."
+ Kirkus 18:327 Je 1 '50 270w

"No American captures the ambience of Paris, the flavor of la vie Parisienne as uniquely as Paul. The book is warm, human, living. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 75:1044 Je 15 '50 130w

"For all its amiability and charm, this is quite bluntly candid if also quite affectionate reporting, rich with good anecdotes and keen character studies." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 20 '50 1150w

"Mr. Paul has determinedly presented the mixture as before, the same concoction of nonsense and myth, froth and fiction. . . In 'The Last Time,' Mr. Paul invested about eighteen years of his life, distilled and transmuted, but with evidence enough of a real and honest emotion for Paris. Now he has put in a spring and it doesn't make one swallow the book as a verisimilar portrait of the world's favorite city." J. A. Barry
— N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '50 900w

New Yorker 26:84 Ag 19 '50 130w

"In general, like 'The Last Time I saw Paris,' this new book is neither quite all fact nor quite all fiction. It is Mr. Paul's own special type of reporting—a matter of basic fact strained through a highly imaginative mind, colored by the author's highly developed sense of anecdote, and shaped by his personal sensitivity to people and places." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 16 '50 900w

"One wishes Mr. Paul had not spent so much time cataloguing sights, sounds, and smells. Had he employed his energy in working on his material, selecting, developing, and shaping it, he might have written an important book." Martin Blumenson
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:21 S 16 '50 550w

Time 56:86 Ag 14 '50 450w

PAUL, LESLIE ALLEN. Meaning of human existence. 259p $3 Lippincott

201 Christianity—Philosophy 50-5579

"Man's faith in himself is the foundation of the Christian ethic. This book by a Britisher who served in the Army Education Corps during the late war is the further development of the conclusion of his The Annihilation of Man [Book Review Digest 1945]—a Christian vindication of the dignity of man and an answer to the materialistic philosophies of our day which deny man's faith in himself and leave him confused and lost. The three parts of this diagnosis consider respectively the physical world, human nature and Christian revelation." Library J

"I think that time will prove this a book with which to reckon. Preachers, theologians and college teachers will neglect it to their cost. It states the case for theism in terms which those who have burned incense before the shrines of Bertrand Russell and Julian Huxley—or Sigmund Freud—cannot wave away." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 67:270 Mr 1 '50 1050w

"Mr. Leslie Paul's answer to the inquiry implied in the title of his book is that God is the meaning of all existence, and that 'love is the meaning of God.' Before he arrives at this conclusion, however, he takes his readers through some pretty tortuous theology. . . Mr. Paul's book, nevertheless, is an important one. For in arriving at his, for him, satisfying answers, he explores with penetrating insight many of the roads which the modern social and physical sciences have opened." Neil Martin

PAUL, L. A.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 S 9 '50 700w

Current Hist 18:355 Je '50 20w

"Recommended for libraries with a mature philosophy and religion reading public." E. H. Weeks

+ Library J 75:316 F 15 '50 140w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 37:409 Ap 23 '49 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 Ap 2 '50 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Ap 16 '49 700w

PAUL, LOUIS. Husband for mama. 275p $3 Crown
50-14254

A light love story. The Gaines family were a town worry after the much admired Professor Gaines died. Mama and her half-grown children seemed incapable of paying debts or realizing the value of money. But they were long on the art of happiness and unselfish to a fault. The story is of the amusing antics the children went thru in their blundering efforts to supply "mama" with a second husband.

Kirkus 18:393 Jl 15 '50 170w

"Louis Paul mixes farce and sentiment in a story filled with high spirits. 'A Husband for Mama' succeeds in being amusing, but you must be very easily persuaded if you believe it really happened."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 17 '50 130w

"At times, Mr. Paul's novel bubbles with humor, though there are too many pages between laughs. The atmosphere of a small town is well created, yet most of the inhabitants are not quite credible. On the whole, the story is entertaining and inconsequential." B. S. Adler

+ — N Y Times p11 S 3 '50 100w

"You may not approve of the Gaineses, you certainly would not want to live with them, but you will enjoy reading about them. This is a lively and entertaining story. It should be a wow on the screen." E. E. Calkins

+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 S 23 '50 650w

PAYNE, MRS GRACE VISHER. Unveiling. 313p $3 Westminster press
50-3159

Character study of the Iranian girl, Esmat, raised in the strict Moslem law, who was shocked when she was first ordered to unveil. But changing times brought changes to Esmat, too, and after years of struggle she learned the new ways. The time is from 1917 to the 1940's.

Booklist 46:316 Je 15 '50

+ Kirkus 18:146 Mr 1 '50 190w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 17 '50 550w

"In revealing historical events through the shadows they cast on one woman's home, Mrs. Payne has effectively used a standard fictional device. Her knowledge of her subject and her people is authentic, and what her point of view lacks in breadth is made up in warmth. Her earnest novel, though suffering from the defects common to 'uplift' literature, adds to our valid documentation on the Middle East." Gerald Sykes

N Y Times p24 Je 25 '50 320w

"I find a certain inadequacy of character delineation. Sincerely as Mrs. Payne attempts to depict the problems of her characters . . . there is a stiffness and a formality about them; even Esmat, whom she knows best and who plays the leading role, is rather unconvincing as a person. . . There is much in the book to be praised, however; its accurate and often extremely colorful and interesting description of life in the emerging State of Iran and of the beliefs and observances of an orthodox Moslem family whose traditions give reluctant way to a changing scene." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:35 Jl 1 '50 440w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT (RICHARD CARGOE, pseud). Mao Tse-tung; ruler of Red China. 303p il maps $3.50 Schuman
B or 92 Mao Tse-tung. Communism—China
50-10288

"The biography of the scholar, one-time library assistant, and poet who now possesses more direct power over more people than any other person in history. In presenting the life story of the man the world had better come to know well, the most recent history of the Chinese communist movement is also given. Mr. Payne gathered some of his material from conversations with Mao himself and with Hsiao Chu-chang (Emi Siao), closest friend of Mao during the latter's most impressionable years." (Library J) Chronological table. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:95 N 1 '50

Reviewed by Kenneth Colegrove
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 26 '50 550w

"It is obvious that we cannot know too much about this man. Mr. Payne's book is a stimulating one. In centering Mao squarely in Chinese tradition and history, he more than answers writers who see in Mao Tse-tung nothing more than the sinister hand of Stalin." M. B. Jansen

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 N 11 '50 750w

"When he comes to deal with Mao's life and thought, Mr. Payne occasionally surrenders to his imagination. . . Despite occasional literary flourishes such as these, the book is probably the best since Edgar Snow's Red Star Over China for the layman who wishes to understand the rationale of the Chinese Communist movement." H. C. Hinton

+ — Commonweal 53:152 N 17 '50 380w

Current Hist 19:290 N '50 80w

"A revealing book, beautifully written, well documented . . . scholarly."

+ Kirkus 18:543 S 1 '50 220w

"Scholars and academes will regret the lack of documentation in other important passages. An important book written in Payne's usual excellent, readable style." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 130w

"Robert Payne is a gifted author-poet with extensive experience in China; he is a non-Communist who understands the appeal of Communism to Asiatics. His book has the great merit of being neither a diatribe nor a hagiography. It is also highly readable, fluent and assertive. But the ease with which Mr. Payne leads up to his conclusions does not stem from a mastery of his material; there are few pages in his book without a name misspelled, an event misplaced, or a fact misinterpreted. He would have given us greater faith in his accuracy had he avoided misspelling well-known names and misdating well-known events." Conrad Brandt

+ — New Repub 123:19 D 25 '50 800w

"As biography, it sheds virtually no new light on its subject and manages to obscure some of the murky light already there. As history, it attempts to re-tell what has been better and more accurately told at least a dozen times before by infinitely more conscientious students and reporters." H. R. Isaacs

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 19 '50 800w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer
N Y Times p3 O 29 '50 1000w

"The result is not altogether successful—Mao and the forces that made him are too complex to be presented properly in one book—but the author comes to certain conclusions that are plain enough."

New Yorker 26:131 O 28 '50 260w

"Robert Payne's superb new biography of Mao Tse-tung is a major contribution to our understanding of the Chinese revolution. Its wealth of accurate information, thoughtful comment and fresh insight together with its vivid literary style make it essential and exciting reading for specialist and nonspecialist alike." M. C. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 26 '50 500w

"A sympathetic but critical biography of the most powerful revolutionist since Lenin." Richard Watts
Sat R of Lit 33:11 O 14 '50 1000w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT (RICHARD CARGOE, pseud). The tormentors. 250p $3 Sloane 50-5255

"The individual vs. the State—this is the battle which the author reveals in its most highly distilled form—the Soviet slave labor camp. Combatants in this drama are a group of 'deviationists,' including a doctor, musician, priest and ex-communist, and their guards. Although the struggle is physically very unequal, it is the prisoners who emerge spiritually liberated and the guards who are imprisoned in the web of their dialectics." Library J

Booklist 46:200 F 15 '50

Reviewed by R. E. K. Pemberton
Canadian Forum 30:165 O '50 280w

"'Richard Cargoe' is a writer of considerable stature. He has written a book that no discerning reader will want to miss. Despite its portrayal of agony, it is a book of great beauty." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 5 '50 500w

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor
Churchman 164:17 S 15 '50 240w

"Of superior intellectual interest."
+ Kirkus 17:657 D 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by A. J. Gaines
Library J 75:172 F 1 '50 80w

"In its total effect this novel is heartening, rather than the opposite. One gradually builds up a conviction that the qualities that have insured the survival of the human race, sometimes in spite of itself, are those of the prisoners; that though nearly all these men and women were killed, the freedom of the human spirit that they stood for is durable. Not religious in the conventional sense, 'The Tormentors' is thoughtful and eloquent testimony to its author's faith." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 19 '50 700w

"Many a reader may find it hard to grasp the ultimate meaning of this series of haunting visions, brilliantly dialectic discussions and theological parables. For nowhere does the author provide us with a key. Fortunately, Richard Cargoe has written this story of human martyrdom, of the miraculous perseverance of the human spirit, in a forceful, almost majestic manner and has endowed even his intellectual dialogues with such an affectionate fury that an inquiry into the final intent of his allegory seems almost unnecessary." Richard Plant
+ — N Y Times p4 F 5 '50 250w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 33:15 Mr 18 '50 650w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 183:188 Ag 5 '49 190w

"An erratic novel which alternates uncertainly between dramatic power and distracting preachments."
Time 55:90 Ja 30 '50 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Jl 22 '49 550w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT (RICHARD CARGOE, pseud). Young emperor [Eng title: Great mogul]. 357p $3.50 Macmillan

Shāhjahān, emperor of India—Fiction
[50-27672]

A novel of India in the days of Shah Jehan, prince and later the emperor, during the first half of the seventeenth century. Stephen Taverner, an English adventurer, a friend of the emperor, is the narrator.

Booklist 47:137 D 1 '50

"The novel moves slowly and yet with endless grace." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 29 '50 490w

+ Kirkus 18:529 S 1 '50 220w

"The Indian scene of the period is depicted well with its loves and lusts, welter of religions, exotic customs, treachery and torture, and incessant warfare. The characterizations are good." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:1507 S 15 '50 110w

Reviewed by Antonia White
— New Statesman & Nation 39:667 Je 10 '50 90w

"Here is historical romance in the best sense of the phrase. Mr. Payne has succeeded in fusing his fictitious characters with the historical background to make a completely credible and emotionally acceptable world, the most difficult objective of historical romance." Bradford Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 29 '50 550w

"How much Mr. Payne writes out of factual knowledge and how much out of himself is hard to tell. This is hardly a historical novel; rather is it a re-creation of a people's soul at a given time in history; as such it leans to the lyrical rather than to the factual." John Cournos
N Y Times p35 O 22 '50 360w

"Mr. Payne is out to entertain, and he does it with gusty enthusiasm that is often irresistible. If in the end one is left reeling a little, it is worth bearing in mind that there is a sequel yet to come. One of the admirable qualities of Mr. Payne is that he may be depended on to clear away the litter and leave the place in as good an order as he has found it." J. G. Hitrec
+ Sat R of Lit 33:28 N 18 '50 800w

"It is episodic and inconclusive . . . but is permeated by a deep love of India; it has a curious dream-like and slow-motion quality, as though all the action were taking place beneath the surface of water, which gives it an unusual kind of charm."
Times [London] Lit Sup p321 My 26 '50 220w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT (RICHARD CARGOE, pseud). Zero; the story of terrorism; with an introd. by Pearl S. Buck. 270p $3.50 Day

335.83 Terrorism 50-7595

"Survey of nihilism beginning with Nechayev, the first nihilist to draw up a code of revolutionary laws. Mr. Payne goes on to describe this terror and cruelty as it existed in Russia in the nineteenth century, in early Rome, in China, in Germany under Hitler, in the camps for prisoners and even today, when terrorism is present everywhere, as evident from a casual glance at our newspapers. Finally there is advice on how to overcome this evil." Library J

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"A readable work, but saturated with an oh-how-horrible-it-all-is attitude."
Chicago Sun p3 My 30 '50 90w

"Payne's book on terrorism is truly terrifying. It will make your flesh creep without trick camera and sound effects, and [sad to say] it is true." A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 14 '50 460w

"Here is Mr. Payne's usual exquisite, erudite, and smoothly flowing prose in an intelligent presentation of a frightening subject. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:863 My 15 '50 110w

"One wishes that Payne's pressing need to save and be saved did not curtail his sense of the material with which he is working, and make him forget that life is complex, various, and always resistant to the fetters of patterns and charts. Payne is always literate, often eloquent, but too often also slack." Monroe Engle

PAYNE, P. S. R.—Continued

— + Nation 170:579 Je 10 '50 1100w

"Zero is not valuable as a history of ideas. Its distinction lies elsewhere. It is a moral eye-opener, a sermon for our time. As such, I recommend it." Robert Langbaum

+ New Repub 123:21 Jl 31 '50 1050w

Reviewed by August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 14 '50 1100w

" 'Zero' cuts a trail into a virtually unknown part of the revolutionary-authoritarian jungle. Despite its imperfections, it is a work of originality and importance, illuminated by profound insights and at all times absorbing." Nathaniel Weyl

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 4 '50 950w

"A memorable book, and an important one."
+ New Yorker 26:112 My 27 '50 130w

" 'Zero' has some sound and grim observations, although some of the comments about American culture and about the resemblance between Nazism and Communism seem rather far-fetched. The attempt to interpret modern history from a limited viewpoint tends to distort the picture somewhat, and so does the personalizing of the nihilist forces as 'the Nechayev monster.' " I. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 250w

PEABODY, MRS CLAIRE. Singing sails [il. by Cecil Smith]. 197p $3 Caxton ptrs.

910.4 Seafaring life 50-5477

An account of two long sea voyages made by the author when she was a child. One voyage was in 1896, and the ship sailed from San Francisco to London, via Hawaii, Pitcairn island, and Cape Horn and the Atlantic. The second voyage was from New York around Cape of Good Hope to Hong Kong. In both cases the author's stepfather captained the vessels.

"Entertaining and informative reading for both youngsters and grownups. The book is splendidly illustrated with black and white sketches by Cecil Smith, a World War II veteran, also famous for his cowpuncher and Indian pictures." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 5 '50 250w

N Y Times p33 F 19 '50 140w

PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT, and BLANTON, SMILEY. Art of real happiness. 247p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

258 Conduct of life. Psychology, Pastoral 50-5426

The minister of the Marble Collegiate church, and a medical psychiatrist, have been conducting a practical experiment in helping people who for one reason or another have been unhappy. This book, based on case histories from the clinic at Dr Peale's church, takes up such subjects as Why do we love and hate at the same time? How you can have peace of mind; How to stay healthy under pressure; How to grow older happily; etc.

Booklist 46:227 Mr 15 '50

Bookmark 9:158 Ap '50 30w

"A book for the layman as well as his spiritual pastor. A good audience is already made for this."

+ Kirkus 17:686 D 15 '49 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 11 '50 230w

"There will be readers who might wish that the title of the book had made a more restrained promise. Happiness is proverbially elusive, and always precarious under the best of circumstances. . . Yet, many who are anxious, depressed, guilt-ridden, embittered or bereaved, will be grateful for the hope renewed in these pages that burdens can be lightened and faltering feet set more firmly in the path." A. P. Davies

+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 12 '50 450w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham
Sat R of Lit 33:21 Ap 22 '50 750w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C My 7 '50 240w

Wis Lib Bul 46:12 Ap '50

PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT, and BLANTON, SMILEY. Faith is the answer; a pastor and a psychiatrist discuss your problems. 243p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

201 Psychology, Religious. Psychanalysis

New and revised edition of a book first published in 1940 (Book Review Digest 1941 under Blanton). The book is made up of chapters written alternately by Dr Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate church in New York, and Dr Blanton, a psychiatrist, who was a student of Freud, and is a member of the medical faculty of Vanderbilt University.

Reviewed by C. Seidenspinner
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 9 '50 470w

+ Kirkus 18:312 Je 1 '50 60w

— San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 10 '50 220w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Mahatma Gandhi; a biography for young people. 229p il $2.75 Holt

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand—Juvenile literature 50-10122

A biography of Gandhi written for readers of high school age. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 47:100 N 1 '50

"An inspiring and exciting book."
+ Kirkus 18:644 O 15 '50 160w

"The Peare biography is written with power and skill. . . This author has become remarkably imbued with a sense of Indian ways and explains them well." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 12 '50 150w

"Beautifully written, well documented." Eleanor Brent

+ N Y Times p42 N 19 '50 150w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen
Sat R of Lit 33:62 N 11 '50 130w

PEARLMAN, MOSHE (M. P. WATERS, pseud). Army of Israel [il. with phot. and special war maps prepared by the author]. 256p $5 Philosophical lib.

956.9 Israel. Army. Palestine—Politics and government 50-7361

An account of the battles in which the armies of the new Jewish state fought off the Arabs. The publication was timed to coincide with the second anniversary of the state. Illustrated with photographs and maps. Index.

Chicago Sun p7 Ap 21 '50 50w

Reviewed by Marie Syrkin
Nation 170:625 Je 24 '50 270w

"The text is brief; yet, even so, a third of it is devoted to the familiar story of the Haganah or self-defense organization in the pre-war decades. The remainder—through, one can surmise, no fault of the author—reads like official communiques and tells little that was not published in the major American newspapers. However, in reading the facts again, one is impressed by the plenitude and accuracy with which our correspondents cover history in the making." Marvin Lowenthal

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 28 '50 550w

"It is surprising that this book on Israel's military epic is meager and stodgy. Since the author has been anything but humdrum as a one-man public relations task force, his lack of verve here may be attributed to haste and to the reticence necessitated by his official position. Nevertheless, the drama does shine through." Hal Lehrman

N Y Times p7 My 14 '50 550w

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 220w

PEARSON, FREDERICK S. comp. Fractured French [cartoons] freely collected and tr. by [the author] il. by R. Taylor. 44p $1.50 Doubleday

817 50-12888

"A ribald rendering into English of more or less familiar morsels of a beautiful language. F. S. Pearson 2d handled the translating, and R. Taylor contributed illustrations." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 18:622 O 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 3 '50 110w

Reviewed by Allan Worth
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 26 '50 120w

Reviewed by Horace Sutton
+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 D 2 '50 600w

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. That darned minister's son. 262p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Farm life 50-6636

"As the minister's son in a New Hampshire rural community, Haydn S. Pearson had his full share of amusing experiences, which he recalls in this book of essays and stories. Haydn's father elected to supplement his meager parson's income by farming. His son, consequently, was afforded an opportunity to know the joys of a farm boy, as well as the more austere life in a parsonage." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 46:259 Ap 15 '50

+ Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 50w

"The material is warm and human, but benefits little from the author's pedestrian style." Lloyd Wendt
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 2 '50 200w

"This is really the heart-warming story of a family's courageous enterprise, of healthy industry and thrift, of pleasures sweetened by being earned, of happiness won from deeply honest values. It is a needed reminder in these synthetic times that life artificially tasted through a strip of celluloid and a loud speaker is no real substitute for life lived warmly, at the core." C. B. Burnett
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 21 '50 360w

Kirkus 18:47 Ja 15 '50 150w

" 'That Darned Minister's Son' is filled with barnyard smells, kitchen aroma and fireside companionship. It is merry and mellow."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 Ap 2 '50 260w

"It's a lovely book, bringing the author's short essays together for a fine impression of his boyhood and his time. It can be recommended above most of the present crop of when-I-was-a-sprout books. Mr. Pearson has long been a gifted, charming, delightful writer of bucolics. You must read 'That Darned Minister's Son' and see how much better he is now." John Gould
+ N Y Times p31 Ap 16 '50 340w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 4 '50 100w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
+ Springf'd Republican p9B Jl 2 '50 360w

PEASE, MRS ELEANOR FAIRCHILD. Book of horses and their pictures; pictured by James L. Cannon. [32p] $1.50 Whitman, A.

Horses—Legends and stories 49-50337

True stories of different kinds of horses: the Shetland pony, the cow pony, the police horse, the circus horse, the polo pony, the mustang, the pacer, and the Percheron. For ages 8 to 10.

"While narrative in form, [the stories] are far more pleasing than most short stories written for children. This book will be a source of sheer pleasure to those fourth graders who are always demanding horse stories." J. M. Smith
+ Library J 75:177 F 1 '50 50w

"Although the stories are slight, the information is accurate." A. N. Fedder
N Y Times p12 Ja 1 '50 40w

PEASE, HOWARD. Dark adventure. 229p $2.50 Doubleday

50-10044

"This fast-moving story starts with an automobile accident in which our hitch-hiking hero loses his memory and almost his life. From that point on the tale concerns itself with the dark months that follow, and Johnny's struggle to retrace and recall his past. It contains all the ingredients of a top-flight gangster movie—including traffic in marihuana cigarettes—and a dramatic climax that leads to the recovery of Johnny's memory and self-knowledge of his identity." N Y Times

"Dealing realistically to the point of brutality with a problem which exists in greater or lesser degree thruout the country, it should be put in the hands of all parents of teen-age boys. The boys themselves, with whom Mr. Pease is a great favorite, will no doubt read it anyway, and because it is presented in the framework of a highly exciting story, should feel the impact of its serious theme." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 5 '50 200w

Reviewed by R. C. Buell
Library J 75:2020 N 15 '50 80w

"It's quite a book. It hands police and parents as bitter comment as it does the hot-rod boys. The happy ending is very contrived: boys will see that many a Johnny might not need such sympathetic characters as the helpful Whipples, and, after such adventures, might be truly 'lost.' " L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 31 '50 250w

N Y Times p10 N 12 '50 140w

"Might be useful in instilling the reading habit, and so leading the teen-ager to a discovery of the boundless pleasure and the lifetime of enthrallment that awaits him in the world of books, if he has not already found that, but to the child who already reads with enjoyment, 'The Dark Adventure' will offer little. Furthermore, in view of its emphasis on the extremely sordid aspects of road life, it might well be regarded as undesirable for immature and susceptible readers."
— + San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 12 '50 500w

"Howard Pease tells Johnny's story with complete realism. It is a shocking story and a sobering one. It is undoubtedly founded upon fact."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:50 N 11 '50 60w

PEASE, THEODORE CALVIN. Story of Illinois [fiftieth anniversary publication of the Ill. state hist. soc; general ed, Jay Monaghan; rev. by the author and M. J. Pease]. 284p il map $5 Univ. of Chicago press

977.3 Illinois—History 49-11105

"Theodore Calvin Pease's last task before his untimely death was a revision of his long-standard The Story of Illinois [Book Review Digest 1925]. A line-by-line comparison of the two editions indicates that necessary changes were kept to a minimum. While occasionally inserting the findings of later scholarship or improving wording, Professor

PEASE, T. C.—Continued
Pease retained the same organization, the same chapters, and even the same space allotment. In the 1924 edition a final chapter on 'The Illinois of the Present' dealt with the then current scene; in the 1949 edition the same title is used to embrace developments from 1918 to 1948." (Am Hist R) Index.

"The book still leans heavily on the interpretations of Clarence W. Alvord embodied in the Centennial History of Illinois, on which the first edition was frankly based. While the resulting book will be of wide use to those unable to obtain a copy of the earlier edition, a fresher interpretation in the light of historical concepts popularized during the past quarter century would have been even more useful. A number of excellent illustrations have been added, but the one map is less helpful than the two in the earlier edition." R. A. Billington
+ — Am Hist R 55:705 Ap '50 160w

"After 24 years, the merits of 'The Story of Illinois' stand out as sharply as ever. Here is no parochial approach of the kind that has so often given a bad name to state and local history. Instead, what happened in Illinois is always related to the broad stream of events." P. M. Angle
+ Chicago Sun p60 D 1 '49 460w

PEASLEE, AMOS JENKINS, comp. Constitutions of nations. 3v ea $7.50 Rumford press
342 Constitutions 50-7861

"A compilation of the constitutions of the world. Along with the constitution of each country, valuable summaries give the status of the nation in various international organizations, the form of the government, a brief outline of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the government, the sources of sovereign power, and the rights of the people." (Current Hist) Arranged alphabetically with v 1 covering Afghanistan to Finland, v2 France to Poland, v3 Portugal to Yugoslavia.

Reviewed by R. H. Fitzgibbon
Am Pol Sci R 44:1051 D '50 260w

"Much of the value of a compilation of this kind depends, of course, on the accuracy of the translations, and the English renditions of foreign language documents in these volumes are well done although in some instances not quite as literally as would be desirable. Mr. Peaslee may well be proud of his editorial contribution. Those who have need of the basic laws of foreign powers, be they large or small, may just as definitely be grateful to him." R. H. Fitzgibbon
+ Ann Am Acad 271:239 S '50 650w
Current Hist 19:165 S '50 40w
Foreign Affairs 29:144 O '50 30w

PEAT, MRS LOUISA (WATSON). Grandma did it this way. 247p $2.75 Holt
B or 92 Ireland—Social life and customs 50-7155

Reminiscences of the author's childhood on her grandparents' estate in northern Ireland. Grandma was a Victorian lady, but not eccentric, and her granddaughter's recollections of her show her as energetic, firm, and definitely the ruler of her invalid husband's domain.

Booklist 46:193; 272 F 15 '50; My 1 '50

"Small episodes, sparkling with humor and leaving a clear picture of an austere and exacting but valorous and benevolent Grandma."
+ Bookmark 9:184 My '50 30w

"'Grandma Did It This Way' is well worth any reader's time. It will be enjoyed not only for Grandma—and all those whose lives rotated about her—but also for its vivid pictures of a way of life that was gracious and temperate." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 28 '50 300w

"Never coy, never trying for humor, the innocence here has sincerity and simplicity."
+ Kirkus 18:124 F 15 '50 230w

"For those readers who like nostalgic personal history, who love description and have patience for minute details, these memoirs are recommended." M. H. Zipprich
Library J 75:693 Ap 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 14 '50 430w

"It amounts in the end to an amazing lot of information about Irish country life fifty or sixty years ago, more than is contained in most of the novels of the period written by men. It is easy reading, too; Mrs. Peat has a sharp mind and a bright memory. . . Grandma, as Mrs. Peat describes her, is someone our daughters and our wives should know." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p24 My 14 '50 350w

"All this is set down with exactly the right amount of lilt and is a pleasure to browse through."
+ New Yorker 26:124 Ap 22 '50 150w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 27 '50 250w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 33:18 Jl 29 '50 450w
Wis Lib Bul 46:20 My '50

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. Natural history of trees of eastern and central North America; il. by Paul Landacre. 606p $5 Houghton
582.16 Trees—North America 50-10354

"A reference book, complete with glossary, keys to genera and species, and indexes of the botanical and common names of the more than a hundred and fifty trees native to this area." New Yorker

Booklist 47:111 N 15 '50
Bookmark 10:31 N '50 40w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 22 '50 700w

"Donald Culross Peattie in this book is tree authority, nature lover, and phrasemaker. His wide experience, long technical training, unforced enthusiasm, and ability to use statistics in the way a theater director uses lighting, all make for an informative and delightful body of writing. . . The amount of largely forgotten fact written entertainingly into these pages is enormous." T. M. L.
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 N 4 '50 800w
Kirkus 18:498 Ag 15 '50 180w

"Mr. Peattie has added to his stature as naturalist by his stout and eminently readable account of the trees of Eastern and Central North America. . . Such a generous book is scarcely the type to carry in one's pocket on a forest venture (plenty of others, much slimmer are available) . . . so its value lies in the mingling of botanical fact and history and flashes back to that rich primeval forest which our ancestors entered ax in hand." Richardson Wright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 26 '50 900w

"This is a bold but worthwhile experiment. Readers who have enjoyed other excursions with this author into nature's realm will not be disappointed with this volume. The Peattie blend of poetry and common sense is unchanged. . . Because Peattie has enthusiasm and commands words, it is unfortunate that he is often so unrestrained. Some of this writing is like rapid-fire oratory packed with legend, political, economic and social history, pharmacopoeia and poetry—eloquent but bewildering." Rutherford Platt
+ — N Y Times p14 O 15 '50 450w

"The scientific facts are necessarily very much present. All in all, as the jacket states, a volume for a lifetime."
New Yorker 26:135 O 28 '50 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 7 '50 700w
Wis Lib Bul 46:14 N '50

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS, and PEATTIE, NOEL RODERICK. Cup of sky. 242p $2.50 Houghton

574 Natural history 50-8499

Essays in the field of natural history written by Donald Culross Peattie and his son Noel. The first essay is a brief sketch of the life of St Francis of Assisi, and several of the later chapters deal with aspects of St Francis' Hymn to Creation: sunlight; wind; water; the moon. Other topics include birdsong, honey, spider silk, ferns, fireflies, etc.

Booklist 46:348 Jl 15 '50

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 1 '50 180w

"Donald Culross Peattie, whose own writing has grown more intimately impressive with his growing years, in this volume proudly shares the pages with his 17 year old son, Noel, who contributes four of the 20 essays. Noel's are concerned with the heavens—'Shooting Stars,' 'The Evening Planet,' 'The Moon,' and 'Our Heavenly Earth.' They have hints of an inherited gift of wanderings thru time and space and man's history, but they have a didacticism, which his father's work never has, which is the result of youth's enthusiasm in the discovery of information and its eagerness to share facts. . . To single out any of Donald Peattie's essays would be as difficult as to know the secret springs of each reader's heart. Science is imparted to the reader, not with sugar-coating, but as the nourishingly exciting information which it inherently is, not remote from man's everyday life, but related to it as science has been from man's early moments. . . Only reading can give one the true, sweet savor of his literary style." Fanny Butcher

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 30 '50 600w

Reviewed by F. E. Luchs

+ Christian Century 67:924 Ag 2 '50 650w

"Mr. Peattie is nature's middleman and popularizer, uncovering for us the wonders latent right at hand and inducing in us something of his own excitement by means of his poet's prose. If Noel can do as much for the sky as his father is doing for the earth, and he has given us the promise, then we shall remember them along with the Elder and the Younger Pliny." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Jl 29 '50 1250w

Kirkus 18:273 My 1 '50 120w

"Especially refreshing is the opening essay devoted to St. Francis of Assisi in whom the love of God and of his creatures burst out in such spontaneity. Highly recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 130w

"There is much solid information here, irradiated as it is with sentiment. The molecular content of the sun is associated with the beneficence of sunlight. . . 'A Cup of Sky' is another expression of the emotional reverence that has characterized a long line of books by Donald Culross Peattie, together with promise of a new generation to perpetuate a tradition that goes back to St. Francis of Assisi." L. J. Halle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 2 '50 800w

"Donald Culross Peattie, assisted by Noel, brings to this calm book all of the fine qualities that have distinguished his earlier work: scientific knowledge, so thoroughly digested that it never interferes with his writing for laymen; a zest for all living and the ability to infect his readers with his own fervor. The Creator has had more elaborate but seldom more seemly hymns of praise. This is a most pleasant book to read, either intermittently or at a sitting. It is warm without being sentimental, colorful yet never ornate." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '50 320w

"All the pieces are ecstatic, carefully cadenced, and crammed with tidbits of out-of-the-ordinary scientific lore. In the case of Peattie père, however, some of the ecstasy seems a little forced."

+ — New Yorker 26:70 Jl 1 '50 90w

"It may be coincidence, but I have the feeling that we have Noel Peattie to thank for more than his own initialed chapters in this book. His father's chapters are among the best that Donald Culross Peattie has published in some time. They have more of the strength that distinguished the 'Almanac' and 'Singing in the Wilderness' than we have seen in most of his recent writing. Could it be that Mr. Peattie rose to his best, as any father might, when introducing his son as his collaborator? The result, for whatever reason, is good." Hal Borland

+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 S 9 '50 700w

Wis Lib Bul 46:16 Jl '50

PEATTIE, RODERICK, ed. Cascades; mountains of the Pacific Northwest. (American mountain ser) 417p il map $5 Vanguard

917.951 Cascade range 49-49473

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by Will Davidson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 26 '50 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '50

"This is a book for the general reader, as Mr. Peattie knows very well. Within its limits, as its fellow-volumes are, it is a good and highly readable piece of work. And if it sets a reader off on trails of his own, persuading him to read further in one special direction or another, the editor would be happy. For the rest, it's the kind of book that may well lead the unspecializing reader to resolve to go and see the Cascades for himself at the first opportunity. That would please Mr. Peattie, too." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 15 '49 750w

"Like its predecessors in the series, The Cascades is a both handsome and interesting book. . . Included in the volume, which will appeal to the general reader, are photographs of high quality, and a useful index."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:88 Mr '50 180w

PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. Southwest roundup; il. by the author. 248p $2.75 Dodd

917.9 Southwest—Description and travel 50-7791

"A tour of the Southwest, its history, its aspects, the customs and folklore of cowpunchers and Indians and the way people live in the Southwest today. For ages 10 and over." Publishers' Weekly

"The lack of an index somewhat limits the book's usefulness."

Booklist 46:339 Jl 1 '50

"Anne Merriman Peck writes this enriched guidebook with generous sympathy and a glowing sense of the beauty of the desert." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 26:292 Jl '50 70w

"Written in easy, colloquial, and occasionally picturesque style, this is a readable, well-balanced combination of history, legend, and present-day aspects of the Southwest. . . While not as individual a treatment or as literary as certain other books on this region, the book is valuable for its inclusiveness. Useful for reference and general reading from junior high through adult years." Lesley Newton

Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 110w

"A book like this is a valuable contribution, honest in its attempt to give the picture whole, of a land of many kinds of citizens, not a land for tourists only." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 4 '50 290w

"The author has compressed an amazing amount of information in small compass, and has managed also to convey something of atmosphere and scenic beauty. With local history so often in dispute, she would have done well to give her sources. . . However, the book will make pleasant reading for the whole family." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p22 Jl 9 '50 150w

PECK, A. M.—Continued

"Like all books by this artist and author, this one is attractive in format and illustration and interesting from the first page to the last."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:28 Jl 8 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:25 Jl '50

PECK, GRAHAM. Two kinds of time; il. by the author. 725p $4 Houghton

940.5351 China—Social conditions. Communism—China. China—Description and travel. World war, 1939-1945—China 50-10600

"A detailed record of six years in China. The author, an American newspaperman and artist, remarks in the first chapter that he feels he has turned out a book with a 'split personality,' since the proportion of its seven hundred pages given over to anecdotes, sketches (verbal and pen-and-ink), and descriptions of what approximated his everyday life between 1940 and 1946 is far larger than that devoted to what he describes as the most important and most predictable revolution in modern history. . . In his appraisal of Chinese politics Mr. Peck restates, with a good deal of tartness, the case his many anti-Kuomintang literary predecessors have already presented." New Yorker

Booklist 47:172 Ja 1 '51

"Every once in a while someone is able to clear the air of charges and counter charges by writing a book which presents familiar information in a new way. For such a calm and temperate discussion of China at war, China in civil war, and China in change, Graham Peck's new book deserves a high priority on the American reading list." M. B. Jansen

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '50 550w

"The unfortunate point of this book is that it appears after the Korean situation, instead of before. China students take note. Scholars and historians as well. Not a book of primary importance, but one that casts many sidelights."

Kirkus 18:548 S 1 '50 300w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

Nation 171:651 D 16 '50 700w

"It is impossible not to grasp, through this book, a sense of the real greatness of the Chinese people, their capacity to adapt to adverse circumstances, their power of survival and renewal. But the reader who is willing to join Graham Peck in his war-time wanderings in China will discover many more things besides." H. R. Isaacs

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 29 '50 1700w

"Perhaps just because it is concerned with events past and done and throws on them the perspective of reflection, Mr. Peck's book is both useful and valuable now when the question of what to do about China is almost a life and death matter for America. Still, aside from its functions as a tract for the Far Eastern times it is delightful reading for what it gives of the life of China, the life that goes its way in peace and war alike. Mr. Peck knows China, has a genuine sympathy for its people and writes of them with warmth, sympathy and humor." Nathaniel Peffer

+ N Y Times p4 N 5 '50 800w

New Yorker 26:188 N 18 '50 250w

"This book is an uninhibited expose of some of the seamy sides of both Chinese and American behavior during the war. It is biased and violent in its denunciations. But it leaves a vivid picture of wartime China which it will be hard for any reader to forget; and it does make plain, at least, that no absolute black and white solutions imposed from the outside, either from the West or from the USSR, can stay the course of China's revolution." G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 3 '50 900w

"The present work, jam-packed with anecdotes, incidents, observations, theories, portraits, drawings, obscene jokes, quiet jokes, terrifying jokes, even ordinary jokes, has everything to commend it. It bursts at the seams, but so does 'Gargantua and Pantagruel.' He has not written the modern Chinese 'Gargantua' but he has done the nearest thing to it. . . Graham Peck has done it well, and his book must be read." Robert Payne

+ Sat R of Lit 33:13 D 23 '50 800w

PEERY, DAVID J. Aircraft structures. 566p $6.50 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction 50-5367

"A textbook primarily for use in undergraduate work in engineering colleges. The author, who is Head of the Department of Aeronautical Engineering of the Pennsylvania State College, has emphasized basic structural theory and methods of analysis. Little material has been included on the design of specific airplanes or the properties of specific materials." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 46:257 Ap 15 '50

N Y New Tech Bks 35:17 Mr '50

PEGRUM, DUDLEY FRANK. Regulation of industry. 497p $5 Irwin

338.973 Industry and state 49-7619

"Traces the history of governmental regulation of private industry and its effects, direct and indirect, upon the forms of business organization, price policies, competition, industrial combination, the patent system, the control of the modern corporation, and other aspects of the relations of government to economic life." Management R

"As a text, this book has serious limitations. Its organization and style are blurred and confusing. Very often redundant, ponderous in sentence structure, lacking incisive introductory sentences and frequent informative sideheads, it many times fails to convey the author's ideas. . . In its treatment of subject matter, the limitations are equally grievous. . . Nevertheless, Pegrum has written a fairly detailed account of antitrust policy that discusses recent cases in which the Courts have reinterpreted the Sherman Act. His chapters on patents and international combinations accord more space to these vital subjects than they ordinarily receive. The book presupposes little prior economics training, and it may therefore be especially suited to some courses." A. R. Oxenfeldt

+ — Am Econ R 40:219 Mr '50 1350w

Management R 38:582 O '49 60w

PEGUY, CHARLES PIERRE. Mystery of the charity of Joan of Arc; tr. by Julian Green. 216p $3 Pantheon bks.

842 Jeanne d'Arc, Saint—Drama 50-5666

Translation of a French mystery play on the subject of Joan of Arc. "The work is partly in a highly rhetorical, 'poetic' kind of prose and partly in a very free verse. It opens with a long dialog between Joan and her friend, Hauviette, who is the conventional Christian, and passes on to a longer dialog between Joan and Madame Gervaise, who is the Church. You will 'learn' nothing about Joan of Arc from this work; there is no 'story'; the whole thing takes place in 1425, four years before Joan went into France, but when her heart was already carrying the burden of all the world's sin. Indeed, the culminating passage does not deal directly with Joan at all; it is a meditation of the Savior's Passion." (Chicago Sunday Tribune)

"The reader who approaches this drama, remembering the fight around Orleans, the crowning at Rheims, Joan's end in a Rouen market-place, will find this the most moving of dramas; those who welcome stories of the contemplative life will rejoice in this study of Joan's hidden years." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 171:235 Je '50 300w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun p5 Ap 17 '50 240w

"Many readers will grow impatient with this book, but if they have any devotional spirit at all, it will capture them before the end. At one point, they will probably declare that they admire Peguy's content but detest his style. Before they finish, however, they will have realized that Peguy is a writer in whom thought and form are not separable. It is essentially an oral style; to realize its full power, one should read aloud. A good reader might well achieve a tremendous, almost hypnotic effect, closer to that of the chant than to anything most of us are likely to think of as literature." Edward Wagenknecht

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 19 '50 500w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 67:337 Mr 15 '50 1850w

"I do not read French, and so I am no judge of the fidelity of translation. I can only say that The Mystery of the Charity of Joan of Arc reads so beautifully in English, that I am sure the translator, Julian Green, has done an exceptional job. The spirit of the poet, which Péguy was, is evident in every line of this professedly prose work of his." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 51:584 Mr 10 '50 1100w

"Dear reader, this book is like no other you ever saw. It purports to be a play in one act, with three characters, but it has no action. One speech lasts for sixty-seven pages. It is evidently not meant for the stage. Its style of incantation and repetition makes it a burden to read alone, and sometimes during the reading aloud, the repetitions become a bit ludicrous. When this is said, however, the rest must be to acknowledge it as a work of genius, and to counsel the cultivation of the right point of view for its profitable use. It is really a work of devotion, to be followed as one follows a guide to meditation. Read as such, the book yields its true riches." J. W. Brush

+ — Crozer Q 27:282 Jl '50 300w

"At the risk of seeming irreverent, and completely aware of Péguy's much admired naivete, one must point out that this babble soon becomes horribly tedious; and since there are two hundred close-packed pages of it, it becomes a tour de force even for a reader of the most catholic tastes, and willing to suspend his disbelief, to read on to the end. . . The translator is Julian Green, one of the very best French novelists. I suppose he is being conventionally modest in his preface when he writes that 'to give an English equivalent of Péguy's style is almost impossible.' He is wrong; the translation is exactly like the French." René Blanc-Roos

— Nation 170:190 F 25 '50 550w

"Julian Green translated 'The Mystery' in a literal rendition that overcomes the extreme difficulties of the task and brings into English the clarity, depth and simplicity of the original. That so sophisticated and precise a novelist should have undertaken this work at this time is, in itself, an indication of its enduring value." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 12 '50 650w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

N Y Times p18 Ap 9 '50 450w

"This is the major work of this French Catholic poet, who was killed at the outbreak of war in 1914. Péguy, whose style often cuts across the rules of French prosody, combines sturdy intellectual reasoning with mystical fervor."

+ New Yorker 26:75 Jl 22 '50 70w

PENIAKOFF, VLADIMIR. Popski's private army [Eng title: Private army]. 369p il maps $3.75 Crowell

940.548142 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, British. World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 50-10487

The author is of Russian descent, but he grew up in Belgium, and went to Cambridge university. Inspired by his admiration for England he organized an official but independent unit of the British army, a group which never exceeded a hundred and twenty officers and men. This is "Popski's" account of his leadership of his little jeep-driven army on their intelligence and reconaissance missions behind the enemy lines. Most of their activities were in North Africa and Italy.

Booklist 47:113 N 15 '50

"The story of these exploits is, of course, thrilling, but it is told with a skill that makes it effective in many other ways. There is, first of all, the portrait of Popski himself. . . Then, again, the book provides a fascinating insight into the tricks and shifts, the ruses and swift extemporizations, that go to the technique of guerrilla fighting; and into the methods of campaigning under the peculiar conditions imposed by the desert." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 29 '50 550w

"Written in a lively style and with a minimum of military terminology, 'Popski's Private Army' is easy to read and exciting to experience." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 20 '50 600w

Kirkus 18:547 S 1 '50 110w

"The achievements of this group, usually numbering less than a hundred should rank with the brightest of the conflict. For sheer daring and adventure, the account is comparable to The Jungle is Neutral. Recommended." A. J. Gaines

+ Library J 75:1823 O 15 '50 130w

"Few expect so vivid an adventure story, cast among sheikhs, Italian partisans, and a variety of other unusual characters, to make them laugh aloud. Yet this one does. The Brigade of Guards, the French, a disgracefully large proportion of the British General Staff—all who cross the author's path are attacked mercilessly, on the whole justly, and with a great flair for description and dialogue." J. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 28 '50 430w

"A fine work of description, subtle and yet forthright, and a war story of heroic dimensions. . . Private Army deserves high rank in the annals of the war, not only because it tells of ambush and excitement, but also, and chiefly, because it translates with loving care the mores and mental atmosphere of the British Army in Africa and Italy. Popski saw the Eighth Army steadily, and he saw it whole. Scattered about these lively pages are the reasons why we won the war." Basil Davidson

New Statesman & Nation 39:348 Mr 25 '50 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 29 '50 1050w

"Colonel Peniakoff has written more than a war book. It's a first-hand view of a complex, courageous, likable soldier. And it is written in that wonderfully expressive prose so common with Europeans, so rare with Americans." Merle Miller

+ N Y Times p6 O 22 '50 650w

New Yorker 26:165 N 4 '50 130w

"Packed with fascinating action, this strange story will long be remembered, I think, not because of the cloak-and-dagger adventures of the hero, but mainly because it tells us how a middle-aged man, the father of two grown-up daughters, leading the quiet life of a businessman, one day, when he feels there is a job to do, emerges as a spirited leader, a cunning agent, a calm soldier, and a man of wisdom." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 N 25 '50 850w

Reviewed by C. M. Woodhouse

Spec 184:280 Mr 3 '50 750w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Mr 17 '50 1850w

PENTECOST, HUGH, pseud. See Philips, J. P.

PERCIVAL, MILTON OSWIN. Reading of Moby-Dick. 135p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

813 Melville, Herman—Moby Dick 50-8699

A study of Melville's great novel based entirely on the book itself without reference to his life or other works. It is the author's thesis that Moby Dick is an allegory, a search for the answer to the question of good and evil.

"The book is valuable to anyone who cares for Melville, and may well help some who do not read him as yet with sufficient awareness of the real imaginative weight 'Moby Dick' contains." Paul Engle
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 13 '50 170w

"Short, well-written, scholarly essay." D. R.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 S 2 '50 230w

Reviewed by Richard Chase
Yale R n s 40:188 autumn '50 100w

PERELMAN, SIDNEY JOSEPH. Swiss family Perelman; drawings by Hirschfeld. 212p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

817 50-11683

A hilarious account of the author's trip around the world, accompanied, among other things, by his family. The book is ably aided in its presentation by the drawings of Al Hirschfeld.

Booklist 47:171 Ja 1 '51

+ Kirkus 18:587 S 15 '50 160w

"In some fifty illustrations Al Hirschfeld has brilliantly caught the distillation of all the Perelman fits and fevers, his reaction to adversity, his confusion when confronted with a crisis. They complement each other handsomely, Perelman and Hirschfeld." Richard Maney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 26 '50 650w

"This is a book for everybody." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p24 N 26 '50 410w

New Yorker 26:75 D 23 '50 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 22 '50 350w

"I must say that the Master's English, which he himself appears to have invented, is one of the diadems of our tribal sprach. The sheer cubic volume of his vocabulary would impress such distinguished word-droppers as Rebecca West. His stock of pungent slang, his feeling for literary parody, his choice of the least probable word all make his style as tantalizing and attractive as the showcase at Barney Greengrass's delicatessen. . . Anytime S. J. wants to go around the world again I'll gladly follow him." Lee Rogow
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 D 16 '50 500w

PERKINS, MAXWELL EVARTS. Editor to author; selected and ed, with commentary and an introd. by John Hall Wheelock. 315p $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Editors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-6473

"These letters of Maxwell Evarts Perkins, for 37 years on the staff of Charles Scribner's Sons, confirm and substantiate the legend that he was one of the ablest book editors of his time, with an uncanny instinct for finding talent hidden in apparently unpromising material, or spotting undeveloped passages in professional work. Of particular value are the letters to Scott Fitzgerald, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, Ernest Hemingway, and of course Thomas Wolfe." (Library J) Index.

"The letters have that absorbing, intimate, revealing quality which is the hallmark of every great letter writer. Whether he is counseling a young novelist or advising an elder on his autobiography, or breaking the truth of slow sales to as touchy a subject as John Galsworthy, his words are direct, masculine, and considerate. And above all—this is the point I hope readers (and younger editors) will bear in mind—he was never didactic; he gave his criticism and his suggestions in such a tentative way that the author never felt that he was being censored or his authority challenged." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 185:79 Ap '50 1900w

Booklist 46:245 Ap 1 '50

Bookmark 9:184 My '50 40w

"Because of Perkins' curious self-effacement the letters in Editor to Author vary in interest. He dealt with men and women of every degree of talent and with his quiet almost school-teacherish fairness, treated them all alike. Naturally the letters to his more highly-charged correspondents—Thomas Wolfe, F. Scott Fitzgerald, and Ernest Hemingway—are the ones most likely to attract general interest." M. R.
+ Canadian Forum 30:163 O '50 440w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 2 '50 300w

Reviewed by Ronald Gordon
Churchman 164:15 My 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by Donald Demarest
Commonweal 52:51 Ap 21 '50 700w

"This should be required reading for every aspiring editor—for most experienced editors, and for all critics."
+ Kirkus 18:19 Ja 1 '50 240w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 75:316 F 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
Nation 170:380 Ap 22 '50 1300w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 40:177 Ag 12 '50 1100w

"Writers and would-be writers will, obviously, take most from this extraordinary volume of letters. They will not only find in it the basic principles of creative writing but they will see those principles applied day by day in living detail to work in progress. The letters will be only less absorbing to the general reader. Here is a self-portrait of a man who through years of grinding effort gave the utmost to inspiring and perfecting the work of others. Beyond question Maxwell Perkins was a great editor. What this book does is to make the lines of such an anonymous career, the character of the man and his philosophy, clear and credible." Geoffrey Parsons
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 26 '50 1300w

"These letters will be of enormous and enduring interest to writers, editors and publishers everywhere. And every publisher and practicing editor will feel that the more aspiring, and even experienced, writers read them, the better." A. A. Knopf
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 26 '50 2400w

"In this volume of letters written chiefly to authors with whom Maxwell Perkins was working, the general reader will have a chance to see a fine editorial mind in action." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 9 '50 1700w

"This collection of Mr. Perkins's letters, which his co-worker at Scribner's John Hall Wheelock has affectionately introduced and assembled, is a delightful volume. It has more to say about writing than can be learned in most classrooms or garnered from a whole shelf of textbooks on the subject. It has the virtue of informality and the intimacy of conversation. It leads us into the world of manuscripts emerging rather than of completed books. It takes us out of the library or book store straight into the publisher's inner office and the author's study." J. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 33:7 Ap 8 '50 2340w

Reviewed by Michael Sadleir
Spec 184:246 Ag 25 '50 1550w

Time 55:100 Ap 3 '50 650w

"The collected letters of the late Maxwell Evarts Perkins, of Scribner's, demonstrate the vital role of a good publisher. . . It is unfortunate that a book devoted to the glory of an editor should be found wanting in editorial care, yet Mr. Wheelock's commentary is slack, he admits Perkins's occasional repetitions into his selection, and his footnotes are often both monotonous and repetitious."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p480 Ag 4 '50 850w

"The publisher's editor has perhaps the most difficult and certainly the least publicized role of all editors. He must revise without destroying, advise without coercing; 'don't ever,' Perkins warned young Scott Fitzgerald, 'defer to my judgment.' These special responsibilities have been described in various biographies and in the standard textbooks of the book trade, but never have they been so clearly revealed as in this volume."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:172 Je '50 270w

PERLOFF, HARVEY S. Puerto Rico's economic future; a study in planned development. 435p il maps $4.75 Univ. of Chicago press
338.97295 Puerto Rico—Economic policy
50-5195

"A study of the development and problems of the island and its people, based on a three-year's investigation. Historical background and customs are reviewed, and future possibilities discussed in detail." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is an excellent reference to source material on Puerto Rico and for methods of analysis to be applied to other underdeveloped areas." David Novick
+ Am Econ R 40:666 S '50 1350w

Reviewed by Henry Wells
Am Pol Sci R 44:774 S '50 380w

Reviewed by A. F. Macdonald
Ann Am Acad 272:253 N '50 400w

Current Hist 19:40 Jl '50 30w

Foreign Affairs 28:692 Jl '50 20w

Reviewed by Clarence Senior
Geog R 40:688 O '50 430w

"Comprehensive and valuable exposition of the Puerto Rican economy. [The] study is not so much an original piece of research as an interpretative review and analysis of all known facts, particularly the facts that have been disclosed by studies made under the auspices of the University of Puerto Rico's Social Science Research Center. Inside the covers of one volume Dr. Perloff, who is Associate Professor of Social Sciences at the University of Chicago, has managed to pull together almost all the data necessary to reach a judgment and a prophecy concerning the island's economic future." Paul Blanshard
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 1 '50 1100w
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:183 Je '50 280w

PEROWNE, BARRY. Rogue's island [Eng title: Tilted moon]. 250p $2.75 Mill 50-5368

An adventure story of present-day Spain. An English girl traveling thru Spain to join her uncle on an island near Mallorca became involved with a soldier of fortune, also English. Lesley succeeded in reaching her island, to discover that her uncle had been engaged in shady dealings with Nazis and Fascists, and her denunciation of him caused her endless trouble. The arrival of the soldier of fortune at the island complicated the situation further.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p6 Mr 3 '50 60w

Kirkus 17:636 N 15 '49 60w

"This is a fast-moving, colorful story, competently handled. And if it sometimes moves to the off-side of the probable, Mr. Perowne is not far from the essential truth about his setting." Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p31 Ja 29 '50 230w

PERRI, FRANCESCO. The unknown disciple [tr. by H. T. Russell]. 329p $3.50 Macmillan
Jesus Christ—Fiction 50-6703

Historical novel which is the first of a proposed trilogy about the beginnings and early days of Christianity. The central character in this volume is Marcus Adonias, son of a vice-governor of Judea and of Micol, a daughter of the Maccabees.

Booklist 46:262 Ap 15 '50

Kirkus 18:73 F 1 '50 240w

"A very frank treatment of the paganism of the times. Recommended for large public libraries." E. H. Weeks
+ Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 140w

"It would be unjust not to make clear the author's talents: he knows the age intimately, its moods and movements no less than the face of its cities and the ways of its men, and he writes with verve and, despite the gaucheries of his translator's English, with eloquence. He has above all a feeling for the mixture of drama and history that makes historical romance popular; unfortunately he lacks the restraint that can also make it completely credible and truly moving." Milton Rugoff
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 18 '50 750w

"This book is not for the disputatious doctors in the academies. Its theology is as uncomplicated as its style. Perri is strictly old school, but out of this very simplicity he has made a powerful parable." Ken Clark
+ N Y Times p26 Je 4 '50 180w

"The real trouble with this book is one inherent in any attempt to fictionalize the New Testament. The men and women of the Bible are so real to us that our sense of credibility is violated by seeing them mixed up with fictional products of a twentieth-century mind. It takes a very great artist to overcome this difficulty, and Mr. Perri is not a very great artist. However, he does present an interesting picture of the worldwide longing for faith in Jesus's time which has parallels with our own era." Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ag 19 '50 430w

"Readers of this work will admire the clarity of expression and the abiding faith of the author." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 9 '50 360w

"The Unknown Disciple, is not nearly so successful as Merezhkovski's novel dealing with Julian the Apostate; while it lacks the deliberately muted approach of Mr. Robert Graves's historical novels: because the broad terms in which individual character is treated in Signor Perri's book inevitably recall the cinema. However, the political difficulties experienced by the Romans in handling the 'Palestine problem' are presented by the author with some vividness."
Times [London] Lit Sup p241 Ap 21 '50 330w

PERRIN, BLANCHE CHENERY. Deepwood. 222p $2.75 Macmillan
50-8167

Janie Oliver, an attractive Southern widow with too much time on her hands, decides to restore Deepwood, an old house built according to Thomas Jefferson's plans. There is no money, for the little Virginia town is not a wealthy place, but that does not stop Janie. Deepwood is restored, so is the village inn. The novel tells how it was done.

Booklist 46:297; 316 Je 1 '50; Je 15 '50

"This tale . . . twinkles with easy dialogue, not strictly plausible, it gives good entertainment, hands out a nice assortment of bouquets and brickbats for garden clubs and societies for the preservation of this and that, and has some serious words about real values."
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 15 '50 250w

Kirkus 18:265 My 1 '50 130w

"Recommended for its light entertainment and refreshing approach." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 75:980 Je 1 '50 80w

"Though hardly hilarious reading, 'Deepwood' is amusing and should bring appreciative chuckles from husbands, neighbors and children of middle-aged ladies who get things done and from the broader minded of such ladies themselves. In fact, if you are urging some civic project before the city fathers, you might try offering them 'Deepwood' as evidence that no man can stop a good woman bent on good works." Mary Ross

PERRIN, B. C.—Continued
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 26 '50 360w

"The author knows her locale and her Southern womanhood, from the bustling matrons to the dewy-eyed young." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p23 Je 18 '50 130w

"All in all, a bland little story, neatly told and certain to provide no one with food for either thought or complaint."
+ New Yorker 26:105 Je 10 '50 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 8 '50 250w

" 'Deepwood' is a delightful book, as wholesome and pleasant to the taste as Janie's own homemade pound cake." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 Jl 8 '50 500w

PERRY, JOHN HOWARD, ed. Chemical engineers' handbook; prepared by a staff of specialists. 3d ed 1942p il thumb indexed $15; textbook ed $12.50 McGraw

660.83 Chemical engineering 50-7431

"An encyclopedic work which needs no introduction to chemical engineers and technical librarians. Again, extensive tabulations of data, such as information on vapor pressures, are combined with condensed monographic discussions of chemical reaction kinetics. A larger page size was adopted for this edition, and the whole book has been reset. There are eight new sections, and the sections carried over from the second edition have been revised or rewritten." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1934.

"The book has been so enlarged and modernized that it has made the previous editions quite obsolete." W. L. Badger
Chem & Eng N 28:2841 Ag 14 '50 340w

"Value has grown by addition of new sections, rewriting and expansion of others, and thorough revision of most of the remainder. . . It would be easy to point out inconsistencies in spelling, typographical errors and other faults. But no good purpose would be served. Editor Perry was working with more than 140 authors, experts and advisors. It's a wonder there are not more mistakes and serious errors." L. B. P.
+ — Chem Eng 57:305 Ap '50 900w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:34 My '50

PERSE, ST.-JOHN, pseud. See Leger, A. St.-L.

PETERS, ARTHUR A. (FRITZ PETERS, pseud). Book of the year; drawings by Ilonka Karasz. 52p $2.50 Harper

814 Country life. Seasons 50-9128

In pictures and text celebrates the main elements in mankind's environment—the house, the running brook, flowers, grass and trees, rain, sun, growing grain, fire, wind, and the Christmas tree. Each is assigned a different month around the year.

"The appeal of this book is ageless. Anyone who loves the country, its life and changing seasons will feel a new awareness of their beauty and their mystery from reading this rarely beautiful book." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 8 '50 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '50

Horn Bk 26:487 N '50 80w

"The twelve scratchboard drawings to illustrate each section by Ilonka Karasz have the same lyrical quality as the text and are an effective accompaniment. A specialty book for the more sensitive reader."
+ Kirkus 18:422 Ag 1 '50 110w

"It is a most unusual book that will appeal to very few. Not recommended for small libraries." D. M. Blasco
Library J 75:1515 S 15 '50 70w

"The poetic and artistic child from about nine to fourteen will at once appreciate this distinguished, unusual book; to the many others who should have the chance to meet it, it may bring new ideas for those eternal compositions they are asked to write each month. . . The pictures are in a fine style, strongly rhythmic; they keep the eyes looking on and on, and make the looker think and feel, as does the text. The book is beautifully printed, in an interesting tone of brown." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 27 '50 220w

"Ilonka Karasz has matched the text with a drawing for each month. These are beautiful, intricate patterns filled with details which draw the eye back again and again to discover something new. That is, indeed, the effect of this book, to stimulate the senses and the imagination to a new awareness of life." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 20 '50 130w

Sat R of Lit 33:58 N 11 '50 140w

PETERS, FRAZIER FORMAN. Buying a house worth the money. 157p $2.75 Little

643 Dwellings. Building 50-9966

An experienced architect writes on the various aspects of the business of buying a house. Partial contents: The community; The land; The plan; The judging chart; Cellars and cellar drainage; Termites, rot and decay; The exterior side walls; The roof; Chimney and fireplace; Heat; Electric wiring; Plumbing; The grading; Routine for inspecting a property. No index.

Booklist 47:111 N 15 '50

Kirkus 18:410 Jl 15 '50 120w

"A happy, hearty, helpful book for the home seeker. . . Highly recommended." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:2005 N 15 '50 70w

"The book is written, mostly, for the Eastern householder and some adjustment is needed for the Western buyer. But—if you are undaunted by the present credit controls—if you are wanting to buy a house, this book will be invaluable to you." R. de R.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 3 '50 300w

PETERS, FRITZ, pseud. See Peters, A. A.

PETERS, RAYMOND WENDELL. Communication within industry; principles and methods of management-employee interchange. 198p $3 Harper

658.3 Employment management 50-12267

"This book by the head of the Management and Labor Union Employee Relations Research, Esso-Standard Oil Company, is based on an examination of the practices and conditions in his own and some forty other large companies. The results and recommendations on methods, media and results, provide a useful blueprint to improved morale and mutual advantage." (Library J) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. L. Mezger
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 4 '50 350w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:2005 N 15 '50 80w

PETERSEN, HERMAN. Covered bridge. 376p $3.50 Crowell

50-12307

A story of a farming community in New York state during the twenty years following the Civil war. The chief character is Zoann O'Day whose ambitions and efficiency as a manager, her desire for prosperity for her son, stir up strife and conflict, particularized in the feud over the covered bridge which links two parts of the O'Day farm.

Booklist 47:3; 97 S 1 '50; N 1 '50

Kirkus 18:485 Ag 15 '50 150w

"It is not as literature or as revelation of the human heart and mind that readers will find pleasure in the book; its merit is that of a smoothly told tale of action and suspense." G. D. McDonald
Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 130w

"Mr. Petersen has written a period piece from which a bushel or so of cuss words might have been winnowed to good advantage. But the narrative is sinewy and vigorous."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 26 '50 330w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. Circus baby; a picture book. [32p] $1.50 Macmillan 50-9295

Colored picture story book for the very young. It is all about the circus elephant and her baby, and the circus clown family. When the mother elephant tried to train her child to eat at table, like the clown baby, the results were disastrous.

Booklist 47:81 O 15 '50

"Here is an excellent picture book for the very young." Marcia Winn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 13 '50 30w

Horn Bk 26:371 S '50 50w

Kirkus 18:508 S 1 '50 90w

Reviewed by F. W. Butler
+ Library J 75:1835 O 15 '50 70w

"It is a simple tale, whose joy is mostly in the lovely pictures, the wonderful poses and expressions of the two elephants, the charming colors. Little children all love baby animals, and the troubles of this irresistible small elephant will give them great joy." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 N 12 '50 110w

"Maud and Miska Petersham have combined talents again to make a delightful picture book. The four-color circus scenes are bright and simple. Mother and Baby are wonderfully expressive but still quite real elephants, rather than the stuffed-toy variety so familiar in the nursery books." Miriam James
+ N Y Times p24 O 1 '50 140w

New Yorker 26:173 D 2 '50 70w

"It is a picture book that will bring laughter and enduring joy to many, many little boys and girls."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:37 N 11 '50 110w

PETRIE, SIR CHARLES ALEXANDER, 3d bart. Earlier diplomatic history, 1492-1713. 251p maps $2.75 Macmillan

327 History, Universal. World politics
49-50377

"[An] outline of the interrelationship of the States of Europe and the development of their public policy throughout this period calculated for the use of the man of affairs or general reader anxious to understand the historical background of contemporary Europe." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Select bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Quincy Wright
Am Hist R 56:71 O '50 600w

"Sir Charles Petrie has performed a useful service in providing a brief, balanced, well-organized, and illuminating guide to the diplomatic history of early modern Europe." Waldemar Westergaard
+ Ann Am Acad 269:182 My '50 550w

Social Studies 41:288 O '50 10w

"The general interpretation of the events is sound and conservative though occasionally open to criticism. . . The narrative moves smoothly and logically, emphasizing essentials but finding time to elucidate a number of such minor issues as the significance of the Alpine passes as well as bringing into prominence issues of importance for the future, such as the relations between France and the Turkish Empire."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 18 '49 1300w

PETRIE, SIR CHARLES ALEXANDER, 3d bart. Jacobite movement; v2, The last phase, 1716-1807. 221p $2.75 Macmillan

942.071 Jacobites. Great Britain—Politics and government [(49-3575)]

"Sir Charles Petrie in the second and final volume of his history of the Jacobite Movement carries it from the aftermath of the 1715 uprising, through Charles Edward's campaign in 1745, the cruelly absurd Elibank plot, and the final period which he calls the Jacobite Twilight down to the Cardinal-Pretender Henry IX on whose passing in 1807 the direct Stuart line became extinct." (Christian Science Monitor) For first volume see Book Review Digest 1949.

"It is proverbial that there is 'nothing so tedious as a twice-told tale,' and the tale of the last Jacobite rebellion of 1745 has been told a hundred times by different authors; yet there is nothing tedious about this book!. . On controversial questions of fact, the author holds the balance accurately. . . When the author passes from questions of fact to questions of political theory, he ceases to be the impartial historian and becomes the advocate." Preston Slosson
+ — Ann Am Acad 272:281 N '50 440w

"This should prove the definitive work on the lost Stuart cause. The author sees Jacobitism, not as an insular British phenomenon, but as part of the main stream of European history. . . This history is a work of careful planning and deep sympathetic scholarship. It reanimates and clarifies a movement too often obscured by the mists of romance." Francis Russell
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 18 '50 430w

"Apart from the bias that portrays the '45 as a much more 'near run thing' than it was, the weak points of this very readable book lie mostly in insufficient study of the home background."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 9 '50 850w

PETRILL, JACK. After the whistle blows [a guide to the field of recreation in industry] pub. for the Industrial recreation bureau. (William Frederick press bk) 351p $10 Pamphlet distributing

331.845 Recreation. Welfare work in industry
49-10500

"Discusses the organization, financing, and operation of an industrial recreation program for the small and the large company and for a combination of two or more firms. Many of the seldom anticipated operational difficulties are analyzed and solutions offered. The book outlines the recreational facilities available for many types of industry in various locations. Particular stress is placed by the author on the necessity for a properly trained recreational director and staff." Management R

"Viewed as a text on the philosophy of recreation, Mr. Petrill's book is an excellent one. As a handbook for operation, however, it is somewhat lacking in modern practical techniques." R. C. Skillman
+ — Management R 39:176 Mr '50 100w

"This book is one of the prominent contributions to the specific field of industrial recreation, and, therefore, assumes a place of real significance in the remarks devoted to recreation." H. D. Meyer
+ Social Forces 28:345 Mr '50 340w

PETROV, VLADIMIR. My retreat from Russia; tr. by David Chavchavadze. 357p $4 Yale univ. press

940.548147 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Russian. Refugees, Russian 50-5497

In his earlier book, Soviet Gold (Book Review Digest 1949) the author gave an account of his six years in the forced labor camps in Siberia. In the present volume he describes his activities after his release at the time of the outbreak of the war. He worked his way back to his home in Russia proper, where he discovered that as an ex-prisoner he was no longer considered a trusted citizen. Thence he fled thru Central Europe into American-occupied Italy.

Booklist 46:217 Mr 1 '50

"As in his earlier books, Mr. Petrov shows a keen eye for description and a vivid gift of narration. . . Apart from its interest as a personal adventure story, the book is valuable because of the light which it casts upon the German occupation of Russia and the reaction of the Russian people." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 19 '50 700w

"It is, of course, only one man's story—but that is all Marco Polo could tell. Petrov tells his unusually well and what he has to relate is both varied and important." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:401 Mr 29 '50 180w

"The author gives a colorful picture of the Russian 'hinterland' in the confusion of the first difficult war years and of eastern Europe after 1943 when the decline of Nazi Germany was undeniable and when the occupied nations began to realize that Germany's defeat would not bring freedom but Soviet rule. He also adds valuable first-hand observations to our still scanty knowledge of popular opinion in the Soviet Union and of anti-Soviet movements." Ernest Pisko
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 11 '50 850w

Current Hist 18:165 Mr '50 60w

Foreign Affairs 29:156 O '50 30w

Kirkus 17:684 D 15 '49 130w

"His feelings toward his native land, the activities of others in similar circumstances, and the story of the Vlasov army are particularly interesting. The moral considerations involved give the book its value." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:104 Ja 15 '50 100w

"The book is full of anecdotes, incidents, fragments of talk, and sharp profiles of the murdered and the murdering, the bribed and the bribing, the hunting and the hunted—a few of whom were kind, many of whom were cruel, and most of whom were extraordinarily shrewd and tenacious. Whatever heroism is revealed in this report consists not in self-sacrifice, but in a mute, unyielding endurance." Virgilia Peterson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 19 '50 750w

"Petrov—now an instructor in Slavic languages at Yale—spins a brisk adventure yarn, stitched together by fabulous intermittent treks from the petrified Russian Far East across a tormented world. . . But the book is most valuable for its trenchant and, even at this late date, frightening indictment of a regime so monstrous that millions of men like Petrov were prepared to commit treason and blacker abominations to escape it. This flaw in the Soviet defenses may yet expose the Kremlin to greater upheavals than the atom bomb." Hal Lehrman
+ N Y Times p3 F 26 '50 600w

"Petrov made his way through Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Germany, Austria, and Italy, seeing the war through the back door and living by wits sharpened by his years in the prison camp. . . Such polyglot odysseys have become a literary by-product of twentieth-century wars, and this is one of the best of the lot."
+ New Yorker 26:102 Mr 4 '50 260w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 2 '50 150w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon
Sat R of Lit 33:12 F 25 '50 470w

PEYREFITTE, ROGER. Special friendships; tr. from the French by Felix Giovanelli. 392p $3.50 Vanguard 50-5338

A novel of the clandestine friendship of two French boarding-school boys. The book ends tragically, with the suicide of the younger boy.

"As a piece of literature, 'Special Friendships' misses the category of the memorable, but it is not routine, and it is not uninteresting. Its pages contain a percipient chronicle of the transports and torments of some very special adolescents." Theodore Kalem
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 19 '50 900w

"There is a taint of the diabolical upon all that the book touches. . . There is a smoothness to the prose of Special Friendships, a skill in building up situations, an exploratory thoroughness that will not be hurried yet gives no sense of delay, that marks the author as a first-class craftsman and his book as one that is bound to be read. I cannot help wishing that M. Peyrefitte had exercised his very evident talent on a subject of more importance than the furtive relationship of two boys. But perhaps the fact that he has done so much with so little is a feather in the author's cap." L. J. Trese
— + Commonweal 51:512 F 17 '50 700w

"An unpleasant book which offers nothing to recommend it to the normal American reader, despite its sale of over 100,000 in France."
— Kirkus 17:591 O 15 '49 360w

"The novel has its weaknesses: the tone shuttles between the wittily satiric and the elegiac; in this last connection, our credulity and our patience are somewhat taxed by the mature value placed on infantine flirtations. But for all this, it is a rare book—informed, compassionate, mature—and justly appreciated by Felix Giovanelli's translation." Theodore Norman
+ — New Repub 122:21 Mr 13 '50 320w

"'Special Friendships' is written with meticulous care, discrimination and taste, and the translation would appear to be adequate. Its theme inherently limits its appeal." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 15 '50 500w

Reviewed by Patricia Blake
N Y Times p31 Ja 29 '50 180w

"This book had a very enthusiastic reception in France, which suggests that its present lack of persuasiveness may be the result of the translating."
New Yorker 25:93 F 4 '50 120w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 33:17 F 11 '50 600w

PHELPS, MRS MARGARET. Gard and Golden Boy; il. by Evelyn Copelman. 204p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

Horses—Legends and stories 50-7379

A horse story for grades 5 and 6. Gard's visit to an Arizona ranch was disappointing because at first he was not allowed a horse of his own. However, before the summer was over he became the owner of a beautiful golden palomino.

"This is not so satisfactory as Toby on the Sheep Ranch. Gard seems unusually unstable and sheltered and that his moody outbursts of anger and self pity are the result of loneliness is not made sufficiently obvious. However, the story is horsy enough for the western fans, and the demanding horse story addicts."
Kirkus 18:102 F 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney
Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger
N Y Times p16 Jl 16 '50 150w

PHELPS, ORME WHEELOCK. Introduction to labor economics. 554p $4.50 McGraw

331 Industrial relations. Wages. Trade unions 50-7689

"An introductory text in labor problems and economics, this book defines the subject matter of labor economics, raises the principal issues and controversies which grow out of employment contracts in a free society, explains the reasoning underlying the different positions in these arguments, and relates the issues to management, union and public policy decisions. In order to accomplish this, the book is divided into four main sections: a complete description of the labor market in the United States; an introduction to the problem of wages; an examination of the issue of security; and a detailed survey of the problems introduced by the spread of trade unionism in the past 15 years." (Management R) Index.

"A well-developed text." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:872 My 15 '50 100w
Management R 39:503 Ag '50 80w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST (HUGH PENTECOST, pseud). Shadow of madness. 212p $2.50 Dodd

50-8687

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p5 Ag 1 '50 70w

"Intelligent dialogue and characterization help to make this slightly improbable plot more acceptable."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Jl 30 '50 240w

"The framework is patently (and most competently) contrived. But it is filled in with warmly believable psychological sketches of character, with Smith acting both as interpreter and detective." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p25 Ag 6 '50 150w

"Mr. Pentecost has created an appealing sleuth in his little Doctor, and the members of the threatened house-party all have a satisfactorily guilty air. Altogether, a lively and ingenious contribution to the midsummer crime wave."
+ New Yorker 26:76 Ag 12 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 27 '50 80w

PHILLIPS, HENRY ALBERT. Cape Town to the Mountains of the moon. 223p il maps $3.50 McBride

916.8 South Africa—Description and travel 49-10943

The author is an American news magazine correspondent. During the visit of the British royal family to South Africa in 1947, he accompanied them as a special correspondent. Afterwards he spent several months in Africa, and his book is an account of his African experiences. No index.

"Errors of fact and spelling clutter these pages—many of which seem to have been neither copyread nor proofread. Even the height of Table Mountain is shortened by 1,500 feet." John Barkham
N Y Times p27 F 5 '50 200w
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 9 '50 100w
Springf'd Republican p3D F 12 '50 300w

PHILLIPS, ISAAC N., ed. Abraham Lincoln, by some men who knew him. See Abraham Lincoln

PHILLIPS, JAMES DUNCAN. Pepper and pirates; adventures in the Sumatra pepper trade of Salem. 141p il map $2.50 Houghton

382 Pepper. Salem, Massachusetts. Pirates 49-49285

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by K. W. Porter
Am Hist R 56:221 O '50 320w

"As stirring as fiction."
+ Bookmark 9:105 F '50 40w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 5 '50 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 17 '50 600w

"Mr. Phillips' chronicle is based squarely on logbooks, captains' letters, and personal narratives preserved in Salem, and is, therefore, as authentic as it is lively. Unfortunately, the glow of his intense local pride in the achievements of the Salem mariners prevents the author from seeing any point of view other than that of Salem on such national issues as the Embargo and the War of 1812."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:72 Mr '50 280w

PHILLIPS, JOHN MARSHALL. American silver. (American crafts ser) 128p il $2.95 Chanticleer

739.23 Silversmithing 49-10604

"A brief history of the craft during the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries, but largely description of objects of the silversmith's art. Four color and 32 black-and-white plates lend life to the description." Booklist

---

Booklist 46:99 N 15 '49

"His chronicle is fascinating reading. Handsome illustrations, part colored, line drawings of types of porringer handles; information, too, on the times of Conyers, Nathaniel Hurd, Paul Revere, and many others. Bibliography of books and marks, and collections. Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:107 Ja 15 '50 130w

PHILLIPS, MARGARET MANN. Erasmus and the northern renaissance. (Teach yourself history lib) 236p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Erasmus, Desiderius. Reformation 50-7057

A biography of Erasmus and a summary of his important writings. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. E. Mommsen
Am Hist R 56:178 O '50 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 21 '50 40w

"Margaret Mann Phillips, former Fellow of Newnham College, Cambridge, strives valiantly to make the Prince of the Humanists understandable and attractive. But Erasmus is a scholar's scholar. . . Dr. Phillips's study will probably bring more pleasure to specialists who already appreciate Erasmus than to the wider public audience that does not and should." Geoffrey Bruun
Sat R of Lit 33:18 Jl 15 '50 140w

"Mrs. Phillips's account is spirited and sympathetic: a miniature portrait, less detailed than Huizinga's, giving a good account of Erasmus's books and opening up its significant theme. Perhaps her portrait is rather uncritical."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 10 '50 1000w

PHILLIPS, THOMAS HAL. Bitterweed path. 314p $3 Rinehart

50-8137

Story of the friendship and emotional entanglements of Darrell Barclay, a sharecropper's son; Malcolm Pitt, the owner; and Malcolm's son Roger. The time is the generation after the Civil war; the place a cotton-growing community in the South.

PHILLIPS, T. H.—Continued

"As a first novel, 'The Bitterweed Path' is a well done work; Mr. Phillips will have no occasion to look back on it with regret for such shortcomings as it does have. If portions of it remain unconvincing, the motivation of the novel in itself is solid and good, and it is credibly done. The intelligent reader will find much in its pages to appreciate." August Derleth

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 23 '50 440w

"There isn't much development either of character or situation. Occasionally the people are focused for a moment, but generally they are only outlined. The accidents are ordinary and sentimental, sometimes silly. The saving qualities which appear in the passages apparently transcribed from real events are the imagery, the tone of nostalgia, and a certain intensity of those lines depicting an event or an emotion of significance to the author." George Miles

— + Commonweal 52:374 Jl 21 '50 190w

"More outspoken than others in this genre, there is nonetheless a skillful skirting of the distasteful, a recognition of the psychological shadings. Not a book for the general public; important that both librarians and booksellers should know its theme in presenting it to the public."

Kirkus 18:215 Ap 1 '50 190w

"Unfortunately there is no better word than homosexuality to describe the basic theme of this unusual novel. The connotations of such a term will undoubtedly either repel or attract a reader, but in this case quite unjustly, for the book has nothing to offer the sensation seeker. . . The author's readable style and his ability to create a feeling of ever-growing tension will hold the reader from beginning to end." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 75:1046 Je 15 '50 140w

"The writing of 'The Bitterweed Path' is accomplished and sensitive. A native of Mississippi and a teacher at Southern Methodist University, Mr. Phillips is a young writer whose ability has already been recognized by the award of a Julius Rosenwald Fellowship and one from the Eugene Saxton Memorial Trust. One could wish, however, that for his first novel he might have chosen a more rewarding theme for the display of his obvious talents." Coleman Rosenberger

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 2 '50 360w

"Mr. Phillips has made the action of his story flow as effortlessly as time itself; he has brought Louisiana life during the early years of the century into the sort of believable reality which other Southern writers carefully avoid. He knows the country he describes, its colors and moods and seasons, its odors and winds and dirts, its flowers and trees and grasses." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p32 S 10 '50 430w

"Some of the early scenes of Darrell's home life are very real, but after a short time too much emotionalism, too faithfully recorded, puts an end to the story; from then on we just have a kind of mournful, pointless reminiscing. One finishes the book with the strong impression that Mr. Phillips has been unable to get a good grip on the problem that besets him, and that all this is a prelude to another book, yet to be written."

— + New Yorker 26:106 Je 10 '50 90w

"With all the sincerity and aspiration that he possesses, Mr. Phillips has yet been unable to fashion a novel out of one emotion. It takes bones and flesh and drive; it takes a palpable rising line of feeling to make a book—and looked at from that point of view Mr. Phillips's 'Bitterweed Path' runs disappointingly thin." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ag 5 '50 320w

PICHON, CHARLES. The Vatican and its role in world affairs; tr. from the French by Jean Misrahi. 382p il $4.50 Dutton

282.09 Vatican (city). Roman Catholic church—Relations (diplomatic) 50-9872

"This book appeared originally under the French title Histoire de Vatican. It is a history of the Catholic Church from the point of view of its political relations with the outside world." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:126 D 1 '50

"Unfortunately his treatment of Anglican Orders is inaccurate, and unfair to the English Catholics. Like many French writers he is unenthusiastic about Pius X and Merry Del Val, and tends to see German agents behind anything unfavorable to France. These defects give a certain local coloring to a readable and quite selective survey of a great subject." F. D. Cohalan

Commonweal 53:158 N 17 '50 600w

Kirkus 18:160 Mr 1 '50 450w

"Highly recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 75:863 My 15 '50 150w

"Catholics and non-Catholics alike in the Holy Year of 1950 will find much of interest in this excellent history." Frank Kelley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 22 '50 550w

"Because of the ever-widening role of the Vatican and the accentuated tempo of historical events, half of the book is understandably devoted to developments since Leo XIII. The assembling of this material in a single volume is a definite historical contribution." John Dillenberger

+ N Y Times p51 N 12 '50 150w

Sat R of Lit 33:47 N 4 '50 250w

"While the book is likely to be appreciated especially by Roman Catholics, it also should be a source of considerable interest and information to others as well, particularly since it brings out a number of points on the subject of the Christian religion in general which are not commonly known to the average layman." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 360w

PICK, ROBERT. Guests of Don Lorenzo. 350p $3 Lippincott

50-5639

A novel of politics, plots, revolutions, and international intrigues in an unnamed Latin American country. Its chief character, Don Lorenzo, a military hero of sorts, is followed thru his rapid rise and crashing downfall, victim of his overweening ambition.

"Life in South America is vividly portrayed. There are plot and counterplot, but the tapestry drawn is so rich in character and incident that one is no more depressed than one would be at watching a great storm." E. McN.

+ Canadian Forum 30:166 O '50 280w

"Pick, a native Viennese now an American citizen, does a thorough, workmanlike job on Lorenzo in this his second novel in his adopted tongue. There is small subtlety in the presentation but Pick leaves little doubt that Lorenzo is a thoroughly bad one. The hectic doings, so efficiently drawn, are bound to hold the reader's interest."

+ Cath World 171:312 Jl '50 180w

Chicago Sun p5 Je 6 '50 70w

"I found Guests of Don Lorenzo rather tedious reading. It is a detailed account of a revolution in the making and the breaking. It is almost documentary in its exactness, and one can readily believe that the author has made careful and even scholarly research into his subject. It reads like a good case-history of a South American revolution. But, as in case histories generally, there is no fire, no vibrancy of imagination. It is in this, more than anything, that Guests of Don Lorenzo fails as a novel." L. J. Trese

— + Commonweal 52:205 Je 2 '50 460w

"The innumerable characters, the literary mystery producing devices, the complicated plottings and immense amount of detail, although graphically told, handicap suspense and demand too close application for enjoyment." R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:694 Ap 15 '50 80w

"One might almost be tempted to say that Mr. Pick has entirely too much taste but not quite enough talent for the telling of so unappetizing a tale. His style is both cultured and cultivated, rounded out with ornamental little sagacities; it lacks, however, the cohesion necessary to come to grips with the conflict in the novel. We never really see the smooth but lethal greed of Don Lorenzo because a pageant of leisurely detail keeps diffusing the picture." Frederic Morton

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 21 '50 550w

"The moral of the story, I suppose, is that crime doesn't always pay—anyone except those who write about it. Without Conrad's ultimate compassion for mortality, Mr. Pick manages, nevertheless, to give us that feeling, which novelists and other editorialists do best of all, that we have been appropriately chosen to sit in judgment on the strange, wild actions of our fellow-men. If we can be pretty continuously entertained, at the same time, as we are in 'Guests of Don Lorenzo,' isn't that enough to ask of a novel?" Charles Poore
+ — N Y Times p4 My 14 '50 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 23 '50 270w

"This is a novel sometimes reminiscent of Conrad, but it never loses its own individuality and flavor. One of its most intriguing features is the intricate, tapestrylike weaving of its action, the threads of which shuttle breathlessly back and forth so that ends are constantly meeting with beginnings. Unfortunately, this intricacy is also the novel's greatest weakness because the involvements are often so extensive that the tapestry becomes occasionally more of a snarl than a pattern." J. P. Marquand
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:15 My 13 '50 750w

PIDAL, RAMON MENENDEZ. See Menendez Pidal, R.

PIERHAL, ARMAND. Living God; tr. from the French by Wilhelmina Guérard. 118p $1.75 Harper

239 God. Christianity—Evidences 50-5499

"A brief, lucid explanation and justification of religious faith is presented here in the form of a dialogue between an intelligent believer and an educated unbeliever. The author, a French editor and essayist, presents by means of his skeptical protagonist most of the conventional objections to religious belief in general and Christianity in particular, and answers them with unusual clarity and effectiveness." N Y Times

---

"As muddled as can be." J. M. Oesterreicher
— Commonweal 52:350 Jl 14 '50 390w

"To convince the objector Pierhal's method is to appeal to the rational insofar as that is possible and to the irrational only when he finds it impossible to do otherwise. This latter procedure will be seriously questioned by all who refuse to leave the bounds of rationality in the quest for God. Some points of view found in the volume are highly questionable. . . The book has value for those who are interested in proofs for God's existence and a rationale for the life of faith." G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 27:376 O '50 400w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p16 F 12 '50 190w

"Armand Pierhal is a Catholic but this book has been read and praised by both Catholics and Protestants. It deals with belief in God and in the power of prayer and, as Graham Greene says in the introduction, any book which deals with these themes has importance in the world today." O. J. Aldrich
+ Springf'd Republican p3D F 26 '50 250w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO (ALBERTO MORAVIA, pseud). Two adolescents; the stories of Agostino [tr. by Beryl de Zoete] and Luca [tr. by Angus Davidson]. 268p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

50-8597

Two fictional psychological studies of young boys becoming aware of adult emotions. In both cases the boys are sons of well-to-do Italian families.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 186:84 Ag '50 500w

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 1 '50 160w

"Where Moravia errs, I think, is that he makes the mental disturbance of adolescence almost purely sexual. . . Moreover, Moravia's Agostino and Luca are not typical boys. One is what we used to call in this country a 'mamma's boy' and the other is too moody and self-centered to be regarded as a fair specimen of adolescent boyhood. There is a somewhat sickly abnormality about both of them, even allowing that sexual awakening presents a curious norm of abnormality." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 9 '50 490w

"Signor Moravia's name on a book jacket now has somewhat the same popular, if not exactly literary, appeal that a bedroom expert like Kathleen Winsor enjoys. . . But there is more to Moravia's work than meets the leering eye. There is power and delicacy in these two stories and a certain subtle moralism. Each of them in its way is a bitter comment on modern society. Each of them gives witness to the modern malaise, the self-loathing that marks the age." John Cogley
+ — Commonweal 52:395 Jl 28 '50 800w

"Two short novels which again display much of the scrupulous realism which gave The Woman of Rome its favorable critical reception, and the explicit sexual detail which undoubtedly attracted a popular audience. . . There are times, and this is one of them, when puberty is a very unattractive age."
Kirkus 18:286 My 15 '50 170w

"Traced in swift well-phrased sentences with Freudian overtones, both characters live for the reader as individually one strives to be treated as a man, while the other rediscovers life as meaningful. Not for young people." H. L. Roth
Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 100w

" 'Two Adolescents' is by far the best new fiction to come my way this summer. It is also the least pretentious." Ernest Jones
+ Nation 171:133 Ag 5 '50 600w

"The treatment of the sexual experience is perhaps the most distinguishing trait of Moravia's work. . . Sex exists in Moravia as a literary vision, as an 'idea of the world.' If, for example, what gives Balzac part of his force is a vision of the 'truth of money' in our society, so, in Moravia, it is the 'truth of sex' which helps to make the art that has gone into 'Two Adolescents' so persuasive and so moving." Alfred Hayes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 23 '50 800w

"[Of] the stories of Agostino and Luca . . . the first is translated from the Italian by Beryl de Zoete, the second by Angus Davidson, and one cannot overpraise them for the ease and the lucidity of their prose. Moreover, the stories themselves were conceived, one should suppose, as a single thematic unit. Dramatically independent of one another, each a distinguished story in its own right; together, as counterparts, as companion pieces, they comprise a masterpiece. With this book one can afford to be blunt; it is, quite simply, beautiful." Mark Schorer
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 23 '50 1200w

New Yorker 26:71 Jl 22 '50 120w

"There is no question of Moravia's honesty; there can be none about his genuinely great ability. If there is a weakness in these stories it is the same that seemed to me apparent in his 'Woman of Rome'—a tendency to expound the theme too fully, not in the sense of overwriting since he is far too able for that, but in the sense of exhausting the theme at the sacrifice of sharpness. Nevertheless, he is a writer of the first importance." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 28 '50 950w

" 'Agostino' was first published in Rome in 1944, 'Luca' (as 'La Disubbidienza') in 1948. The former was translated by Beryl de Zoete, the latter by Angus Davidson. It is difficult to decide whether the rather marked difference in style and effect of the two stories is due to the individual translator or to Alberto Moravia's own skilful manipulation. But it is very simple and obligatory to decide that 'Two Adolescents' confirms the stature of the author of 'The Woman of Rome.' This is a quiet book, though certainly not a gentle one; however, its illumination of human processes in the making is startling and deep." Kathleen Sproul

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 Jl 22 '50 700w
+ Time 56:82 Jl 24 '50 440w

PINCUS, GREGORY, and THIMANN, KENNETH VIVIAN, eds. Hormones: physiology, chemistry and applications. 2v 886; 782p il v 1 $13.50; v2 $12.50 Academic press
574.194 Hormones 48-9729

"These two volumes contain twenty-five chapters of rich material, ranging from botany through marine zoology to clinical medicine. . . Volume I (published in 1948) contains the chemistry of the hormones, and the hormones' role in plant and animal physiology. In Volume II more specific endocrinological systems are presented, with their medical applications." N Y Times

Reviewed by D. A. McGinty
Chem & Eng N 28:4295 D 4 '50 320w

"The whole field of hormones is surveyed in this notable contribution to the literature of biochemistry. . . Chemical, physiological and clinical aspects are all covered; hence the work is of interest not only to biochemists but also to physiologists and medical men, particularly endocrinologists and pharmacologists."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:50 Jl '50

"In the best sections a most important goal is achieved; basic evidence is presented. Too many volumes in the past have been no more than annotated bibliographies. These are balanced, discursive and well written." T. H. Maren
+ N Y Times p4 Je 25 '50 850w

PINKHAM, SPENCER. Modern republic; how the U.S. can maintain both security and freedom. (Corwin pub. co. bk) 137p $2.50 for sale by Greenberg
321.8 U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 50-6182

"The purpose of this book is to convince the reader that, by simple constitutional amendment, we should either transform our direct democracy into a parliamentary republic or, as a solution more likely of fulfillment, make the term of the President indefinite and provide for a congressional right of recall." (p.17) No index.

Am Pol Sci R 44:776 S '50 70w

"In defining terms Mr. Pinkham sometimes sets up definitions which may not be generally accepted—such as 'direct democracy' (p. 8) for the system in which the people vote directly for the executive and the legislators. This book, nevertheless, makes a welcome contribution to contemporary political thought. It presents a challenge to all who are concerned with the maintenance of security and freedom." D. A. Shields
+ — Ann Am Acad 271:194 S '50 400w

"This provocative little book is frankly a plea; the advantages of the author's proposal are enticingly set forth; the disadvantages ignored."
Nation 171:134 Ag 5 '50 140w

"Mr. Pinkham's prescription is concise, specific and cogently argued."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Je 4 '50 270w

PIPER, EVELYN, pseud. See Modell, M.

PIROGOV, PETER. Why I escaped [tr. by Ada Siegel]. 336p $3.50 Duell
914.7 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Russian. Communism—Russia 50-6282

"Mr. Pirogov's retreat from Russia was accomplished in less than three hours. He is one of the two young Soviet aviators who in 1948 flew their plane from Russia to an American airfield in Austria and gave themselves up to the United States Military Government. In this book, he tells how he came to the hard and dangerous decision to quit his homeland and all his attachments there; the main reason was a hatred for the ruling party." New Yorker

"Pirogov's story is told in a disjointed, impressionistic manner; but it gives the impression of being an authentic picture of soviet life in war and peace." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 12 '50 550w

"The writing is staccato, incisive, brilliant in its way, the swing and meter of it preserved in Ada Siegel's excellent translation. The sharp bite of the dialogue seldom dulls. There may, it is true, be few pauses for breath—or for introspection. Yet if the book were more subtle in its ebb and flow of emotions, it might well lose its particular effect." H. B. Ellis
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 11 '50 1100w
Foreign Affairs 29:156 O '50 20w
Kirkus 18:43 Ja 15 '50 160w
Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '50 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 26 '50 850w

"The book is interesting. It would be more satisfactory if Ada Siegel or somebody else hadn't thought it necessary to introduce cutbacks and other time-worn devices that break the flow of the narrative." R. L. D.
+ — N Y Times p25 F 26 '50 450w

"The writing is rough, but the book is obviously the work of an honest man."
+ — New Yorker 26:102 Mr 4 '50 120w

"Pirogov's very understandable hatred of the rulers of his country makes cheering reading for the Western world. But it is necessary to remember that for the few Pirogovs who escape there may be many Barsovs for whom independent existence is no longer possible. By telling of Barsov's defeat in his struggle to free himself Pirogov provides a valuable clue to the difficulties which lie ahead of any potential liberation movement within the Soviet Union. His book is a hopeful sign, therefore, only in so far as it proves that there is resistance and that with extremely judicious help from the free world it may in time be strengthened." G. G. Stevens
San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 26 '50 750w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon
Sat R of Lit 33:12 F 25 '50 450w

PIRSON, SYLVAIN JOSEPH. Elements of oil reservoir engineering. 441p il $6.50 McGraw 665.5 Petroleum industry and trade 50-13167

"This book covers the knowledge which has been gained to date on the types, properties, and management of oil reservoirs. It is addressed to engineers and graduate students who have a thorough grasp of geology, the laws and terminology of fluid flow, and of engineering mathematics. There are numerous bibliographical lists, and the exposition of many points is accompanied by detailed case histories." (Library J) Index.

"The book is excellently printed. In addition to numerous illustrations in the text, there are seven fold-out maps of oil fields and their cross-sections, and three other large charts. This book will be widely used and quoted by petroleum production engineers." K. A. Kobe
+ Chem Eng 57:307 N '50 370w

"The book is a necessary addition to libraries in petroleum producing regions." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1511 S 15 '50 140w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:73 S '50

PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN. Historic faith and a changing world. 181p $2.50 Oxford

230 Christianity. U.S.—Religion. U.S.—Social conditions. Church 50-8289

"Beginning with an analysis of the cultural scene, [Dr Pittenger] shows us why contemporary liberalism and neo-orthodoxy do not speak to the needs of the day. The sense of the emergence of a new society is pessimistic but not unduly so, and what he does is to make his 'dynamic orthodoxy' relevant to the situation as he describes it." (Churchman) No index.

"The most intelligent Christian can rejoice in being a part of the stream of the great Christian tradition which Pittenger has so lucidly presented. His arguments seem inescapable. There is every evidence of a wide influence on him by the thinking of William Temple. It is just possible that when the final theological evaluation of this age has been drawn, the outstanding Christian thinker will prove to be, not Brunner, Barth or Niebuhr, but William Temple." H. H. Straton

+ Christian Century 67:844 Jl 12 '50 1700w

"This is the best of all Dr. Pittenger's books, for it makes his theology relevant to the historical situation. . . He has learned much from the outmoded liberalism which he rejects and from neo-orthodoxy which he believes is a corrective, and he writes beautifully and persuasively about his own position." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 164:16 S 1 '50 170w

"This is a well-written and thought-provoking book."

+ Kirkus 18:600 O 1 '50 180w

PLAIDY, JEAN, pseud. See Hibbert, E.

PLAMENATZ, JOHN PETROV. Mill's Utilitarianism; reprinted with a study of the English utilitarians. 228p $2.25 Macmillan

144 Utilitarianism. Mill, John Stuart [49-48946]

"The Utilitarians flourished for a hundred years, from the middle of the eighteenth to the middle of the nineteenth century, as the most important school of moral and political philosophy in England. . . Dr. Plamenatz traces the origins of the utilitarian doctrine to Hobbes and Locke and finds that the Utilitarians owed more to the former than to the latter. Hume established the school on a secure foundation. Other important members of the group were Bentham, James Mill and his son, John Stuart Mill. The younger Mill's essay on Utilitarianism is reprinted in the volume." (Social Studies) No index.

"Good features are the reprint of J. S. Mill's whole essay on Utilitarianism, and an interesting analysis of Bentham and Mill. (Prior to Bentham, the book does not seem to find itself). The economist may find here valuable exercise in freeing his thought and language from question-begging assumptions. But little hope of success is held out, as all the utilitarians appear to be full of them (including, according to Plamenatz, Adam Smith, Malthus, and Ricardo), and certainly the author is not free from them." L. H. Haney

+ — Ann Am Acad 268:198 Mr '50 420w

"This book may profitably be ignored. One will find here a more or less accurate account of Hobbes, Locke, Hume, Bentham, and the two Mills, among others. But sometimes the account is certainly less accurate. The account of Hobbes is peculiarly objectionable, since it makes him the ancestor of the utilitarians by cutting him down to the utilitarian measure. . . In short, the best reason I can find for buying this book is that it contains Mill's Utilitarianism as an appendix. But that is hardly a good reason, inasmuch as the essay is available in many cheaper editions." Arthur Child

— Ethics 60:223 Ap '50 800w

"Plamenatz' discussion of John Stuart Mill is notable for its moving, sympathetic account of his essay, Liberty. It also helps to explain the cry of reformers in the last quarter of the nineteenth century that they appealed from Mill the political philosopher to Mill the economist. Certain minor objections might be raised to Plamenatz' survey. . . The reviewer wishes that the author had given more than a passing reference—and a somewhat inaccurate one at that—to An Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue by Thomas Hutcheson, Adam Smith's teacher. . . In general the survey is a valuable addition to our knowledge of a school of thought that is one of the greatest sources of the major ideas of our own age. Not least of its merits are its incisiveness and literary style." Joseph Dorfman

+ — Pol Sci Q 65:309 Je '50 900w

"This compact volume, lucid and well-written, deserves many readers." R. G. Cowherd

+ Social Studies 41:135 Mr '50 220w

PLANCK, MAX KARL ERNST LUDWIG. Scientific autobiography, and other papers; with a memorial address on Max Planck, by Max von Laue; tr. from German by Frank Gaynor. 192p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

504 Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Science—Philosophy 49-11086

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"It would indeed be gratifying if the reviewer could . . . say unequivocally how much he enjoyed re-reading Planck's essays and how he hopes that his fellow scientists will turn to this little volume for moments of introspection and study. However, there are some reservations which are not directed at the physicist and philosopher Planck but at his translator. As a whole, Mr. Gaynor has done a commendable job, but that is not enough. It is as if someone sets out to make a color photograph of a great painting, but the reproduction is found wanting for lack of photographic skill. . . To sum it up: All these minor points can do no harm to Planck's stature, but they are highly irritating. Hence this reviewer must temper his otherwise enthusiastic recommendation with a few reservations." F. C. Nachod

+ — Chem Eng 57:99 Ja '50 700w

"Some of the chapters of this book make rewarding reading for the scientific layman, in spite of their occasional content of difficult technology. The translation is excellently done, and Planck's mode of expression is simple and clear. This is all the more remarkable in that the writing was done when Planck was about eighty years old. He had lost none of his capacity for the lucid thinking that had made him one of the greatest physicists of all time." Eugene Ayres

+ Crozer Q 27:168 Ap '50 600w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Ethics 61:90 O '50 190w

Reviewed by Michael Polanyi

Manchester Guardian p4 O 6 '50 420w

Reviewed by G. S. Thomson

New Statesman & Nation 40:258 S 2 '50 1000w

Reviewed by H. E. Paine

Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 29 '50 180w

PLANT, JAMES STUART. The envelope; a study of the impact of the world upon the child. 299p $3 Commonwealth fund

136.7 Child study. Personality 50-6656

"This volume is a study of the impact of the world upon the child. The 'envelope' is defined as 'a property of that part of the personality which is in touch with the environment.' Twenty-one problems are explored in detail such as, security, authority, status preservation, the feeling of difference, symbolization, and reality and cadence." (Am J Pub Health) References. Index.

"Provocative, carefully annotated, individualistic. . . The chapter on adequacy should be of especial interest to public health nurses and child health physicians." R. P. Kandle

+ Am J Pub Health 40:882 Jl '50 220w

Reviewed by J. E. Anderson

Ann Am Acad 272:262 N '50 550w

PLANT, J. S.—Continued

"A profoundly disquieting book. Filled with theories, hypotheses and suggestive leads, it leaves one with the desire to discover at least some answers to the fundamental questions it poses. Each question is presented honestly and with none of the trimmings which can make questions look like answers. . . Dr. Plant's great contribution to both scholar and scientist is his genius in setting the problem. He has extended to us a gracious invitation to view children as he saw them. The question remains as to whether we have the eyes to see." Charlotte del Solar

+ N Y Times p10 Je 25 '50 450w

School & Society 72:400 D 16 '50 30w

"All those engaged in work with children and in mental health programs, will find this volume full of fresh insight and stimulus." L. K. Frank

+ Survey 86:388 Ag '50 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:230 Je '50 200w

PLISCHKE, ELMER. Conduct of American diplomacy. 542p $4.85 Van Nostrand

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations 50-5675

"This is a college text-book, outlining the constitutional and institutional framework within which American diplomacy operates. Although much of American diplomatic practice conforms to the general rules of international law, everyone is aware that the Constitution prescribes certain requirements that are peculiar to the United States. The respective roles of the President, the Congress, especially the Senate, and the Supreme Court are clearly explained. The development and organization of the State Department and the Foreign Service are critically appraised. The book also includes a sizable group of tables and documents illustrative of the conduct of American diplomacy." Canadian Forum

"The book is orderly and ought to be adaptable for a variety of classroom uses. . . The Foreign Service Institute is worth at least a sentence. Anecdotes and wit are frigidly isolated in footnotes or at the end of sections." R. H. Heindel

Am Pol Sci R 44:774 S '50 80w

Reviewed by Gerald Craig

Canadian Forum 30:119 Ag '50 350w

PLOTINUS. Philosophy. 158p $1.75 Appleton

186.4 50-7732

The text of selected books of the Enneads of Plotinus are here translated with an introduction by Professor Katz, assistant professor of philosophy, Vassar college. Brief bibliography.

Christian Century 67:925 Ag 2 '50 170w

"A valuable contribution to the stock of English translations of important philosophic works." Alan Gewirth

+ Ethics 61:91 O '50 190w

School & Society 71:302 My 13 '50 40w

POE, EDGAR ALLAN. The centenary Poe; ed. and with an introd. by Montagu Slater. 559p $3.50 McBride

818

An anthology of Poe's works consisting of tales, poems, criticism, marginalia, and Eureka, an essay on the material and spiritual universe. There is a biographical and critical introductory essay by the editor.

"Montagu Slater's volume lays claim to notability for inclusion of the major part of 'Eureka,' which many critics pronounce worthless. Perhaps it is of merit chiefly for wide range of selection; the versatility of Poe's great creative genius is mirrored comprehensively in tales [several of which are not often reprinted], poems, and essays." Leon Harpole

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 9 '50 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Jl 16 '50 450w

POLEY, IRVIN C., and POLEY, RUTH VERLENDEN, eds. Friendly anecdotes; collected and arranged; with an introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 128p $1.50 Harper

289.6 Friends, Society of. Anecdotes 50-9787

A collection of some 200 stories about Quakers. They are divided into categories, and are drawn from both early and modern sources.

Booklist 47:127 D 1 '50

"Most of the anecdotes are not only amusing, but very well illustrate Quaker virtues and beliefs." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p27 D 10 '50 140w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 33:58 D 2 '50 140w

POLING, DANIEL ALFRED. Faith is power for you. 212p $2.50 Greenberg

264.1 Faith. Prayer 50-6842

The former pastor of the Marble Collegiate church, New York, who is editor of The Christian Herald Magazine discusses his personal experiences with faith and prayer.

Booklist 46:346 Jl 15 '50

Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 20w

Chicago Sun p21 Mr 26 '50 100w

"His book has the fascination of a good novel because it takes the reader inside the mind of its chief character—when he wished to win his debate, when he was scared and ran on the battlefield, when he turned down a college presidency." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 21 '50 270w

Christian Century 67:499 Ap 19 '50 150w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

— Churchman 164:15 My 1 '50 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '50

"This is a practical book in which a minister bares his soul that others may find in prayer the power he has found. Ministers will find in it an abundance of illustrative material. The layman who yearns for spiritual help through prayer will find his faith fortified."

+ Kirkus 18:167 Mr 15 '50 190w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p22 Je 4 '50 230w

POLITI, LEO. Boat for Peppe [pictured by the author]. [30p] $2 Scribner

50-9534

Picture story book about a little Sicilian boy who lives in Monterey, California. Peppe wants a boat all his own, and finally he gets a toy boat made of shells.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '50

Horn Bk 26:467 N '50 80w

Kirkus 18:462 Ag 15 '50 90w

"Delicately colored illustrations for the slight story. Useful with Catholic schools; otherwise of limited appeal." K. H. McAlarney

Library J 75:1912 N 1 '50 70w

"For its text, color work, and lively sense of an unusual place, this is one of Mr. Politi's best books." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 12 '50 200w

"This is the most satisfying of Mr. Politi's books. There is more substance in the text than in the earlier stories, and his beautifully designed pictures are the finest he has done." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 S 24 '50 150w

New Yorker 26:174 D 2 '50 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 12 '50 270w

"The storm that almost drowns Peppe's father gives drama to the story, but its value lies in the warm, happy relationship of the fishermen and their families and in the lovely drawings."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:37 N 11 '50 130w

POLLAK, OTTO. Criminality of women. 180p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press 364.373 Woman—Crime 50-8040

"The author of this book, Otto Pollak, is a sociologist and teacher at the University of Pennsylvania. He discusses undetected female homicides, undetected female accomplices of apprehended male criminals, the unprosecuted crimes of prostitutes, opportunity for blackmail resulting from the sex mores of our culture and complete disregard of female homosexuality, abortions and sex offenses of women committed on children. Considering these, he says, 'we have little choice but to accept the conclusion that the numerical sex differential in crime as visualized in the past is a myth.' " (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by F. E. Hartung
Ann Am Acad 272:258 N '50 500w

N Y Times p40 Je 11 '50 170w

"This is an interesting and valuable book, not only to persons involved in crime detection, but for you, who possibly know personally one or more young ladies." A. K.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 9 '50 300w

POLLET, ELIZABETH. A family romance. 252p $2.50 New directions
50-10411

Traces the course of life of a New England family during the period of stress. The musician father, the invalid mother, and two grown daughters go blindly on their way, until the sudden death of the only son of the family, a boy of six or seven. The tragedy brings things into focus for the remaining members of the family.

"The prose of this first novel is so finely clear and transparent that, like quiet water, it is often hard to realize what depth it contains. It is, indeed, almost an antiprose, as if the author had deliberately kept her verbal manner down to the plain word and the direct phrase, at the opposite extreme from so much complicated modern prose." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 26 '50 300w

Kirkus 18:483 Ag 15 '50 160w

"Written with commendable simplicity and honesty, the novel has perceptive flashes that illuminate both the painful uncertainties of youth and the ambivalence of family ties. Miss Pollet, however, has been more successful in ripping up conventionally accepted situations and emotions than in realizing individuals." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p46 D 3 '50 320w

"A first novel written in a style so candid, clear, and open, and so apparently full of presentiment, that it seems certain the author is saying something of importance that will, in time, be made known to the reader. Not until about halfway through does it become plain that Miss Pollet is telling a pallid story and nothing more, and her style is naturally ingenuous, and that her face value is her final value."
— + New Yorker 26:162 N 4 '50 110w

"In her first novel Elizabeth Pollet displays an undeniably fresh talent. She writes with sensitivity, understanding, and warmth, delving beneath surface attitudes to the core of inner tensions and conflicts. Although her theme is not a large one it is so thoroughly explored and truthfully presented that its range appears broader than it actually is. . . There is nothing morbid or sensational about 'A Family Romance' despite its elements of seduction, abnormality, illness, and death, for Miss Pollet tells her story with delicacy and perception.." Ray Pierre
+ Sat R of Lit 33:26 D 30 '50 400w

"The device of killing off one character to reunite the others works no better for Novelist Pollet than for more experienced hands; it does not hide her failure to make clear just what can be in store for her two heroines once the family has patched matters up. The best things in A Family Romance are incidental to its story, for Author Pollet is far more gifted at showing adolescent innocence than adult griminess."
— + Time 56:110 N 20 '50 550w

POLLOCK, MRS ALYCE, and GOODE, RUTH. Don Gaucho. (Whittlesey house publication) 370p $3 McGraw 50-6682

"Argentina during the early Eighteen Hundreds is the background. . . Don Miguel (nicknamed Don Gaucho after he and his cowboys save Buenos Aires from a British invasion) falls in love with a fiery daughter of the pampas. For a while he finds it hard to reconcile his love with his aristocratic background. Several revolutions in which he discovers the obvious moral superiority of the gaucho to the merchant soldier of Buenos Aires hasten the process. Flights, ambushes, duels, executions and pitched battles follow one another in a pell-mell fashion." N Y Times

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 11 '50 450w

Kirkus 18:140 Mr 1 '50 160w

"The authors—one a former resident of Argentina—have been notably successful in bringing intricate history and political conflict within the boundaries of romantic fiction. 'Don Gaucho' charifies and illuminates a period, and it seethes with sheer action." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 16 '50 850w

"Although their portrayal of character is rudimentary, the authors show great feeling for the life of the pampas with all its disorder, color and earthly richness." John Slocum
N Y Times p43 Ap 16 '50 150w

"The authors get the feel of the life of the hidalgos on the great estancias as well as that of the carefree life of the gauchos on the pampas. The story combines excellent escape reading with documentary evidence and authentic atmosphere." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 21 '50 330w

"Judged as serious fiction, the complaint might be justified that the characters are seen too much from the outside, and that important personages—such as the girl Ana Luz, who plays so large a part in the destiny of Don Gaucho—tend to become stock figures. But there is no lack of color and drama from the beginning to the end." Herschel Brickell
Sat R of Lit 33:14 Ag 19 '50 400w

POLLOCK, DEAN. Joseph, chief of the Nez Perce; pictures and text. 62p $2 Binfords
970.2 Joseph, Nez Percé chief—Juvenile literature 50-13177

The life story of the Indian warrior, Chief Joseph, written for grades five to eight. Includes the record of the heroic retreat of the Nez Perce Indians in 1877, after their chief had refused to recognize the treaty depriving his people of their tribal lands.

Booklist 47:48 S 15 '50

"Out of the West has come one of those books with a very special local flavor, which, this time, should have wide appeal for all growing boys who are keen on Indians. . . Mr. Pollock is writing not for the picture book age, but in an adult tone. The story, broken up into short units, under dramatic headings, lures the younger reader on." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 13 '50 200w

POLSKY, THOMAS. The cudgel. 223p $2.50 Dutton
50-8599

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:269 My 1 '50 140w

"A slim little mystery with a fair but somewhat obvious plot."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Jl 23 '50 170w

"If Mr. Polsky is spoofing the whole Aunt May school, he does it with skill, humor and bounce. At face value 'The Cudgel' is good entertainment." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p11 Jl 30 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 20 '50 80w

POPE, ALEXANDER. Memoirs of the extraordinary life, works, and discoveries of Martinus Scriblerus; written in collaboration by the members of the Scriblerus club: John Arbuthnot, Alexander Pope [and others] ed. by Charles Kerby-Miller; pub. for Wellesley college. 408p $5 Yale univ. press

827 Scriblerus club, London

"These fictitious burlesque memoirs grew out of the literary comradeship of six men of the age of Queen Anne who met informally to ridicule 'all the false tastes in learning,' as Pope remarked. Besides him, the group included Swift, Gay, and Dr. Arbuthnot, and their collaboration produced a brilliant if uneven satire. . . Professor Kerby-Miller's treatment is exhaustive. Statistically, the memoirs of 80 pages (large type) are sandwiched between a preface of 80 pages (small type) and notes of 200 pages (small type) which run down every allusion with encyclopedic range and minute thoroughness." Sat R of Lit

"The editor, Mr. Kerby-Miller, associate professor of English at Wellesley College, deserves praise for making the 'Memoirs' generally accessible, and especially for providing a fine preface, which reveals the importance of the Scriblerus project in the lives of its famous authors. The magnificent battery of notes, which occupies about one-third of the book, displays an acquaintance with the period which is a little short of breath-taking." C. T. Houpt
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '50 320w

"Although the unsympathetic may see an irony in this treatment for a satire on pedantry, he has actually performed a great service to scholars by his research, and to general readers by his excavation of such a glittering memorial of the Augustan Age." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 S 2 '50 270w

"Technically, his edition is a superb one almost certainly due to become a landmark in eighteenth-century scholarship."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:275 S '50 300w

POPE, ALEXANDER. Pleasures of Pope; ed. with a foreword by Peter Quennell. 265p $3 Pantheon bks.

821 50-12057

Contents: Windsor forest; An essay on criticism; The rape of the lock; Elegy to the memory of an unfortunate lady; Eloisa to Abelard; An essay on man; Moral essays; Prologue to the satires; Imitations of Horace; The Dunciad (Selections); Miscellaneous poems.

Reviewed by R. G. Cox
Manchester Guardian p4 D 9 '49 110w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 33:76 N 11 '50 100w

"A handsome and excellently-chosen anthology of the best of Pope; but it is a mistake to imagine that Pope's charm can be assessed in seventeen pages or the Essay on Man in forty lines. The prestige of Pope's excursus into philosophy has moved forward a long way from Dr. Johnson's assertion that 'never was penury of knowledge and vulgarity of sentiment so happily disguised.'" John Whale
+ — Spec 183:580 O 28 '49 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p705 N 4 '49 2800w

POPE-HENNESSY, JOHN. Complete work of Paolo Uccello. See Uccello, P.

POPE-HENNESSY, DAME UNA (BIRCH). Sir Walter Scott. (English novelists ser) 101p $2 Swallow, A.

B or 92 Scott, Sir Walter, bart. 49-50397

A study of Sir Walter Scott. "Dame Una's main interest, which runs through both 'the man' and 'the work,' is to examine the view of Scott as a writer who, after Byron beat him as a narrative poet, turned instead to novels and with magical fluency wrote the whole series of Waverleys between 1814 and 1832. Research into his life and examination of his work have convinced her that the novels fall into two groups—the romances that appear to have been written 'off the reel' (these include The Antiquary, The Heart of Midlothian, Old Mortality, Bride of Lammermoor) and those that show signs of being 'patched work' [Guy Mannering, St Ronan's Well, Red Gauntlet, The Fair Maid of Perth, Castle Dangerous, The Betrothed]." (Spec) Bibliography.

Booklist 46:173 Ja 15 '50

"An agreeable addition to this publisher's series of monographs on nineteenth-century English novelists."
+ New Yorker 25:86 Ja 28 '50 120w

"Although the author has divided her slight book into two neat but arbitrary sections devoted to the man and to his works, the latter section is all confusion."
— Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ap 29 '50 180w

"Dame Una Pope-Hennessy has produced a lively little book which will possibly be more valuable to the student of Scott than to the general reader. She takes for granted some familiarity with the outlines of Scott's life, and her biographical section is something in the nature of an addendum to previous lives." J. A. Smith
Spec 82:232 F 18 '49 550w

"Although Scott is approached from more than one new angle, the biography is at times repetitive and shows signs of having been hastily written. It also disregards, or touches only lightly upon, sides of Scott's character which might be held to have important bearing on his life."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p725 D 25 '48 900w

POPENOE, PAUL BOWMAN. Marriage is what you make it. 221p $3 Macmillan

392.5 Marriage 50-7979

"This book by the director of the Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, is designed to 'pass on to the lay reader the many principles which Dr. Popenoe has found helpful in solving common marital problems.' The material is presented as a series of problems in marriage adjustment, stated in lay language, such as 'Make Your Marriage a Partnership' 'Don't Hide Behind Indecision', 'Sophistication is Curable.'" (Survey) Index.

Booklist 46:328 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by N. L. Browning
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 S 24 '50 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50

Kirkus 18:127 F 15 '50 100w

"Social workers are likely to read this book with interest but with question. The material seems to require more elaboration to carry the reader to the conclusions reached by the author. His manner of presentation oversimplifies the successful handling of marital problems." Virginia Rogers
Survey 86:418 S '50 350w
Wis Lib Bul 46:23 Je '50

POPHAM, ARTHUR EWART, and WILDE, JOHANNES. Italian drawings of the XV and XVI centuries in the collection of his majesty the king at Windsor castle. 390p $12.50 Phaidon

741.945 Drawings [50-14793]

"A detailed survey of the fifteenth and sixteenth-century Italian drawings in the Royal Collection at Windsor, a collection long known as important but hardly accorded recognition at its true level by historians of Italian art. The Leonardo drawings at Windsor were catalogued by Sir Kenneth Clark in 1935; the present volume accounts for all the remaining Italian drawings of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. . . The catalogue is arranged alphabetically according to artists, but subdivided into two centuries with a small section devoted to miniatures. Three valuable indexes are appended. The first is an index of places in which there are related paintings, the second of collections from which items at Windsor have been acquired. The third gives the subjects treated in the drawings." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This book is a monument of research of great interest to students of the subject; the production is excellent (though the paper is too shiny); and the drawings reproduced include masterpieces by Michelangelo and Raphael as well as fascinating drawings by lesser men." S. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 14 '50 180w

"The catalogue is not intended to be read as a book but to be kept on a desk as a work of reference. Its value may depend to some extent on the accuracy of small points and of attributions to obscure masters, but others besides specialists will find it useful. Deep satisfaction can be wrested with effort from lucid arguments on subjects with which the reader is unfamiliar." Benedict Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:206 Ag 19 '50 480w

"There is a danger laymen may not appreciate the monumental scope of Mr. Popham's task. He has brought the force of his considerable scholarship to a critical examination of each drawing, affirming, refuting, or reassigning previous attributions in discussions ranging from a paragraph to a page in length." L. R. Sander

+ Sat R of Lit 33:72 O 7 '50 180w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p272 My 5 '50 1900w

POPOL VUH; the sacred book of the ancient Quiché Maya; English version by Delia Goetz and Sylvanus G. Morley; from the Spanish tr. by Adrián Recinos. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 267p $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

913.7281 Guatemala—Antiquities. Quichés 50-6643

"This book of the Quiché Maya of Guatemala restates the creation of the world, the triumph of light over darkness through the agency of culture heroes. There is chronology, too, and a list of theocratic kings from Toltec times to the coming of Alvarado. . . About 1700 A. D. the 'Popol Vuh' fell into the hands of the Dominican, Francisco Ximénez, who fortunately copied the original Quiché text, while making translations of it into Spanish to incorporate into his stuffy histories. The copy at last caught the attention of Carl Scherzer, who published it in German in 1857. In 1861 Brasseur de Bourbourg followed suit with a French edition. Since then the 'Popol Vuh' has been published many times in the Latin countries, and now for the first time has been translated into English." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by John Biesanz
Am Soc R 15:580 Ag '50 180w

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"This work constitutes a definite contribution to a knowledge of the ancient civilization of the Quiché Maya Indians. While useful English translations of the Sacred Book have appeared in the past, this present volume represents a thorough and systematic attempt to correct previous errors and to give more faithful and accurate translation than was possible to previous scholars." G. G. Brown

+ Canadian Forum 30:213 D '50 420w

"The ancient chronicle is not only a treasure trove for the historian and anthropologist but it is entertaining reading, despite the somewhat turgid introduction. It proves that the Central American Indian, like his brother further north, had a lively sense of humor." Jack Conroy

+ Chicago Sun p9 Ap 16 '50 300w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p6 Je 4 '50 90w

Current Hist 18:296 My '50 30w

"From a literary standpoint 'Popol Vuh' is of uneven quality, probably because it was compiled from several sources. The prayers to the gods, for example, are deeply imaginative, whereas other sections are at times both repetitious and stilted. In spite of these defects, the book is well worth reading. . . 'Popol Vuh' is a book of wide appeal, not only to the technical scholar but as well to the layman." S. K. Lothrop

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 13 '50 1000w

Reviewed by H. J. Spinden
N Y Times p28 Mr 26 '50 550w

"Much credit is due 'Popol Vuh's' present translators, who have so skilfully retained the simple elegance and vigorous symbolism of Quiché expression, the fierce faith and ethical sense that surge strong through their folklore. Only those few Americanists who are completely at home in the Quiché tongue can appraise the literary merit of the original texts. . . Recinos's able and scholarly introduction . . . may prove tiresome to nonbibliophiles. Without it, however, the edition would be far less valuable." Robert Wauchope

+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 My 6 '50 800w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Planning your home workshop; ed. by Sam Brown. 128p il $2.50 Pop. mechanics

680 Workshops 49-50426

Tips on the organizing of an efficient home workshop for woodworking or metalworking projects. Copiously illustrated with floor plans, tools, storage equipment, etc. There is a fourteen-page directory of manufacturers and dealers in tools and workshop supplies. Indexes.

Booklist 46:214 Mr 1 '50

"A book that will be much appreciated by any home craftsman who has just reached the stage where he recognizes the usefulness of a well organized workshop." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 74:1912 D 15 '49 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:12 Ja '50

PORTER, MRS ELLA BLODWEN (WILLIAMS). The wind's in the west. 163p $2.50 Macmillan

50-6589

Story of Ann's summer on an Arizona ranch. Ann was sixteen and had no real home, because her mother had died and her father was an engineer working in South America. The Long family helped Ann and she in turn engineered a way to prosperity for the Longs.

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Jl 23 '50 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:196 My '50 80w

"Rather elementary in plot and characterizations but pleasant enough."

+ — Kirkus 18:100 F 15 '50 100w

"Not too much about ranch life, but values are sound, and older girls will like Ann and enjoy the story. Recommended." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 120w

"The style of this book is not tops, and its happy endings are too pat, but the Western atmosphere is good and the relations of the two teen-age girls and their beaux are interesting." L. S. Bechtel

PORTER, E. B.—Continued
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 28 '50 160w

"The Western scene is well described, but the story as a whole is flat and trivial because the characters (except for one small boy) are crudely drawn." E. L. B.
— + N Y Times p18 Je 25 '50 120w

"These people are all well worth knowing: Ann, the five Longs, the old rancher, Curley, the young people at the dude ranch not far away. In the background are the fascinating sights and smells and sounds of Arizona. Young people reading this will envy Ann her second home in the West."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 My 13 '50 180w

PORTLAND ART MUSEUM, PORTLAND, OREGON. Native arts of the Pacific Northwest; from the Rasmussen collection of the Museum; introd. text by Robert Tyler Davis. 165p col pl $7.50 Stanford univ. press
970.67 Indians of North America—Art 50-546

"A brief introductory text indicates the status of native arts in the culture and society of the Northwest Indians and the Eskimos, describes both the uses of various objects—masks, baskets, ceremonial robes, toys, and totems—and the tools and methods employed in their production. Illustrated with colored plates and black-and-white photographs." Booklist

Booklist 46:198 F 15 '50

"It is seldom that an important book is as attractive as Native Arts of the Pacific Northwest. The charm of the volume almost lulls the reader into forgetting that its scholarly accuracy is as significant as its artistic beauty. . . Native Arts of the Pacific Northwest is planned as a first volume of a 'Stanford Art series.' It sets an extremely high standard. Also it is a pleasing illustration of international scholarly exchange." T. F. McIlwraith
+ Canadian Hist R 31:195 Je '50 600w

"In one sense, of course, this book is of interest chiefly to the student. But Professor Davis' text, simply and sympathetically written out of broad knowledge, carries the volume well over into the realm of the general reader." J.H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 23 '49 480w

"These illustrations will stir fresh pride in the indigenous cultures of the western hemisphere as well as provide valuable reference for research."
+ School Arts 50:6a S '50 170w

"We are told enough about the genesis of this beautiful picture-book, in the various forewords which usher it in, to feel a lively sympathy with the individuals to whom we owe it. . . It is a pity that so splendid a book was not provided with a bibliography and a rather better map."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p519 Ag 18 '50 900w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:2 Mr '50 220w

PORTNOY, LOUIS, and SALTMAN, JULES. Fertility in marriage; a guide for the childless. 250p $3 Farrar, Straus
616.69 Fecundity 50-7634

"The causes of sterility in men and women and the processes by which it may be corrected or avoided. The appendix lists a number of hospitals and other organizations cooperating in fertility clinics as well as various adoption agencies." (Publishers' Weekly) Index.

Reviewed by I. W. Voorhees
N Y Times p31 My 14 '50 150w
Time 55:58 My 1 '50 110w

POSELL, MRS ELSA Z. This is an orchestra. 94p il $2.50 Houghton
785 Musical instruments—Juvenile literature 50-5920

Describes the instruments which go to make up an orchestra, by families, and gives information on famous makers of string instruments. There are also chapters on choosing an instrument, how to practice, and on building a home record library. The author is the wife of a member of the Cleveland Orchestra. Grades five to eight.

Booklist 46:205 F 15 '50
Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p5 Jl 23 '50 50w

"This is an excellent book for the young student or lover of music, who should know something about the instruments he hears at a concert or on the radio." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 12 '50 190w
Christian Science Monitor p7 S 9 '50 150w
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '50

"Factually sound but uninspired, and lacking in the color and human interest that might have dramatized the material."
Kirkus 18:62 F 1 '50 150w

"Especially valuable for the small library. Will be used by teachers and parents as well as young people." Clara Adams
+ Library J 75:568 Ap 1 '50 100w

"Musical young people will find Mrs. Posell's book very helpful. . . The most unusual feature of the book is the excellent photographs. Not only do they show the details of the instruments, but many of them are nicely composed and have artistic interest." Virginia Cunningham
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:484 Je '50 200w

"Here is a splendid book, heartily recommended to any young person over ten who is interested in music." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 26 '50 180w

"The book is written for boys and girls of 8 to 12 but older readers, who have not had much musical training, will find it stimulating too." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 F 19 '50 170w

"No boy or girl could fail to add to his musical knowledge from this clear and informative book, and for the child with a musical bent it is a valuable teacher and guide."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:290 S '50 110w
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:21 Je '50

POSSONY, STEFAN THOMAS. Strategic air power; the pattern of dynamic security. 313p $5 Infantry journal
358.4 Aeronautics, Military 49-4236
For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Foreign Affairs 28:504 Ap '50 30w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:425 S '49 290w

"In this time of anxious speculation on the hydrogen bomb, a book which concludes that 'air power is the master weapon of the industrialized society' and that 'the survival of democracy is assured only if the democratic nations hold their dominion in the air' can hardly claim the attention due novelty. But when these conclusions follow an analysis which 'attempts to establish the general principles, possibilities, and limitations of strategic bombing,' the success of the attempt deserves examination. It is the view of this reviewer that the attempt in this instance has failed: the analysis is insufficient to warrant the conclusions; and the 'general principles' are at best speculations, observations, and remarks, which, though informative and useful, are neither systematic nor complete." Carl Kaysen
— + Yale R n s 39:567 spring '50 1200w

POSTON, RICHARD WAVERLY. Small town renaissance; a story of the Montana study. 231p $3 Harper

323.35 Montana. University. Montana study. Montana—Social conditions. Cities and towns—U.S. 50-7458

"The Montana study was designed to promote community study groups and through them to improve the life in rural parts of the state. This is the record of its struggle—the inertia, opposition, sincere interest, and final measure of success." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

"The story of this project is valuable—albeit depressing—in showing the kind of opposition a program is likely to encounter, especially among politicians and others with vested interests in the status quo, and from some otherwise enlightened persons who are motivated by feelings of jealousy. . . The ups and downs of a venture in rural reconstruction are well illustrated by this little book. That things can be done in the United States to raise the 'quality' of rural living is clear from this record." Lowry Nelson

+ Ann Am Acad 271:213 S '50 480w

"The anecdotal style makes for easy reading, but the book is practical enough to be a guide and encouragement for similar projects."

+ Booklist 46:283 My 15 '50

"A heartening account of special interest to state programs connected with similar problems, to social and community workers."

+ Kirkus 18:50 Ja 15 '50 190w

"This is truly one of the important books of our time. . . The ideas it contains, if applied to 10,000 American communities, could make the lives of millions of Americans immeasurably richer and more rewarding. . . Mr. Poston tells the story of the Montana Study in such a vivid and exciting way that it begins to get the quality of a whodunit. The thrilling story of how the people of Lonepine—of Darby —and of other Montana communities, faced with almost a complete disintegration of their community life, came together under the inspired direction of Baker Brownell and his associates, and set out to recapture their own community destiny, is as exciting a saga as any that ever happened in this country." H. W. Schacter

+ Sat R of Lit 33:26 Jl 8 '50 550w

School & Society 71:384 Je 17 '50 40w

+ Springf'd Republican p12C Je 4 '50 330w

Wis Lib Bul 46:15 Jl '50

POTEAT, EDWIN MCNEILL. Parables of crisis. 255p $2.75 Harper

226.8 Parables. Bible N.T.—Gospels 50-7490

Sixteen parables of Jesus, taken from St Luke's gospel, are here discussed in the light of both the world of Christ's day, and that of today. No index.

Booklist 46:282 My 15 '50

"A stimulating book on the parables recorded in the gospel of Luke. Poteat's interpretations are always clever, sometimes incisive." T. K. Thompson

+ Churchman 164:17 Ag '50 150w

"Affirming that 'man is the lengthened shadow of a tension' (p. 13) and that tension is creative, Dr. Poteat selects most of the parables of Jesus found in Luke 12-21, labels them 'Parables of Crisis' which convey both judgment and redemption, and discusses them in a manner which may be described as sparkling sermon-essays." D. M. Beck

+ Crozer Q 27:348 O '50 1700w

"The point of view is that of Protestant liberalism. More apt to appeal to clergyman than to lay readers."

Kirkus 18:311 Je 1 '50 110w

Wis Lib Bul 46:15 Jl '50

POTTER, CHARLES FRANCIS. Creative personality; the next step in evolution. 215p $2.50 Funk

126 Life. Evolution. Mysticism 50-6814

A study of the relationship between science (particularly evolution) and religion by an American clergyman, notable for his liberal attitude. In his introductory chapter the author sums up his thesis: "When both men-of-religion and men-of-science study until they understand the psychological experiences of the mystics, they will find there the key to creative personality, which is the great end-object of the whole evolutionary process." (p.8) Index.

Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 40w

"There are spots in the hill country of the south where marble is so plentiful that every little shack has a marble doorstep. With 'Creative Personality' as its title, Dr. Potter's new book certainly has a marble doorstep. The question is what lies behind it. Not a mansion, unfortunately. Yet not a shack either. What we find is a good substantial creation, not breathtaking in grandeur or charm, but solidly constructed and made of durable ideas. . . It is not in theme but in techniques that I felt the book fell down." Huston Smith

+ — Christian Century 67:997 Ag 23 '50 900w

"Dr. Potter writes well and convincingly. His is a book which will appeal to many moderns, scientifically minded and yet sure that science has not found all the answers and that there is a larger place for religious faith than many have supposed."

+ Kirkus 18:53 F 1 '50 100w

"Fifty years ago, in 1901, to be exact, a Canadian physician, Dr. Richard Maurice Bucke, published a book of profound evolutionary insight which he called 'Cosmic Consciousness.' . . Dr. Potter's book is a devoted re-rendering and finely intelligent elaboration and modernization of this evolutionary thesis." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ag 19 '50 500w

POTTS, LEONARD JAMES. Comedy. 174p $1.60 Longmans

822.09 Comedy [50-1974]

"The author wisely avoids the various attempts which have been made to define comedy in terms of the causes of laughter. Instead he associates comedy with human modesty, that is, with the impulse to adjust our individuality to the lives of those around us, to adapt ourselves to the laws of nature, and to counter-attack the forces of anarchy and disintegration which lurk in our own minds. . . Comedy is discussed in its widest sense, as a philosophy and a mode of thought rather than in its various literary forms." (Times [London] Lit Sup) "Choosing from the vast treasury of English and Continental comedy from Aristophanes to Shaw, he underlines the concrete rather than the abstract and treats the reader to many examples from the texts he discusses." (Sat R of Lit)

"It is a pleasure, to discover that Professor Potts, although he has crammed his book full of information never attempts to cram the reader. . . Some of the author's ideas seem eminently useful, particularly the basic premise that 'comedy depends on the eye of the beholder, not on the character of the object he has in view; that nothing in nature is categorically comic.' From here Professor Potts carefully works his way through the great comic masterpieces, allowing us to observe them, as it were, in their natural habitat. Probably because of this approach, oblique as the nature of comedy itself, his ideas emerge unscathed, and comedy remains as robustly delicate as ever." Donald Richie

+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 S 2 '50 230w

"The most interesting sections of the book are those of practical criticism of passages selected to represent the comedy of Chaucer, Congreve, Sterne, Jane Austen and Shaw. The comic idiom and the narrative or dramatic qualities of each of these authors are sharply distinguished, and there is an excellent appreciation of the separate comic worlds in which their characters are conceived. . . It seems a pity that the careful analysis which is given, for example, to eighteenth century fiction could not have been applied to the more complex organization of modern comedy. A definition of comedy which was either still wider, or else limited to the drama only, might have proved more satisfactory to handle within the limits of a study of this kind."

POTTS, L. J.—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p68 F 3 '50 900w

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Letters; ed. by D. D. Paige. 358p $5 Harcourt
B or 92 Literature—History and criticism 50-10346

A collection of 384 letters from those written by Ezra Pound during the years 1907 to 1941. Index.

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p7 D 9 '50 800w

"A relief from some of the discursive and foggy self-revelation of many contemporary letters, this stimulating and illuminating collection of letters covering 1908-1941, is essential to any study of Pound."
+ Kirkus 18:624 O 1 '50 180w

"It is extremely helpful reading for any one who wants to write poems that are more than echoes or heart throbs. It is recommended reading for any one who has learned to admire poems in a foreign language and wants to render them into English. . . The book is full of sudden illuminations, especially when it discusses literary problems, but the illuminations come singly and seem to have no connection with one another. Instead of developing a thought, Pound drops it for a second thought and drops the second for a third. All his paragraphs are short and most of them stop dead, like separate firecrackers that fizzle or explode. That is why his letters are exciting at first and then fatiguing. . . But nobody who writes poems can afford to miss reading the book." Malcolm Cowley
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 12 '50 1700w

"These letters are the most revealing documents I have read since those of Boswell or Jane Carlyle, but how differently revealing. For where nearly all letters we know are attempts to express personal feeling, to give private news, to entertain, these letters as published contain hardly one paragraph which does not relate in one way or another to one sole theme—the arts." K. A. Porter
+ N Y Times p4 O 29 '50 1250w

"One can only guess at the spew of vile language that must have been in the original manuscripts that the editor diplomatically replaces in the text by dashes and diagonals; but, judging from some of the language he has admitted to print, it seems safe to assume that it was safest, and surely wisest, to delete. What if the portrait is partial? When all is said and done—as it won't be for a long time, if these latest additions to the Pound shelf are any indication—Ezra Pound was surely one of the 'New Bearings in English Poetry' of our century's first decades. As such, if history is kind, he will be remembered." G. P. Meyer
Sat R of Lit 33:24 D 2 '50 650w

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Patria mia. 97p $2.75 Seymour
704 Art, American. American literature

An essay first designed for publication in 1913, then lost, and only now rediscovered and published. The theme of the essay is the position of the fine arts and literature in the American culture of the day.

"The essay is a hasty, disjointed but frequently thoughtful and even brilliantly phrased work. It is at least something more than a curiosity." Russell MacFall
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 2 '50 180w

"Though the essay dates in some particulars, the most important things the author had to say do not date. Despite Pound's present status there are some solidly sane recommendations here." Babette Deutsch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 17 '50 450w

"More than a few details of the essay have fallen out of date, for the America of 1950 is not precisely the America of 1912. . . In these details the essay has greater historical interest than lasting critical merit. Beyond these references the essay has much to say that is fresh and lively and as true today as it was in 1912. . . Those who wish to correct distorted opinions concerning Ezra Pound, opinions which are as far from the truth of his rare gifts as the wildest of some few of his own statements, should make the effort of reading his 'Patria Mia.' Within these pages they will find a likeness in temper and spirit to another American of intractable disposition who has written unusual essays in autobiography. His name is Frank Lloyd Wright." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 9 '50 1000w

" 'Patria Mia' was well worth rescuing even at this late date, but one regrets that it could not have been printed in the era for which it was written, for it is comparable in eloquence and courage to the similar declarations that were issued at that time by H. L. Mencken and Van Wyck Brooks, and it fills in a missing chapter in the history of Ezra Pound." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 26:64 Ag 5 '50 900w

Reviewed by Donald Richie
Sat R of Lit 33:42 O 14 '50 290w

"American criticism would have suffered no major loss if this essay had forever remained in limbo, but Patria Mia does provide, along with a lot of Pound-foolishness, a cupful of penny-wiseness, winning freshness, a few flashes of brilliance, and some early glimpses of a talented, disorderly mind that was to approach genius before it sank into insanity."
+ — Time 55:92 Je 5 '50 850w

POUND, LOUISE. Selected writings [ed. by Lowry C. Wimberly]. 365p $5.50 Univ. of Neb. Extension division
420.8 English philology 49-50351

"Reprints from the files of professional journals and conventions about forty papers by Professor Pound, and represents her active career of half a century. . . The papers are divided (somewhat arbitrarily) into six groups: Literary, Linguistic, On Vocabulary and Diction, Folkloristic, Educational, and Miscellaneous." Sat R of Lit

"The thirty-nine papers, none of them really long and some quite succinct, form an engaging miscellany. Although of interest principally to her friends and fellow students, any reader who leafs through the 'Selected Writings' will surely find something amusing or stimulating as well as informing to reward his search." George Genzmer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 2 '50 1050w

"Some of the papers are trivial, some outdated, but most of them are rewarding. The most important group are those on the origin of the English ballad. . . The whole book is thoroughly enjoyable in many ways; it (unexpectedly) elicits from the reader more laughs and chortles than yawns." R. H.
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:55 My 6 '50 220w

POURBAIX, MARCEL JEAN NESTOR. Thermodynamics of dilute aqueous solutions; with applications to electrochemistry and corrosion; tr. by J. N. Agar; with a foreword by U. R. Evans. 136p $5.50 Longmans
541.39 Thermodynamics. Solution (chemistry) [51-728]

"A translation of the second impression of Dr. Pourbaix's 'Thermodynamiques des Solutions Aqueuses Diluees,' which was originally presented as a thesis at Delft. It is concerned with the application of chemical thermodynamics to the study of reactions in dilute aqueous solutions, with particular reference to reaction systems of importance in the corrosion of metals." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"The book should serve a useful purpose in presenting the philosophy and methods of Dr. Pourbaix and his co-workers to other workers in the field of corrosion research, to whom it is strongly recommended in a foreword by U. R. Evans of Cambridge. Students of solution chemistry in general will also find it an interesting library reference." Paul Bender

+ Chem & Eng N 28:3836 O 30 '50 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:20 Mr '50

POWDERMAKER, HORTENSE. Hollywood, the dream factory; an anthropologist looks at the movie-makers. 342p $3.50 Little 791.4 Hollywood, California. Moving picture industry 50-10280

"Dr. Powdermaker, an anthropologist who knows her Maoris and Melanesians, here casts a cold, reflective eye upon the tribal customs of the West Coast Shadowland, and finds that the resident primitives are inefficient in business, frustrated in human relations, and, by and large, as incapable of bringing forth a work of art as the Indians doing business at whistle stops along the Santa Fe." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 47:114 N 15 '50

"Here is the cold turkey about Hollywood, in accurate, condensed, lively, and easily readable form." Fitzroy Davis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 22 '50 400w

Reviewed by B. R. Crisler

Christian Science Monitor p6 D 9 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:544 S 1 '50 150w

"This is one book about Hollywood and film-making that really makes sense. It is easy to understand why this anthropologist reacted as she did to the synthetic world of the screen capital. What she says makes good common sense to any person above the mental age of twelve. What is sad is the fact that the people who should read the book about the patterns, mores, processes of living and working in a realm where plastic is colossally real, will never do so unless energetic librarians force the book on them. . . Highly recommended for cinema and theatre collections, whether reference or circulation." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 180w

Reviewed by Robert Hatch

New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 700w

"Miss Powdermaker has gone at Hollywood hammer and tongs. . . Her picture of the industry, its workers and their lives is dismal, unsavory and upsetting. By and large, here is truth about Hollywood. . . Miss Powdermaker has many wise observations to make on the methods and techniques, the habits and mores of Hollywood, but too many of them seem to be based on reports that go back ten, twenty, even thirty years." Kenneth MacGowan

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 26 '50 650w

"Attempting to complete her study in a single year, Miss Powdermaker has fallen into a number of tell-tale errors of fact. Thus, she informs us that producers were a development of sound pictures and hadn't been around to supervise or harass directors in the silent days. This could hardly be more incorrect, and a number of other references suggest that the author has hardly allowed herself enough time to master the technicalities. While Miss Powdermaker has some intelligent notions about Hollywood, and offers us a good many interesting case histories, she has failed to reconstruct Hollywood as an anthropologist might have been expected to do." Budd Schulberg

N Y Times p6 O 15 '50 850w

"Dr. Powdermaker maintains a nice dispassionate, scientific air, even in the face of procedures that might raise the eyebrow of a Malinowski, and now and then seems hopeful that some good will come out of it all. Her seriousness of purpose is evident throughout this book, but she is seldom pedantic, often wryly witty, and always perceptive. Her work should be of interest not only to those who are themselves entangled with celluloid but to anyone who is curious about American mores."

+ New Yorker 26:133 O 28 '50 200w

Reviewed by Herbert Cerwin

San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 10 '50 700w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 33:26 D 16 '50 800w

Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 360w

POWELL, JOHN HARVEY. Bring out your dead; the great plague of yellow fever in Philadelphia in 1793. 304p il $3.75 Univ. of Pa. press

614.4974811 Yellow fever—Philadelphia, 1793. Rush, Benjamin 49-50068

A history of the yellow fever epidemic of 1793 in Philadelphia, which killed over four thousand of the city's population of 55,000. The most prominent figure is that of Dr. Benjamin Rush whose drastic measures cured some, but undoubtedly killed others. Index.

"A distinctive feature of Dr. Powell's book, apart from its literary merit, lies in the fact that it is definitely localized as to time and place; a brilliant case study of the visitation of the scourge in Penn's city. . . The style is clear and forceful, with a wealth of historic allusions that add richness and flavor. Indeed, the evidence of first-hand acquaintance with both the primary and secondary literature deftly woven into the narrative, imparts a sense of authoritativeness rarely found in a historical treatment so completely devoid of footnotes. On the other hand, the concessions for literary effect in line with a current trend among some historians to 'strike a path away from academic concepts,' is obvious." W. E. Lingelbach

+ — Am Hist R 55:998 Jl '50 500w

Current Hist 18:100 F '50 40w

"Mr. Powell tells his story authoritatively and exceedingly well; for he has read widely and writes with unusual clarity and grace, filling his pages with vivid and human accounts of benumbed Americans exhibiting their greatest talent—improvising solutions of problems in the face of great danger. His understanding of the psychological factors at work in the epidemic is both enlightening and penetrating, especially in the extraordinary case of Dr. Rush which deserves a review by itself. This book is, in sum, a brilliant and model treatment of one of the most macabre incidents in American history." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 8 '50 1150w

Reviewed by G. R. Burns

N Y Times p28 Ja 22 '50 600w

Time 55:80 Ja 23 '50 700w

"Bring Out Your Dead will appeal not only to historians and medical men, but to all those who wish to read a factual yet dramatic account of one of the greatest plagues in early American history, as well as a fascinating description of life in those times."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:72 Mr '50 130w

POWELL, JOHN WALKER. Education for maturity [an empirical essay on adult group study]. 242p $3 Hermitage

374 Education of adults 49-11644

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Current Hist 19:107 Ag '50 20w

"An index is conspicuously lacking; otherwise there is little to be offered in criticism of the book. The author's theses are clearly formulated and his convictions forcefully introduced." C. D. Champlin

+ El School J 50:415 Mr '50 550w

POWELL, J. W.—Continued

"'Education for Maturity' blueprints an exciting development in adult education. This book should receive the serious attention of all who seek to strengthen and extend our democratic way of life." Benjamin Fine
+ N Y Times p28 F 5 '50 360w

"'Education for Maturity' places adult education in its significant social and psychological contexts and directs it toward its proper goal. And it is pervaded by the author's deep awareness of the meaning and demands of democracy." Joe Tussman
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 12 '50 750w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. Shark river. 209p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 49-11348

Detective story.

"Powell's book is pretty funny, not especially sensible and neatly edged with lethal excitement." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun O 28 '49 100w

"High spirited, high jinks in Florida."
+ Kirkus 17:410 Ag 1 '49 60w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 90w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. Shell game. 228p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
50-5174

Detective story.

Booklist 47:79 O 15 '50

Chicago Sun p5 Jl 4 '50 50w

Kirkus 18:220 Ap 1 '50 80w

"A thin story which lacks even the flip dialogue that distinguishes the Arab and Andy Blake books."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 9 '50 190w

"The dialogue is bright and vivid, and so is the Florida setting. The plot is attractively convoluted." A. B.
+ N Y Times p19 Je 25 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 18 '50 140w

"Action slightly creaky but blithe humor makes up for all such shortcomings. Worthwhile."
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:36 Je 10 '50 30w

Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 120w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 S '50

POWER, CRAWFORD. The encounter. 310p $3 Sloane
50-8116

Novel describing how a priest discovers his inhumanity to man in an encounter with a carnival diver and his girl.

"This is Power's first novel; he brings to it assurance and knowing craftsmanship. His Father Cawder is a stunning characterization. With less sure treatment, he might seem merely cold and selfish but Power makes his plight understandable. . . The novel stirringly makes its point that love is the true essence of a Christian life. Masterfully told, in strong, terse prose, Power's story will be read with zest." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 171:392 Ag '50 250w

"What is particularly notable about this excellent first novel is the remarkable degree of Mr. Power's success in the integration of the two ways of life, however great the contrast between them, together with his outstanding ability to make even his most minor characters spring to life without effort. . . The integration of mood and action, of character and the inevitable events rising from their inner nature is skilfully done." August Derleth
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 18 '50 360w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 26 '50 320w

Commonweal 52:225 Je 9 '50 1850w

"A strange story, which somehow fails to cut below the emotional surface to move the reader. Father Cawder is too cold, too frustrated a being; Diamond and Stella seem the victims of their own depravity. One can say however, that here is a wholly different approach to the study of a priest."
— + Kirkus 18:216 Ap 1 '50 320w

"Because Crawford Power writes well and because he is accurate and hardheaded all the time, 'The Encounter' is a fine achievement." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 4 '50 600w

Reviewed by James Kelly
N Y Times p38 Je 11 '50 310w

"Mr. Power is a thoughtful and sometimes striking writer who presents his characters with such respect and understanding that it is impossible to lay his book down until one discovers what the end is going to be."
+ New Yorker 26:94 Je 17 '50 120w

"There are a few complaints to be filed to Mr. Power, but humbly in face of his general excellence. The reader is repeatedly mysteriously barred from some key moments in Father Cawder's thinking. We are plied with intense introspective detail up to these thresholds; then a jump in time prevents us from participating in his next inner step. This loss sometimes threatens understanding of the whole, and it does subtract roundedness from the priest, so that he is often a figure patterned on a tapestry. And on a tapestry, too, the others weave in and out around him. They all have startling height and width and dark, brooding color, but the depth which would enable them to walk, well muscled, alone is not quite there." Kathleen Sproul
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:26 Je 10 '50 550w

"Novelist Power, 41, is not yet an expert craftsman. When he reports Father Cawder's metaphysical probings, his writing often goes dead and resembles a religious disputation more than a novel. When he should be driving his story to its climax, he lets it creep along. As recompense he offers some marvels of observation: the tawdry circus carnival, the chatter of unworldly nuns, and Father Cawder himself in all his miserable genuineness. Father Cawder may never become a cardinal—nor The Encounter ever match The Cardinal in sales—but Author Power has told a good, unsentimental story."
+ — Time 55:98 Je 12 '50 550w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Preble's boys; Commodore Preble and the birth of American sea power. 419p $5 Sloane

359 Preble, Edward. U.S.—History, Naval 50-10765

A study of the development of the officers' corps of the United States navy, beginning in the days of Commodore Preble, who blockaded the Tripolitan coast, before the War of 1812. The subject is treated largely thru the biographies of fourteen men who held commands during the War of 1812. Indexes.

Booklist 47:134 D 1 '50

"Fletcher Pratt is not only a thoro historian but a brilliant romanticist. If he had written the textbooks American history would be the most popular course in schools." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 17 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:447 Ag 1 '50 190w

"Told in a discursive manner filling in around the known facts, Mr. Pratt has done his usual excellent job of writing. Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 130w

Nation 171:537 D 9 '50 50w

"A lively and provocative study. . . [Mr. Pratt's] cast of characters is fascinating and he has developed it well, bringing forward several personalities who had previously been mere names in the records." Harry Baehr
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 19 '50 1100w

Reviewed by George McMillan
N Y Times p10 N 26 '50 450w
San Francisco Chronicle p34 D 10 '50 170w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Third king; maps by Rafael Palacios. 313p $4 Sloane

948.9 Valdemar IV Atterdag, king of Denmark. Denmark—History 50-5749

A history of fourteenth-century Denmark and a biography of Valdemar IV, (1320-1375) who "molded a disunited Denmark into the most important Baltic power." Index.

"A well-written and generally reliable introduction to a little known but important era in northern European history." Waldemar Westergaard
+ Am Hist R 55:961 Jl '50 400w

"The author's side lights on military developments are highly rewarding; indeed, his prose rings with the eloquent tones of the ancient sagas. If only he had reorganized his material for the sake of easier reading, 'The Third King' would have brought another laurel to its author's already amply-decorated brow." Louis Zara
+ — Chicago Sun p5 Mr 14 '50 550w

"Fletcher Pratt is obviously in love with his theme, and his knowledge of Danish has afforded him a wide access to much Scandinavian data. Our complaint is not with Mr. Pratt's Danish, but with his English. This is a species of 20th century Carlylean rhetoric, and quite frankly, we find it picturesque but difficult. . . The text is full of novel conceptions of medieval history, some of them definitely provocative and illuminating, but they would be better rendered in clearer English. . . The important matters are presented with spirit and learning. But now and again the line between legend and historical fact becomes perilously faint, so that we seem to be reading a modernized version of the old Volsung saga." William McFee
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 1 '50 600w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 164:19 Ap 15 '50 60w

"A history told in lyric terms, this is a lusty saga of the skjoldung kingdom, which if its subject matter does not have a wide appeal, its telling should."
+ Kirkus 17:667 D 1 '49 130w

"Too special for easy reading, but in parts it is exciting narrative. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:494 Mr 15 '50 100w
Nation 170:191 F 25 '50 80w

"In his best pages Mr. Pratt's style is of an arresting vividness; but in his worst it is distressingly flamboyant. The great king remains a dim personality, chiefly because so few bits of personal anecdote have come down to us; but the picture of the land and the people is well fashioned. Maps help the reader as he moves from place to place unfamiliar to those who have not visited Denmark and the Baltic region." David Tilden
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 19 '50 750w

"It is a provocative book on many counts. Not the least of its virtues are some bold conclusions—for instance, as regards the alleged connection between Danish democracy today and the order of things in Denmark in the second third of the Thirteenth Hundreds." J. H. Wuorinen
+ N Y Times p6 F 19 '50 330w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Sat R of Lit 33:17 Mr 25 '50 600w

"Mr. Pratt has tried, and not without success, to give the reader a sense of the feeling of the times, and to carry over into the text the flavor of the sources used. . . The general reader can enjoy the book without a knowledge of the period; the historian will find it revealing of what has been an area of slight knowledge and shadowy generalizations."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:193 Je '50 130w

PRATT, FLETCHER. War for the world. (Chronicles of America ser) 364p il maps textbk ed $2.25; subs ed $6 Yale univ. press

940.5373 World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 50-8830

Covers the entire course of World war II, from Pearl Harbor to the surrender of Japan. Each theater of the war is explored, on land, sea, or in the air. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Fletcher Pratt's otherwise excellent book suffers from a defect of its author's virtues: it is primarily a history of the naval war. . . There is a certain tidy logic in Pratt's treatment of this country's war effort on the fighting fronts; it may be measured by the developments in naval construction and aircraft, in weapons and procedures, between the day when the bombs showered down upon Pearl Harbor and the moment when that terrifying 'great mushroom of fire' rose over Nagasaki. For America the war had begun in the Pacific. There likewise it ended—not for America alone, but for the world." J. H. Powers
+ — Atlantic 186:78 O '50 600w
Booklist 47:37 S 15 '50

"This will be very useful to readers who want a compact account of our part in the war, with enough details to give the narrative solid substance but not so many as to leave a confused impression of the whole." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:1201 O 11 '50 250w
Current Hist 19:165 S '50 20w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 171:271 S 23 '50 270w

Reviewed by Karl Schriftgiesser
N Y Times p7 S 10 '50 270w

Reviewed by Harvey Wish
Sat R of Lit 33:21 N 18 '50 380w

PRATT, FRANCES (MRS CHRIS RITTER), and FIZELL, BECCA. Encaustic, materials and methods; with a foreword by Edward W. Forbes. 64p il col pl $3 Lear

751.46 Encaustic painting 50-458

"Foreword by Edward Forbes, Director Emeritus, Fogg Museum at Harvard points possible importance of this little book in that it brings up-to-date the ways of painting with wax, of 'burning in' and sealing 'the quality of the painting.' Methods are described by a number of authorities in the field; there are paragraphs on materials and equipment, definitions, a list of sources of supply; there is a bibliography and a list of reference works; there are illustrations." Library J.

"Good material in small compass; recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 80w

"A useful handbook. . . Equally helpful is a list of necessary materials and dealers from whom they may be purchased. The weird editing of the bibliography is unhappily reminiscent of the English captions that used to apppear on Japanese postcards." L. R. Sander
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:46 Mr 4 '50 90w

PRATT, JAMES BISSETT. Eternal values in religion. 162p $2 Macmillan

204 Religion. Christianity 50-5728

A volume of essays by a professor of philosophy at Williams college who died in 1944. Contents: The psychology of worship; The justification of worship; Religion and the mind; The mystic's sense of presence; The nature of Christianity; Faith, worship, and sincerity; Knowledge and religious experience.

PRATT, J. B.—Continued

Bookmark 9:158 Ap '50 60w

"One of the best books of the late James Bissett Pratt. . . The book is marked strongly by Dr. Pratt's interest in the Oriental religions and philosophies." J. O. Supple
+ Chicago Sun p7 F 19 '50 100w

"The strength of this book is not to be measured in terms of any of its detailed conclusions. Its strength lies in the serene and mellow wisdom which lies back of these details, in the total perspective on life which finds expression in them." E. A. Burtt
+ Crozer Q 27:361 O '50 550w

J Philos 47:589 S 28 '50 210w

"More popular than scholarly."
Kirkus 18:56 F 1 '50 90w

"This small book is a pure crystallization of Dr. Pratt's mature thinking on religion. Dr. Pratt was best known for his volume 'The Religious Consciousness' and for his lectures at Williams College. In these essays he contrasts morality and religion, instruction and worship, and justifies worship 'for its own sake.'" G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p33 F 19 '50 100w

Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 290w

PRATT, THEODORE (TIMOTHY BRACE, pseud). Flame tree. 280p $3 Dodd

50-5175

A romance of the time of the opening up of Palm Beach. A few of the minor characters have appeared in the author's other novel of Florida, The Barefoot Mailman (Book Review Digest 1943). The main characters of this book are Tip and Jenny, a pioneering couple from Ohio. When the Royal Poinciana hotel is built Jenny becomes infatuated with it and one of its guests, wealthy Cleve Thornton. However that phase is a brief one and soon Jenny discovers that it is Tip who is the most deserving of her love and attention.

Bookmark 9:136 Mr '50 70w

Cath World 171:152 My '50 150w

"The factor of overdramatization and overdrawn situations seems to me the major weakness of the book. This weakness is compounded by the hardly successful attempt the author has made to research fairly large chunks out of the historical background of America's last frontier, the state of Florida, and by handling it fictionally infuse the breath of life into the material." Henry Cavendish
— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 22 '50 650w

"In 'The Flame Tree' [Mr Pratt] has done a thoroughly workmanlike job in searching out the facts of Florida's rather bizarre history and getting the feel of the times of which he writes. But, in order to include in his novel all the elements that he wanted to use, he has loaded his treasures upon a Cinderella story in reverse that I, for one, find a little hard to take." F. H. Bullock
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 8 '50 550w

"The author works in bold colors, with a deliberately loose brush—letting the moral fall where it may. The reader in search of social significance is advised to look elsewhere. The reader who enjoys a richly documented recreation of a vanished time will find 'The Flame Tree' to his taste. . . This reader, for one, can hardly blame Mr. Pratt if his cast of characters seems pallid against their razzle-dazzle backdrop—and this includes Henry Flagler himself, who rumbles in and out of the plot. The Ponce remains the livest entity in the book." William Du Bois
N Y Times p5 Ja 8 '50 700w

Sat R of Lit 33:36 F 11 '50 160w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester
Springf'd Republican p8C F 5 '50 210w

PRATTEN, ALBRA. Winkie; il. by Ralph Thompson. 46p $1.50 Oxford

Picture story book about a pet squirrel. Winkie created such a havoc in the house that he had to be let loose. The story, which has an English background, carries Winkie thru the four seasons of the year.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

Reviewed by Marcia Winn
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 40w

Horn Bk 26:371 S '50 50w

Kirkus 18:415 Ag 1 '50 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sussdorff
Library J 75:1515 S 15 '50 40w

"The little story is told with a quiet minimum of good words, and no make-believe talk from Winkie. The value of the book lies mostly in the remarkably fine pictures, well reproduced, twenty-three of them on large full-color pages. They take one around the seasons in the country; they have that exact yet lively observation of nature which we expect from the long line of English water-colorists and amateur naturalists." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 10 '50 170w

PRAY, KENNETH LOUIS MOFFATT. Social work in a revolutionary age, and other papers; pub. for the Univ. of Pa, School of social work. 308p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

361 Social work 49-50288

"This collection of eighteen papers was prepared and published for the Pennsylvania School of Social Work in memory of Kenneth Pray who was associated with the school from 1919 until his death in 1948. They were selected by the editors as the most representative of his contributions to social work, and are presented in four parts: Early Formulations of Philosophy, Public Welfare, Penology, and Final Statements of Philosophy. All but four of the papers have been published elsewhere." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by LeRoy Bowman
Am Soc R 15:452 Je '50 350w

"All but two of the papers were prepared as addresses to be given to some group. Their style is intimate and personal, and reflects Pray's deep emotional identification with the social work movement. Often they illustrate his struggle to rationalize social work concepts into a logical system. Therefore they contain many efforts at precise definitions of social work concepts, and also many attempts at reconciling seeming paradoxes in social work loyalties." R. C. Fletcher
+ Ann Am Acad 268:239 Mr '50 380w

"One seldom finds in one person such penetrating understanding of the principles of social case work with a realistic and responsible orientation to the larger field of human affairs. This was Mr. Pray's great contribution, and is inherent in all his writings." Muriel McLauchlin
+ Social Forces 28:456 My '50 240w

"The range of topics selected by the editors for inclusion in this volume give evidence of the breadth of Kenneth Pray's interests and concern and are far wider than the span of years represented. . . Taken as a whole—and it has a real unity—'Social Work in a Revolutionary Age' makes clearer than most social work publications the basic relationship of social worker to all professions." L. W. Mayo
+ Survey 86:157 Mr '50 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:218 Je '50 220w

PREBBLE, JOHN. Age without pity. 250p $2.75 Holt

50-9599

An English journalist who had married a German war widow is the hero. He sends to Germany for his wife's thirteen-year-old son by her first marriage, hoping that they will have a happy life together. But the boy had learned hatred too well, and his coming ultimately meant the end of his mother's second marriage.

+ Kirkus 18:399 Jl 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart
Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 80w

"A hysterical book, reeling giddily between the general and the particular." Paul Bloomfield
— Manchester Guardian p4 Je 16 '50 120w

"Mr. Prebble's sincerity makes one believe in the dilemma as one of those painful problems to which there is no answer. It is not, however, quite on the plane of tragedy, which is where he tried to place it; and his hero's breakdown seems therefore neither quite inevitable nor quite convincing." Margaret Lane
+ — New Statesman & Nation 39:723 Je 24 '50 150w

"Mr. Prebble's thesis lacks the total validity it might have had; but he does, in the course of it, say a good many things worth saying, and his plea for the children of defeated countries is powerful and moving. . . The merits of 'Age Without Pity' are its revealing glimpses into the racial problems of post-war years and its generally shrewd appraisal of them. And it is timely also in offering a reminder that neither Care packages nor the execution of war criminals can tackle the main job that Hitler left us; for what if the innocent have been contaminated most?" James Hilton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 22 '50 800w

"Though it has all the elements of poignant drama, the novel falls short of its aim. This is not the fault of the plot nor of the style. Instead, the fault is that the characters are unsuited for the roles imposed upon them." Richard Plant
N Y Times p57 D 3 '50 410w

"Probably some readers will question the credibility of Gerry's villainy and dismiss as melodrama his nastiness and his misdeeds, which culminate in his wrecking his mother's marriage. I do not think anything that the little monster does unbelievable at all. But does Mr. Prebble really mean to say that German youth is rotten to the core and not to be saved from perdition? Or does he simply suggest that an Englishman had better not try to be anything but a true average Englishman minding an Englishman's business? I don't know. But since this is a short, swift-moving novel—there is also a very clever sub-plot—not likely to bore you in the least, why not form your opinion on that point?" Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 S 23 '50 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 30 '50 150w

PRESCOTT, HILDA FRANCES MARGARET. Friar Felix at large; a fifteenth-century pilgrimage to the Holy land. 254p il $3.75 Yale univ. press

915.69 Fabri, Felix. Pilgrims and pilgrimages 50-6843

Presents the story of two pilgrimages to the Holy Land, one made in 1480, the other in 1483. It is based on the Latin account of a Dominican brother, Friar Felix, who made the trips and commented on them in lively manner. Contemporary illustrations, bibliography, and index.

Reviewed by J. F. Sullivan
+ Am Hist R 56:92 O '50 550w
Booklist 46:333 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 171:397 Ag '50 260w
Christian Century 67:618 My 17 '50 340w

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard
Commonweal 52:132 My 12 '50 600w

"Definitely for the scholar and because of its special preoccupation of small interest to a general audience."
Kirkus 18:88 F 1 '50 180w

"Presented with taste, humor and illuminating comment . . . 'Friar Felix at Large,' illustrated from contemporary sources, is a delightful book." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 2 '50 850w

"The fifteenth-century pilgrimage to the Holy Land, which this book presents, has a freshness and liveliness and sense of wonder not likely to be approached by any chronicle of the multiplied and efficient pilgrimages arranged for this Holy Year of 1950. No one can read about Friar Felix and his fellow travelers without nostalgia for their kind of eagerness, simplicity and happiness." Philip Burnham
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 2 '50 600w
New Yorker 26:135 Ap 15 '50 140w

"[The author] is well acquainted with the literature of medieval and renaissance pilgrimages. [Her] affection for Friar Felix is therefore not at all irrational. The doughty monk had a way with him and his charm spills over into a winsome scholarly book." G. N. Shuster
+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 My 6 '50 800w
Time 55:96 Ap 10 '50 700w

PRESSMAN, ZEV, and LAMLE, PAUL. Handbook of better photography. 159p il $3; pa $1.98 Tudor

770 Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 50-131

"Tells the amateur photographer how to take and develop his pictures so as to raise them to professional level. It deals with such subjects as the choice of cameras and their accessories; tricks and special effects, developing, printing and enlarging. There are seven chapters on special types of photography such as portrait, sports, and advertising." Library J

"For a compact and informative 'quick' course in photografy this handy volume is hard to beat." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 22 '50 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '50

"Should be a useful addition to many library collections on photography. . . The text is supplemented by some excellent photographs, not all of which are as well reproduced as they might be." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:498 Mr 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 7 '50 140w

PRESTON, HALL, and BARR, CATHRINE. Smokey's big discovery. [32p] il $1.50 Oxford

50-6947

A picture book showing how Smokey the rabbit and his friends ate all the carrots on Farmer Brown's carrot farm.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p3 Mr 25 '50 90w

"A delightful picture book with pictures full of action and simple enough for the child's understanding." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 2 '50 170w

"Rascally bunny adventures with sprightly full page, two-color illustrations. . . The appeal of the text lies in the shared joke on Farmer Brown, although the type of humor depending upon stealing is a questionable device even for the kindergarten age."
Kirkus 18:174 Mr 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:626 Ap 15 '50 30w

"Recommended for large collections." C. B. Gilbert
Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 80w

PRICE, ARNOLD HEREWARD. Evolution of the Zollverein. 298p $3.50 Univ. of Mich.

337.91 Zollverein A49-10271

The author's aim is to present "a critical history of the origin and growth of ideas and institutions which led to Germany's economic unification between 1815 and 1833, prior to Bismarck's later political achievement. Contemporary ideas on economic unification are analyzed critically and presented, together with a detailed examination of the technical and administrative history. A special chapter deals with 'Popular Views on Economic Unification, 1820-33.' " (Am Pol Sci R)

Reviewed by L. D. Steefel
Am Hist R 55:981 Jl '50 300w

"Students of the history of German political ideas and institutions in the nineteenth century will welcome a work, The Evolution of the Zollverein. . . Dr. Price's study is carefully documented and indexed." J. B. Mason
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1300 D '49 300w

"The book is well organized and readable, while occasionally repetitious and over-loaded with excursions into side issues and foot notes. Beyond the group of professional historians, it will stimulate those contemporary politicians and economists who believe in customs unions as a tool, if not a prerequisite, of the reorganization and the stabilization of the world markets." F. K. Mann
+ — Ann Am Acad 267:212 Ja '50 650w

"The study is an excellent integration of the materials previously published on the subject, and is original in emphasizing the cross-currents of ideas and interests, the interaction of personalities and situations. Color is given to the story by the extensive use of contemporary German pamphlets."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:482 D '49 340w

PRINCE, WILLIAM MEADE. Southern part of heaven [autobiography] with il. by the author. 314p $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-5707

Reminiscences of the author's boyhood in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, fifty years ago.

Booklist 46:193; 218 F 15 '50; Mr 1 '50

" 'The Southern Part of Heaven' is like that thruout, a record set down with such an air of naivete that, in the telling, there seems nothing naive about it at all. An abundance of fascinating illustrations also by Mr. Prince, add immeasurably to the interest of the book." Henry Cavendish
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 5 '50 550w

Kirkus 17:687 D 15 '49 120w

"Will be read with pleasant nostalgia by those who grew up in that era or in that part of the country. A personal story, full of local color, but a little monotonous in mood." M. E. Monroe
Library J 75:316 F 15 '50 70w

"All this, you will readily perceive is totally inconsequential as regards the frets and fevers of today. It has no bearing on free private enterprise or the Russian Question. Hence all solemn fellows should eschew it. But all who are affected, or afflicted, with a gently ribald streak can spend a golden evening turning over these pages." G. W. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 26 '50 900w

"It is remembrance without rain—a long, clear day of recollection, made all the more charming by the author's illustrations. The way he tells it, William Meade Prince was a happy and successful boy." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p22 F 26 '50 500w

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY. Department of economics and social institutions. Industrial relations section. Transmitting information through management and union channels. See Baker, H., and others

PRINGSHEIM, PETER. Fluorescence and phosphorescence. 794p il $15 Interscience

535.3 Fluorescence. Phosphorescence 49-11814

"This book is a revision and enlargement of Pringsheim's 20-year old classic of the same title. . . [The treatise is] devoted entirely to the physics of photoluminescence, i.e., fluorescence or phosphorescence produced by the absorption of electromagnetic radiation. Other types of luminescence, such as cathodoluminescence or chemiluminescence, are not considered." Chem & Eng N

"This monograph will be welcomed especially by those research workers who have for a long time depended on Dr. Pringsheim's former books in the field of luminescence. The present volume brings this field up to date in a comprehensive and authoritative manner, and in addition it is unusually well written." A. B. F. Duncan
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:1869 Ap '50 330w

"The volume is an exhaustive and scholarly treatise." J. H. Schulman
+ Chem & Eng N 28:978 Mr 20 '50 300w

"An important contribution to the scientific understanding of various phenomena classed under the general term 'photoluminescence' is provided by this extensive discussion of the subject. . . A considerable departure from a smaller book produced a few years earlier by the same author, this volume provides the advanced student or investigator of this subject with a thorough experimental and theoretical background for continuation of research on the problems presented. In addition, a bibliography of nearly two thousand entries offers valuable aid in locating original sources of much of the information contained in the book."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:120 Mr '50 240w

PRINTERS' INK (periodical). Cutting sales costs, by editors and contributors [pub] in assn. with Printers ink pub. co, incorporated. (Printers ink business bookshelf publication) 474p il $5 Funk

658.8 Sales management. Marketing 49-11972

"Most useful for manufacturers, this book also has chapters of value to others engaged in selling, such as retailers, advertising men, and salesmen. Emphasis is placed on exploration of new marketing developments, market research, product, package and price analysis, sales planning, and controls. Case histories are given to illustrate techniques." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:185 F 1 '50

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 19 '50 30w

PROFFITT, JOSEPHINE MOORE (SYLVIA DEE, pseud). Dear guest and ghost. 259p $2.75 Macmillan

50-6705

A modern ghost story. Mrs Helmakobbler, lonely in her new home in Staten Island and not understanding her husband or children, subconsciously conjured up a ghost. Leiscester, killed by a paddle wheel in 1818, assuaged her loneliness, brought in Vincent Van Gogh to instruct her son in painting, cured a dinner guest of chronic alcoholism, promoted her daughter's romance with a school principal, and eased her husband off dirty jokes. When Mrs Helmakobbler decided that Leiscester was an hallucination caused by her poor state of health, he disappeared but reappeared again when the family moved out to another old house near Minneapolis.

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p5 Ap 3 '50 40w

"Mrs. Dee, a talented writer with a flair for readable dialog, handles the whimsy with a firm hand, so that it never gets out of control. The resultant volume is one of the most amusing we've seen in a long while and may, for all we know, send dozens of feminine readers scurrying off to Staten Island in quest of a Leiscester of their own." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 23 '50 400w

"Amusing enough treatment of a popular theme, but Mrs. Muir and her ghost had more quality."

Kirkus 18:75 F 1 '50 180w

"This gay tale reminds the reader of Mrs. Leslie's Ghost and Mrs Muir [Book Review Digest 1945] but the new story is not so convincing in spite of Leiscester's devotion." K. T. Willis

Library J 75:560 Ap 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by C. M. Read

Library J 75:1057 Je 15 '50 70w

"If you relax and take it on its own terms, the nonsense of 'Dear Guest and Ghost' is good fun—and soothing. If you are incapable of that mood, of course, it will come off in your hand like a Helmakobbler doorknob." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 9 '50 320w

"A gay book, with plenty of horse sense." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p31 Ap 23 '50 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 7 '50 700w

"Gay, amusing, deliciously jaunty." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 Je 24 '50 140w

PROSKAUER, JOSEPH MEYER. Segment of my times. 270p $3 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Jews—Political and social conditions. Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-7633

"A New York lawyer, judge, and philanthropist, born in 1877, writes of the problems and changes he has observed in politics, the courts and other public service." (Publishers' Weekly) Index.

Reviewed by F. A. Levy

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 27 '50 450w

Reviewed by Covington Hardee

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 17 '50 450w

"A Segment of My Times is not primarily a personal autobiography. . . Mr. Proskauer frequently seems to regard his book as a kind of personal Congressional Record. He reads into it his early poetry, excerpts from his speeches on law reform, press euolgies of his judicial decisions, and extensive extensions of remarks. If the reader is interested in the man and his creditable accomplishments, the book can be as informative, if sometimes as plodding, as the Congressional Record. But without franking privileges, it is hardly destined for wide circulation." C. H. Weiss

Commonweal 52:274 Je 23 '50 550w

Kirkus 18:256 Ap 15 '50 120w

"Judge Proskauer has a great story to tell. In many respects it is an inspiring study in Americanism. The critical reader may quarrel with some of Judge Proskauer's conclusions—he likes to delve in philosophic utterances that sometimes end up in cliches—but on the whole this is a sound and honest dissertation on liberalism." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p80 My 21 '50 1150w

"Here is a stirring narrative, most engagingly written, well worth reading by anyone interested in the past half-century of American life—even if the reader rejects the emphatic undervaluation of Franklin D. Roosevelt's intelligence, character, and domestic program." Jerome Frank

+ N Y Times p29 My 14 '50 490w

" 'A Segment of My Times' is a heart-warming account by a modest man who has played an important role in attaining human rights. . . The word, conservative, is today greatly abused, and the autobiography of Judge Proskauer gives a living definition of a conservative in the best sense of the term. Many will disagree with his views, especially as regards the 'welfare state,' but few will contend that he does not try to be fair and balanced and always concerned with human values rather than property values." Irving Babow

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 2 '50 650w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson

Sat R of Lit 33:16 Jl 29 '50 650w

"It is a well-written and thought-provoking book." G. W. Alger

+ Survey 86:333 Je '50 550w

PUFFER, RUTH RICE. Practical statistics in health and medical work; foreword by Hugo Muench. 238p $3.75 McGraw

610.72 Medical statistics 50-6683

"Textbook on public health statistics. . . Its emphasis is on the need for definition of objectives, for collection and analysis of data to answer specific questions, and on the role of the statistician as a member of a team of specialists working on a problem. It is not so much a book on statistical methods as on the application of these methods, based on the author's many years of experience as Director of Statistical Service in the Tennessee Department of Health." (Am J Pub Health) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"The book is particularly valuable for its discussion of prevalence and incidence of disease, and the comprehensive presentation of the methods used in 'longitudinal' studies, first designed by the late Dr. Frost to describe the development of disease in observed populations over a period of time. The chapters on the handling of various types of records and the presentation of data are also excellent." Elizabeth Parkhurst

+ Am J Pub Health 40:1017 Ag '50 280w

"Throughout her book, Miss Puffer stresses the principle that a sound quantitative analysis is possible only if the statistical elements of the problem are considered before the data forms are designed and the observations made. The attention given to this point, and the numerous revelations of the value of early statistical planning in public health and medical research and administration, alone would justify the study of this volume by every serious worker in these fields."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:368 S '50 280w

PUNSHON, ERNEST ROBERTSON. So many doors. 230p $2.50 Macmillan

50-5668

Detective story.

"Droll set of twilight characters meshed into tale of absorbing detective work." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 5 '50 60w

"A melodramatic story but written in the old school style of English detective fiction—literate, in good taste, and just a little slow."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 26 '50 140w

N Y Times p21 F 19 '50 100w

"Best British Brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:43 F 25 '50 40w

PURI, AMAR NATH. Soils, their physics and chemistry; with a foreword by Firman E. Bear. 550p $7 Reinhold

631.4 Soils Agr49-474

"Soil is no longer 'plain dirt,' but is recognized as a highly complex system which well merits the attention of both physicists and chemists. This treatise by an Indian soil physicist has been recognized as an important contribution by as eminent an authority as Dr. Firman E. Bear, who has written the Foreword. The author views soil as essentially an acidic chemical system. With this concept as a basis, he has correlated data obtained in his own research and that of others. There is considerable emphasis upon the effects of particle size distribution in soils. The book is of interest primarily to research workers in soils and fertilizers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

PURI, A. N.—Continued

"The book would mislead the beginning soils student and contributes little of value to the advanced student or research worker." L. T. Alexander

Chem & Eng N 28:1958 Je 5 '50 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:9 Ja '50

PURTSCHER, NORA (VON WYDENBRUCK). Rilke: man and poet; a biographical study. 373p il $4 Appleton

B or 92 Rilke, Rainer Maria 50-8340

This biography of Rilke is by a niece of the poet's friend and patron, Princess Marie Thurn und Taxis, to whom the Duino elegies were dedicated. The author herself was in regular correspondence with Rilke for many years, and after his death she translated some of his works. In this book she has attempted to "recreate a living picture of his surroundings and his companions." Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic 186:82 S '50 210w

Booklist 46:332 Jl 1 '50

"This is the most comprehensive book on the 50 years of Rilke's life. Depicting all the phases of his life with loving exactness, it adds new facts and dates heretofore unknown in Rilke studies, and it remains rather objective in spite of the fact that Rilke was a close friend of Nora Wydenbruck's family." F. K. Richter

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 23 '50 600w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 15 '50 1200w

"Nora Wydenbruck seems to me to have committed Avilov's error, of taking the single partial view for the whole, with much more serious results. A brief personal memoir may be as biased as possible without doing real harm, but Miss Wydenbruck is attempting to write a comprehensive biography—a task by definition incompatible with a narrow view of one's subject. . . One thing, however, Miss Wydenbruck does do for the poet—she translates him magnificently, if my puny German is any yardstick." Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 52:416 Ag 4 '50 650w

"This biography has a real place and it has been conceived with integrity and a pleasing scholarship; it is also the first clear study of Rilke's genius in English, though it is not the last word in delicate analysis or ultimate appreciation."

+ Kirkus 18:347 Je 15 '50 160w

"The author has fashioned a well rounded portrait of one of Austria's greatest modern poets. Students of Rilke will appreciate her scholarly method for she has documented her statements and quotations throughout. The layman will find this biography the best introduction to Rilke's poems and letters yet written. In itself the book is fascinating reading because it traces, with sympathetic understanding and keen insight, the trials and the development of a man of rare genius throughout his tragic life. Especially recommended for college libraries and others with an intellectual clientele." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 75:1184 Jl '50 110w

"The biography of the poet will long rank as the last word. . . This task has been performed with exemplary detachment and yet with profound insight." Felix Braun

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 9 '49 650w

+ Nation 171:192 Ag 26 '50 250w

"The most balanced and the most richly documented biography of the poet that has yet appeared." Michael Hamburger

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:558 N 12 '49 900w

"Until someone writes a book about Rainer Maria Rilke that excels critically as well as biographically, this one will serve as a valuable presentation of the man and an introduction to the poet." Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 9 '50 1200w

"A relative of Rilke's patron, Princess Marie Thurn und Taxis, Miss Wydenbruck has been familiar since childhood with Rilke's life and character. She is able to give us a reliable picture of the man and, with her sensitivity to his work, a sound description of his poetic world. Her aristocratic tact keeps her from admiring to excess; her vivid and imaginative style makes the book fascinating reading." Rene Fueloep-Miller

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 2 '50 1200w

New Yorker 26:123 S 23 '50 100w

"Of literary criticism, in any strict sense of the word, there is little; but the author's subtitle is 'A Biographical Study,' not 'A Critical Study,' and, as far as I can judge, she has been highly successful in her effort to analyze Rilke's character, trace the course of his troubled career, and explain—as far as such explanation is possible—how he came to write the kind of poetry he wrote. . . Apart from the overestimation of Rodin's influence on Rilke, there is little with which to quarrel in this biography." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:9 Jl 8 '50 1250w

"The life of so exceptional a being must necessarily be an abnormal one, and the life of Rilke is rich in mysteries. We are lucky indeed to have that life written in English by someone so well equipped to be Rilke's biographer as Countess Wydenbruck, and her book is all the more welcome because it is free of the literary and emotional extravagances into which Rilke has seduced so many of his devotees. Countess Wydenbruck writes with knowledge but also with modesty and restraint, and for that reason the figure of her hero shines all the more clearly, and movingly, from her pages." Goronwy Rees

+ Spec 183:746 N 25 '49 850w

Time 56:80 Jl 3 '50 800w

"Attempting to steer a middle course between hysterical hagiographers on the one hand and apparently brutal biographers on the other, Countess Wydenbruck in her study of Rilke as a man and a poet has somehow missed the significance of a personality which grows in stature and in marked idiosyncrasy as it recedes farther into the past. Her rather desultory biography is addressed to English readers who cannot read German; and it is undoubtedly informative. . . The gravest criticism of the book as a whole is its failure to arouse real interest. But when the luckless 'Benvenuta' enters the scene the prevailing high-minded colourlessness is dispelled by something more entertaining."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p826 D 16 '49 1800w

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Up in our country; il. by Joe Donat. 224p $3 Duell

818 Country life 50-13341

An account of the author's life in his retirement retreat in the mountains northeast of Los Angeles, overlooking Death Valley. He describes the delights of living far away from neighbors; the birds and animals who came to visit the feeding stations; the flowers; and, among other kindred subjects, the idiosyncracies of Petunia, the Ford car.

"What 'Up In Our Country' notably lacks is a sense of wholeness, that singleness of conception that even so casual a book needs in order to sustain the reader's interest. This book has obviously been put together out of many parts left by the author, but it would have required only a little more editing to avoid the graceless repetition of the information that Mr. Putnam's indoor water supply in winter was obtained from melted snow." Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 13 '50 500w

Kirkus 18:323 Je 1 '50 190w

"A real out-of-doors book that every lover of the great open spaces will enjoy." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 23 '50 550w

" 'G. P.' didn't fancy himself as a Literary Man with capital letters. He had been in the publishing business too long to have any fancy notions such as that. . . Mr. Putnam knew perfectly well what his own modest talent was. Nevertheless he knew also that he was quite able to write this kind of book, and he did it without pretension, in the way he could do it. I think many a reader who comes to it without expecting anything but what I've suggested is in it will find in it just the pleasant unassuming qualities I did." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 24 '50 700w

"No matter how pertinent, whimsical, and amusing, everything curiously seems viewed through a thin, rationally transparent film that yet blocks the sense of poetically triumphant or dramatically tragic immediacy. Only in the stories of loner Jim and his wheelbarrow and Indian Deefy, who died without ever attaining a wristwatch, do we break through to the quick of life." Frank Waters
Sat R of Lit 33:21 Ag 5 '50 650w

PUYVELDE, LEO VAN. Battle of the Amazons. See Rubens, P. P.

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Double, double; a new novel of Wrightsville. 215p $2.50 Little 50-8227

Detective story.

Booklist 46:353 Jl 15 '50

"This is remorselessly wordy, but a neat coil of plotting."
+ — Chicago Sun p5 Jl 4 '50 40w
Kirkus 18:219 Ap 1 '50 80w

"A rather implausible addition to the Ellery Queen saga."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 2 '50 180w
N Y Times p21 Jl 9 '50 150w

"The author has provided quite a lot of unusual characters . . . but the plot is rather too intricate and preposterous to please a really exacting taste."
— + New Yorker 26:111 Je 10 '50 120w

" 'Double, Double' is lovely, simply lovely stuff." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 18 '50 200w

"Chilling nursery-rhyme murders, with charming Hudsonish heroine, profusion of dexterously handled clues, incessant action, and practically unguessable puzzle. Royal fare."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:39 Jl 22 '50 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 22 '50 200w
Wis Lib Bul 46:24 S '50

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. White elephant mystery; with a front. by Barbara Corrigan. 211p $2.50 Little 50-5872

A circus mystery story for readers of 9 to 12.

"Kids will love this one. And what they won't learn about the workings of a circus! Reading this is about as much fun as going to one." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 26 '50 200w

"Though this is routine radio-serial stuff, the series fans and youngsters with aspirations of glory, should go for this mystery, better plotted and developed than the average juvenile fare."
Kirkus 18:23 Ja 15 '50 100w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 75:706 Ap 15 '50 60w

"A grand entertainment, convincing within its framework, glittering as to background." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p24 F 26 '50 180w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERICK DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards: fifth series; the winners of the fifth annual detective short-story contest, sponsored by Ellery Queen's mystery magazine. 242p $2.50 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

The fifth annual anthology of detective stories selected from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine. Contents: The gentleman from Paris, by J. D. Carr; The lady-killer, by W. D. Steele; The trial of John Nobody, by A. H. Z. Carr; Once upon a train, by Craig Rice and Stuart Palmer; The orderly world of Mr. Appleby, by Stanley Ellin; One morning they'll hang him, by Margery Allingham; A boy's will, by Q. Patrick; Love lies bleeding, by Philip MacDonald; The case of Karen Smith, by V. B. Shore; The homesick Buick, by J. D. MacDonald; The lady and the dragon, by Peter Godfrey; The mystery of the personal ad, by T. S. Stribling; The rustling tree, by J. C. Smith.

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50
Kirkus 18:537 S 1 '50 90w

"Like its predecessors, it is one of the best mystery anthologies of the year."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 N 26 '50 180w

"All fresh and unhackneyed, all delightful in themselves and especially delightful as departures from formula." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p39 N 26 '50 170w

"Make your own choice, but don't skip any of them." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 5 '50 90w

"Laudable institution."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:47 O 21 '50 40w

QUILL, LAURENCE LARKIN, ed. Chemistry and metallurgy of miscellaneous materials: thermodynamics. 329p $3 McGraw

541.36 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Metallurgy. Thermodynamics 50-5427

"Ten papers containing much new information of special interest to chemists concerned with reactions at high temperatures and with materials (refractories) for containing substances at high temperatures. Extensive tables of values of thermodynamic properties are given, including heat of formation, free energy function, entropy, heat content, free energy of formation, heat of fusion, heat of vaporization, vapor pressure, together with all references as appropriate." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The book will be valuable as an up-to-date reference work for thermodynamic data, and as a guide to the literature." J. N. Addoms
+ Chem & Eng N 28:2203 Je 26 '50 270w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:237 Je '50 210w

QUIMBY, CHESTER WARREN. The great redemption; a living commentary on Paul's Epistle to the Romans. 213p $2.50 Macmillan

227.1 Bible. N. T.—Romans 50-5451

"The subtitle shows that this book is 'a living commentary on Paul's Epistle to the Romans.' By a 'living commentary' is meant not the learned, historical, philological elucidation of the author's thought but a practical attempt to set forth clearly for the 'common reader' the original writer's main ideas with present-day illustrations and even with 'homiletical exhortations.' This volume is the product of popular lectures and sets forth the message of Romans as alive and applicable to modern man." Crozer Q

QUIMBY, C. W.—Continued

"Here is a man who writes with dynamic enthusiasm and contagious conviction. . . Preachers will rejoice in this storehouse of suggestions and lay people will find Paul anew." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 164:16 Je 1 '50 130w

"Written with unusual clarity and in vivacious style with telling use of repetition, personal anecdotes, italicized main points and competent summaries, this book makes Paul and the dominant ideas of his Roman letter as contemporary as last Sunday's sermon. Long hard study of Paul is reflected in pacing prose which fits the pulpit. . . The author's enthusiasm leads him into absolute statements which often need qualification though it is well known that more accurate formulation may reduce the drive of an idea." D. M. Beck
+ — Crozer Q 27:270 Jl '50 850w

Kirkus 17:650 D 1 '49 100w

R

RABINOFF, CARTER V., and WOLBRECHT, MAGDALENA E. Questions and answers in television engineering. 300p $4.50 McGraw 621.388 Television—Examinations, questions, etc. 50-7426

"Many practical students are now attempting self-instruction in television, and this book should be a boon to a considerable number of them. All of the questions are short. So are the majority of answers; but in a few cases the reply runs to a half page or more and is, in effect, an essay on a small topic." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

"The most obvious audience for the book are persons who are preparing for FCC examinations, but it should be useful to anyone with a serious interest in the technical aspects of television who needs a home-study book." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 130w

"Probably the book will be most useful to persons who have read a home-study text or completed an introductory course and now need a review and reference book."
N Y New Tech Bks 35:47 My '50

RACKOWE, ALEC. My Lord America. 437p $3 Farrar, Straus
50-9273

Romantic novel of England and Virginia in the 1660's. Charles Marsden, the young ward of Mr. Strange, a Virginia plantation owner, wanted to know his antecedents, but Mr. Strange died leaving the question unanswered. When Charles was eighteen the news came that he was the lost Earl of April and he returned to England to claim his heritage. After a year at the court of Charles II young Marsden discovered he was no earl, and gladly returned to Virginia and the girl he loved.

Booklist 47:14 S 1 '50

"A tale that is as craftily contrived as it is colorful. The contrived nature of the plotting is, indeed, the sole objection one may find to the book. But that, after all, is a small thing so skillfully is it done." Henry Cavendish
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 3 '50 600w

"The descriptive writing is good, the handling of the scenes gives movement and drama, the story value is considerable; plot structure, however, is somewhat unregardful of credibility, and the psychology is made to order."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 16 '50 250w

Kirkus 18:341 Je 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p22 Ag 27 '50 400w

"Although the plot of this seventeenth-century romance has been too often abused, Mr. Rackowe does admirably well with it. His characters and settings are colorfully realistic and his writing is fresh enough to lend authenticity to every scene. What is really unique about 'My Lord America' is its restraint and good taste, two qualities generally absent from the pages of historical novels. Indeed, there is wenching and a good bit of droll dialogue, but it is handled with gentlemanly delicacy." J. M. Grant
+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 S 2 '50 180w

RADDALL, THOMAS HEAD. Nymph and the lamp. 376p $3 Little 50-10175

The scene is a tiny island off the Nova Scotian coast, where a telegraph relay station is operated by Matthew Carney. "Carney of Marina" he is called because he has lasted many years at a job which usually bored younger men in a few weeks. The story is of Carney's first vacation on the mainland in years; of his marriage; and of the difficulties of his wife to adjust to life on the barren island.

Booklist 47:69; 97 O 15 '50; N 1 '50

"If Mr. Raddall had let his men and their island of Marino dominate the action as they do the background, he might well have produced a notable book. Unfortunately, the central character is a young woman from the mainland who might be charitably described as impetuous, but who is more likely to be considered by some readers as simply incomprehensible—and possibly even reprehensible. The author labors strenuously but in vain to build a credible narrative around her love affairs."
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 25 '50 300w

Reviewed by Joan Rice
Commonweal 53:213 D 1 '50 330w

"While the basic pattern is a not unfamiliar one, Raddall has given it new twists, and told his story against a primitive and weirdly fascinating setting."
+ Kirkus 18:487 Ag 15 '50 190w

"A good, entertaining story." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 130w

"A very fresh and acceptable love story in a 'different' setting. And it is that different setting which really turns the trick. For Mr. Raddall writes of the sea and the seasons, of birds of passage and a thousand other natural manifestations with a knowledge that few men possess." Florence Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 19 '50 380w

"Here is a novel of truth and feeling which leaves the abiding impression that the writer is both an artist and a craftsman." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p24 D 10 '50 230w

New Yorker 26:185 N 18 '50 70w

"Thomas Raddall has a real feeling for nature. His descriptions of sea, sky and land in the four seasons are truly magnificent, so lyrical that they become practically genuine poetry. Unfortunately, he does not have the same power in giving life to his characters as to an island, to a brook." A. B. S.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 26 '50 350w

"It is a solidly constructed novel, a tale with thews and sinews, a story that moves and sometimes races at high speed, and is packed with rich color, vivid minor characters, and dry humor. Lord Tweedsmuir found Mr. Raddall's fiction to his taste because he favored 'something of a plot which issues in a dramatic climax.' If we have a comment to make about such a full-bodied novel, it is that 'The Nymph and the Lamp' not only has a dramatic climax but a somewhat melodramatic anticlimax." William McFee
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:15 N 11 '50 600w

RADDALL, THOMAS HEAD. Son of the Hawk; il. by Stanley Turner. 247p $2.50 Winston

50-6022

Novel for older boys about Nova Scotia during the American Revolution. Nova Scotia, settled by New Englanders, and called the "fourteenth American colony," was the one which did not win independence from England. This story is of David Strang, a son of Matt Strang, called the Hawk, for his deeds during the French and Indian wars. David did his bit for "the cause."

Booklist 46:337 Jl 1 '50

Kirkus 18:65 F 1 '50 180w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:641 Ap 15 '50 100w

"Highly recommended." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 80w

"It is long, well written, and it describes a page of history which will be surprising to most Americans. . . There is continuous excitement and fast action. . . It is a worthy and interesting illumination of Canadian history, in a good adventure tale." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 23 '50 270w

"Clearly and sympathetically told, though the Tory side is also fairly presented." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 16 '50 160w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 16 '50 70w

Wis Lib Bul 46:28 S '50

RADHAKRISHNAN, SIR SARVEPALLI, ed. Mahatma Gandhi; essays and reflections on his life and work; presented to him on his seventieth birthday, Oct. 2d, 1939; together with a new memorial section. 2d enl ed 557p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand [49-10852]

"Professor Radhakrishnan has reissued his 1939 book of birthday tributes to Gandhi with a memorial section that brings it up to date. The essays represent a remarkable divergence of opinion, from those who call him Mahatmaji, Gandhiji, or Bapu and see him on a plane with Buddha, Jesus, and St. Francis to those who call him Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi and see him as a rather dubious politician whose social ideas were antiquated and whose fasts were coercive." (New Yorker) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 46:100 N 15 '49

"The editor, Professor S. Radhakrishnan, shows his skillful hand and his wide acquaintance with men of many lands in the names of those who have written. . . A valuable contribution is made by the editor in the appendices, for the Mahatma is not well understood in this country." G. W. Briggs
+ Churchman 164:18 Mr 15 '50 310w

"Two essays, 'The Evolution of Mr. Gandhi,' by Arthur Moore, and 'Gandhi: A Character Study,' by Edward Thompson, are especially informative studies and criticisms of Gandhi's doctrines and methods, but the Mahatma's character was so complex that almost every one of the hundred-odd contributors manages to illuminate a different aspect of it."
+ New Yorker 25:125 O 22 '49 170w

RADIN, EDWARD D. 12 against crime. 242p $3 Putnam

364 Criminal investigation 50-8397

"A companion volume to the author's Twelve Against the Law [Book Review Digest 1946], this book is an account, containing many new facts, of such 'unpublicized heroes of crime detection' as the medical examiners of the New York City police force; Dr. Alexander Gettler, its chief toxicologist and head of the chemical laboratory; George Lamb, head of the Abandonment Bureau of Queens County, N.Y.; Dr. Paul de River, a Los Angeles psychiatrist working with the local homicide squad; Arthur Koehler, the wood technologist who convicted the Lindbergh kidnapper (this chapter includes hitherto unpublished material); and other men whose painstaking, often uncanny researches have brought many dangerous criminals to justice." Library J

Booklist 46:347 Jl 15 '50

"Radin's matter is immensely interesting and probably will keep you reading through the mechanical excitements and tastelessness of his manner."
+ — Chicago Sun p5 Jl 4 '50 70w

Reviewed by John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 6 '50 260w

Kirkus 18:253 Ap 15 '50 110w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 130w

"Mr. Radin makes no pretensions to anything but straight journalism, but his material is splendid background for anybody who has read a mystery story or followed a crime in the newspaper."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 24 '50 290w

"What is merely interesting could have held for the reader a fine fascination. Instead, he must content himself with not much more than fragments—and those not set out to the best possible advantage." Gilbert Millstein
— N Y Times p18 Jl 9 '50 290w

"The book suffers from drastic compression, as well as from its author's dogged and journalistic prose, but it is still a useful addition to any conscientious library of crime."
+ — New Yorker 26:76 Jl 8 '50 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 23 '50 200w

"Each specialist's competence is demonstrated by numerous examples, and the narratives make good and exciting reading. There are some pleasant little sidelights, such as the fact that Dr. Gettler, who has solved scores of murders with a test tube, has never visited the scene of a crime. The book is an agreeable antidote to tricky, fictional mysteries. Truth is trickier."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 O 7 '50 200w

RADKEY, OLIVER HENRY. Election to the Russian constituent assembly of 1917. 89p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

324.47 Elections—Russia. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917 50-8553

"Mr. Radkey attempts to ascertain the validity of the election of 1917 to the Russian Constituent Assembly. This complex problem . . . he approaches through the official records and reports from the metropolitan and local newspapers of the time. He has succeeded in supplementing and in making important corrections to the two principal earlier studies, one pro-Bolshevist, the other anti-Bolshevist." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Manchester Guardian p2 S 26 '50 600w

"An impartial analysis. . . Of special interest to students of Russian and European history and to political scientists."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:345 S '50 290w

RAFTERY, GERALD. Gray Lance. 223p $2 Morrow

50-6575

An American boy, Don Murray, camping in the Canadian woods, frees a young wolf from a trap. Don thought he was a lost police dog, and slowly and patiently tried to train the wolf in the ways of civilization. The next summer when Don and his family returned to their cabin Gray Lance was near by.

Kirkus 18:24 Ja 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:638 Ap 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith
Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 60w

RAFTERY, GERALD—Continued

"The author, new to books for young people, is a teacher and school librarian whose hobbies, tramping and camping, have given him the knowledge of the wild so well used in this story. He knows what boys like. . . The style is clear and vigorous; boys will like Lance and Bob." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 21 '50 190w

"The story is well written and entertaining, but the more thoughtful young readers will question its plausibility." M. P. Allen

+ — N Y Times p22 Jl 9 '50 130w

"There are zest and freshness in this story of a young gray wolf of the Canadian woods. . . This is a convincing story, told against a background of the Canadian woods in early spring and in summer."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:47 Ap 8 '50 160w

RAGSDALE, CLYDE BYRON. Big fist. 245p $2.75 Putnam

50-8239

A novel based on the life of a character the author once knew. Hosy Wittle was a bootlegger and gambler, constantly in trouble. The only good thing in his life was his love for his pious wife, but his jealousy of her incited him to murder. This story of his violent deeds and atonement is told from the viewpoint of his son, Sid.

"Wherein the author has failed is that he incites no sympathy or compassion for this evil being. . . Finally—and this is the most serious defect of a novel that shows real power of writing—the author concludes his story by showing Hosy Wittle, after some years as a fugitive from justice, in possession of a cotton farm in California. This successful and lawful enterprise, we are given to understand, is in a way a memorial to Hosy's wife, who never got the farm in the Red River valley that she wanted. And how did Hosy get such a place? O, with three big aces in a poker game." Kelsey Guilfoil

— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 18 '50 450w

"This is that rare thing: an interesting story, about people you can care about, competently told. As such, recommended for adult collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 75:1183 Jl '50 80w

"A disjointed novel which occasionally flares up into moments of dramatic power." J. J. Maloney

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 25 '50 650w

Reviewed by James Kelly

N Y Times p20 Jl 9 '50 190w

"'The Big Fist' is an exciting and earthy story and its author pulls no punches in telling it. You may not like Hosy Wittle but you'll watch every smashing blow of those big fists whether you want to or not." J. W. Grant

+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 Jl 15 '50 270w

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Ranger's luck. 281p $2.50 Houghton

50-43

Western story.

"Fast moving, exciting, well plotted tale of Arizona when it was still a territory." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Mr 5 '50 160w

Wis Lib Bul 46:21 Ja '50

RAISTRICK, ARTHUR. Quakers in science and industry. 364p il $6 Philosophical lib.

289.6 Friends, Society of

"Being an account of Quaker contributions to science and industry in the 17th and 18th centuries." (Subtitle) Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 22 '50 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 3 '50 100w

"Dr. Raistrick has an enormous knowledge, and his summaries are impressive. It is in the family relationships, given in great detail, that a reader grows weary—especially as individual Friends might have up to 15 children and marry three times. There is also occasionally a superfluity of technical detail which will hinder the plodding reader. Certainly, however, the characters portrayed are remarkably attractive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 23 '50 650w

RAMA RAU, SANTHA. East of home. 303p $3 Harper

915 Asia—Description and travel 50-10649

A further chapter in the autobiography of the author of Home to India (Book Review Digest 1945). This book begins in 1947 when the author went to Japan as hostess for her father, then ambassador to Tokio. The following year she and a friend journeyed thru parts of China, Indo-China, Siam, Indonesia, and spent several months in Bali. The record of her experiences is set forth in the book.

Booklist 47:134 D 1 '50

Reviewed by P. M. Buck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 26 '50 550w

Reviewed by Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p7 N 11 '50 1500w

"Those who remember with warm affection a little book called Home to India [Book Review Digest 1945] will welcome this charming, rather rambling account of her slowly awakening realization that she is not only an Indian but an Asiatic."

+ Kirkus 18:581 S 15 '50 210w

"There is no philosophizing and very little factual information. For the most part the author sets down her impressions and her conversations and leaves the reader free to draw his own conclusions. The result is a kind of superior journalism of especial relevance today because the author is an Indian, educated in England and America."

+ Nation 171:662 D 16 '50 40w

"'East of Home' is a witty book. Like 'Home to India,' it is easy to read for young and old. Now and then it chatters, and now and then it will diverge into serious discussion of the theater and dances of the Orient, too much for some readers and not nearly enough for others who are specialists. . . What makes 'East of Home' so singular and so pleasing is the youth of it, its serious view of life as something precious to be adorned with friendship and sociability and the study and practice of art." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 5 '50 1250w

"Miss Rama Rau writes with a thoroughly easy informality, directing most of her humor at herself and her general ignorance of Asia. She seldom pauses to lecture, but lets the people she writes of reveal themselves in conversation and in action." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Times p39 N 5 '50 600w

"A first-rate and deceptively informal account of a recent journey through Asia made by a young Hindu woman whose education in England and America resulted in, among other things, her learning to write at least five times as well as the majority of her Occidental contemporaries."

+ New Yorker 26:165 N 11 '50 220w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 10 '50 800w

"This book is delightful reading because it relates a fascinating adventure story. It also enables one to see Asia as a whole, showing that Asians share a similar outlook in many respects. But its main value lies in the fact that an Asian writes about Asia." Nayantara Sahgal

+ Sat R of Lit 33:12 D 23 '50 750w

RAMSDELL, EDWARD THOMAS. Christian perspective. 218p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury
230 Christianity 50-6922

"Author is professor of theology at Vanderbilt University. His purpose is to integrate the divergent doctrines of the Christian faith and to reveal what is central and significant therein as related to the whole area of human contemporary life." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 46:270 My 1 '50

"His thinking is clear, his writing is transparent and, while the professional theologian will find plenty to ponder on, readers less technically trained can find their way around without too much trouble."
+ Christian Century 67:707 Je 7 '50 460w

"This account is always sincere and sometimes incisive considered as a whole, but it strikes the present reviewer as uneven. The first chapters are closely packed reasoning about the nature of God in philosophy and theology, and are definitely worth the trouble as a review of recent thinking in these fields. The latter chapters tend to become more specifically theological and a little 'preachy' in their exegesis." J. F. Davidson
+ — Churchman 164:17 Jl '50 210w

"This is an able, stimulating, and challenging volume, marked by broad scholarship, originality, and a compact and finished style." A. C. Knudson
+ Crozer Q 27:251 Jl '50 1050w

Reviewed by E. L. Allen
Hibbert J 48:400 Jl '50 30w

"The author's approach is sensitive, assured, and inspirational. The book will interest many readers." G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 75:696 Ap 15 '50 160w

RAND, MCNALLY AND COMPANY. Cosmopolitan world atlas. 335p $12.50 Rand McNally
912 Atlases Map49-836

In this new edition of a well-known atlas "the distinctive feature is the mapping of the world on a broad regional basis rather than country by country. Each regional map is centered around a main country or a significant grouping of countries. . . One of the desirable by-products of this arrangement is for once a full map of the USSR. . . Especially helpful for reference are the information tables on world politics, economics, climate, distances, and on U.S. geography, states, cities, history, and transportation. Two glossaries of geographical terms and a historical gazetteer are other features. But the real reference aid is the 170-page index, which includes in one alphabet the name of all administrative divisions of all major countries." (Sat R of Lit)

"A first-rate reference work for the layman. It's the sort of thing parents will want to have around the house for school-age children." A. Andras
+ Canadian Forum 30:22 Ap '50 420w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun O 30 '49 300w

"While an atlas may not be quite the indispensable guide to wisdom the publishers would have us think it is, this one certainly covers the globe in as attractive and informative a way as a normally inquisitive citizen of the world would want."
+ Commonweal 51:78 O 28 '49 200w

Geog R 40:678 O '50 600w

"This is the easiest large atlas to use that I have discovered, primarily because the index is a comprehensive index, not broken down into countries, states, etc. Next the order makes sense, with foreign maps first, then America. . . A superb job!"
+ Kirkus 17:574 O 1 '49 130w

"Outstanding world atlas which includes a vast amount of timely material in addition to a series of excellent maps. . . Good color and clear print make individual maps valuable though they are undated. Highly recommended for all libraries and for home use." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 74:1676 N 1 '49 220w

"The maps are all newly drawn to show the great changes that have made the old maps obsolete. They also represent a great advance in American map-making—both in coloring and 'legibility.' An all-in-one index, including all names on all maps, goes far to make the atlas a real work of reference. The only complaint that might be brought against this new atlas is that it is still too much under the influence of the old 'commercial' type. That is to say, you can find here an excellent map of the state of Iowa but the map of the North American continent leaves much to be desired in the way of physical geography." L. V. Updegraff
+ — N Y Times p30 O 23 '49 190w

"A distinguished achievement in reference books."
+ New Yorker 25:115 O 29 '49 200w

"Every home needs an up-to-date atlas and the Rand McNally 'Cosmopolitan' seems especially designed to fit that need." Louis Shores
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 Ja 21 '50 360w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:130 Mr '50 260w

"Easiest large atlas to use, index comprehensive, colors clear and bright, extensive section of supplementary material. A superb job!"
+ Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

RANDALL, HARRISON MCALLISTER, and others. Infrared determination of organic structures. 239p il $10 Van Nostrand
535.84 Spectrum, Infra-red. Spectrum analysis 49-48300

"Essentially, this book is an atlas of typical infrared absorption spectra, more than half of it being taken up with reproductions of over 350 spectrometric records, with wavelength identifications of characteristic features. Structural assignment catalogs listing the characteristic absorption bands of atomic groups in the order of wavelengths are the next most noteworthy feature. The actual text is limited to a brief introduction, a concise description of the instruments and methods used, and a quite detailed discussion of the interpretation of experimental data, leading to the identification of compounds, illustrated by several examples." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"The authors have attempted, not without success, to paint in bold outline the procedure which should be used in applying infrared data to structural problems and have illustrated their explication by the case method. The section can be valuable and instructive; it will serve as an introduction to the field for some, and will convert others. But we must remember, that in applying this very valuable tool, we enter the realm of the intellect, and once the simple fundamentals have been mastered, each investigator will find his own approach, and will have the opportunity to illumine the field and his own problems in uncounted different ways." R. B. Woodward
+ — Am Chem Soc J 72:3327 Jl '50 600w

"A clear and concise exposition. . . Because of limited scope this book will serve not as a textbook but as a valuable reference, first for students and others who wish to obtain a working knowledge of the methods and, second, for research chemists and physicists who wish to apply the methods to organic compounds, particularly in the field of biochemistry." D. C. Smith
+ Chem & Eng N 27:3890 D 26 '49 230w

"The book will no doubt be used widely as a compilation of authoritative reference data. Its limited scope in number and classes of compounds reported, which is readily admitted by the authors, leaves room for many more similar projects. Publication of photographic records by the swinging galvanometer method leaves no question as to the faithful reproduction of data, but some usefulness may be lost by focusing attention on a method of recording now seldom used."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:120 Mr '50 280w

RANKAMA, KALERVO, and SAHAMA, THURE GEORG. Geochemistry. 911p $15 Univ. of Chicago press

551 Geochemistry 50-7561

"The authors of this book are international leaders in the field of geochemistry. . . Drs. Rankama and Sahama, although they present much data, write primarily on the interpretation of facts of geochemistry, and point out many problems to be solved. They are both adherents of the 'Goldschmidt School,' and the present work shows this influence. The book is divided into two parts. Part I treats the general laws and regularities which determine the abundance and manner of occurrence of each element. . . Part II treats the individual geochemical features of each of the chemical elements under the following topics: presence in igneous rocks, cycle in the geochemical sphere, biogeochemistry of the element." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is undoubtedly the most important contribution to the subject printed in English since the publication of 'The Data of Geochemistry,' by F. W. Clark about twenty-five years ago. The book is written not only for the geologist but also for the chemist possessing a knowledge of the geological sciences. While the authors assert that the treatise is not a textbook, the volume does possess many characteristics of a good text." T. G. Thompson

+ Am Chem Soc J 72:5354 N '50 150w

"This book is recommended for all students of chemistry, particularly those who are interested in the principles of inorganic reactivity and the occurrence of elements in nature." J. B. Bailar

+ Chem & Eng N 28:3258 S 18 '50 600w

"The book is addressed to geologists with a general background in chemistry and to chemists familiar with the geological sciences; for these it will be an indispensable guide. It will also appeal to many astrophysicists, geophysicists, biochemists, and soil scientists."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:384 S '50 260w

RAPOPORT, ANATOL. Science and the goals of man; a study in semantic orientation; foreword by S. I. Hayakawa. 262p $3.50 Harper

501 Science—Philosophy. Semantics 50-6530

"Dr. Rapoport is much concerned with the role and social responsibilities of scientists in world affairs. His basic theme is that scientists, as a result of their training, are well equipped to aid in the solution of global problems. He points out that many controversies and disagreements between peoples arise from the fact that individuals, because of differences in training and environment, react differently to various words and symbols." (Library J) Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 46:327 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by R. L. Meier

Chem & Eng N 28:1956 Je 5 '50 400w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 12 '50 160w

"A highly readable, frequently absorbing book."

+ Kirkus 18:82 F 1 '50 160w

"The book has much to offer those readers with a philosophical turn of mind." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 75:317 F 15 '50 110w

Reviewed by P. P. Wiener

N Y Times p18 Mr 19 '50 330w

"Dr. Rapoport writes with eloquence, wit, and a majestic faith in human sanity."

+ New Yorker 26:141 O 21 '50 130w

Reviewed by Philipp Frank

Sat R of Lit 33:26 Ap 8 '50 800w

School & Society 71:125 F 25 '50 40w

"One of the best written so far, this book is a new effort to set forth the tenets of the semanticists."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:295 S '50 240w

Wis Lib Bul 46:17 My '50

RASEY, MARIE I. This is teaching; foreword by Andras Angyal. 217p il $3 Harper

371.3 Teaching 50-14284

This book takes the form of verbatim reporting of fifteen sessions of a seminar devoted to the purposes and methods of teaching. Index.

"Behind the light-heartedness and ease of style, the dialogues convey some of the soundest lessons in education. Recommended for college libraries of all types; recommended, too, for the sophisticated public library patron who thrives on such writers as Overstreet and Fosdick." Nathaniel Stewart

+ Library J 75:1410 S 1 '50 150w

" 'This Is Teaching' should be read not only by teachers and students planning to be teachers but by all who wonder what progressive education is really like, and how education in a democracy can work effectively without going to either extreme of authoritarianism or of a laissez faire approach." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 15 '50 220w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 72:217 S 30 '50 310w

RATTER, MAGNUS C. Albert Schweitzer: life and message. 214p $2.75 Beacon press

B or 92 Schweitzer, Albert 50-5266

A new and enlarged edition of a book first published in England in 1935. In several parts or sections the author summarizes the events of Dr Schweitzer's life, and analyses and interprets his works—in music, medicine, religion and philosophy.

"Mr. Ratter's book is pleasant enough so far as such things go; but there is nothing here that cannot be had from a dozen other sources." T. V. Enslin

Crozer Q 27:186 Ap '50 200w

"The republication of Mr Ratter's study of Schweitzer is as timely as it is welcome; the more so, since it is a completely rewritten and enlarged version of his former book which, published in 1935, attracted too little attention either [in England] or in America. Perhaps some literary mannerisms were a deterrent: clipped sentences, a staccato brevity, a tendency to epigram; but a tight idiom, if it sometimes teases, has the advantage of economy, and not seldom in the book before us it attains a frosty brilliance." George Seaver

+ Hibbert J 48:193 Ja '50 1250w

"It should appeal to all who are interested in a life so splendidly and thrillingly devoted to service. Protestant ministers and teachers will find in this book an abundance of illustrative material as well as inspiration for their work."

+ Kirkus 18:52 F 1 '50 190w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p33 Mr 12 '50 140w

"Ratter would be the last to desire his biography designated as 'the adequate biography.' Nevertheless, it is one of the very best of the briefer considerations of Schweitzer. Here is a man who understands the forces that control Schweitzer, the loyalty that compels him, the Christ who consumes him." G. B. Oxnam

+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 F 18 '50 850w

RAU, SANTHA RAMA. See Rama Rau, S.

RAUCH, BASIL. Roosevelt from Munich to Pearl harbor; a study in the creation of a foreign policy. 527p $4.50 Creative age

973.917 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Foreign policy 50-6815

"A history of the collective-security policy of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal that seeks to vindicate the late President's conduct of foreign affairs and confound his isolationist and Leftist critics." (New Yorker) Index.

"It is the most balanced and reliable general survey of the period covered that exists at the present time." Ruhl Bartlett

+ Am Pol Sci R 44:793 S '50 380w

Booklist 46:272 My 1 '50

Reviewed by R. E. Kennedy
Chicago Sun p5 Ap 25 '50 700w

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 16 '50 1300w

"'Roosevelt From Munich to Pearl Harbor' is both a history and a polemic. In both its roles, the book supplies a long-felt need. As a history, it is detailed and persuasive. Professor Rauch is indefatigable in his search for facts, cogent in his analysis, and crisp and readable in his presentation." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Ap 15 '50 1250w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
Current Hist 19:35 Jl '50 1550w

Foreign Affairs 29:149 O '50 70w

Kirkus 18:123 F 15 '50 220w

"While scholarly and sound, the story is well-written and very readable. Recommended for all libraries." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:558 Ap 1 '50 100w

"The integrity and consistency of the President, as he tried to avoid war without jeopardizing the future of the world's free peoples, stand out clearly in a deep-cutting summary of the events leading up to Pearl Harbor. If any open-minded persons remain unconvinced that Roosevelt was right and that the isolationists were terribly wrong, the excellent book will banish their doubts forever." A. Z. Carr
+ New Repub 122:26 Ap 24 '50 1700w

"I doubt whether there is much box-office in Professor Rauch's painstaking examination of the development of the Roosevelt foreign policy in the years between Munich and Pearl Harbor. But for anyone who wants to know what happened and approximately why it is a distinct help." Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 23 '50 1500w

Reviewed by Karl Schriftgiesser
N Y Times p4 My 7 '50 600w

"Professor Rauch, a good writer with a hard, logical mind, selects the late Charles A. Beard as his chief antagonist, and his counter-thesis—to the effect that the Roosevelt administration, far from 'maneuvering' the United States into war for its own, never quite specified ends, sought by every honorable means to preserve the peace—is well documented."
New Yorker 26:134 Ap 15 '50 130w

"There is no doubt that the author presents excellent material to refute the absurd statements in George Morgenstern's 'Pearl Harbor: The Story of the Secret War' and the more subtle distortion of the record in Charles A. Beard's 'American Foreign Policy in the Making' and 'President Roosevelt and the Coming of the War.' . . 'Roosevelt from Munich to Pearl Harbor' is a well-written, interesting, but sometimes exasperating book. Why did Mr. Rauch have to drag the Yalta Conference into his story and then state that by the time of Yalta the Rhine had been crossed and victory in Europe was certain?" Walter Johnson
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:12 Ap 22 '50 800w

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis
Yale R n s 40:149 autumn '50 480w

RAUP, ROBERT BRUCE, and others. Improvement of practical intelligence. 303p $4 Harper

370.1 Education—Philosophy. Judgment (logic) 50-6531

"A slightly revised edition of the 1942 year book of the National Society of College Teachers of Education, 'The Discipline of Practical Judgment in a Democratic Society,' this volume treats the principles and procedures of raising the level of practical judgment, 'the central task of education.' The authors, all professors of educational philosophy, feel the 'need for social methodology compatible with the democratic ideal and adequate to deal with conflicting social issues at the level of conflicting fundamental perspectives and interests as well as at the point of policy-making and decision.'" School & Society

"The theme of this significant book is capsuled in one phrase: 'uncoerced community of persuasion.' It is almost an ironic phrase at the present moment in history. . . Yet it is also a reassuring phrase. The rich veins of meaning that educators and laymen have discovered in it since the book first appeared some six years ago result now in republication. No more helpful book in educational theory has appeared in the interim. . . Despite interspersions of bulbous language that could have been compressed by further rewriting, and despite a certain quality of liberal tender-mindedness inevitably infecting thinkers so deeply imbued with the philosophy of pragmatism and progressive education, their book adds a new dimension to our thinking about democracy." Theodore Brameld
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:41 S 9 '50 700w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 72:279 O 28 '50 650w

RAVA, CARLA CASTALDI. All about Italy. (New Europe guides) 311p maps $2.50 Duell

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 50-8440

This guidebook covers the entire country, beginning at Rome and working south to Naples and Sicily, then back north to the hill towns, to Florence, Venice, the Dolomites, the Lakes, and the Riviera. A short directory of hotels and restaurants is included. Maps. Index.

Kirkus 18:327 Je 1 '50 120w

"The writing is somewhat uneven. It frequently sounds as if it had been translated with the aid of an ancient dictionary." Beach Conger
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Jl 23 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 12 '50 70w

"If you like a straight story, no nonsense, this is your dish. . . It's all here, dutifully recorded, along with the usual pronouncements about tipping, money, transportation, and a few words of general advice." H. S.
Sat R of Lit 33:36 Jl 15 '50 120w

RAY, JESSE EDGAR. Art of bricklaying. 240p il $4 Bennett

693.2 Bricklaying

"An introductory book written by a man with many years' experience in bricklaying. It is designed mainly for students in vocational classes and for apprentices, but the amateur can also pick up many points in it which are not readily found in other books. The discussion is compact and is couched in the language of the bricklayer's craft." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 47:112 N 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1302 Ag '50 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:50 Jl '50

RAYMOND, MARCEL. From Baudelaire to surrealism [tr. by G. M.; pref. by Robert Motherwell; introd. by Harold Rosenberg; bibl. by Bernard Karpel]. (Documents of modern art) 428p il $5; pa $3.75 Wittenborn

841.09 French poetry

This work was first published in Paris in 1933. It has had several revised editions, the latest (1947) being the one here translated into English. "Though it gives a clear account of post-romantic developments up to the last war, this survey is not primarily a history but a work of philosophic criticism. Its thesis: that the principal aim of the moderns has been 'to grasp poetry in its essence'—an aim analogous to that of the plastic arts, which have rejected all but 'a purely interior model.' Such an argument gives central importance to the influence of Mallarmé but it applies in some degree to various other tendencies." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

RAYMOND, MARCEL—Continued

Reviewed by John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 19 '50 60w

"M. Raymond made no attempt to write an all-inclusive history, nor to trace definite influences in his chain of analyses, but with insight and objectivity he has produced a rich reference book on French poetry." Anna Balakian
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 27 '50 450w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:157 N 4 '50 500w

"It is good to see that this celebrated study has been given the kind of American edition it deserves: a fluent and resourceful translation, a lively (polemical) introduction by Harold Rosenberg, and a bibliography that appears to cover everything that has been written on the subject in both languages." George Dillon
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ag 26 '50 500w
School & Society 72:366 D 2 '50 40w

RAYMOND, RENE (JAMES HADLEY CHASE, pseud). You're lonely when you're dead. 245p $2.50 Duell 50-12089

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:536 S 1 '50 60w

"The predecessor to this novel, 'No Orchids for Miss Blandish,' achieved a certain notoriety as being both gory and tasteless. This book, its successor, is also an attempt to shock, but a weaker one."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 8 '50 200w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
— N Y Times p40 O 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 8 '50 90w

RAYNAL, MAURICE, and others. History of modern painting. 3v pl v 1-2 ea $12.50; v3 $15 Albert Skira, pub, 206 E 20th st, N.Y. 3

759 Painting—History

Contents: Volume 1: From Baudelaire to Bonnard; v2, Matisse, Munch, Rouault; v3, From Picasso to surrealism.

Booklist 46:330 Jl 1 '50 (Review of v2)

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 11 '50 150w (Review of v2)

"The presentation is magnificent. [In this volume] there are 112 color plates illustrating liberally a text written in a clear, unaffected prose that elucidates the trends of initiative and invention in painting. . . There is no precedent for such a monumental achievement in the presentation of art of the advance guard of the twentieth century at a price within reach of many enthusiasts." Dorothy Adlow
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 16 '50 130w (Review of v3)

"Unhappily the necessarily high cost of this volume places it beyond many budgets, but for those who can afford it, it will represent a rich investment."
Commonweal 52:278 Je 23 '50 390w (Review of v2)

"The most striking contribution provided [in volume 2] is eighty-eight color reproductions of startling brilliance. The original paintings were selected with great taste and care, both for quality and for representativeness. Most of them have not been reproduced in color before. . . The texts of this volume are useful in their own right as general essays on leading movements in modern art." S. L. Faison
+ Nation 171:191 Ag 26 '50 950w (Review of v2)

"The text resembles in itself a new Impressionist production. When Raynal finds Renoir's 'Moulin de la Galette' imbued with waltz time, when he discovers the low browns or tans of friar's tunics in the colors of Vuillard, when he hears some echo like the trailing notes of a nightingale's song in Bonnard, he has taken us into new realms of appreciation. It is these 'touches' that make the book a valuable reinterpretation of the period." Jerome Mellquist
+ N Y Times p14 F 26 '50 450w (Review of v 1)

"[Volume 2] arrives at a happy moment, for it explores a remarkably rich period of art, as yet little known here. . . The radical innovation in this book is the new use of color plates, which are marvels of their kind. Beautifully reproduced and drawn from unfamiliar sources, they really tell the story, which is further commented on admirably by European writers on art." Stuart Preston
+ N Y Times p24 My 28 '50 200w (Review of v2)

"A remarkably good job has been done in organizing the material in such a way as to give a clear and orderly exposition of the multifarious tendencies that make modern art since 1900 such a chaotic-seeming spectacle." Clement Greenberg
+ N Y Times p5 D 3 '50 300w (Review of v3)

"The text, which breaks up the sequence of events into brief, separate discussions of the artists and movements involved, is a bit jerky and difficult to follow. A good share of the writing tends to be more laudatory than critical, but the fact that most of the authors were participants in the movements they describe gives their work considerable authority, and the illustrations, of which there are over a hundred, all in full color, are marvels of both selection and reproduction."
+ — New Yorker 26:76 D 23 '50 130w (Review of v3)

"One of the best buys this year. . . In an exceptional year for art books of all kinds, as 1950 has been, these Skira volumes deserve your attention." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 17 '50 320w (Review of v 1-3)

"The most casual glance at the eighty color plates illustrating the first volume of this history of modern painting will convince even a skeptic that reproduction in color has now reached a level justifying the publisher's claim that such representation of the masters really does supersede the black and white cuts in earlier volumes on art. Used in books to make clear the meaning of the text, they have real educational value." Walter Pach
+ Sat R of Lit 33:45 Mr 4 '50 650w (Review of v 1)

"Raynal is at his best in the extensive section on Matisse, for whom he has a fervent admiration—which by no means excludes penetrating critical appraisal. Almost equally good is the treatment of Rouault, and the sections on Marquet, Dufy, and Vlaminck are also on a high level. It is not held, though, in the problem of Derain." Walter Pach
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:69 My 6 '50 750w (Review of v2)

"The 112 plates in color here given represent the furthest advance in such book illustration that I have seen. Sometimes they are things of beauty in themselves; yet there is also danger in that fact, for people are prone to think that such imagery is accurate, whereas it diverges radically in many instances from the quality of the original and thus creates a misunderstanding which black-and-white does not. . . Maurice Raynal, who contributes the chief part of the text, genuinely illuminates his portrait of a period in which he was himself a notable participant." Walter Pach
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:78 D 2 '50 800w (Review of v3)

"The one good feature of this book is its admirable biographical tables of individual artists, which are the work of M. Jean Leymarie. For the rest, it has few claims on the attention of either the uninitiated, the student or the historian. Its typography and appearance are displeasing, its size unmanageable, and its plates so inexpertly affixed to the page that the book cannot be opened or closed without tearing or creasing them. The book is extremely expensive and its failure is all the more regrettable in that its original idea was both adventurous and worth-while, and might have been realized on a grand and luxurious scale."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p371 Je 16 '50 1600w (Review of v 1)

READ, KATHERINE HASKILL. Nursery school; a human relationships laboratory. 264p il $3.50 Saunders

372.2412 Nursery schools 50-8139

"The first two parts of the book serve to orient the student to the nursery school, the people, the equipment and curriculum, and to guide him in his initial contacts with the children. The emphasis in part three is upon understanding feelings in areas where feelings are strong. Part four stresses observing individual growth and guiding it: 'in dramatic play,' 'through creative expression,' 'working with parents,' and 'accepting our responsibility.' All chapters close with projects for observation and references." J Home Econ

"Teachers of child development and human relationships will find this book a 'must' on their reference shelves. . . . The book is written in an easily read style, is well organized, and is rich with examples drawn from the nursery school." H. L. Porter

+ J Home Econ 42:745 N '50 350w

School & Society 71:384 Je 17 '50 30w

RECKLESS, WALTER CADE. Crime problem. 537p il $4.25 Appleton

364 Crime and criminals 50-6283

A textbook for the student of sociology and special students of criminology. Includes case material, and questions and bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

"Reckless makes many accurate observations about crime and the social order and many others which are certain to provoke debate." H. D. McKay

Am J Soc 56:297 N '50 1350w

"The author's motivation to direct his book to student, career officer, and layman alike was executed with questionable wisdom. While the materials are well organized throughout, the tendency is toward a cumulative electicism lacking in critical faculties. That a case from Time magazine serves 'to illustrate the fact that the professional is a classy criminal and smooth operator' is one example of several unwarranted deductions made from admittedly fascinating case materials." R. C. Sorensen

Am Soc R 15:694 O '50 450w

Reviewed by A. E. Wood

Ann Am Acad 272:256 N '50 440w

"A comprehensive textbook, but not a dry one." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 67:734 Je 14 '50 70w

"Because of the minimum emphasis on causation, and the relative neglect of the historical background, this work, in the opinion of the reviewer, is not a complete textbook in the field. In the area which it does cover, however, it is up-to-date, scholarly and stimulating —a supplementary text which should prove most useful." W. B. Sanders

+ — Social Forces 29:106 O '50 600w

"A comprehensive and fresh outlook in a well written book. . . The general reader will find, in addition to documented erudition, luminous paragraphs of insight and wisdom." Miriam Van Waters

+ Survey 86:420 S '50 650w

REDDICK, DE WITT CARTER. Modern feature writing. 457p il $4 Harper

029.6 Authorship 49-10885

"This deals with writing feature articles for both magazines and newspapers, including how-to-do-it articles, news features, stories about people and adventure articles." (Wis Lib Bul) Could be used as self-help by those who lack opportunity for college training.

Booklist 46:168 Ja 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '50

"Techniques, examples and aids to marketing make the book useful."

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:17 Mr '50

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. Stranger and alone. 308p $3 Harcourt

50-5405

"Shelton Howden, the son of a colored mother and a white father, wants more than anything else to become somebody of importance in the world. In his heart, he has always hated his Negro blood, and eventually he finds it quite natural to betray his friends, who have planned a surprise demonstration of Negro strength at the polls, to the white politicians of the Southern town where he lives. Mr. Redding introduces Howden at the start of his freshman year in college, and follows him painstakingly through a number of subsequent colleges, Negro and white, and through many different levels of Negro life." New Yorker

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun p6 Mr 23 '50 390w

"How Shelton Howden betrays himself and his own people makes this a story that few can read without having rather strong feelings aroused. It can be strongly liked or just as strongly disliked. It probably will touch off discussions and criticisms of the author's purpose. I, for one, am proud of this novel. It is an unusually good character study of the making of a heel, and an absorbing story in the bargain." S. C. Watkins

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 19 '50 400w

"A strongly written, cynical and bitter novel."

Christian Century 67:465 Ap 12 '50 130w

"'Stranger and Alone,' though dramatically effective (and it could be more so if properly pruned), is, above all, the work of a discriminating intelligence. Mr. Redding has achieved a vitalization of facts and situations which need to be known and understood by members of both races." Priscilla Heath

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 17 '50 240w

"Much of the book is controversial; all of it well-written. Adherents to either side of the race question are likely to have a strong reaction upon reading this novel." W. K. Harrison

Library J 75:172 F 1 '50 80w

"It is an angry book, but one in which the anger is controlled and made purposeful. It is written with both insight and skill. There is the ring of truth about it. It is as if the author were writing a biography of the man which he might easily have been, if he had yielded to the ever present pressures about him, some crude and massively direct, some very subtle." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 19 '50 900w

"If in his novel Mr. Redding has selected a protagonist too limited in personal appeal, and if his writing lacks the high quality that marked his autobiographical 'No Day of Triumph,' he has done, nevertheless, a vastly important job of reporting the little known role of those Negro 'leaders' who by collaborating with the despoilers of the South do insidious damage to us all." Ralph Ellison

N Y Times p4 F 19 '50 800w

"Unfortunately, although Mr. Redding writes with sincerity and authority, his novel is little more than a collection of incidents and opinions, and his hero only an immovable automaton around whom various questions and answers are exchanged, or at least expressed."

New Yorker 25:97 F 18 '50 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 19 '50 600w

REDDING, J. S.—Continued

"This is a first-rate novel and a moving one. J. Saunders Redding has added a new and wonderful set of characters to the annals of the fiction that deals with race relations." Ann Petry

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 F 25 '50 700w

"This novel is written from the inside and helps explain much about southern conformity. It is to Mr. Redding's credit as an artist that he makes the reader feel friendly toward Howden at the start and regretful in blaming him at the end." Harry Hansen

Survey 86:156 Mr '50 400w

"This book adds more to our understanding of Negro life than many more sensational books; it is, in a sense, more shocking than the shockers, because it shows the critically weak points in those very institutions which most of us look to as the solution—in part, at least—of the problem of the Negro." Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 39:575 spring '50 270w

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. They came in chains; Americans from Africa. (Peoples of America ser) 320p $3.50 Lippincott

325.26 Negroes—History 50-8476

"The Negro 'problem' might not be so much a problem if all Americans including Negroes understood some of the economic and historical causes of the present status of the Negro. This latest in the 'Peoples of America Series' tells the story clearly. It covers the history of slavery sketchily, goes into greater detail on the pre-emancipation life of the Negro, and describes his place in America today." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:347 Jl 15 '50

Bookmark 10:6 O '50 20w

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun p4 Jl 16 '50 130w

"The final chapters seem weaker than the others, perhaps because the author hastens on with facts, without adding, as he does in the greater part of the book, his own acute observations and interpretations. However, this is a minor point, for 'They Came in Chains,' taken as a whole, is a scholarly achievement of distinction and importance." Youra Qualls

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 S 18 '50 550w

"Book is adequately detailed, with many interesting anecdotes, and is written with restraint and authority. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 80w

"'They Came in Chains' has the motivation, conflict, suspense, and inevitability of the best adventure fiction. . . Mr. Redding's sense of drama is so keen it cuts through our memory of things past, and persuades us to hope at each climax of the struggle between the slave oligarchy and eighteenth-century humanitarianism, between more politico-economical expediency and plain fair-dealing, that the outcome will not be what it has been." W. T. Hedden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 16 '50 1350w

"As he takes the Africans over the deadly passage to Virginia, as he settles them in the slavery of the plantation South . . . anger takes charge of his pen, and the words come forth with deep feeling. Every sensitive reader will be stirred by some of these passages and will sympathize with the emotions that dictated them. This is not a frame of mind conducive to the understanding of an enormously complicated subject. From it arise errors of detail and unwarranted exaggerations. . . The sense of grievance also leads to intemperate judgments. . . Most important of all, the nature of the tragedy is not made clear." Oscar Handlin

N Y Times p7 Jl 30 '50 550w

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps

Sat R of Lit 33:16 S 2 '50 600w

"The history of the Negro in America is a project often attempted but rarely carried out in a fully satisfactory manner. The historian either is white and a trifle condescending or black and too emotional. 'They Came in Chains' by a Negro educator, is as good an in-between job as could be asked." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 400w

"The paucity of footnote documentation, including the omission of periodical literature, is certain to elicit a hue and cry that some of the broad generalizations are based upon insufficient evidence. Yet the book has considerable merit. Seldom have the chroniclers of American Negro history possessed the literary talents which Mr. Redding demonstrates throughout the volume. This is no dry recital of events. In a fluid and imaginative style, the author has given us a vivid commentary on the story of the Negro people in America." L. P. Stavisky

+ — Survey 86:528 N '50 650w

REDFIELD, ROBERT. Village that chose progress; Chan Kom revisited. 187p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

917.26 Chan Kom, Mexico. Mayas 50-5750

In 1931 the author and Alfonso Villa Rojas, Mexican anthropologist, studied the village of Chan Kom in Yucatan and reported their findings in Chan Kom: A Maya Village (Book Review Digest 1935). They often thought about returning to see how the villagers were progressing. In 1948 the author did go back and here reports on the changes that had occurred. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by J. F. Embree

Am J Soc 56:204 S '50 800w

"Many anthropologists dream of visiting the scene of an earlier study, but few have done so. Though the Redfields could stay but forty days, this thoughtful study is proof that no time was lost. Redfield is duly cautious about stretching his data. The writing is skillful and sufficiently free of jargon to be attractive to the general reader. The book is significant both as a study in social change and as a sort of mirror in which our own problems, largely similar, may be seen in better perspective." John Biesanz

+ Am Soc R 15:447 Je '50 550w

Nation 171:114 Jl 29 '50 80w

"Since Mr. Redfield writes so very well, and avoids the mumbo-jumbo jargon of the anthropologists, the general reader should enjoy this account of the origin of a simple village." V. W. Von Hagen

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 26 '50 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 23 '50 200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:176 Je '50 300w

REECE, BYRON HERBERT. Better a dinner of herbs. 220p $3 Dutton

49-50367

Novel composed of the psychological states of several people in a Southern rural district. There was the fatherless boy Dannie, his Uncle Enid, Mary, the preacher's wife, the preacher himself, and the two boys, Jason and the Idiot.

"His plaintive and sensuous tale of human frailty and inhuman punishment is akin to a ballad strummed in an interminable monotone beneath a gibbous moon." M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 12 '50 470w

"A poetic feel for the land and the people gives this something of a folk-tale quality."

Kirkus 17:611 N 1 '49 180w

"Characterization is skillfully interwoven with dramatic plot. Recommended for discriminating fiction readers." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 74:1818 D 1 '49 100w

"There are lyric passages in 'Better a Dinner of Herbs' but its mood stems rather from that of the ballad, indigenous to Mr. Reece's country and the substance of his earlier book of poems. Here is none of the self-consciousness that is commonly associated with the 'primitive' in contemporary writing or art. The author's understanding and acceptance of his characters and the directness of his portrayal give them worth in their own right. 'Better a Dinner of Herbs' is an unusual novel, sincere and oddly stirring." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 8 '50 400w

"Mr. Reece's effort to convey all this obliquely, through the unraveling of his characters' psychological states is embarrassing in view of his slight penetration into their motivations. What Mr. Reece achieves in the end is neither biblical (there's no concept of justice in all this) nor 'modern' in the true sense of being aware that the thing called fate is only a reflection of the inner condition of man." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p26 Ja 8 '50 400w

"Mr. Reece weaves well. With simplicity, honesty, and an almost Biblical reliance on the repeated image, he balances emotion with desperate event. The result is powerful and often beautiful."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:29 Mr 4 '50 150w

REECE, BYRON HERBERT. Bow down in Jericho [poems]. 160p $2.75 Dutton

811 50-8831

"With the widespread revival of interest in American folklore two new poets have turned to the ballads of the southern mountains, creating new songs that have their own peculiar magic. One is Francis Pledger Hulme who wrote Come up the Valley; the other, Byron Herbert Reece, a young Georgia farmer and teacher who first appeared as a modern minstrel in Ballad of the Bones. As the title suggests, his new book includes a section of ballads with Biblical themes. Later pages are devoted to his more personal lyrics and sonnets." Library J

Booklist 47:133 D 1 '50

"In this collection of ballads, lyrics and sonnets, Mr. Reece has projected, with great success in some of the poems, the beauty and richness of folk legend and song. . . The sonnets, however, are not as successful since the light lyric mood, intensified but not developed here, evades the constraint of this form."

Kirkus 18:322 Je 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by George McDonald

Library J 75:1669 O 1 '50 70w

"Nothing so fresh and moving has sprung from the soil since the publication of Francis Ledwidge's 'Songs of the Fields' thirty-five years ago. Mr. Reece sings from the heart, but without sentimentality or cloying personal revelation. All is simple, sure and communicative." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p18 D 10 '50 270w

"Reece indulges in occasional clichés and some sentimental nature worship, which is below his general level. [He] presents a collection of sonnets, which are inferior to his other lyrics. His talent is cramped in the technique of the sonnet, and his statements are often self-conscious and pragmatic. He is at his best as the uninhibited prophet, and the ballad is his medium." A. M. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:43 N 18 '50 320w

REES, GILBERT. I seek a city. 316p $3 Dutton

Williams, Roger—Fiction 50-9424

Written in the first person this novel covers the life of Roger Williams from his childhood in London, thru his years as a minister in America, to his founding of Providence.

Booklist 47:3; 14 S 1 '50

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 14 '50 250w

"A novel of Roger Williams which catches the spirit of the man as well as the emotional and religious problems that beset him."

+ Kirkus 18:368 Jl 1 '50 210w

"Recommended for its unusual background." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 75:1293 Ag '50 80w

"Gilbert Rees has gone back to the records, including the journal of Roger Williams, and filled out the picture in a fervent, colorful narrative. Here we have the measure of the man as he probably appeared to those who opposed him and those who followed him. It is more the portrait of a man of faith than of statecraft." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 N 12 '50 600w

"The portrait of the great Puritan in these pages somehow lacks depth: the fierce longing for perfection which consumed him is stated rather than conveyed. However, the author's style, though mannered, is refreshingly free from the psychological jargon which afflicts so much historical fiction nowadays, and his imagery is apt." Roger Pippett

+ — N Y Times p25 D 10 '50 280w

"In this reviewer's opinion, it may be considered a matter of bad taste for a novelist to presume to put himself in Roger Williams's place and, in the first person, tell the story of his life in fictional form. When the result happens to be something singularly lachrymose and lugubrious, the offense assumes a nature not easily condoned." John Cournos

— Sat R of Lit 33:47 S 23 '50 230w

REEVE, CHRISTOPHER. Lady, be careful. 279p $2.50 Mill

50-5975

Mystery story.

"Nothing could be more familiar than the contents of this omnibus of setting and characters and lurkers. While Reeve's manner sustains interest for a time the proceedings drag themselves out interminably to an entirely expected conclusion." James Sandoe

— + Chicago Sun p6 Mr 10 '50 150w

"The speculative, talkative type."

Kirkus 17:681 D 15 '49 90w

"Literate and pleasant in the English tradition, but rather obvious as to plot."

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 12 '50 180w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

N Y Times p33 Ap 2 '50 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 26 '50 50w

REEVES, GEORGE S. Man from South Dakota. 256p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Ranch life. South Dakota—Description and travel 50-7233

Chapters in the autobiography of a native of South Dakota. On his graduation from college he went back to the family ranch to raise sheep. The main part of his book describes the years of drought, flood and depression, all of which he finally conquered. There are brief glimpses of his childhood, and his travels to Florida, Kentucky, and California with his father, who was in search of health.

Booklist 46:302 Je 1 '50

"His prose takes on a certain ease. Dakota, the protagonist, takes almost human shape, and there's an element of mysticism diluted by the author's sincerity. Unfortunately, his flashbacks to a youth with traveling— . . . and a college career where he exchanges his superstitions for cynicism and intellectual snobbery—are presented in a somewhat confused and stilted manner, quite unlike the facility of his handling of the Dakota years. Here is self portrayal of a passing breed of man, tough, self-reliant, impatient of lesser man, out of touch with urban thinking, written now with skill and force, now with an awkward kind of detachment."

+ — Kirkus 18:161 Mr 1 '50 190w

"It is so absorbing a study of human character that some of its broader implications may be missed unless they are pointed out. There is a somber Grecian quality about [his] careers. . . George Reeves is a remarkable man. In my interpretation of his experience I have no wish to discount this experience or his telling of it. The whole story rings true, from the incredible labor and long vigil of lambing

REEVES, G. S.—Continued
time to the toil of harvesting in a treacherous climate. This is first-hand stuff, a memorable case history in American land use, besides being good reading in its own right for those who want only that." P. B. Sears
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 30 '50 900w

"A splendid piece of work, so good that one awaits his first novel with more than usual interest. . . It is notable that Mr. Reeves should come through twenty years of backbreaking, dream-wrecking life with an affirmative philosophy. He still believes in humanity. His belief is stronger today than it was when he left college. Obviously his ranch years were put to good use." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 30 '50 360w

"George Reeves's two closing chapters . . . are as mature and moving as anything I have read for many, many years." Russel Lord
+ Sat R of Lit 33:29 Jl 15 '50 650w

"[Reeves] tells with becoming modesty, rare humor and unmistakable authority of his struggle with drought and floods and many other obstacles." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 180w

"This autobiographical piece of Americana is written with humor, modesty, and unmistakable authority."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:308 S '50 220w

REGIONAL LAND TENURE RESEARCH PROJECT. See Hoffsommer, H. C., ed. Social and economic significance of land tenure in the southwestern states

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Partners in the saddle. 248p $2 Watts, F.
50-6250

Story of the Texas Panhandle region in 1877. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 46:266 Ap 15 '50

"The episodic story is fired with fast, hard action realized through an unostentatious but thorough knowledge of ranch life, cowboys and the great plains of the West."
+ Kirkus 18:102 F 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:641 Ap 15 '50 60w

"Truly an adventure novel, packed with action, lively cowboys, and the excitement of a Texas ranch. . . Recommended for junior high school boys." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 75:785 My 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 14 '50 50w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Ap '50

REICHARD, GLADYS AMANDA. Navaho religion; a study of symbolism. 2v 370;377-800p $7.50 Pantheon bks.
970.62 Indians of North America—Religion and mythology. Navaho Indians. Symbolism 50-6769

"From the information she has garnered on the Navaho reservation during eight summers and parts of two winters, Miss Reichard is able to show why these people are so preoccupied with dogma, symbolism, and ritual, and how the principles of their system differ radically from our own. . . Volume II consists mainly of concordances of supernatural beings, ritualistic ideas, and the rites themselves." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Her analysis of the complexities of the Navaho religious system is an achievement in anthropology for which we can be grateful. It is not presented as matter for the lay reader, however, and its audience will be largely that of specialists in the field." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 75:696 Ap 15 '50 130w

"This work will be especially useful to students of the Navaho; it should, as well, help others to a better understanding of the ceremonies they may occasionally witness."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:314 S '50 240w

REID, JOSEPH V. You can make a Stradivarius violin. 48p $3.50 Pop. mechanics
787.1 Violin—Construction 50-3084

A book for the home craftsman, giving a complete set of plans and instructions for making a violin like the Stradivarius of 1712. The plans are in a separate envelope in the cover of the book; the text proper is very brief. The conclusion is: "If you have used proper wood and have followed instructions carefully, the tone of the instrument will steadily improve with age."

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 80w

"The plans are certainly well-reproduced and easy to follow, and the directions make it all sound very simple. The author has had 20 years experience." C.W.W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 30 '50 120w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Murder at Arroways. 240p $2.50 Random house 50-7152

Detective story.

"The case seemed to me an indigestible clot of sugar-coated tremors." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun p5 My 5 '50 130w

"Absorbing reading."
+ Kirkus 18:117 F 15 '50 100w

"In her years of mystery writing Helen Reilly has perfected a compound of romance and suspicion which makes a reliably good mystery. This one is quite up to her usual standard."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 28 '50 190w

"Damien belongs in the general category of the had-I-but-known school of heroines. Since she is in the capable hands of Inspector McKee and Mrs. Reilly, experienced readers will not be unduly alarmed." Hillis Mills
N Y Times p26 My 14 '50 130w

"Smoothly and pleasantly written, but singularly devoid of thrills."
+ — New Yorker 26:124 My 6 '50 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 16 '50 80w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

REINER, MARKUS. Deformation and flow; an elementary introduction to theoretical rheology. 346p il $6.50 Interscience
541.341 Rheology [50-13904]

"An introduction to theoretical rheology . . . The book is divided into 20 chapters. A discussion is given of the three ideal bodies, namely, Hooke solid, St. Venant solid, and Newtonian liquid. Work of Hagen and Poiseuille, equations for the flow of Bingham plastics through circular tubes and analogous equations for the behavior in rotational viscometers, and a discussion of structural viscosity are also presented." Chem Eng

"This book will be a useful guide and help for all chemists, biologists, and engineers to familiarize themselves with the principles of rheology and their application to practical problems." H. Mark
+ Chem & Eng N 28:498 F 13, '50 200w

"The book is written with a clear informal method of presentation. . . 'Deformation and Flow' offers little assistance on topics such as viscometry, sizing of pipelines for the flow of slurries, and agitation of suspensions, but is well recommended to those chemical engineers desiring an interesting introduction to theoretical rheology." G. E. Alves
+ Chem Eng 57:298 Je '50 750w

REINER, MARKUS. Twelve lectures on theoretical rheology. 2d ed enl & rev 163p il $4 Interscience

541.341 Rheology

"This small volume is a concise statement of the principles of rheology as developed by Dr. Reiner over a period of several decades. It is a revision of 'Ten Lectures on Theoretical Rheology,' published in 1943, and although some new material has been added and the subject matter rearranged, the plan of the original version is retained." Chem & Eng N

"'Twelve Lectures' is one of those rare and individual monographs which in style, content, and viewpoint could have been written by no other person, and it may some day rank as a classic. It will prove invaluable to the specialist." E. K. Fischer

+ Chem & Eng N 28:1686 My 15 '50 250w

"'Twelve Lectures' can be recommended to chemical engineers interested in the theoretical aspects of rheology." G. E. Alves

+ Chem Eng 57:296 Jl '50 380w

REINHARDT, KURT FRANK. Germany: 2000 years. 765p il maps $8.50 Bruce pub.

943 Germany—History 50-8106

"This book, the fruit of many years of teaching and study, aims at filling a real gap in the field of German historiography." (School & Society) "There are maps, illustrations, chronological tables, and a vast bibliography." (Sat R of Lit)

"The ultimate test of a good history, as of a worth-while literary work of any kind, is whether its perusual affords unbroken aesthetic satisfaction. Since this is true in the present case of at best only selected sections, it would seem proper, rather than to rank the work as a history, to assign it the role of a general reference volume, a novel kind of encyclopedia covering every phase of German development through two thousand years. This useful handbook service is furthered by an assortment of excellent maps and a set of unusual illustrations." Ferdinand Schevill

Am Hist R 56:104 O '50 650w

Reviewed by O. G. Darlington

Ann Am Acad 272:288 N '50 550w

Current Hist 19:166 S '50 30w

"Stanford's Professor Reinhardt, a native of Germany, who was an editor and an active member of the Catholic Centrist Party during the Weimar Republic, has no axe to grind. He gives us a sober and more or less reliable story of the German nation, but with such a wealth of names and dates that the volume is more suited for reference use than for quick reading. . . It is surprising how much information on literature, art, music, religion, trade, fashions, and manners in each period has been squeezed into this book. Yet the demands of scholarship have not been stinted." Alfred Werner

+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 Jl 15 '50 1250w

School & Society 72:31 Jl 8 '50 20w

REISCHAUER, EDWIN OLDFATHER. United States and Japan [maps by R. L. Williams]. (American foreign policy lib) 357p $4 Harvard univ. press

327.73 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Japan. National characteristics, Japanese 50-3943

A study of the relations of the United States and Japan both before and during the occupation, based on an examination of the fundamentals of Japanese national life, their economic and social and cultural conditions, and their prospects for attaining true democracy in the future. Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley

Am Pol Sci R 44:1034 D '50 700w

Reviewed by T. E. Ennis

Ann Am Acad 271:191 S '50 380w

Booklist 46:347 Jl 15 '50

"Dr. Reischauer presents a very readable account and a considerable amount of information on a most important subject. . . The attempt to cover a wide field has led to oversimplification. . . While Dr. Reischauer indicates some of the dangers to Japan from the new imperialism of the Moscow Politburo and the recent communist victory in China, he does not place, in the opinion of this reviewer, sufficient emphasis upon the extremely dangerous position confronting the new democracy of Japan from communist aggression. He gently slaps the wrist of soviet imperialism on a few occasions, but he fails to come to grips with the problem of communist aggression in Asia and its significance for Japan and America." Kenneth Colegrove

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 16 '50 550w

"Here is undoubtedly the most reliable and definitive volume available in English on what Japan was before she was opened to Western ideas and institutions, how she was affected by these various impacts, what she is now after a defeat so largely inflicted by American forces, tools and ideas, and what she is capable of becoming for good or ill in the days ahead." T. T. Brumbaugh

+ Christian Century 67:1050 S 6 '50 900w

"This book fills a vital need for Americans who wonder about the fate of their recent enemies. Professor Reischauer's long experience in Japan, his popularity as teacher and scholar at Harvard, and his numerous positions of responsibility with the War and State Departments qualify him as the outstanding American expert on Japan. His judicious observations and cautious optimism highlight a rewarding and eminently readable book." M. B. Jansen

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 24 '50 800w

"An informative book which, however, often fails to be specific, and shies away from decisions on some important questions." Max Fischer

Commonweal 52:396 Jl 28 '50 650w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 40w

Foreign Affairs 29:162 O '50 100w

"On the whole, a soundly reasoned piece of scholarship. Not easy reading, but rewardingly informative, and large in scope."

Kirkus 18:291 My 15 '50 350w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton

Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 130w

Nation 171:192 Ag 26 '50 230w

Reviewed by Richard Lauterbach

New Repub 123:20 O 2 '50 900w

"The editors of the American Foreign Library made a happy choice when they asked Dr. Reischauer to write the volume on the United States and Japan. He has an unusually wide knowledge of Japanese history and of modern Japanese life and he has also during recent years been closely acquainted with the development of American policy towards Japan. He has moreover a gift of exposition in clear language." G. B. Sansom

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 16 '50 1600w

"This is a solid, stimulating book, closely packed with ideas, insights and provocative questions. It could be studied with profit by our public men who now have to decide how to deal with Japan in the drastically changing immediate future." Nathaniel Peffer

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 16 '50 1700w

"An extremely interesting and valuable book."

+ New Yorker 26:74 Ag 12 '50 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 26 '50 340w

"No book is without its defects. In the account of the postwar Japan, so excellent in most of its features, there is lacking anything but the barest mention of the important religious developments, and the section on the educational situation seems unnecessarily sketchy,

REISCHAUER, E. O.—Continued
neglecting, among other aspects, the serious but probably unavoidable lowering of academic standards. However, no single recent book on Japan is to be as highly commended to the American public." K. S. Latourette
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:13 Jl 22 '50 750w

REIWALD, PAUL. Society and its criminals; tr. and ed. by T. E. James. 315p $4.50 Int. univs. press

364 Crime and criminals. Criminal psychology 50-5500

"Former German criminal lawyer, now at University of Geneva, examines society's attitude to the criminal from angle of psychoanalysis. Basically a Freudian, author follows by no means slavishly Freudian theories. Making full use of both European and American publications he also draws widely from literary sources of all countries. Main thought running through entire work is 'that the criminal law is less influenced by reason and cool judgment than by powerful unconscious emotional urges.' " (Library J) Indexes.

Reviewed by E. H. Sutherland
Am J Soc 56:210 S '50 600w

"While many will disagree with Reiwald they should find book interesting and stimulating. Copious chapter annotations contain many references unknown here even to experts. Strongly recommended for all libraries with intellectual clientele." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:317 F 15 '50 140w

"In the course of this book, the author makes statements which are correct in the limited sphere of psychiatric theory, but he makes the mistake, so common in current psychiatric criminology, of using Freud's description of unconscious motivation in neurosis to explain social phenomena. He expresses the opinion that for the next step in social progress we have to rely on psychoanalysis, but his book proves just the opposite; the next step for psychoanalysis, if it wants to develop, is to break away from the solely individual." Frederic Wertham
Yale R n s 39:741 summer '50 1050w

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). Shining shooter; il. by Dwight Logan. 218p $2.25 Scribner

50-6844

"With the exciting feel of his first marbles in his fingers, and with his eyes on the prize money being offered in the coming marble tournament, Tip determines to learn to play well and does so with the help of El-Mar the magician, once the best marble shooter in town. . . There is a section on games to play with marbles. . . Grades 3-6." Booklist

Booklist 46:279 My 1 '50
Kirkus 18:97 F 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by Nelle McCalla
Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 80w

"Aside from the serious approach to learning an ancient skill (with a bit of its history thrown in) the book has a fine attitude toward playing a game and some very thoughtful paragraphs as well as all the funny ones."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 7 '50 260w

"Contains pointers on technique, some very interesting facts about the ancient sport and, in the back of the book, the rules for eight games. All the information is introduced easily without interfering with the narrative. What we especially like about this story are the nice relationships among Tip, his mother and the good friends who help him." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p18 Je 4 '50 180w

"An exceptionally well-written and informative book." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 My 13 '50 170w
Wis Lib Bul 46:30 Ap '50

RENOIR, PIERRE AUGUSTE. Renoir; with an introd. by Walter Pach. (Library of great painters) 122p pl $10 Harry N. Abrams, 53 E 77th st, N.Y. 21

759.4 Paintings, French

50 full-color reproductions, and text setting the general background of the artist and his time. "The foreword is by Walter Pach, the eminent art historian, who knew Renoir well during the last years of his life, so his monograph has first-hand observations on Renoir who between 1879 and 1908, when Pach first went to visit him, would not talk for publication. But the importance of Pach's text lies in his search for those sources which he feels directly influenced Renoir's painting." (Springf'd Republican)

+ Kirkus 18:652 O 15 '50 80w

"Extremely handsome. The color reproductions . . . reveal high fidelity to the original paintings, comparing favorably with the best that have yet been made either here or in Europe." Emily Genauer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 10 '50 500w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
N Y Times p5 D 3 '50 300w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 28 '50 80w

Reviewed by R. H. Hagan
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 26 '50 80w

"Adds to the growing literature on art subjects a work that stands out among fine editions because of the quality of its color reproductions and the scholarly, supplementary text." W. C. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 600w

RENSCH, ROSLYN. The harp; from Tara's halls to the American schools. 198p il $6 Philosophical lib.

787.5 Harp 50-8801

"The book is made up of three sections: a brief history of the harp, some fundamentals regarding the instrument itself, and suggested music employing the harp in various capacities. It includes current information on repertoire, phonograph recordings, schools offering harp study courses, and so on. There are numerous illustrations representing the historical development of the harp as well as several reproductions of musical passages which demonstrate characteristic technical effects. There are also several pages devoted to bibliography. Nearly one-half of the text is devoted to the listing of harp music and recordings." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Bibliographies. Index.

"This may not be the supreme answer to the need for a book of reference on the harp, but it helps to bridge the gap. It has no competitors on or off the market. The various bibliographies are not easy to make one's way through, but they are useful and numerous." C. K. Miller
Library J 75:1047 Je 15 '50 140w

"A reference work containing much information heretofore not available in a single volume. . . In general, the book is well conceived. It is a real contribution to the literature about the harp. This reviewer, however, feels that the large amount of undeniably worthwhile material is not presented in as attractive or useful form as it might be. A number of inaccuracies and shortcomings were noted. . . In spite of these errors in fact and in certain details of editing, The Harp does present the most complete single source of information currently available on the subject." Sylvia Meyer
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 7:573 S '50 450w

REVELL, LOUISA. Silver spade. 184p $2.50 Macmillan

50-6073

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:39 Ja 15 '50 70w

"A chatty book, but—like Miss Julia herself—competent."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 9 '50 140w

"A trifle too much happens—a cast of some twenty-odd characters occasionally proves too much for Miss Revell, and a spy-cum-refugee subplot seems left over from a routine whodunit of the war years—but it's all handled with quiet perception, warmth and irony." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p33 Ap 2 '50 180w

New Yorker 26:128 Mr 18 '50 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 30 '50 200w

"Miss Tyler gets better and better. On all counts this is most engaging yarn about contestant for tops in spinster-sleuth class."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 Mr 25 '50 50w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 30 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:21 Jl '50

REX, MRS STELLA (HAY). Practical hooked rugs. 173p il $2.95 Ziff-Davis
746.74 Rugs 49-11296

"Author, trained as teacher and newspaper reporter, has harnessed her enthusiasm about an ancient art to modern craftsmanship and a reasonably profitable undertaking. At 'The Hookery' the 'quiet shop in her husband's New Bedford Monument Yard,' she gives instruction in designing and creating rugs which become heirlooms for the makers or purchasers. She fashions rugs herself in the show-window of her shop; the photographs of such handsome accomplishments are intriguing indeed. In this book she speaks of technique and choice of pattern, of color and dyeing, flowers and scrolls, borders, care and cleaning, several score illustrations of hooked rugs, old and new." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:119 D 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '50

"A how to do book, virtually a text book based on years of teaching and an excellent book to include in a list of aids for home industries."
+ Kirkus 17:449 Ag 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:175 F 1 '50 110w

REXROTH, KENNETH. Signature of all things; poems, songs, elegies, translations, and epigrams. 89p $2.50 New directions 811 50-5683

A collection of poems, songs, elegies, translations, and epigrams, by the author of In What Hour (Book Review Digest 1940).

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 170:581 Je 10 '50 140w

"Rexroth in these and in his equally fine earlier poems has added something to the world's lyric poetry. And if he would ignore momentarily the pursuing Furies and his own imagined shrinkings under their lash, he could write about the larger world with as much humanity as Frost and as much compassion as Blake." Selden Rodman
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 7 '50 550w

"Mr. Rexroth's purpose is to make a particular kind of poem which will be classical in its restraint, but without severity; personal, revealing, and confessional, without being sentimental; and it must, according to his bent, eschew symbolism and any kind of ambiguous imagery for a narrative or statement strength based on noun and verb, but not weakened by adjectives. In this general pattern Mr. Rexroth has written poems that have a slow, controlled and massive music." Richard Eberhart
N Y Times p6 Ag 6 '50 500w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:117 My 20 '50 80w

Reviewed by Francis Golffing
Poetry 76:159 Je '50 700w

"There is fastidious architecture here and, in summary, the poems strike me as having been written by a gifted man with a fine ear, a fun-loving and overcast poet inclined toward sentimentality. . . There's a good deal of work-horse cliche—'time yellowing the page,' years being 'ground to pieces in the wheels of life.' . . I particularly enjoyed Mr. Rexroth's intimate letters to his friends and the fork of his tongue in a poem about the human race." T. H. Ferril
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 12 '50 600w

"All the poems remain very personal, often even addressed to individuals. Except for such outstanding achievements as the title poem or 'For —, A Masseuse and Prostitute,' the contents show little urgency of expression or compelling drive. Yet there is grace, beauty, and vividness everywhere so that it seems ungrateful to be less than wholly content." Howard Griffin
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:22 My 20 '50 320w

"There is much less explicit philosophizing here than in The Phoenix and the Tortoise, 1944, and there are only occasional irruptions of Lawrencian candor. The prevailing character of these poems is elegiac, in both the modern and ancient senses of the term."
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:161 Je '50 240w

REYNOLDS, DON. Champion of champions. 204p il $2.75 Random house
636.75 Dogs—Legends and stories 50-6008

"The true story of Nornay Saddler," a smooth-haired fox terrier. From puppyhood on he won 59 "best in show" awards, more than any other dog in history.

"Will hold the interest of any dog lover because the true adventures of Nornay from puppyhood to international fame are dramatic. Illustrations are excellent." Bob Becker
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 7 '50 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Jl 23 '50 300w

"The book is written with a sympathetic understanding of the bond which develops between a man and his dog." R. M. Cleveland
+ N Y Times p24 My 28 '50 180w

"Followers of bench shows and obedience schools and just plain dog enthusiasts will be interested." Leo Marceau
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 23 '50 60w

REYNOLDS, JAMES. Baroque splendour; paintings in sanguine by the author. 271p $8.50 Creative age
724.1992 Architecture, Baroque. Art, Baroque 50-6635

A study of Baroque-Rococo in its heyday in Europe, Mexico, and America. The author touches upon personalities and artists who influenced this art form, and the houses, churches, theaters, lodges, and ornaments which they instigated. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 10:38 N '50 20w

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 16 '50 310w

"Modernists well may shudder at the defense of such monsters as the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, but as a mood-study of an art expression, this sparkling appreciation is delightful."
+ — Kirkus 18:232 Ap 1 '50 170w

"With dashing sanguine drawings by the author, the book is as baroque as its subject. Hardly a reliable piece of art history, it can best be described as a zestful expression of James Reynolds' enjoyment of the splendid and fantastic in art. It may seem ungrateful to carp at a project into which the author has put so much gusto, but the book is marred by numerous misspellings of proper names, by too many wide generalizations, which will outrage the objective student." Stuart Preston

REYNOLDS, JAMES—Continued

N Y Times p31 My 14 '50 170w

REYNOLDS, LLOYD GEORGE. Labor economics and labor relations. 552p $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

331 Labor and laboring classes. Trade unions 49-3968

"Intended to serve as an introduction to the study of labor economics. The major theme of the volume is the impact of collective bargaining upon our economic institutions. The author begins with an examination of the growth, structure, and organization of the institutions involved in collective bargaining. Then, after describing some collective bargaining processes and analyzing the issues involved in labor-management agreements, he scrutinizes the development of public policy and the role of government in collective bargaining. The second part of the book is devoted to a study of the economic implications of the growth of collective bargaining." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"In this remarkably well written text, Professor Reynolds draws on a wide range of knowledge, tackles tough problems with the tools of economic analysis, and frankly states the limitations of his results. Use of the book in a course this Fall has convinced the reviewer that, despite the criticisms set forth below, it is probably the most satisfactory general labor text now available. . . Although the material within each chapter is, for the most part, well organized and presented, the over-all organization of the book is not too satisfactory. . . Some of Professor Reynolds' remarks with respect to wages can be questioned." R. A. Lester

+ — Am Econ R 40:223 Mr '50 1200w

"The volume is well integrated and compactly written. Dr. Reynolds has contributed a welcome addition to the available texts in the field of labor economics." S. A. Levitan

+ Ann Am Acad 267:228 Ja '50 480w

"This volume should be a valuable addition to any personnel bookshelf for, in this reviewer's opinion, it is the best of the labor relations textbooks now available. Those familiar with the many 'encyclopedias' in the field will find this work a welcome change, for it succeeds in being accurately descriptive, incisively analytical, and outstandingly interesting. . . Reynolds' Labor Economics is unusually good in the degree to which description and analysis have been combined, and also in the extent to which the most recent research reports have been integrated into the discussion." F. T. Malm

+ Management R 38:573 O '49 900w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. Courtroom; the story of Samuel S. Leibowitz. 419p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

364.38 Leibowitz, Samuel Simon. Trials. Crime and criminals—U.S. 50-7974

A biography of Judge Samuel Leibowitz, told largely by means of the cases he has tried. Among them were the Scottsboro case, the case of Robert Irwin, and the Lindbergh kidnapping.

Booklist 46:329 Jl 1 '50

"These comments may give only a partial measure of the exciting reading in this record of a great lawyer. The stories recorded here, now within the framework of law and time, are even more fascinating than when they rated banner headlines in the daily press." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun p7 My 28 '50 490w

"These excerpts are enough to prove that Quentin approached his job as a special pleader. I should be much surprised to find the legal world's opinions of Mr. Leibowitz to be as clear and superlative as those expressed in this book. It is doubtful that the author has made his case. He has succeeded in drawing an attractive outline, but he doesn't go into the inside man." H. B. Swope

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 28 '50 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '50

+ Kirkus 18:256 Ap 15 '50 230w

"Respectfully admiring and very readable biography. . . The rather too explicit testimony in the Parr case may limit its circulation in public libraries. Mr. Reynolds believes—erroneously, one hopes—that 'parent' can be used as a transitive verb." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 75:982 Je 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 4 '50 650w

"[The book] is glib, facile in the style of a popular magazine article, easy to read, crammed with accounts of the cases Leibowitz handled. However, it does not explain Samuel Leibowitz. It is neither biography nor casebook. Its attempts at analysis are of the most superficial kind; they also rely heavily on the cliché. The book almost makes Judge Leibowitz seem sententious. He deserves something more penetrating than that." Gilbert Millstein

— N Y Times p14 Je 4 '50 650w

" 'Courtroom' is a breezy, expanded magazine article, fast moving, and frankly written by a great friend of its subject. It is a book which will have many absorbed readers, and a book which should do much to correct any popular impression that may exist as to the probity of lawyers who practice at the criminal bar." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 27 '50 850w

"Mr. Reynolds has a right to this book. He once wanted to be a lawyer himself and actually 'stumbled through law school.' While he was a law student he was also a reporter for the old Evening World, covering, at the moment, a case in which Leibowitz was appearing. . . Mr. Reynolds has been watching him, with admiration and devotion, for twenty-odd years, and these attributes now take shape in this vivid and frequently exciting narrative sequence."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 O 7 '50 230w

Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 120w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. The Wright brothers; pioneers of American aviation; il. by Jacob Landau. (Landmark bk) 183p $1.50 Random house

Wright, Orville—Juvenile literature. Wright, Wilbur—Juvenile literature 50-11766

The life story of the Wright brothers, written for ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 47:142 D 1 '50

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '50 20w

Kirkus 18:657 N 1 '50 160w

"Very well written, with excellent characterizations." C. W. Field

+ Library J 75:2158 D 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 120w

"Easy reading; and it will surely have much appeal to this air-minded generation." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '50 40w

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RIAN, EDWIN HAROLD. Christianity and American education. 272p $3 Naylor

377.1 Church and education 49-9753

"A treatment of the problem of religion in public education. . . Supported by appropriate documentation, Dr. Rian reviews the history, philosophy, and textbooks of the public, Catholic, and Protestant schools. His main thesis is that, since it is improper to teach religion in the public schools, it is incumbent upon Protestants to develope better methods and better institutions of their own where they could teach their faith to their heart's content. He is by no means averse to the parent-society type of 'parochial' school and does not feel that the total number of parochial pupils of all denominations will ever exceed one third of the American children. Significantly, Dr. Rian exhorts his Protestant colleagues to formulate a precise educational philosophy and points to the example set by the Catholics." School & Society

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 170:319 Ja '50 260w

"There is proof of considerable soul-searching and careful research in this book, far more than customary in volumes on this general subject. The usefulness of the bibliography is marred by many misprints of names, a fault also noticeable elsewhere in the book." W. W. Brickman
+ — School & Society 71:277 My 6 '50 420w

RICH, MRS LOUISE (DICKINSON). My neck of the woods. 255p $2.75 Lippincott

B or 92 Country life. Maine—Description and travel 50-10191

The author of We Took to the Woods (Book Review Digest 1942) continues her record of her life in the Maine woods, where she has lived alone much of the time since her husband's death. She writes of the forest and its animals; of her friends who run a camp for sportsmen; of the hermit; of the man who made a success of logging because he had the right kind of wife; and others of her few neighbors.

Booklist 47:2; 93 S 1 '50; N 1 '50

"Every chapter of the 12 has the warm hearted, fresh air filled spirit of the primeval woods in it. They make delightful reading for the city-bound and make them appreciate electric lights, faucets from which water flows at the brush of a fingertip, and other effete city comforts." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 5 '50 650w

"A heart-warming book." Elizabeth Yates
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 23 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:624 O 1 '50 130w

"Each person, each life, Mrs. Rich describes . . . stands out richly against the Maine scene. Mrs. Rich catches the turns of speech of her people, understands their day's work, their finances, their habits, and the way they judge each other in sickness and in health, and in their gardening and canning, washing, fishing, logging, and how they take disaster, fires and floods." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 12 '50 900w

"You are going to laugh; there will be moments when a lump will mushroom suddenly in your throat. . . There are earthy country lore and beautiful nature writing—nature writing that is authentic because Louise Rich knows the woods, the seasons, the heart-pull of the Northland and does not grow sentimental about it." H. S. Pearson
+ N Y Times p20 N 5 '50 330w

RICHARD, JAMES ROBERT, pseud. See Bowen, R. S.

RICHTER, CONRAD. The town. 433p $3.50 Knopf

50-6331

The third in a trilogy of novels about the westward expansion of the United States. In this novel the town grows and even changes its name. Sayward Wheeler and her husband move from the old cabin into a mansion, and one by one the children set up their own homes. Chancey, the youngest, delicate and spoiled by his mother, is one of the central characters. The book closes with Sayward's death. For earlier novels in this series, see The Trees, and The Fields (Book Review Digest 1940, 1946).

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 186:81 Ag '50 600w

Booklist 46:210; 262 Mr 1 '50; Ap 15 '50

Bookmark 9:186 My '50 60w

Canadian Forum 30:167 O '50 210w

Reviewed by Feike Feikema
+ Chicago Sun p5 My 2 '50 470w

"Tho the new book must be nearly as long as 'The Trees' [1940] and 'The Fields' [1946] together [and tho it is completely comprehensible upon its own], the trilogy is unmistakably a single work, unified in its design, sustained in its inspiration. It pulses from beginning to end with the passion of the land, the flesh, and the spirit. It has the American heartbeat in it. Cut it and it bleeds American." Edward Wagenknecht
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 23 '50 600w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 29 '50 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '50

"There's power here, and bits of superb writing, but it is uneven in the telling and lacks the integration that has characterized Richter's earlier work."
+ Kirkus 18:114 F 15 '50 270w

"Simple, unadorned, the prose flows fluidly and rhythmically, power emerging from its simplicity, striking you with the impact of a bullet. For all but juvenile reading, strongly recommended." M. G. Checrallah
+ — Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 100w

"'The Town' stands on its own as an entity and may be read on its own as a full, rich and comprehensive novel based upon the lives of ordinary people, brave and even heroic in their own small ways. They talk and act like real people and while here and there, one encounters a crazy one or a criminal, these exist not as specimens for a psychiatrist crowding the whole of the scene to the exclusion of all else, but as your neighbors and mine in any ordinary American community. Not one of these characters is dull, for the author has that power of good novelists which finds interest in everything, so that he is able to make even the bore an illuminating study of boredom." Louis Bromfield
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 23 '50 950w

Reviewed by W. V. Clark
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '50 850w

New Yorker 26:106 Ap 29 '50 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 1 '50 950w

"There are scenes of sorrow, humor, and excitement; but overshadowing everything like a tall tree in a meadow is Sayward herself. And that is the way we feel it should be. We sorrow for her old age alone in the fine brick mansion in the heart of the city that flourishes where her corn once grew. We have known her for eighty years. When we leave her, revered and respected by the town, but dying within sound of the new-fangled trains, her face turned so that she may see the trees she had set . . . we feel a personal loss. Something is gone not so easily replanted as a tree. . . She might almost stand for a symbol of the pioneer woman. Maybe she is, but more than that she has at least for this reviewer become flesh and blood, an acquaintance, not a characterization in a book." H. S. Arnow
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 Ap 22 '50 650w

"Even in its drier passages The Town is always readable, full of a sweet nostalgia that only occasionally spills over into sentimentality. . . A good bit of fictional Americana."
+ Time 55:98 My 1 '50 550w

"Unlike most sequels, the concluding volume of Conrad Richter's trilogy is even richer and subtler than its predecessors."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:283 S '50 320w

RICHTER, CONRAD—Continued

"A well written novel for all library collections."

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:23 My '50

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 39:768 summer '50 180w

RICHTER, GISELA MARIE AUGUSTA. Archaic Greek art; against its historical background; a survey. 226p pl $12.50 Oxford

709.38 Art, Greek. Art, Ancient 49-11589

"In these lectures, Miss Richter emphasizes sculpture in the round, vases, terra cottas, and coins, classifying her material by the finding places. The method of treatment is historical by three periods: 650-575 B.C., 575-525 B.C., and 525-480 B.C.; each of these is again subdivided into two. Miss Richter shows, in her descriptions and analyses, how the Greek artists started from conventionalized conceptions, but soon discovered the true nature of appearance." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Map on end papers. Indexes.

"The great value of Miss Richter's book lies in the fact that she is not only familiar with all the modern scholarship to which she herself has contributed so much, but that she has seen and examined all the monuments which she discusses." A. E. Raubitschek

+ Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ja 7 '50 650w

"Although not a handbook for the whole field, the book will be useful to every scholar and layman interested in Greek sculpture, since it places the life of early Greece and its art against its historical background. There is an abundance of illustrations."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:146 Je '50 160w

RICHTER, HANS WERNER. Beyond defeat; tr. by Robert Kee [Eng title: Odds against]. 312p $3 Putnam

50-8888

Story of a German soldier, an anti-Nazi, and the conditions he faced as an American prisoner of war.

Booklist 47:14 S 1 '50

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p12 Ag 8 '50 700w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 30 '50 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

"As a violent protest against a policy that was partly naiveté, partly a casual betrayal of the principles of democracy, the book is arresting. As a work of art it is inconclusive and, despite the publisher's belief, quite immature. Beneath the realism, Richter shows a strong streak of sentimentalism." Paul Farrell

— + Commonweal 52:442 Ag 11 '50 600w

"Although coarse and heavy handed, the novel emerges as a credible and effective presentation." A. J. Gaines

+ — Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 110w

"The staccato dialogue, in which much of the novel is composed, makes it rather monotonous reading. Nor are there any outstanding characters to relieve the drab brutalities of which it is a rueful record." H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 30 '50 120w

" 'Beyond Defeat' has been a best seller in Germany and is being translated and published in half a dozen other tongues this year. It will, we suppose, be compared to Remarque's 'All Quiet on the Western Front' although the two books are very different. 'All Quiet on the Western Front' was a true novel, while 'Beyond Defeat,' despite its easy readability and sustained interest, is in fact a tract, a stern and honest lecture aimed directly at the United States and its failure to practice and to teach the democratic ideal. It is also an engrossing and stimulating book and the translation by Robert Kee does justice to it." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 23 '50 650w

"Though written in an over-simplified language, and only adequately translated, the book makes its bitter message quite clear—without ever preaching. Its tense, terrifying last chapters, especially, will impress the reader." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '50 400w

New Yorker 26:67 Ag 5 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 18 '50 1000w

"Among the many war novels published in the last years this is one of the most significant if only because it is the first book dealing with the experiences of a German who was not a Nazi and opposed the war but nevertheless stood alongside his comrades As a psychological study it conveys, mostly in terse dialogue, the rather nebulous, blurred state of mind of this young and highly talented writer, who knows far better what he is against than what he is for." H. B. Kranz

Sat R of Lit 33:19 S 2 '50 700w

Springf'd Republican p6D O 8 '50 120w

"Beyond Defeat is not a great novel. Its characterization is rudimentary, its style raw, its construction disorderly. But no other book has yet shown so closely how German troops felt and thought in the last, lost stages of the war."

+ — Time 56:66 Jl 31 '50 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 23 '50 200w

RIDER, FREMONT. Compact book storage. 96p $2.60 Hadham press, 701 W. 184th st, N.Y. 33

025.8 Libraries—Arrangement of books on shelves A50-5539

"Some suggestions toward a new methodology for the shelving of less used research materials." (Subtitle) The book is based on nearly five years of experiments of this new form of storage at the Wesleyan university library. Index.

"As is generally true of Mr. Rider's writings, there is hardly a page in this provocative little book which does not contain one or more statements with which this reviewer could take issue; yet there is hardly a paragraph that fails to be interesting and thought-provoking. . . Regardless of whether or not other libraries may profitably adopt the particular method of book storage described, this volume presents a stimulating and ingenious approach to the problem. It is a mind-opening book. It is well written. It should be read and its implications studied by the staffs of large research libraries everywhere." R. R. Shaw

+ — Library Q 20:212 Jl '50 850w

"The Rube Goldberg chapter is delightfully amusing."

+ School & Society 71:64 Ja 28 '50 40w

"The main theme is lucid for its sheer logic, and entertaining for the author's enthusiasm. Fremont Rider has made the librarian's storage problem so clear and its solution so simple that it might seem there was no need of the book being written." H. E. Paine

+ Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 200w

RIEGEL, ROBERT EDGAR. Young America, 1830-1840. 436p il $5 Univ. of Okla. press

973.56 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Social life and customs 49-50089

An account of everyday life in the United States during the years 1830 to 1840. The author pictures life on the farms, in the cities, and on the frontier. Bibliographical notes. Index.

"Statistics and interpretation are held to a minimum, but generalizations and adjectives abound, and apt and excellently reproduced illustrations aid the text. Footnotes refer largely to contemporary materials, but on the whole the book gives the effect of integrating the materials to be found in the secondary works given in the bibliography rather than introducing much that is new. Few of its viewpoints, therefore, are likely to be immediately challenged. It is a useful book, objective and temperate in attitude, and written in an easy literary style. . . Humorous asides sometime carry an echo of the men's college classroom, and sex is not only dealt with frankly but on occasion seems just a bit intrusive." Wood Gray

Am Hist R 55:925 Jl '50 480w

Reviewed by G. D. Harmon

Ann Am Acad 268:215 Mr '50 750w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 12 '50 190w

"Full of informative material and interesting data and comments." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 18:40 Ja '50 40w

Nation 171:44 Jl 8 '50 270w

"The failure to define a unifying theme is 'Young America's' central defect. Professor Riegel's scholarship benefits by the new facts and points of view which have emerged in the twenty years since 'The Rise of the Common Man.' Yet it lacks the flashes of brilliant insight which occasionally were produced when Fish's historical vision illuminated a mass of factual material. Still 'Young America' is to be warmly recommended for its faithful and entertaining picture of life in America a century ago." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 My 7 '50 850w

"Mr. Riegel's book is highly comprehensive, and, in general, is as amusing as it is instructive. Unhappily, however, like many other social histories, this work tends to put aside interpretation and to settle for a mere catalogue of objects and facts." Allan Nevins

N Y Times p4 D 18 '49 600w

"The work as a whole is scholarly, serious, and valuable. It does not bear any of the subtitles that have given easy clue to the defects of many of its predecessors—'Sentimental Years,' 'Fabulous Forties,' 'Feminine Fifties,' and the like. . . It does, however, have some of the characteristics of many books now appearing in the field of social history. The viewpoint of the photographer and the objective, neutral method of an impartial reporter are both a virtue and a defect. . . The author of 'Young America' covers many aspects of the decade with which he is concerned with an objectivity almost too evident. The stage is set, complete with all props, but it is without the actors whose motives and actions might give it significance." A. F. Tyler

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:11 Ja 21 '50 450w

"With its lively and humorous descriptions of most aspects of American life, Young America may be ranked as the best general study of a period."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:73 Mr '50 270w

RIENCOURT, AMAURY DE. Roof of the world; Tibet, key to Asia. 322p il maps $3.50 Rinehart

915.15 Tibet—Description and travel 50-6757

An account of the author's journey into Tibet in 1947. "The author believes that religion and mysticism are the motivating forces in the Orient, and he gives a highly interesting analysis of the situation, involving pacifist Hinduism, dynamic Mohammedanism, and Communism, which he gives logical reasons for classifying as a coldly fanatical religion." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 46:241; 260 Ap 1 '50; Ap 15 '50

Bookmark 9:184 My '50 30w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 30 '50 450w

Foreign Affairs 29:162 O '50 20w

"Invaluable to those seeking a concrete picture of Tibet's present position."

Kirkus 18:92 F 1 '50 120w

"Parts of the volume are worthwhile, but over-simplification has lessened the value of the whole." Donald Wasson

+ — Library J 75:557 Ap 1 '50 100w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 N 10 '50 90w

"There are in the middle of this volume thirty-three very fine photographs of scenes, prominent persons and types of humbler humanity, in and about Lhasa. . . The author's contacts with the occult will be fascinating reading to those who like to believe in it." Rodney Gilbert

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 23 '50 1050w

"There is intrinsic interest in the material and the interest is on the whole conveyed, but the style is unfortunately flat. Sometimes it has the ring of an elderly aunt's letters to nephews and nieces describing her first trip to Venice. Precisely because Lhasa is unique, its essence can be communicated only by one with literary mastery and this M. Riencourt sadly lacks." Nathaniel Peffer

N Y Times p29 Ap 16 '50 450w

"The whole account suffers from overemphasis on personal details on a book designed to deal with political matters. . . At any rate, in spite of its uneven quality, it does add to a general knowledge of this remote country." G. G. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 320w

RIESMAN, DAVID, and others. Lonely crowd; a study of the changing American character. 386p $4 Yale univ. press

136.4973 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 50-9967

"Study resulting from interdepartmental program of research in national policy organized in 1946 at Yale. Author, a member of the faculty at University of Chicago, discusses the processes of social-character formation, categorizes three character types, correlating them with major changes in population and technology, and describes the social behavior at once both cause and effect of each type. Attention is given to the character-pattern of middle class urban Americans in interaction with aspects of their work, leisure, politics, and child-raising activities." (Library J) Index.

"The main fault of this book, it seems, is that its conclusions are so largely based on untypical—though highly influential—areas like New York. Balancing data from rural districts and smaller cities seems lacking. An interesting study for sociologists, city planners, educationists and the like, and for laymen interested in modern communal phenomena, who have the patience to plough through the verbiage. Philip Wylie says much the same things with swift intuition and wit, but of course he does not carry the same academic prestige."

Kirkus 18:551 S 1 '50 270w

"For the specialist, but also for the intelligent reader conscious of the difference between his and other generations." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 130w

"Very uneven but always provocative, alternately brilliant and sluggish, exciting and exasperating." Irving Howe

+ — Nation 171:510 D 2 '50 1750w

"Throughout this book Mr. Riesman is often arresting in describing some facet of current behavior which supports his thesis. Yet the cumulative effect on the reader is one of dissatisfaction with the book's frequent lack of clarity, irritation with its overabundance of jargon and unnecessarily obscure terminology, and weariness with its obvious effort continually to shock the reader with novel and unconventional observations (not always meaningful or relevant) about familiar things. This is unfortunate, because despite these shortcomings and its excessive length 'The Lonely Crowd' contains much that will interest not only the scholar but also the general reader who is concerned about the integrity of the individual in a 'mass society.'" Morroe Berger

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 5 '50 1200w

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 30w

"His title is brilliant, and his subtitle, 'A Study of the Changing American Character,' is exact. But he relates significant changes in that character to the population curve, and right there this reviewer began to lose touch, for it seems to him that the relation is postulated, rather than established. Maybe it exists,

RIESMAN, DAVID—Continued
but David Riesman hasn't proved it here. . . Although Mr. Riesman cannot be said to have pinned the champion problem to the mat, he has struck a few telling blows. That is something—indeed in a day of facile, rather than steady thinking about democracy, that is much." G. W. Johnson
— + Survey 86:514 N '50 650w

RIETVELD, MRS JANE. Rocky Point campers; il. by [the author]. 94p $2 Viking 50-10310

A Nebraska family, consisting of the father, mother, grandfather, two children, and their dog, spend a vacation on a lake in Wisconsin. Father and mother pick cherries on a nearby farm to earn enough money for a car; and young Danny decides to work, too, to earn money for a folding boat.

Booklist 47:161 D 15 '50
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 30w

"A simple, happy story, well told and illustrated."
+ Horn Bk 26:470 N '50 80w
Kirkus 18:467 Ag 15 '50 120w

"Recommended for third and fourth grades." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 75:2018 N 15 '50 70w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 N '50

RIGG, J. LINTON. Bahama islands; il. by the author [ed. and designed by Eugene V. Connett]. 168p $7.50 Van Nostrand
656 Pilot guides. Bahamas 49-49185

Guide to cruising in the Bahamas, which gives detailed data on harbors, currents, sailing directions, etc. Contains seventeen original charts, and a few pages on Bahama cooking, including recipes.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:49 Ja 1 '50 30w

"Primarily for yachtsmen and other seafaring folk. But those who cannot tell the tiller from the mainsheet can learn much here about a region in which—as Mr. Rigg says—the Gulf Stream divides the sheep who stick to the mainland from the 'hardy and independent goats' who are not afraid of salt water even so far off shore." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 1 '50 80w
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 240w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Notebooks of Malte Laurids Brigge; tr. by M. D. Herter Norton. 237p $3.50 Norton 49-50028

New translation of a supposedly autobiographical novel first published in English under the title The Journal of My Other Self (Book Review Digest 1930, 1931).

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p3 My 30 '50 90w
Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 29 '49 1000w
Reviewed by Vivian Mercier
Commonweal 52:586 S 22 '50 460w
Reviewed by James Stern
New Repub 122:20 Ja 9 '50 450w

"This new rendering is painstakingly accurate and adds a series of notes that help to identify difficult allusions as well as to place the work in relation to Rilke's development, which last is important because of the work's semi-autobiographical character."
+ New Yorker 26:142 O 21 '50 100w

"M. D. Herter-Norton's new translation of the Notebooks of Malte Laurids Brigge replaces the older collaboration The Journal of My Other Self that appeared in English during the early thirties. In this edition the translator has corrected the linguistic inaccuracies and stylistic inconsistencies for which she was not solely responsible in the earlier version. Here at last is a reliable and finished rendering of the original, supplemented with such Notes as are indispensable for an understanding of the more recondite references in the text." Frank Wood
+ Poetry 76:97 My '50 370w

"Throughout [this book] Rilke demonstrates his vision, his penetration, his powers of transformation, his precise mastery of the intangible." John Derby
+ Yale R n s 39:563 spring '50 800w

RINEHART, MRS MARY (ROBERTS). Episode of the wandering knife; three mystery tales. 284p $2.50 Rinehart 50-4139

Three mystery stories, two of them of novelette length.

Booklist 46:353 Jl 15 '50

"The three tales will give Mary Rinehart's devotees hours of tense excitement." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 23 '50 300w
Kirkus 18:269 My 1 '50 100w
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 6 '50 230w

"Mrs. Rinehart, in her seventies, is still unquestionably the doyenne of the feminine (as opposed to the accidentally female) mystery novelists." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p11 Jl 2 '50 180w

"The author's prose may seem a bit leisurely to devotees of Sam Spade and Perry Mason, but it still has its appeal, and the plotting is, of course, impeccable."
+ New Yorker 26:76 Jl 22 '50 120w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 6 '50 250w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 Jl '50

RING, GRETE. Century of French painting, 1400-1500. 251p il $8.50 Phaidon
759.4 Painting, French [50-7280]

It is the editor's contention that French art during the period 1400 to 1500 had indigenous roots, and was not an outgrowth of Quattrocento Italy and Flanders, "but had assimilated something from other countries, made them her own, and imposed these contributions on the heritage of French mediaeval art, particularly sculpture. He discusses the work of the artists he has chosen, many of them known by such anonymous titles as The Rohan Master, . . . Maitre de S. Giles, Maitre de Moulins, as well as the more familiar cognomens, Fouquet, Charonton, Marmion, and he places them against the civilization of their times, the courts of Charles VII, of the Bourbons, the historical and social environment. In the main, the paintings here reproduced are easel paintings, and in other instances they are identified as miniatures, murals, book illumination, etc. Brief space is given to the patrons and sitters, and bits of biographical data. Data of interest to the specialist is included in the catalogue notes." (Kirkus)

"Another superb addition to the growing art library under the Phaidon Press imprint, distributed by Oxford."
+ Kirkus 18:154 Mr 1 '50 250w

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 70w

"Its one disadvantage is that it does not convey to the inexpert that sense of unity which the writer herself feels in the subject; but otherwise it is very well done." J. W.
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 D 6 '49 250w
Reviewed by David Carritt
New Statesman & Nation 39:310 Mr 18 '50 300w

"Miss Ring steers a cautious and authoritative (but unfortunately dry) path through the controversial subjects of attributions and Flemish and Italian influences, adding a valuable, scholarly point of view to a complicated field. Her essays and catalogue raisonné will interest scholars; for laymen the beauty of the chronologically arranged illustrations will be sufficient lure and a wonderful introduction to art which points logically to Cézanne." Aline Louchheim

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 9 '50 230w

"The period in French painting that this book covers is one that has not yet been extensively explored, and the thoroughness with which Dr. Ring has attacked the subject gives her book great value. It is very sensitively written, too."

+ New Yorker 26:98 Je 24 '50 90w

"The book will certainly appeal to the general reader; equally certainly will it become the indispensable handbook for the specialist. It is a perfect symbiosis of catalogue raisonné and picture-book. In choosing the illustrations (which are accompanied by notes on colour and preservation), Dr. Ring has laid emphasis on examples which show early French painting under its most favourable aspects; she has resisted the temptation to give prominence to rariora. This emphasis on quality has produced a pictorial anthology for which her readers must be grateful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 17 '50 1450w

RITCHIE, PATRICK DUNBAR. Chemistry of plastics and high polymers. 288p $4.50 Interscience

668.4 Plastics. Polymers and polymerization [49-11846]

"The uniqueness of the book is its aim and accomplishment of providing a compact, reasonably priced single volume, emphasizing almost exclusively the organic chemistry and its up-to-date industrial application of high polymers. Other reference works utilize the theoretical mathematical approach primarily, but Dr. Ritchie's development, without ignoring the fundamentals from which all research stems, wastes little time in providing the concepts and examples of useful polymerizations." Chem Eng

"The author's aims are fulfilled admirably. An immense amount of well-chosen information is concisely, yet clearly, presented. The book has many laudable features and the reviewer is glad to recommend it." M. L. Huggins

+ Chem & Eng N 28:284 Ja 23 '50 260w

"The chapters of the book are engagingly introduced by appropiate comments from such diversified personalities as Robert Hooke and Lewis Carroll's White Queen who sets the tenor of the part dealing with addition polymers by asking, 'Can you do addition? What's one and one and one and one and one and one and one and one and one and one?' The text culminates in the most mathematical of the chapters in which molecular structure is related to physical properties. Here, if at all, is a well written fragment which the engineer will relish. It's got equations and what chemical engineer worthy of the name doesn't delight in substituting in equations!" S. J. Canter

+ Chem Eng 57:252 F '50 500w

RITNER, MRS ANN KATHERINE (GILLILAND). Green bough. 255p $2.75 Lippincott

50-6576

The Goodall family worried when their prettiest daughter became interested in Walter Norris, who had once left town after some money had been missing from his father's bank. However Mr Goodall soon discovered that "Ella May and [automobile] engines seemed to bring out the best in Walter." The setting of this novel about Mr Goodall and his six children is a small Pennsylvania town in the period 1911-13.

Booklist 46:211; 246 Mr 1 '50; Ap 1 '50

"Miss Ritner has whipped together a pleasant cast of characters, placed them in a nostalgic enough setting, but she unhappily lets them sprawl clumsily through stock situations." Mary Sandrock

— + Cath World 171:231 Je '50 200w

Chicago Sun p5 My 16 '50 90w

"This is not superficial though it reads easily. Ella May's large motherless family are all characters in their own right. Ella May and Walter, rather irresponsible children when they fall in love, mature as their fragile first love deepens into understanding of one another's strength and weakness. Girls who liked Seventeenth Summer should enjoy this." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 26:398 S '50 80w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 75:2161 D 15 '50 30w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 16 '50 450w

"With gentle humor and sympathetic perception, Ann Ritner weaves a nostalgic tale of family life in a small Pennsylvania town at the turn of the century." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 30 '50 100w

"Mrs. Ritner's work is commendable and indeed praiseworthy, in spite of the defects of plot and to a less extent, those of characterization. Her treatment is undeniably sincere and she writes a compact, cleancut prose. Her conversations are particularly worthy of notice, for she catches to a considerable extent the thoughts, talk, and even the sounds of children." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 19 '50 600w

"The emotions of the various members of the family, their reactions to the situation, are brought out with honesty and understanding. . . One could wish that Miss Ritner had set her scene as of today. The problems might be different but her understanding of youth and her sincerity would make a family tale of 1950 a rather revealing record."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 Je 10 '50 230w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Jl 15 '50 130w

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). And then put out the light [Eng title: Policeman in the precinct]. 221p $2.25 Doubleday

50-7196

Detective story.

Booklist 46:353 Jl 15 '50

"Even at their hastiest and most hard-pressed the detective novels of E. C. R. Lorac are readable. But where she has relaxed, the consequence is extremely pleasing. 'And Then Put Out the Light' is as good as anything she has done." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun p5 Ap 28 '50 140w

Kirkus 18:149 Mr 1 '50 90w

"One of the advantages the English mystery writer has over his American cousin is the well established custom in England of approaching the mystery story as a novel rather than as an exercise in plot dynamics. E. C. R. Lorac is one of the best in this form, and her new novel, 'And Then Put Out the Light,' strengthens her position in the upper strata."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 7 '50 170w

"Of the Inspector's battle against the smug tyranny of a dean and the petty viciousness of his flock, Lorac makes not only a fine detective story but a fascinating regional novel." A. B.

+ N Y Times p20 Je 4 '50 130w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). Upstairs and downstairs [Eng title: Upstairs, downstairs]. 220p $2.25 Doubleday

50-8958

Detective story.

RIVETT, E. C.—Continued
Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 S 10 '50 70w
Kirkus 18:288 My 15 '50 90w

"An English detective story told on such a low level of emphasis that it is peculiarly lacking in excitement."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 13 '50 140w

"For the inveterate murder-puzzle fan who delights in the analysis of events in terms of seconds rather than minutes, this one should be a treat." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p25 Ag 6 '50 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 27 '50 80w
Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ag 5 '50 40w

RIVISE, MAURICE JOSEPH. Inside Western union; il. by John Fischetti. 248p $2.50 Sterling

384.1 Western union 50-8175

An account of some of the strange services that Western Union messengers have had to provide for their customers. The author is Western Union's consultant on special messenger service.

" 'Inside Western Union' is a series of running gags. Some of them would have been better had they been shorn (with typical W. U. brevity) of their vaudeville tags." Gilbert Millstein
N Y Times p40 Je 11 '50 180w

"There is nothing grimmer than a 'hilarious' anecdote that just isn't funny and M. J. Rivise, or 'Mike,' as he likes to be called, has filled a book with just such a collection." Lionel Olay
— Sat R of Lit 33:34 Jl 8 '50 340w

"The stories contain a warmth and humor that only a man with zest for living and a fascination for his job can achieve."
+ Springf'd Republican p12C Je 4 '50 120w

ROARK, GARLAND. Rainbow in the royals. 307p $3 Doubleday

50-10311

Historical novel of the 1850's when the California gold rush was of paramount interest. The story centers around the brothers Bill and Jim Quick, the sailing ships which they took to California, and the girl with whom they were both in love.

Booklist 47:116 N 15 '50

"Nautically speaking, I won't vouch for the accuracy of detail; it's not in my line. But for sheer pace of narrative, color, drama, it's top drawer picaresque adventure, with characterization secondary to story interest."
+ Kirkus 18:531 S 1 '50 150w

"Mr. Roark knows his sailing ships and writes of them vividly and affectionately. The description of the passage around the Horn is particularly well done. Like most writers in this field, however, he creates better ships than characters, and the reader is much more interested in the seamanship than in the romance. The period, and sea life in the heyday of American maritime history, are well drawn."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 26 '50 200w
N Y Times p29 N 19 '50 130w

"The author brings the seas, storms, and ships into focus with remarkable skill. His minor characters are rather colorful and credible. But the stalwart Jim and the buccaneering Bill, the serious-minded Ellen and the fickle Dora are more closely akin to the figureheads carved on the bows of the clipper ships than to the living creatures they should be." J. M. Grant
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:26 D 30 '50 250w

ROBERTS, CECIL. And so to Rome. 284p il $5 Macmillan

914.56 Rome (city)—Description 50-7975

Nine essays on the city of Rome and the pageant of history which it has seen in the last two thousand years. Contents: The castle of St. Angelo; Luther and Federico Gonzago; The dictator and the prince; The house of Doria; Princess Pauline Borghese; Raphael: a phase; Galileo and Milton; The prince, the lady, the poet; The Forum and the Palatine. Index.

"It is both less and more than a guidebook: less, because it leaves the tourist (or, this year, perhaps we should say the 'pilgrim') still needing maps, or data about hotels, restaurants and museums, the location of the American Express Co., and all the details about churches and monuments that make guidebooks so dull to read but so indispensable on the spot; more, because it tells scores of enlightening and entertaining true stories which are as intimately, though invisibly, attached to spots in Rome as ivy to an old wall." W. E. G.
Christian Century 67:823 Jl 5 '50 350w
Kirkus 18:193 Mr 15 '50 110w

"Cecil Roberts is at his best in what the French call la petite histoire, sidelights, the incidentals of love affairs, for instance. . . He is excellent when he follows the adventures of Englishmen in Rome and, as every one would be, delightful when he quotes from Browning. He is at his best—in his prologue and epilogue—when, without bothering too much about documentation, he looks out over the city and feels, quite eloquently, the way every one feels as he sees the gardens, the domes and the distant hills." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 18 '50 750w

"An entertaining book, which carries with it that plus value of making you want to know more of the people and places about which he writes. . . Mr. Roberts, who has some 25 books already to his credit, is a lucid and a polished writer. His book is 'bookish,' as a book on Rome almost has to be, but it is stimulating and suggestive. Its general effect is best summed up in the description of his own experience while writing it—'Every journey was rich and rewarding and the horizon ever receding.' " Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 4 '50 850w

"Cecil Roberts is a cultivated and witty Englishman who recently revisited Rome after an interval of thirty years. He says that he felt it a piece of effrontery to add another book to the many thousands about the city but he need have no misgivings for his 'And So to Rome' is one of the best of the lot." L. G. White
+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 Jl 1 '50 750w

ROBERTS, CHALMERS MCGEAGH. Washington, past and present; a pictorial history of the nation's capital. 218p $4.50 Public affairs press

975.3 Washington, D.C.—Views 49-50268

A pictorial history of Washington, D.C., composed of drawings, photographs, and brief text, describing the city from 1790 to the present. Index.

"A highly entertaining, informative, and nostalgic collection." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ja 8 '50 250w

"The story line of the narrative is chaotic, the pictures have not been selected with any eye for the aesthetic, and the reproduction is only fair. But the old buildings are pictured, and the passage of time and the tumultuous growth, the visages of statesmen and of the District of Columbia's people now and in the past, hold the attention, critical and uncritical. As in most scrap books, it is hard to find any order in the disorder." E. E.
Commonweal 51:589 Mr 10 '50 140w
Current Hist 18:230 Ap '50 20w
Manchester Guardian p5 F 24 '50 120w

"What the work sets out to do is remarkably well done." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '50 270w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 33:51 My 13 '50 140w

"This iconography of Washington is interesting to the general reader and fascinating to temporary or permanent residents in Washington. . . There are some strange omissions. . . Why is the bar of the Press Club, that spot where so much news has been shared and made, not shown? Mr. Roberts is not consistent in his captions."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p171 Mr 17 '50 1150w

ROBERTS, DAVID EVERETT. Psychotherapy and a Christian view of man. 161p $3 Scribner

201 Psychotherapy. Psychology, Religious 50-6770

"From the viewpoint of liberal Protestantism, here is a reinterpretation of the basic doctrines of Christian belief in the light of the science of psychiatry. Introductory chapters give a picture of the tenets and techniques of modern psychotherapy, as practiced by Horney and Fromm. Then the three doctrines of freewill, original sin, and salvation are reinterpreted in the light of what psychotherapy offers for the regeneration of man." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:298 Je 1 '50

"In view of the fact that some psychoanalysts frankly say that psychoanalysis is of value in perhaps five percent of all neuroses and that Freud, during his last ten years, according to Puner's life of Freud, 'seems to have lost faith altogether in the lasting therapeutic benefits of psychoanalysis,' it seems unjustifiable to base the argument of a book of this nature upon it." H. J. Simpson
Churchman 164:15 My 15 '50 310w

"This book performs with brilliance the task it sets for itself. Basic criticism of it can come only from those holding quite different views on either psychotherapy or theology." Seward Hiltner
+ Crozer Q 27:253 Jl '50 1550w

"This book is an effort to interpret psychotherapy to theologians, theology to psychotherapists and psychiatrists, and at the same time to make both fields and their interrelation intelligible to the layman. . . With the increased emphasis upon 'personal counseling' and with popular craving for 'peace of mind', 'peace of soul' and 'confident living' this book should be welcomed by clergy and laymen."
+ Kirkus 18:57 F 1 '50 190w

"Basically theological, this exposition will be welcomed by ministers and laymen alike. A more profound and constructive linking of these two areas of thinking than elsewhere available for the layman." M. E. Monroe
+ Library J 75:563 Ap 1 '50 110w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:296 S '50 260w

ROBERTS, H. ERNEST. Notes on the medieval monasteries and minsters of England and Wales. 160p pl $2.50 Macmillan

726.7 Monasteries. Architecture, Medieval [50-689]

"It has been my object to bring together in one book some account, though necessarily slight, of the Cathedrals, Minsters, Abbeys, and Priories of England and Wales as they existed at the outbreak of war in September, 1939." (Foreword) Arrangement is alphabetically by counties. Includes an alphabetical list of monasteries and minsters under the various orders, and a list of all other places where abbeys, priories, or friaries formerly existed and nothing now remains.

"For students of English ecclesiastical architecture, this should be a treasure. We are told that the author has given a lifetime of study to English monachism, and it is evident that the amount of detailed information here presented could scarcely have been acquired on easier terms. The book is virtually an illustrated catalogue of scores of monastic buildings. . . All these are carefully classified, geographically (by location) and monastically (by orders)."
+ Christian Century 67:1022 Ag 30 '50 250w

"It would be more serviceable if it were better arranged and indexed and contained references to fuller published descriptions, where these exist. Forty-eight photographs, including some uncommon views, are the most attractive part of the work, chosen as they are very carefully to illustrate types of all the usual conventual buildings." C. R. C.
Manchester Guardian p4 My 10 '49 120w

"These 'notes' should prove useful to the tourist or amateur who collects buildings as he travels. The serious student or scholar will find small nourishment." S. McK. Crosby
Sat R of Lit 33:42 Ap 1 '50 230w

ROBERTS, PATRICIA EASTERBROOK. Flower craft; il. by Jack Grainger. 177p $2.75 Crown

635.9663 Floral decoration 49-11880

"A handbook of basic information on the care and use of flowers; covering: bouquets, corsages, decorations, weddings, potted plants, arrangements, and all other elements of floristry for amateur and professional." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 46:153 Ja 1 '50
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '50

ROBERTSON, ALEC. Sacred music. (World of music ser) 72p il $2.50 Chanticleer

783.09 Church music 50-9657

Written for the layman this is a brief history of church music from the first century A.D. to the present day.

Booklist 47:77 O 15 '50

"Mr. Robertson is constrained by the seventy-two pages allowed to give his subject no more than a skillful lick and promise, even though he supplies 'Western' in the title, equates 'sacred' with 'church,' and eliminates consideration of congregational hymns, organ music, and the works of the small masters." C. K. Miller
Library J 75:1827 O 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by C. E. Vulliamy
Spec 184:488 N 10 '50 360w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p551 S 1 '50 300w

ROBERTSON, ARCHIBALD THOMAS. That old-time religion. 282p $3 Houghton

277.3 Sects. Revivals. U.S.—Religion 50-5680

"With a sympathetic feeling for the old-time religion, 'traditional Protestant Christianity . . . but first of all a personal religion,' the author traveled over the U.S. visiting churches of many denominations—Jehovah's Witnesses, Methodist, Baptist, the Great I Am Temple. Beginning with early American history he traces several sects through many changes and separations to the contemporary church. He finds that freedom and faith in the hearts of the American people cross church and political barriers, and the old-time religion seems to satisfy the needs of most Americans." Booklist

Booklist 46:165; 195 Ja 15 '50; F 15 '50
+ Bookmark 9:134 Mr '50 40w

"Unfortunately, Robertson's book does not live up to the lure and possibilities of its title as well as do books on the same subject by Marcus Bach and Dr. Charles S. Braden. But it is still worth looking into. What Robertson lacks in perception is partly compensated for by his reportorial style." J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun p7 F 19 '50 90w

Reviewed by John Astley-Cock
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 5 '50 350w

ROBERTSON, A. J.—Continued
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 67:464 Ap 12 '50 1150w

"A story as engaging as a number one piece of fiction but there is no fiction in it—just deep human interest, sympathetically portrayed." A. W. Taylor
+ Churchman 164:17 Jl '50 130w

"A lively, indigenous account of the faith to which three fifths of the nation adheres, brightened by humor, broadened by tolerance."
+ Kirkus 17:668 D 1 '49 190w

"Recommended for a highly specialized group only." R. P. Tubby
Library J 75:170 F 1 '50 110w
Nation 170:191 F 25 '50 30w

"Actually the autobiographical part of 'That Old-Time Religion' is its most engaging. There is a distinct drop in the temperature when the author must go back to the beginnings of American evangelical religion. . . The most admirable thing about Mr. Robertson's book is his acceptance of the right of manysided human nature to work out its own salvation. . . 'That Old-Time Religion' is entertaining enough to hold the reader's attention throughout." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 26 '50 900w

"Here is not a work of piety, but an effort at understanding that old-time religion at whose heart are charity and freedom. Mr. Robertson has made a survey of this 'real Christianity,' and despite finding excesses, he sees a common ground of freedom. His reporting is kindly and sincere, not lacking in humor; even his anecdotes that verge on the hackneyed are redeemed by their aptness." G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 5 '50 550w

"An extremely interesting book and probably a very important one. It is written with skill and good humor and, best of all, it is completely objective. The author is frankly in sympathy with his subject, but he doesn't try to sell the old-time religion; he simply tells where it is and how it's getting along. To read such a book in these dismal days of pressure groups, special pleading, and downright lying is a vast relief." Herbert Asbury
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 F 18 '50 750w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 F '50

ROBERTSON, CHARLEY. Shadow of a cloud. 277p $3 Harcourt
50-8822

A novel about running liquor from Kentucky to Detroit during the prohibition era. The central characters are Paul, who is working to earn money for his last two years of college; Max, who is very adept at attracting the ladies; Eva, a rich dipsomaniac; Stella, a school teacher; and Harry, who could write songs. A tragedy finally broke up the group, and Paul starts for the South, with the manuscript of his book, and a girl he picked up.

"It is a swiftly moving story, sad and angry at times, but with enough of the sights, sounds, and smells of the city and countryside to make it recommended reading." Richard Blakesley
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 13 '50 260w

"The Shadow of a Cloud is completely one-dimensional . . . starting with self-conscious realism and tortured description, progressing through amateur intrigue, and reaching its heights in adolescent 'purple passages' sprinkled with a little stream-of-consciousness. There is an excessive concentration upon such values as the color of cars and, of course, the measure of drink. It is a sort of naturalism, but entirely lacking in the sociological significance of Anderson, Norris, or Dreiser." W. H. Slavick
— Commonweal 52:517 S 1 '50 280w

"A competent, if never quite compelling, still life of the times."
+ — Kirkus 18:391 Jl 15 '50 150w

"Charley Robertson is a quiet and unhurried story-teller, whose novel carries a considerable sense of reality. These are quite believable people, and the lost and forgotten shadows of their lives, for the time of the telling, hold our interest and concern." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 13 '50 600w

"It is pleasant to record that with such thin material as this, Robertson has fashioned a tale that is absorbingly interesting from start to finish." Henry Cavendish
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '50 400w

"What 'Shadow of a Cloud' lacks in depth it makes up in pace. The rise and fall of Paul Worden is told in a breathless, breakneck fashion that generates no little interest on its own." W. R. W.
San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 26 '50 390w

"The calculated mechanics of plot—all this liquor running and night-club politics and the melodramatics around the girl Eva—work against the achievement of the book's real theme: the story of Paul. He is shrunken in stature by the triviality of the things he does and the words he speaks, so that he seems to us at least no dreamer, no writer at all, but just a little shiftless and often brainless guy in Detroit." N. L. Rothman
— Sat R of Lit 33:13 Ag 19 '50 330w

ROBERTSON, FRANK CHESTER. Ram in the thicket; an autobiography. 357p $3 Abelard
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-10497

"Frank Robertson, a prolific writer of westerns, has more than 50 novels and 1,000 magazine stories to his credit. In this, his autobiography, he deals only briefly with the years leading to his fame as a writer, and devotes most of the book to his childhood days in Idaho, Utah, and other parts of the West." Library J

"The author has retained the easy-going and convincing style which makes his novels so popular, and his portrayal of pioneer life, his sympathetic characterization of his parents, of their conversion to Mormonism and their fanatical adherence to this faith, makes delightful reading." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 140w

"Frank Robertson has written an autobiography as Western as sagebrush, as true as sunrise." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p19 O 29 '50 380w

ROBERTSON, MRS GLADYS VONDY, and GRAHAM, VERA M. Strange sea life; il. by Michael Bevans. 115p $2.50 Holt
591.92 Marine biology 50-7281

Facts about the habits and habitats of some of the extraordinary creatures of the sea. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:279 My 1 '50

"Young nature lovers, and especially those who are interested in marine life, will find this little volume of very real interest." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 4 '50 120w

"Fascinating collection of marine oddities. . . The prose is easy to read, nontechnical and imaginative, and the index will aid the young zoologist to identify specimens."
+ Kirkus 18:238 Ap 15 '50 210w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:637 Ap 15 '50 70w

"Recommended." M. I. Ross
+ Library J 75:880 My 15 '50 70w

"It makes a good introduction, a 'fact is stranger than fiction' book, to lure one on to more about sea life. Mr. Bevans's drawings are distinguished and dramatic, with their creatures making fantastic patterns against the black ocean depths."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 My 7 '50 140w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges
N Y Times p16 Je 18 '50 80w
Sat R of Lit 33:27 Jl 8 '50 60w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Dog next door; il. by Morgan Dennis. 222p $2.50 Viking

Dogs—Legends and stories 50-6484

The story of Hal Stockton who wanted a boat and a dog. A tree house made like the bridge of a ship satisfied him with the illusion of being on a boat, and taking care of a neighbor's boxer seemed to be a good way of obtaining a pet. Dog and boy faced separation when Beau was falsely accused of vicious behavior, but after the two pals rescued a lost child the town recognized them as a brave team. Hal then received the two things he wanted: the neighbor's dog and a boat from a grateful parent. For boys 9 to 12.

Booklist 46:266 Ap 15 '50

"It is a well-written story."
+ Bookmark 9:164 Ap '50 60w

"Well written and understanding story of a boy and dog's mutual devotion." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 30 '50 190w
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '50

"A very good dog and boy story."
+ Kirkus 18:64 F 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:633 Ap 15 '50 80w

"Recommended for dog lovers." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 75:880 My 15 '50 70w

"Boys of about ten to thirteen will enjoy this well-written tale." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 12 '50 140w

"Events seem to occur pretty much because people are the way they are, and everyone, including Beau, remains in character. This all makes for a refreshingly natural kind of suspense." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 26 '50 140w
Sat R of Lit 33:47 Ap 8 '50 170w
Wis Lib Bul 46:27 My '50

ROBERTSON, MICHAEL. Beyond the sunset. 212p $2.25 British bk. centre

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel [50-12923]

"Rocketed into the vast expanses of North America after five years as a German P. O. W., this young British officer has recorded his experiences in an unusual travel diary—both the record of an emotional adjustment and a fresh observation on American mores as seen through English eyes. . . At the war's end, he resigned his commission, bought himself a sleeping bag, an icebox, a red hat (he had heard that American hunters drew a bead on anything not red) and a station wagon. Thus equipped, he set out to explore in earnest." N Y Times

"In part, it differs little from so many of the others. Here again are the descriptions of New York, Broadway and the bright lights; examples of American hospitality, ebullience, and garishness. . . But, for the most part, here is description with a difference. Mr. Robertson is a bird lover and his interest in American wild-life took him into the wild and beautiful country of the Pacific North-West. With a real descriptive gift, Mr. Robertson has written of his journeys." + New Stateman & Nation 40:23 Jl 1 '50 180w

"This chronicle could have been written only by an Englishman. In these pages, migratory birds are as important as millionaires and a falling leaf is worth as much space as a rising film star. Mr. Robertson's eye is sharp, his judgments kindly, and he sets down his experiences without affectation." Sugden Tilley
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 23 '50 190w

ROBERTSON SCOTT, JOHN WILLIAM. Story of the Pall Mall gazette, of its first editor, Frederick Greenwood, and of its founder, George Murray Smith. 470p il $5 Oxford

072 Pall Mall gazette. Greenwood, Frederick. Smith, George

"The history of the second half of the nineteenth century as reflected in the career of the Pall Mall Gazette and the men who were responsible for it, until the death of its first editor, Frederick Greenwood, in the last weeks of 1909." New Statesman & Nation

"The book is highly discursive, but is all the better for that. It will be read not because of its central figures but for its wide range of literary anecdotage and its sidelights on English publishing and journalism in the last forty years of the century. Mr. Robertson Scott has gone to immense pains in research and they have been well rewarded."
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 7 '50 550w

"It is an engrossing and rewarding work, the fruit, plainly, of many years of reading, research and remembering, which will be plundered by makers of books on the Victorian period for a long time to come." Walter Allen
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:20 Jl 1 '50 1250w

"Although an interesting book in general, it is rather like a Victorian drawing room, potted palms, antimacassars, and all. It suffers from having a great mass of materials insufficiently organized and welded together. Mr. Robertson Scott, himself a retired sub-editor of the Pall Mall, should have saved a few blue pencils for his book." Robert Halsband
Sat R of Lit 33:35 O 28 '50 320w

Reviewed by Wilson Harris
Spec 184:764 Je 2 '50 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 23 '50 2050w

ROBINSON, DUANE MORRIS. Chance to belong; story of the Los Angeles youth project, 1943-1949; foreword by C. Whit Pfeiffer. 173p il $5 Womans press

301.1584 Los Angeles youth project. Youth 50-5196

"A detailed account of the attempt to control juvenile delinquency through planned coordination of welfare, police, recreation, and other services. The record of initial problems, plans for solution, practical application, difficulties, and accomplishments is valuable not only as a history of this venture but as a guide to other communities." Booklist

Reviewed by Harold Finestone
Am J Soc 56:211 S '50 1050w
Booklist 46:184 F 1 '50

"A technical document, this book should provide valuable guidance in any community with a similar problem." Gladwin Hill
+ N Y Times p25 F 19 '50 370w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Father and the mountains; pictures by Dorothy Bayley Morse. 209p $2.50 Oxford

50-6923

Novel of a New England girlhood for ages twelve to sixteen. It is based upon the author's own memories, and pictures life in a Methodist minister's household in the 1890's or a little later.

Booklist 46:307 Je 1 '50

"Wholly free from preaching, the story will yet bring not only pleasure but a glow of faith in spiritual values to older women as well as to girls." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 26:286 Jl '50 120w

"Has an atmospheric charm, but may be too slow-moving for many. . . Although a rambling portrait of a family is accepted, by older readers used to an oblique approach, readers of this age group [six to fourteen] still demand a tighter story with a faster pace."
Kirkus 18:207 Ap 1 '50 160w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE—Continued
Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:642 Ap 15 '50 50w

"Any who today love Greylock, Equinox, Mount Washington, or who perhaps knew the old Green Mountain Academy, will especially enjoy these reminiscences of the nineties. To others it offers a most readable story. . . For all its charm and humor, it is a rather serious book, with thoughtful poetic overtones." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Ap 16 '50 220w

"Based on her own memories and deeper-laid family memories, Gertrude Robinson's narrative is slightly disguised as fiction, but it has the ring of true experience. . . It is a family which one comes to love for its gallantry, its steadfastness, its respect for knowledge, earned the hard way. The Rowsons knew how to enjoy themselves, too, and Father letting out a tuck on the race-track is something to remember." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 30 '50 180w

"Older girls will be particularly interested in the picture of life in a girls' academy."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:23 My '50

ROBINSON, HENRY MORTON. The cardinal. 579p $3.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

A biographical novel which follows the career of an American Roman Catholic priest from the beginning of one World war to the beginning of the second. The chief character, the author says, is fictional tho the portrait is based to some extent on several priests the author has known.

"The author has woven into his story much embattled exposition of Catholic doctrine and scathing attacks on such practices as birth control. There is the essence, here, of half a dozen tracts, and some non-Catholic readers may find the book's militancy sometimes disconcerting. From the standpoint of craftsmanship, The Cardinal is a performance of remarkable virtuosity." C. J. Rolo
+ — Atlantic 185:82 My '50 950w
Booklist 46:226; 262 Mr 15 '50; Ap 15 '50
Bookmark 9:186 My '50 60w

"The basic truths of the Faith are open to misinterpretation because they are presented in such elaborately staged dramatics. As entertainment, the novel moves swiftly if sometimes a little too patly, through Boston, the drawing rooms of Italian nobility, and Church ritual. Faith, morals and Church politics in operation are tidily presented. . . Though a priest is the hero, the theme of the priesthood is not developed with any depth or authority. This is merely a grade B rapid movement novel which treats of today's American priesthood with glibness."
— + Cath World 171:71 Ap '50 300w

"The excellence of the novel lies in the fact the ecclesiastical robes of its principal characters are never used to obscure their individual, human qualities and relationships. . . Protestants and others whose doctrinal position is not that of the Roman Catholic Church will have a few reservations. . . I was disappointed that an author who could write in his preface that 'faith, hope and compassion animate men of good will everywhere' could have written this book without admitting the existence of a Protestant clergyman as able and devoted as Stephen Fermoyle. . . Many others will demur at the author's acceptance of the doctrine that Stephen was right in destroying his sister's capacity for love, in allowing the same sister to die to save her baby or in his assumption that it is right for the state to forbid the dissemination of information on any topic (in this case birth control). Subject to these reservations, I found 'The Cardinal' a pleasure to read." Emmett Dedmon
+ — Chicago Sun p21 Mr 26 '50 650w

" 'The Cardinal' deserves and will surely receive wide popular attention. Some persons may be disturbed by its passages of surface handling; others—in a quite different way—by its very forthrightness. But for most readers this novel with its combination of large colorful subject and fine narrative power, will rightly seem a valiant, impressive, and altogether memorable work of fiction." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 9 '50 650w

"Mr. Robinson is a poor novelist, but he is a good writer. His ardor carries him into some prolixity and, as an inventor of episodes, his imagination is extravagant and unchecked by any adequate sense of probability. But his style is colorful, his changes of pace give good contrast, and the whole is very pleasant reading. I'd call it a praiseworthy piece of propaganda." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:648 My 24 '50 1600w

"The references to Protestants and Protestantism are invariably supercilious and bitter. There is scarcely a friendly reference to a Protestant. The scene at an inter-faith meeting is a gross travesty of such meetings as this reviewer has observed them. The effort to show American Roman Catholic leadership deeply committed to a true separation of church and state is not convincing in the light of many contemporary events."
Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 25 '50 600w

"The Cardinal is like an absurdly oversized version of one of those tract-in-dialogue pamphlets found in the rear of a church. It is quite evident that the author went about writing it with admirable devotion and determination—perhaps he really intended to write the Answer to Blanshard and then later decided to put it to music, contriving situations and incidents to fit each point as he checked it off the list. This reviewer found it hard to take the book seriously as a novel. Somehow I got the distinct impression that Mr. Robinson, who knows his way around the New York publishing world, felt the same way." John Cogley
Commonweal 52:26 Ap 14 '50 600w
Kirkus 18:138 Mr 1 '50 550w

"An excellent book. Highly recommended." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:696 Ap 15 '50 130w

"Henry Morton Robinson co-authored a treatise called 'A Skeleton Key to Finnegan's Wake,' and students of James Joyce hailed it as a scholarly achievement. They will be understandably puzzled by Mr. Robinson's current novel, 'The Cardinal.' . . Stephen's incredible erudition, his genius for diplomacy, his linguistic eminence, his capacity for never being wrong, may or may not delight the readers. Those who liked the Lanny Budd books will enjoy 'The Cardinal.' It is not recommended for those who liked 'The Skeleton Key to Finnegan's Wake.' " Quentin Reynolds
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 26 '50 1050w

"Mr. Robinson is a writer who has labored hard at his trade. Even when he is working in cardboard, he manages his cut-outs expertly. In the sequence devoted to Stephen's first pastorate, in his depiction of the opportunistic, thoroughly human Cardinal who teaches Stephen the fundamentals of Roman Catholic leadership, he brings off his effects with three-dimensional brilliance. And even when his hero is out-Budding Lanny (as liaison between F. D. R. and the Vatican), or outmaneuvering Ku Kluxers and Planned Motherhood Leagues, he never loses his firm grip on the reader's attention." C. V. Terry
+ — N Y Times p34 Mr 26 '50 650w
New Yorker 26:109 Ap 1 '50 160w

"One of the obvious answers to the question, why did Mr. Robinson write 'The Cardinal' might be that he wrote it to attack the complacent materialism of the present, to show up what people are doing with prosperity and leisure when they glorify material gods. But the novel is not a diatribe. Its general drift is on the affirmative side. Employing a technique which is direct and explicit, though we must admit a tendency to overwork noble adjectives, Mr. Robinson brings before you his version of the contemporary scene. He brings to that version intellectual comprehension and the resources of a seasoned writer's sympathy and ability." Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 9 '50 850w

"It is a story to challenge the powers of any novelist, for it requires its author to portray convincingly many varieties of priestly character as found on all levels of eminence; to write with authority of Catholic doctrine, practice, ritual, and pageantry, and to prove himself at home in scenes as diverse as a poverty-stricken New England parish, the palaces of Roman Neri society and the most inaccessible rooms of the Vatican. . . One has read 'The Cardinal' with much pleasure and a large measure of respect, and one knows that this experience will soon be shared by readers in the tens of thousands." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 Mr 25 '50 1150w

"It contains too many lush purple passages, passages any serious writer should blush to compose, it is infested with stilted conversational exchanges, incredibly inept and awkward, and verbose paddng accounts for a good eighth of the novel. However, none of these justifiably critical carpings will hinder the undoubted tremendous popularity which 'The Cardinal' will enjoy." L. S. Munn
— Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 16 '50 800w

Time 55:96 Ap 3 '50 500w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:284 S '50 260w
Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Jl '50

ROBINSON, JAMES HERMAN. Road without turning; an autobiography. 312p $3 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-9789

Autobiography of a Negro minister, pastor of the Church of the Master (Presbyterian) in New York city.

Booklist 47:60 O 1 '50

"The complexity of the race problem, the worldwide ramifications of the issues involved, are vividly demonstrated in Reverend Robinson's forthright personal history. . . One might still ask for more assurance from the author that he recognizes gentleness and humility and compassionate warmth of heart toward all mankind as Christian precepts equal in importance with justice and integrity and righteous zeal. Nevertheless, whatever the reader's own convictions, whatever aspects of the subject remain unexplored, there is much material here for sober reflection." M. W. Stoer
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 30 '50 650w

"We have had a large number of books about Negroes and a considerable number of autobiographies of Negroes but none is more deserving of a wide reading than this life story of the pastor of the Church of the Master in New York. It may not rank high for its literary style, for the author makes no pretense of that. It is as if this quiet-spoken Negro minister were sitting across from you, telling the story of his life."
+ Kirkus 18:594 O 1 '50 340w

"Although not possessing the literary grace of the great Negro biographies, this book is surpassed by none in its grim truth and in its illuminating message to the white world. Highly recommended." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 75:1403 S 1 '50 140w

"Alike as personal history, social study, and dynamic plea for decency, this vividly readable autobiography is a stimulating and important document."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:56 O 7 '50 360w

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Deepening year. 247p $3 Westminster press 50-9535

A family chronicle, describing the year the Denby family spent in a summer colony near New York city, when the head of the family was threatened with blindness. In that year the five Denbys grew closer together and met and conquered their many problems.

Booklist 47:116 N 15 '50
Kirkus 18:482 Ag 15 '50 190w

"A delightful book, full of interesting people and a love of nature that is most engaging." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 110w

"Mabel Louise Robinson has written a neat story, neatly plotted, neatly tied up at the end. Unfortunately she has largely depended on clichés for her situations, for emotions, even perhaps for characters. The result is a book less ambitious than it might have been as a study of a family growing through deprivation."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p46 D 3 '50 270w
San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 26 '50 380w

"Miss Robinson must love children, judging from the delightful portraits of the three here. One likes all the Denbys, in fact, cares what happens to them, wants their difficulties to resolve. . . It's a warm, readable story. One cannot help feeling glad the year brought the Denby's happiness." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 33:35 N 4 '50 300w

ROCHE, ROGER FRISON-. See Frison-Roche, R.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN EMPIRE MAGAZINE. See Denver Post

RODDA, WILLIAM H. Inland marine and transportation insurance. 539p $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

368.2 Insurance, Inland marine

"The infant of American insurance, but an infant of phenomenal growth, inland marine insurance has taken on some of the characteristics of bailment and common carrier liability, of fire and casualty insurance, but has retained basically the breadth and capacity for ready adjustment to extraordinary needs of ocean marine insurance. This book provides a discussion of present status and of the manifold, and strange, special coverages available." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:329 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 19 '50 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:403 Mr 1 '50 80w

ROE, IVAN. Set free Barabbas [Eng title: The green tree and the dry]. 250p $2.75 Harper 50-5142

A novel of a revolution on a Mediterranean island. The return of Daniele, an escaped political prisoner, rouses the people to an attempt to seize the island from the hands of the police state which has been oppressing them. In the end the revolt fails and Daniele, who has believed himself the savior of the peasants, dies.

"There's some brilliant writing here, but an odd obliqueness of approach creates an illusion of arrested motion that robs the story of the pace, the development it suggests. Interesting introduction of a new writer."
+ — Kirkus 17:657 D 1 '49 370w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 My 19 '50 40w

"The effect of this first novel is rather as though the immortal Mrs. Glyn should try her hand at the maquis and the resistance. It has not her lusciousness, but only she (I should have thought) would have imagined it possible that a resistance leader, on the run from police and hiding for his life behind a bedroom curtain, should throw escape and caution to the winds because of the green eyes and cold, blonde beauty of the superb Englishwoman to whom the bedroom belongs." Margaret Lane

ROE, IVAN—Continued
— New Statesman & Nation 39:614 My 27 '50 220w

"In his first novel, 'Set Free Barabbas,' Mr. Ivan Roe has demonstrated both craftsmanship and a majority unusual in so young a writer." E. L. Acken
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 5 '50 450w

"Only in the final scene . . . does Mr. Roe's writing show any particular power or originality. 'Set Free Barabbas' must be judged in terms of adventure fiction, since it is cast in that mold. Measured by that yardstick, it must be set down as a rather mediocre performance." Louis Collins
— + N Y Times p27 F 12 '50 200w
New Yorker 25:93 F 4 '50 120w

"What could have turned into an exciting tale of suspense . . . slumps lifeless into a miasma of talk and random thoughts spoken by characters in whom the reader has little interest and less concern. For to succeed a book like this must make its main character—the revolutionary—of vital interest to the reader. Daniele Maroc is worshiped by his little brother and a senile old man, but he is never made real or alive enough so that this worship can be shared." A. C. Fields
— Sat R of Lit 33:32 Mr 11 '50 750w
Springf'd Republican p3D F 26 '50 140w

ROEDER, WILLIAM. Jackie Robinson. (Most valuable player ser) 183p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.
B or 92 Robinson, John Roosevelt. Baseball
50-7863

The life story of Jackie Robinson, famous second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The author describes in detail Robinson's struggle to get into the big league, because of his race; his ample help from Branch Rickey; and gives some account of his home life. Index.

Booklist 46:320 Je 15 '50
Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 11 '50 50w

"Somewhat sedate, factual biography. . . Mr. Roeder's story differs from an Alger novel in being true, and in having for its hero a boy whose obstacles to success were the usual ones plus the barrier of race. The facts of Jackie Robinson's story are well presented." Youra Qualls
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 17 '50 450w
Kirkus 18:225 Ap 1 '50 240w

"In straightforward style, a fine appreciation of Jackie, and excellent handling of colored-player problem." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1191 Jl '50 20w
Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 4 '50 200w
Reviewed by Harvey Breit
N Y Times p6 My 21 '50 500w
Reviewed by Robert Cousins
Sat R of Lit 33:10 Jl 15 '50 900w

"This 'most valuable player series' biography is tops for sparkling biography, intelligent reporting and objective insight."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:27 Je '50

ROEDOCKER, LOUISE. Furious winter. 207p $3 Crown
50-3233

A novel describing the Thorson family and their cruelty to each other. The daughter became insane, one son committed suicide, but the younger son escaped in time. The setting is a small Minnesota town.

"A strong dose of humanity tortured by frustrations, sub-conscious drives, this is not for the reader seeking entertainment only nor for those demanding subtlety and discrimination."
— Kirkus 18:185 Mr 15 '50 170w

"This first published novel by Louise Roedocker is somber reading and it carries considerable convictions: One only hopes there are not many towns where pioneer energies have undergone so devasting a perversion. Passionately as the author hates the life of Pine Center, she gives also understanding of the weight of guilt and fear and boredom that impelled its people so often to act cruelly to one another or themselves or to show a specious kindness only as a means of self-exoneration." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 11 '50 550w
Reviewed by B. V. Winebaum
N Y Times p23 Je 18 '50 80w

"The author's Thorsons are unsympathetic people, but through some mysterious combination of vigor and understanding she succeeds in bringing them to full human size, without charm or much intelligence but still alive and talking."
New Yorker 26:118 My 20 '50 90w
Sat R of Lit 33:32 Jl 15 '50 150w

ROELKER, WILLIAM GREENE, ed. Benjamin Franklin and Catharine Ray Greene. See Franklin, B., and Greene, C. R. Their correspondence

ROEPKE, WILHELM. See Röpke, W.

ROGERS, STANLEY REGINALD HARRY. The sailing ship; a study in beauty; il. by the author. 98p $7.50 Harper
623.822 Sailing vessels 50-8168

A British marine painter and author of books on ships and the sea, describes the construction, evolution, and character of the sailing ship. In separate chapters he takes up the hull, the sails, the rigging, ship decoration, the art of the shipwright, wooden ships and iron ships, the lure of ship models, and the fore-and-afters.

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

"It combines the sailor-historian's point of view with that of a talented marine artist. . . The lure of ship models and the fore-and-afters [the cutters, sloops, schooners, and the rest] are skilfully sketched in word and picture." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 11 '50 240w

"A book to delight those who know the sea and sailing vessels by personal experience or vicariously. . . A beautiful book on all counts."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:23 Je '50

ROHDE, PEGGY ANN. Making built-in furniture. 114p il $1.50 McBride
684 Furniture 50-9658

Chiefly devoted to suggestions on what types of built in furniture would be attractive and useful to suit various needs and locations in the one room apartment, or in larger homes in living rooms, bed rooms, kitchens, bath rooms, etc. Some attention is given to standard measurements.

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 22 '50 80w

"In spite of its title this book contains almost nothing on the construction of built-in furniture. It does contain some good ideas about the design of built-in furniture but not many, considering the complexity of the subject." R. R. Hawkins
— + Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 70w

ROHRLICH, CHESTER. Organizing corporate and other business enterprises; ed, Arthur I. Winard. 533p $12 Matthew Bender & co, inc, 109 State st, Albany 1, N.Y.
658.1 Corporation law. Commercial law

"Offers guidance in dealing with the many legal problems involved in the organization of a new business, from the conception of the idea on through the death of the owners. Cites leading and illustrative cases and typical statutes pertaining to the various aspects of commercial law covered here." Management R

"This is a book which makes eminently good sense. An appropriate subtitle would be 'A Business Planner's Handbook.' . . Since he has limited himself to a single volume of moderate size, his methods have to be suggestive rather than exhaustive." R. H. Field
+ Harvard Law R 63:727 F '50 950w
Management R 38:583 O '49 50w

ROJANKOVSKY, FEODOR. Great big animal book; pictures by [the author]. $1 Simon & Schuster

"Ten outsize, double-page pictures of assorted barnyard mothers and their babies, briefly captioned, make a first animal book for the very young." N Y Times

Kirkus 18:329 Je 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 75:1307 Ag '50 70w

"This famous artist has painted [the animals] all in full color, with faithful realism. Yet oddly enough the effect is far from artistic and makes one think of other realistic farm books done by far less famous people with decided preference. However, such a book has a very real use. Aside from the audience which will not care about its art but welcome it as a good gift for the price, there are all the nursery schools who have been praying for color books big enough to hold up before those youngest eyes which want their pictures big. For them it is a boon indeed." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 30 '50 180w

"The pictures aren't up to Mr. Rojankovsky's usual standard, being more static and less imaginative and witty than was his earlier work. Nevertheless, the colors are full and pleasant, the fur and feathers convincingly soft, and the large scale makes identification of the various animals easy for young eyes." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p18 Je 25 '50 90w
Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 30 '50 90w

RONSON, HARVEY. Advertising dictionary of selling words, phrases, and appeals. 365p $5 Ronald

659.1322 Advertising—Dictionaries 49-11590

"Alphabetically arranged, the most commonly used names of 228 products and services most advertised, with many cross-references in the text, and an index. For each product sales words and phrases are placed under: 'General Appeals,' applying to the product as a whole, broken down by aspects or qualities; 'Specific Appeals,' divided under specific parts of the whole article. An easy-to-use reference aid to the fagged advertising copywriter." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 74:1825 D 1 '49 80w

"A useful reference tool, the Dictionary has been described as 'the copywriter's Roget.'"
+ Special Libraries 41:145 Ap '50 60w

ROOKE, DAPHNE. Grove of fever trees. 246p $2.75 Houghton

50-6036

Dramatic tale of life in a lonely stretch of Zululand, north of Durban. It is told by Danny Ashburn, a half mad invalid, whose memory for detail is intact. He goes back over the years, describing the emotional upsets and jealousies, which had made up the lives of the Ashburns and Elliots, and ends with the "accident" which doomed him to live out his life in a wheel chair.

Booklist 46:167; 232 Ja 15 '50; Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 16 '50 550w

"It is an unedifying spectacle, at best. True, there is plenty of literary precedent for a Caliban, but Miss Rooke's handsome mooncalf does not succeed in really opening up the shadowy vistas of those darker regions of thought in which he dwells. Instead, he seems to be merely reviewing a nightmare with a sort of macabre glee." M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 11 '50 360w

"Fears, quiescent and aroused, the darkness of the mad mind are linked in a sinister melodrama of unusual background."
Kirkus 18:31 Ja 15 '50 180w

"Suspense is well sustained; characterization is convincing. No purple passages. . . Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 75:172 F 1 '50 130w

"This compelling narrative is not burdened with morals. It is simply a first-rate, exotic thriller about the distortions possible to lives when fear, hate and love drive people to irrational actions. . . The African contrast of sun and dark shadow beautifully illuminates the psychological conflicts in the families, but it is not overdone. The author's handling of horror is too well founded on characters worth knowing to cheapen the story or let it drop into sensation for sensation's sake." Margaret Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 19 '50 850w

"Miss Rooke writes moderately well, and lovers of horror (and of people with dark pasts) will find that 'A Grove of Fever Trees' contains its quota of chills." John Cournos
N Y Times p29 Mr 12 '50 230w

"Miss Rooke's unwillingness, or maybe her inability to put her foot on the brakes is perhaps the most exasperating feature of this promising, up-and-down piece of work."
+ — New Yorker 26:100 Mr 4 '50 200w

"'A Grove of Fever Trees' is one of the better products of South Africa's literary resurgence. . . For a first novel, this is a surprisingly poised performance. Admittedly, Miss Rooke's plot and her people are highly colored being her projection of Nature's violence in her characters. But here, without doubt, is a genuine storyteller who grips and retains the reader's attention from the first page to the last of her brooding tale. Her vivid imagination, virtuoso narrative and velvet-glove puissance make this a book to remember." John Barkham
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 Mr 4 '50 650w

ROOSEVELT, ANNA, and DOYLE, LEO. Your pregnancy. 178p $2.50 Holt

618.2 Pregnancy 50-10124

"Very simple, general information that every pregnant woman should have. . . There is advice also for the prospective father—his responsibility and need of knowledge about his wife's pregnancy and about the baby soon to arrive." (Library J) Glossary. No index.

Booklist 47:91 N 1 '50

"There's nothing to quarrel with here and this should have a reassuring, reader value."
+ Kirkus 18:456 Ag 1 '50 150w

"Simply presented advice for the uninitiated. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:1403 S 1 '50 110w

ROOSEVELT, ELEANOR (ROOSEVELT) (MRS FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT), and FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE. Partners; the United Nations and youth. 206p il $3 Doubleday

326.7 United nations—Juvenile literature. Youth 50-10970

"A book to strengthen the ideals of young people and show them how the United Nations is living up to them. In vivid text, illustrated by fine pictures, it tells of girls and boys in distant parts of the world who are being awakened to faith in the brotherhood of man-

ROOSEVELT, ELEANOR—Continued
kind and to new and better ways of life through the activities of the United Nations." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 47:176 Ja 1 '51

"A splendid book with a great promise of 'one world.' " E. C. I.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '50 150w

"Don't miss this."
+ Kirkus 18:669 N 1 '50 210w

"Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ferris are to be congratulated on writing a study of the United Nations that is suitable for younger readers." T. J. Hamilton
+ N Y Times p42 N 19 '50 320w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. As FDR said; a treasury of his speeches, conversations and writings, by Frank Kingdon. 256p $2.50 Duell

308.1 50-10087

Short extracts from speeches and writings of Roosevelt, and some anecdotes, connected by commentary by the editor. Index.

Booklist 47:89 N 1 '50
Springf'd Republican p19A O 15 '50 110w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. F.D.R: his personal letters, 1928-1945; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt; ed. by Elliott Roosevelt; assisted by Joseph P. Lash. 2v $10 Duell

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

"These letters cover the years 1928-1945, beginning with Roosevelt's term as Governor of New York and ending with a brief note to Frank Murphy, April 9, 1945." Library J

"This great wealth of information is enormously enhanced by the editor's running comment explaining people and events. Cannot be recommended too highly." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:2077 D 1 '50 130w

"One of the most fascinating books of our time." Ralph McGill
+ New Repub 123:19 D 18 '50 1400w

"What is most wonderful in these letters—and I believe it will be more evidently wonderful when the published record is complete—is the evidence that they provide of the growth under fire of an American (and an American born with a Stuart silver spoon in his mouth) into maturity and greatness. The early letters reveal his charm and humor and courage, but give little suggestion of his ultimate size." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 17 '50 1350w

"These two large and well-edited volumes merit a place beside the reminiscences of Hull, Stimson and Eisenhower, and the 'intimate history' that Sherwood wrote of Harry Hopkins." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p6 N 26 '50 2300w

Reviewed by R. H. Rovere
New Yorker 26:66 D 23 '50 900w

Reviewed by Carroll Kilpatrick
San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 17 '50 900w

Time 56:108 D 11 '50 800w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Public papers. See United States. President, 1933-1945 (F. D. Roosevelt)

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Wit and wisdom of Franklin D. Roosevelt; ed. with an introd. by Maxwell Meyersohn; with the collaboration of Adele Archer. 154p $2 Beacon press

308.1 50-10076

Short quotations from Roosevelt's addresses and papers arranged by 22 topics: democracy; taxes; art; etc. List of sources.

Booklist 47:89 N 1 '50

"In view of the amount of ghost-writing that necessarily goes into the public utterances of any President, it does not seem hypercritical to suggest that a considerable part of the materials here collected is actually pseudonymous. The substance represents Roosevelt's views. The epigrammatic form does not necessarily represent his verbal skill." W. E. G.
Christian Century 67:1361 N 15 '50 230w

ROPKE, WILHELM. Social crisis of our time [tr. by Annette and Peter Schiffer Jacobson]. 260p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

330.1 Economic policy. Industry—Organization, control, etc.

"In this searching book, Wilhelm Röpke, Professor of Economics at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva, Switzerland, diagnoses the sickness of modern civilization, lays bare its causes, and outlines an anti-Utopian Utopia which we can construct for the future, if we have the required moral stamina." (N Y Times) The book is a translation of the 1948 edition of Röpke's Die Gesellschaftskrisis der Gegenwart, first published in 1942. Index.

Booklist 47:56 O 1 '50

"At its worst the book sinks to the level of intelligent afterdinner conversation, with its broad and unsupported generalizations and somewhat airy interpretations of historical development. It is by no means the last word on its subject, but it is an intelligent and often an inspiring word." Kenneth Boulding
+ — Christian Century 67:1295 N 1 '50 750w

"This is an ambitious, learned, and thoughtful book." H. M. Oliver + J Pol Econ 58:549 D '50 700w

Kirkus 18:541 S 1 '50 280w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman
N Y Times p20 N 19 '50 230w

"Though Mr. Röpke adds a number of practical suggestions in the economic field, his solution is primarily based on a revival of the growth of intellectual and moral maturity. His book does not appeal to any single group and its special interests. On the contrary, to him it seems the great mistake of the past to appeal to the 'interest' of the people, rather than to what is common to them all, 'reason and an elementary sense of decency, justice, order, community spirit, chivalry, and a conciliatory disposition.' " Hans Kohn
Sat R of Lit 33:12 N 11 '50 900w

RORIMER, JAMES JOSEPH, and RABIN, GILBERT. Survival; the salvage and protection of art in war. 291p il $4 Abelard press inc, 381 4th av, N.Y. 16

940.53187 World war, 1939-1945—Art and the war 50-8442

"The experiences of an officer assigned to the Monuments, Fine Arts and Archives section of Civil Affairs in France and Germany during 1944 and 1945." (N Y Times) The author is director of The Cloisters and curator of medieval art of the Metropolitan museum of art. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:2079 D 1 '50 140w

"A carefully documented book of adventure. Its net impact is an argument for civilization." S. L. F.
+ Nation 171:320 O 7 '50 230w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 123:24 D 11 '50 70w

"Since Rorimer's assignment took him to Paris, when that city was first liberated, and later into Southern Germany with the Seventh Army, 'Survival' is interesting, often exciting, reading." S. McK. Crosby
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '50 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 5 '50 220w

Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ag 5 '50 270w

Reviewed by W. G. Rogers
Springf'd Republican p9B Jl 2 '50 600w

ROSAIRE, FORREST. Uneasy years. 270p $3 Knopf
50-13188

A novel of family life in Chicago. Mrs Conmee, businesslike and efficient, is planning secretly to divorce her charming but weak-willed husband tho she knows her children will oppose her. The promise of a legacy makes the move possible but in the end the children win out.

Booklist 47:76 O 15 '50

"'The Uneasy Years' is not a novel to miss. It has the tears of things in it and a noble compassion. In a distinguished manner, it fulfills the high function of humane art and ministers to the deepest needs of the human spirit." Edward Wagenknecht
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 17 '50 500w

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 14 '50 190w

"Some of the actualities faced by an average family, but not for the average reader."
Kirkus 18:431 Ag 1 '50 150w

"Strong and sure in plot and characterization, and recommended for all collections intending to include the best current serious fiction." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 100w

"As a sensitive study in the parental relationship and the emergence from childish idealism to an awareness of adult realities, 'The Uneasy Years' has merit, but one cannot help wishing it had been less cluttered up with plot. The happy ending has an air of being gift-wrapped for the occasion." James Hilton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 8 '50 500w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren
N Y Times p32 N 5 '50 360w

"This is a true-to-life story, faithful in every detail to the pictures in the family album, but considerably weakened by the fact that the misery in the Conmee household arises not so much from the clash of personalities as from the lack of enough money to live on."
New Yorker 26:102 S 30 '50 110w

"The novel is well thought out, and the writing reveals commendable skill." John Cournos
+ Sat R of Lit 33:45 O 21 '50 230w

ROSE, ANNA PERROTT. See Wright, A. M. R.

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL. Negro's morale; group identification and protest. 153p $2.50 Univ. of Minn.
325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions
49-48668

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Am Soc R 15:325 Ap '50 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 4 '50 170w

"The reader of this book will come away with a clearer understanding of some of the psychological effects of racial bigotry." W. G. Smith
+ New Repub 122:27 Ap 17 '50 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:94 Mr '50 480w

ROSE, AUGUSTUS FOSTER, and CIRINO, ANTONIO. Jewelry making and design. rev ed 300p il $8.95 Davis press, inc, 44 Portland st, Worcester, Mass.
739.27 Jewelry. Design, Decorative 49-48368

Revised edition of "an illustrated textbook for teachers, students of design and craft workers" in jewelry. "In its second edition . . . it is considerably changed. There is somewhat less text, although not as much less as the reduction of 160 pages seems to indicate, for the type has been re-set. Also, there are fewer illustrations. However, some of the text and many of the illustrations are new. Outmoded designs, such as those for hat-pins, have been eliminated." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:319 Je 15 '50

"Excellent book." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 74:1915 D 15 '49 100w

ROSE, LISLE ABBOTT, and others. Engineering reports. 314p $3 Harper
651.78 Reports—Preparation 50-7459

"This new text and reference book discusses most forms of technical writing. There are, for example, chapters on abstracts, business letters, the various kinds of written reports, speeches, and also articles for publication in periodicals. The treatment of most of the topics is comparatively full." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 70w

ROSE, WILLIAM GANSON. Cleveland; the making of a city. 1272p il maps $6 World pub.
977.132 Cleveland, Ohio—History 50-7405

Comprehensive, detailed, chronological history of Cleveland from 1796 to 1946. Following a chapter on early history, and one on the years 1796 to 1799, each decade is given a chapter containing first an editorial summary, then a year by year account of happenings—deaths, land deals, foundations of churches and industries, disasters, celebrations, political campaigns, and cultural events. Index.

"The Cleveland book is exhaustive, packed with names, dates, incidents and minutiae. Its index alone runs to 152 pages. It is an amazing grab bag of local and regional history, even including details of personal costume, scores of high school football games, food prices, wage rates, birthdays. The tremendous mass of material is well organized and minutely indexed, and some of it is well written. The book as a whole is probably the most exhaustive history we have of an American city, a veritable World Almanac and biographical dictionary of one community." Hal Borland
N Y Times p6 Jl 30 '50 180w

— San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 2 '50 250w

"The World Publishing Company, itself a child of Cleveland, has wrought no mean achievement in compacting this stupendous mass of data, into a readily usable and handsome volume."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 Je 10 '50 340w

ROSEN, ISIDORE. Will of iron. 284p $3 Crown
50-10046

Character study of a Jewish matriarch living with her family in Brooklyn's Brownsville slum during the '20s and the depression years.

"An all-too-familiar scene recaptured with genuine dialect and situation, some good writing for a quiet but interesting family saga."
+ Kirkus 18:481 Ag 15 '50 180w

"Recommended." A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 75:1507 S 15 '50 110w

"A solid and careful book. The characters develop logically, the picture of Jewish family life is interesting, and the author has written his novel quietly and with taste."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p46 D 3 '50 230w

"This is a Brooklyn ghetto story, which at its best gives us photographic reality, without a spark of inner life to transcend it. None of the people in it seems to have any other idea than to get on in life, to make a little more money, to live better, i.e., more prosperously. The dreamers who peopled Zangwill's stories are singularly absent." John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 33:34 N 4 '50 270w

ROSENBERG, ISAAC. Collected poems; ed. by Gordon Bottomley and Denys Harding; with a foreword by Siegfried Sassoon. 240p $3.50 Schocken
821 50-5977

First American edition of the works of an English-Jewish poet who was killed in World war I, at the age of twenty-eight. In addition to poetry the volume also contains a one-act play in verse, Moses.

ROSENBERG, ISAAC—Continued

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 75:565 Ap 1 '50 100w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 170:581 Je 10 '50 170w

"The book is well edited and well presented. It is to be hoped that readers of twentieth-century poetry in the United States will now discover one of the most promising and highly gifted poets of a generation that produced a D. H. Lawrence and a T. S. Eliot as well as a Rupert Brooke." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Times p5 F 26 '50 700w

New Yorker 26:75 Jl 22 '50 90w

Reviewed by Howard Griffin
Sat R of Lit 33:22 My 20 '50 490w

Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Jl 28 '50 450w

ROSINGER, LAWRENCE KAELTER. India and the United States; political and economic relations. 149p map $2.75 Macmillan

327.73 India—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—India 50-8341

A study of the relations between India and the United States before World war II; "the growing importance each came to have for the other during the war and the accelerating development of direct contacts then and since; India's economic problems and philosophy and the effect these have had upon its relations both with Britain and with us; the complications resulting from the dispute before the United Nations concerning Indonesia, Kashmir, and Hyderabad. In a final plea it urges that Americans try to view world affairs through Asian eyes as well as through their own." (Nation) Index.

Booklist 47:6 S 1 '50

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 19 '50 380w

"The discussion of these topics is documented by well-chosen data, carefully arranged. The book is the outcome of much study of source material, supplemented by what was obviously a profitable visit to India in 1949-50. At this time, when the United States position in Asia is most delicate, and of first importance, this book can help Americans to realize how the leading country of Asia regards us." W. N. Brown
+ Nation 171:151 Ag 12 '50 800w

"As a guide to general orientations of Indian-American relations, this small book is responsible and timely. Mr. Rosinger's experiences as Far East research specialist for the Foreign Policy Assn., and as a member of the editorial staff of the Institute of Pacific Relations, qualify him to write expertly of the economic and political conditions which determine the new interests which India and the United States now share." G. G. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 20 '50 430w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:345 S '50 260w

ROSMARIN, MRS TRUDE (WEISS). Jerusalem; with an introd. by Daniel Frisch. 51p il map $2.75 Philosophical lib.

956.9 Jerusalem 50-4755

A brief introduction to Jerusalem, past and present. Chronological table. No index.

"The utility of the book in scientific circles seems to me to be limited to a few research workers interested in the field of culture and personality, who may employ it as one among a great many now available documents describing the ideology and personality structure of some persons who have become intensely involved emotionally with the Israelite cause in Palestine." Melville Jacobs
Ann Am Acad 272:296 N '50 240w

"Most unsatisfactory. The chapters which summarize the history of this wonderful city are so compressed as to be little more than massed names and dates; and the short chapters on Jerusalem in Jewish literature, Jewish pilgrims and settlers, holy places, the new city, etc., are so sketchy as to leave their aim unattained. The result is a book of little value to either scholar or layman." S. V. McCasland
— Crozer Q 27:379 O '50 100w

Reviewd by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 80w

ROSMARIN, MRS TRUDE (WEISS). Jewish survival; essays and studies. 404p $4 Philosophical lib.

296 Jews—Religion. Jews—Political and social conditions 50-5818

"That there has been more to Jewish life and Jewish desire for group survival than the mere yearning for physical security is indicated in [this volume]. . . Perhaps of greatest interest to the general reader is the interpretation of several classical conceptions of the Jew. Dr. Rosmarin sharply challenges the Christian theological stereotype of the 'Wandering Jew.' Jewish homelessness has not been a curse but a blessing, she maintains. Scattered among the nations, Jews are serving a divine purpose in carrying the message of the Lord; theirs is a great and ennobling mission, and the failure of the world to heed the moral and ethical lessons of Judaeo-Christian teachings is no reflection upon their efforts. Even though in exile they have been assured of eternity as a people, with ultimate full restoration." Am Hist R

"The patient reader who can make allowance for many repetitions will find a brilliant exposition of Jewish philosophy from the traditional and orthodox point of view... Many Jews will not share with Dr. Rosmarin her strictures against the arts as antithetical to the Jewish ethical and spiritual way of life. Her defense of the alliance of church and state in Israel is brilliant and on sound ground historically, but few will agree with her except those of partisan interest... Jewish Survival goes a long way toward explaining the spirit and the faith which have kept Jews alive during two millenniums of wanderings." Carl Alpert
+ — Am Hist R 55:875 Jl '50 310w

"Dr. Weiss-Rosmarin believes Western nations can learn from the exemplary transcendence of 'ethical man' over 'man the scientific fact' that is the strength of the Jewish world and the source of a will to survive an atomic tomorrow. The idea is by no means new, but with our attainment of a new zenith in science this distillation from the history of a minority group makes the book germane reading." C. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 14 '50 300w

ROSOW, JEROME M., and others, eds. American men in government; a biographical dictionary and directory of federal officials. 472p il $7.50 Public affairs press

353 U.S.—Officials and employees—Biography 49-11779

"A biographical dictionary of 1,600 men and women executives in the federal government. Selections were largely based on agency tables of organization, and information abstracted from questionnaires. Data has been checked to June, 1949." Library J

Reviewed by Julian Fahy
Am Pol Sci R 44:221 Mr '50 130w

"There are sins of both omission and commission, and the supplementary organizational and subject indexes are inadequate. However, the work contains much new information and is modestly priced. Recommended for supplementary reference with the hope that a second edition will show improvement." Scott Adams
+ — Library J 74:1819 D 1 '49 100w

ROSS, FLOYD HIATT. Addressed to Christians: isolationism vs. world community. 154p $2 Harper

261 International cooperation. Christianity and other religions 50-5311

"Professor Ross, head of the department of religion at the University of Southern California, comes to the conclusion out of his study of comparative religion that the Christian position that 'there is no other name under heaven whereby man be saved' is false. He believes that while the World Council of Churches opens the opportunity of moving in the direction of a World Parliament of Religions, it is actually increasing the divisiveness between Christians and non-Christians by its emphasis upon the absoluteness of the Christian faith as currently interpreted. . . He pleads for a 'transformation of our religious institutions from repositories of the faith of the past into bridges across which all honest men may tread into the fellowship of all mankind.'" (Kirkus) Index.

"The book will shock and enrage many readers, but most of these will want to keep the book in order to fulminate against it more effectively. Others will disagree with it, but more in sorrow than in anger. Still others, of whom I am one, will prize it as a forthright and unconventional approach to a real problem—How can Christians make their religion a help toward the creation of world community? No one who has any interest at all in religion and any capacity for rational discourse about it can find the book dull." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 67:241 F 22 '50 2200w

"At long last, at very long last, we are finally getting a book which is of the kind that is sorely needed today for Christian thinking. This is a sympathetic treatment of essential Christianity and at the same time a point of view desperately aware of our new one world into which the mid-twentieth century has moved." Vergilius Ferm

+ Crozer Q 27:159 Ap '50 1000w

Kirkus 18:55 F 1 '50 260w

ROSS, MALCOLM HARRISON. Man who lived backward. 461p $3.50 Farrar, Straus 50-8807

The story of Mark Selby who was born in 1940 and lived his whole life backward in time, until 1865, when he was killed trying to save Abraham Lincoln from assassination.

Booklist 47:14 S 1 '50

"Skilful as Ross is in his technical handling, it must be added that much in the outer range of the narrative is bathed in mistiness. And, clear as is his style of writing, he still is unable to touch up his tale with any very convincing degree of lifelikeness. The inverted order makes for technical virtuosity rather than for the human imprint." Henry Cavendish

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 20 '50 550w

Christian Science Monitor p6 S 23 '50 260w

Kirkus 18:339 Je 15 '50 210w

"'The Man Who Lived Backward' is a well written book-length parable, an interesting freak, but not a good novel." Richard Match

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 20 '50 800w

"A story-teller whose tale has such a fantastic burden assumes a responsibility: he ought either to enlighten or dazzle. 'The Man Who Lived Backward' is either a fable without a discernible moral, or a science-fiction story full of philosophizing. The effect on this reader, when it was not boredom at the pomposity of Selby or irritation at the meaningless contrivance, was dizziness. I found myself thumbing through the book backward, turning it sideways and upside down, and finally getting up and pacing nervously up and down the ceiling." John Brooks

N Y Times p20 Ag 20 '50 550w

"While his views on such matters as war, the changes in the American economic scene, and the merits of Walt Whitman are entertainingly set down, they are at times more than a little befuddling, as is his account of the difficulties attendant on being married to a young lady with a more conventional type of life span—a subject that was handled with a good deal more finesse, incidentally, by the late Scott Fitzgerald, in short-story form."

New Yorker 26:73 S 2 '50 140w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 23 '50 140w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 33:17 D 30 '50 140w

Time 56:84 S 4 '50 500w

ROSS, MURRAY G. Religious beliefs of youth; foreword by Gordon W. Allport. (National council studies) 251p $3 Assn. press

230 Youth—Religious life. U.S.—Religion 50-7756

"A study and analysis of the structure and function of the religious beliefs of young adults based on a questionnaire sample of 1,935 youth and intensive interviews with 100 young people." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Ross has made his contribution precise, instructive, and challenging. The report is a definite addition in the socioreligious field." E. W. Blakeman

+ Ann Am Acad 272:275 N '50 900w

Christian Century 67:823 Jl 5 '50 40w

School & Society 72:16 Jl 1 '50 30w

Time 55:43 My 8 '50 400w

ROSS, NANCY (WILSON) (MRS STANLEY YOUNG). I, my ancestor. 393p $3.50 Random house 49-50368

A novel describing Philip Stewart's recovery from a nervous breakdown. He is helped, in turn, by a psychiatrist in New York city and by his father who is living almost a hermit's life on a Puget Sound island.

Booklist 46:150; 189 Ja 1 '50; F 1 '50

Bookmark 9:136 Mr '50 60w

"In generalizing about life, Tom cannot avoid concurring occasionally with the natural law but on the whole he is pretty confused. In today's amoral writings, complete ignorance of or misinformation about Catholicism is to be expected, but I, My Ancestor throws several poisoned barbs directly at the Church. The entire story is on the smoothly trite level of the slick-paper fiction found in women's magazines. At least there are no soap ads." Mary Sandrock

— Cath World 170:393 F '50 300w

"'I, My Ancestor' is a leisurely book but still not one which cries out for cutting. It is slow reading without being boring reading; the flow of cohesive sentences is continuous and logical in growth. The story carries the reader painlessly and rather uncritically through to the end. It is only after finishing the book and assessing it as a whole that an unfortunate alchemy occurs and the faults begin to show up. . . These weaknesses, however, are not so salient as to be disturbing and in the last analysis, the merits of the book heavily outweigh its defects." Clare Jaynes

+ — Chicago Sun p5S Ja 30 '50 500w

"There is strong feeling in this book; a genuine concern, a serious questioning, an honest intensity add up to give dignity and force to the prose. Yet for a work which in places somewhat parades its philosofical effects, there are perhaps too many fuzzy, mixed-up, even muddled passages, too many dubious connections, and tentative, questionable conclusions. This is a novel of fervor and fever; it lacks the very thing it searches for, some final, absolute conviction." Richard Sullivan

— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 5 '50 400w

ROSS, NANCY—Continued
Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 F 2 '50 1400w

"This should be a popular item. It will be many things to many—a kind of fountainhead." George Miles
Commonweal 51:541 F 24 '50 550w

"Not patterned to popular taste as was the predecessor, but holding reading."
Kirkus 17:613 N 1 '49 260w

"Brilliant writing, engrossing despite the lack of fulfillment in characterization and 'message.'" E. L. Lewis
+ — Library J 74:1819 D 1 '49 80w
New Repub 122:20 My 1 '50 360w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 29 '50 800w

"Serious, sincere and well written, 'I, My Ancestor' misses complete success by being overambitious. On top of that Miss Ross makes the mistake of letting ideas run away with her at the expense of her characters." James Stern
+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 29 '50 700w

Reviewed by John Broderick
— New Yorker 25:93 F 11 '50 100w

"A novel that can show a human being to himself in one bright, clear flash of understanding, is by that token a good novel, and 'I, My Ancestor' is one of those." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 30 '50 950w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R of Lit 33:17 F 4 '50 550w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey 86:155 Mr '50 150w
Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Mr '50

ROSS, SAM. Sidewalks are free. 308p $3 Farrar, Straus
50-5552

A story of a Jewish immigrant family in Chicago during the post-war years after World war I. The story is told from the viewpoint of the boy Hershy, who does not understand all he sees or hears, but who suffers with the rest the hard and tragic times, learns to appreciate old customs while becoming an American.

"With this story of a Jewish-Russian immigrant family, Sam Ross, a former Chicagoan, has shown he can write with the compassion and craftsmanship which are the twin marks of the successful novelist." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p6 F 16 '50 420w

"This is a good book, a solid and rewarding book, a book to take to your heart." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 F 19 '50 550w

"Little Hershy Melov is a wonderful characterization of a young boy on the brink of adolescence. Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 70w

"This is Mr. Ross's third novel and it seems certainly to be his best. He is able to recapture with amazing authenticity the sights and sounds, the very feel of boyhood. Admittedly he does not plumb the depths, he gives us the surface only, as if to say—here, this is how it was, read into it what you will—but that surface is so unerringly drawn that the reader is able to chart the depths beneath quite accurately himself." J. J. Maloney
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 19 '50 420w

"The clamorous, beguiling people of this new novel develop through their own actions, thoughts and predicaments. They are never pushed on stage to recite, sing, entertain—and this is one palpable reason why 'The Sidewalks Are Free' has greater impact than most family pageants. Dramatic integrity comes across the footlights. But it evolves more from the quality of life itself than from plot device." James Kelly
+ N Y Times p4 F 19 '50 500w
San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 23 '50 250w

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Tonopah lady. 329p $3 Bobbs
50-7205

"The story opens in Reno, with 19-year-old Judith Southard's retirement from the stage, in revolt against the unsettled life of her actor parents. She yearns for a normal home in a normal community. Of the three men in Judith's life, Neil Burton, shares her feeling for security; Lex Winthrop offers passion and excitement, and Dolph Ryan lives and breathes the theater. Judith's real desires finally crystallize, when violence and martial law force the hands of the men who love her." San Francisco Chronicle

"Zola Ross depicts [Judith's] career with gusto and in verbal technicolor, with enough background of Nevada history to suit the average consumer."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 23 '50 90w

"Plots and characters are obviously contrived, but the bonanza setting is realistic." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p21 My 14 '50 100w

"A vivid reading adventure. The author has caught, not only the intoxicating frenzy of the Nevada gold camps, but also the distinctive flavor of the early Western theater. This dual background sets its own stage for a parade of unforgettable characters, with even the minor ones achieving real life proportions." L. A. P.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 30 '50 190w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 33:30 Je 24 '50 130w

ROSSI, ANGELO. Communist party in action; an account of the organization and operations in France; tr. and ed. with an introd. by Willmoore Kendall. 301p $4 Yale univ. press

329.944 Communist party of France. Communism—France 49-11815

"An abridged version of Physiologie du parti communiste français; author deals primarily with activities of French Party from 1940 to 1943." (Library J) Index.

"An exemplary work in political science, a rebuke to those who waste time and research money on fiddling with trivialities from the outside and a tonic to those who believe that political science should concern itself with major phenomena from the inside." Herman Finer
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:470 Je '50 1700w

"In a climate of mounting fear of Communism, Rossi's study is welcome indeed, for it deals with this vital topic rationally and maturely. His work is not the only investigation of French Communism. . . But it deserves our special attention since the author, who had played a role in the Communist movement until 1929, selected for analysis the crucial period from 1939 to 1941." O. K. Flechtheim
+ Am Soc R 15:319 Ap '50 800w

"This analytical study of the French Communist Party is one of the most important books on political theory and practice that have appeared in recent years. . . Professor Kendall is to be congratulated not only for his translation but for his thoughtful introduction which challenges some of the premises of Rossi's own alternative position as well as those of its critics." Sidney Hook
+ Ann Am Acad 268:200 Mr '50 480w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 18:41 Ja '50 40w
Foreign Affairs 28:683 Jl '50 60w

"A student of politics would find it invaluable."
+ Kirkus 17:501 S 1 '49 150w

"In conclusion [the author] asserts that to combat Communism, a national and not merely a social revolution is necessary. Neither he, nor translator in his long and rather dogmatic introduction, succeed in making this point quite clear. Interesting for specialist, but limited appeal to others." H. H. Bernt
Library J 74:1459 O 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by C. L. Sulzberger
N Y Times p3 Ja 29 '50 950w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:39 F 25 '50 320w

Reviewed by W. N. Hadsel
Yale R n s 39:763 summer '50 1000w

ROSSNAGEL, W. E. Handbook of rigging. 321p il $4.75 McGraw

621.86 Hoisting machinery. Scaffolding 50-5371

"Deals with such subjects as slings, scaffolds, ladders, life nets, cranes, hoists and derricks. It has been written for men who make use of such things in their daily work or who direct others who use them. Specific information is given on such topics as the characteristics and strength of fibre rope and wire rope, the making of knots and splices, and the details of hoists and scaffolds. There is constant emphasis on saftey, and the final chapter is devoted to first aid. The author holds the position of Safety Engineer with the Consolidated Edison Company of New York." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:348 Jl 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '50

Eng N 144:46 My 18 '50 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:326 F 15 '50 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:29 Mr '50

ROTHA, PAUL. Film till now; a survey of world cinema; with an additional section by Richard Griffith. rev & enl ed 755p 175il $12 Funk

791.4 Moving pictures 50-8300

"Many new illustrations, a long introduction devoted mainly to British films, and a long section on American and European films, 1929-1948, enlarge this history first published in 1930 [Book Review Digest 1931]." Booklist

Booklist 46:319 Je 15 '50

"Motion pictures today are very different from what they were in 1929, and it was important that this book (long out of print tho always in demand) should be brought up to date. Mr. Griffith's work is well worthy to stand beside that of his predecessor. My own only important criticism of him is that he has been badly bitten by the sociological bug. . . Mr. Griffith forgets that people can be very romantic, and that the dead past will never bury its dead for the simple reason that the past does not die. He forgets too that most people go to the movies for escape. . . But, however lovers of the film may quarrel with Mr. Griffith upon this or on other scores, they will all want this book. I am sorry that it has turned out such a clumsy piece of bookmaking: nearly three inches thick, it looks like an overgrown almanac." Edward Wagenknecht
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 25 '50 500w

Reviewed by Theodore Kalem
Christian Science Monitor p8 S 2 '50 750w

"Highly recommended for all cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:1299 Ag '50 40w

"This double-feature programme with about a hundred and eighty photographs (constituting in themselves a history of the cinema) makes a book almost as cumbrous as the industry it deals with, but no less interesting, amusing, or informative." G. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 7 '50 400w

"A 750-page book surveying the first fifty years of the cinema is an event both rare and appetising for enthusiasts; republished and revised, The Film Till Now may well become the addict's Bible. . . As an introduction to film theory The Film Till Now is wholly admirable. The lucidity of the theoretical chapters is tonic also in view of some of the eccentricities which gain attention to-day. . . The new section of the book has been entrusted to Richard Griffith, whose approach is in sharp contrast. A tough, exacting and sometimes violent critic, Mr. Griffith is more interested in ideas and subjects than schools and styles. . . A brilliant example of the 'stimulating' critic, he sometimes pays the penalty for it rather heavily." Gavin Lambert
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:462 Ap 22 '50 1100w

"Mr. Rotha would have done better had he devoted his time and effort to a much-needed and wholesale correction of the welter of error and misinformation in which his book abounds. Surely, after twenty years, readers had a right to expect this of him. . . Richard Griffith in his section unfortunately shares the same bias and dogmatism. His tract, based on theories of 'environmental pressures,' 'functional intellectual approaches' and 'cultural patterns,' is assuredly not a disinterested and reliable account of the movies from 1930 to 1950. . . It would be erroneous, however, to say that Mr. Griffith's study is valueless. He has at least furnished some new and useful information." Seymour Stern
— + N Y Times p16 Jl 9 '50 1350w

Reviewed by Cecile Starr
Sat R of Lit 33:48 O 21 '50 800w

"Out of this happy collaboration of Rotha and Griffith has come a handsome and readable reference work of renewed usefulness. . . The product of two film enthusiasts, the selection and judgments of certain of the titles may sometimes border on the capricious. Standards of perception and criticism may seem at times unscientific, strongly personal. They are. Only people who love the film medium as enthusiastically, as personally—and as hopefully—as Rotha and Griffith could write a 'Film Till Now' in the first place. Their joint effort has produced a book that is a must for all who share that love." Arthur Knight
+ Theatre Arts 34:8 Ag '50 1150w

"Mr. Griffith models himself on Mr. Rotha in the form and pattern of his writing and suffers not at all by comparison—his analysis of Chaplin's Monsieur Verdoux, for instance, is remarkable in its insight and acumen. The Film Till Now is very much more than a work of reference, although as that it is invaluable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 13 '50 310w

ROTHENBERG, ROBERT EDWARD. Group medicine and health insurance in action; introd. by George Baehr. 278p $5 Crown

614.2 Medical service. Insurance, Health 49-10662

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"This book is an unusual and important contribution to the field of medical care. . . There are some minor criticisms which deserve noting. The introductory historical review of health insurance plans is far too sketchy to be of value, and the plan for national voluntary health insurance outlined in the concluding chapter appears somewhat unrealistic. . . These, however, are minor flaws. The bulk of the volume represents a source of much valuable information." Milton Terris
+ — Am J Pub Health 40:485 Ap '50 430w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes
Ann Am Acad 268:245 Mr '50 360w

"The volume will be of particular value to administrators of hospitals, clinics, and medical care plans, and to medical social workers and health educators." M. M. Davis
+ Survey 86:95 F '50 500w

"Specific information is offered in the book which will be invaluable to physicians considering group practice. Following the analysis of the numerous and complex problems confronting sponsors of group medicine with voluntary health insurance, the authors present briefly a national program based on their experience in New York. The book will interest sociologists and political scientists, professional personnel in the field of medicine, and all those contemplating organizing or participating in group medicine plans."

ROTHENBERG, R. E.—Continued
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:103 Mr '50 280w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). Rome today. 275p $3 Dodd
914.56 Rome (city)—Description 50-6184

Not so much a guide book as a series of essays on what today's tourist might find to be interested in in Rome—essays on historical background, on the cats of Rome, on the Vatican, on churches and monuments, on the Boys' Republic, and E.R.P., etc. Index.

Booklist 46:218 Mr 1 '50
Bookmark 9:158 Ap '50 30w
Cath World 171:80 Ap '50 60w
Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun p9 Ap 14 '50 60w
Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Commonweal 51:588 Mr 10 '50 110w

"A timely new travel book on Rome, one that calls for savoring and frequent dipping into for full flavor and saturation and putting one in the mood for a trip. . . Recommended for Holy Year travellers." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 75:317 F 15 '50 110w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 19 '50 220w

"It is rather a 'mood' book than a formal guide book, and as such is a delightful underarm literary companion to strolls through Rome and its environs." C. M. Cianfarra
+ N Y Times p32 Ap 2 '50 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 23 '50 550w
+ Sat R of Lit 33:41 F 25 '50 140w

"More than a guidebook and more than a catalogue of antiquities, 'Rome Today' is a vivid and affectionate portrait of the life of the modern city."
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 5 '50 40w

"Especially timely in this year of pilgrimages to Rome. Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:21 My '50

ROTHNEY, JOHN WATSON MURRAY, and ROENS, BERT A. Guidance of American youth; an experimental study; foreword by James Bryant Conant. 269p $5 Harvard univ. press
371.422 Personnel service in education 50-8107

"This is a report about some of the problems which youth meets in the process of coming of age in America. It describes the experience of guidance counselors who attempted, over a five-year period, the difficult task of helping young people help themselves to solve their problems. It reports the results of their efforts to keep records of their procedures so that others may apply them, suitably modified to meet local situations, when they undertake similar tasks. It shows how the citizens in one community and the personnel of its schools were brought to realize the nature and extent of the problems of their youth, and how they have improved their educational practices to serve youth more effectively. Finally it presents evidence that the practices used in the Study 'paid off' in terms of better adjustments and performances of the young people." (p.3) Bibliography. No index.

"The material of the study is well presented. Scientific minutiae are kept in proper proportion and perspective. The main findings are clearly summarized. Lack of success in some features is admitted. The entire tone of the study is objective." J. H. S. Bossard
+ Ann Am Acad 271:220 S '50 340w
Current Hist 19:107 Ag '50 30w

"Parents, teachers, counselors, in fact all concerned with American youth, their actions and reactions, and the pressures which shape them, will want to read this study. . . Some enlightening and valuable conclusions are reached. The book is doubly important because of its use of readable and non-technical language." C. W. Roth
+ Library J 75:772 My 1 '50 130w
Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 72:89 Ag 5 '50 280w
School R 58:365 S '50 80w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:326 S '50 220w

ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, ed. Slavonic encyclopedia. 1445p $18.50 Philosophical lib.
947 Slavs—Dictionaries 48-6489
For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"This volume should prove to be a valuable aid to the increasing number of persons interested in the Slavic field and, like all pioneer works, will serve both as a guide and a warning to future compilers. . . In such a large compilation there are bound to be inclusions and omissions which many will question. . . One is surprised to find no separate articles on Peter the Great or Pushkin, who are of course mentioned in the general articles on history and literature, although space has been found for brief sketches of Danny Kaye and Pola Negri. It is also regrettable that in a number of the biographical accounts the dates of birth and death of the individuals concerned are not given. Finally, the inclusion of a certain amount of bibliographical material, especially at the end of the longer articles, would add greatly to the usefulness of the volume." C. E. Black
+ — Am Hist R 55:366 Ja '50 650w
Reviewed by S. R. Tompkins
Am Soc R 15:316 Ap '50 650w

"On the whole, it may be said that the volume should be very useful for initial information about the history, the politics, and the culture of the Slavic peoples. The contributions are written by some scholars who are distinguished and by others who are in the process of winning their spurs. The accounts are, in general, adequate and add many new facets to our knowledge in English on Slavic problems." R. J. Kerner
+ Ann Am Acad 268:204 Mr '50 240w

"The articles vary in length from a few lines to several pages; prepared by an impressive staff under the supervision of Mr. Roucek, they contain much of interest. This compilation will be useful to a wide audience, although objections may be raised to the selection and presentation of a number of the topics."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:429 S '49 240w

ROWLAND, FLORENCE WIGHTMAN. Austrian colt; il. by Edgar Cirlin. 39p $1.50 Macrae Smith co.
50-9831

Stefan, a little Austrian boy, goes to the hills to try to find his family's lost horse, set free to avoid capture by the enemy. There is a surprise ending when Stefan finally comes home.

Booklist 47:143 D 1 '50

"A horse story that is different and an attractive book for middle graders." A. S.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 90w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '50 60w

"Beautifully written, this book is nevertheless somber, even gloomy, and the illustrations heavy and dark, do not help. For the mature reader of 9 or 10." A. B. McCreary
Library J 75:1836 O 15 '50 80w

ROWLAND, JOAN (MRS NICHOLAS MOCHARNIUK). Good food from the Near East; five hundred favorite recipes from twelve countries. 274p $2.75 Barrows
641.5 Cookery, Near Eastern 50-6730

"The recipes included are for typical and authentic dishes from Albania, Armenia, Bulgaria, Egypt, Greece, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Saudi-Arabia, Syria and Lebanon, and Turkey. The native names of the recipes are given with the English translation. Each chapter deals with a specific country and describes the foods and customs which have developed because of religion, climate, location, and influence of neighboring or conquering countries. Cooking utensils also are described." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 46:271 My 1 '50

" 'Good Food from the Near East' is a book for collectors of special recipe books and is valuable for students of world food customs." M. I. Barber
+ J Home Econ 42:458 Je '50 280w

RUBENS, SIR PETER PAUL. Battle of the Amazons; with an introd. by Leo van Puyvelde; tr. by D. I. Wilton. 14p pa $2.50 Harper

759.9493 Paintings, Flemish 50-5887

"Introductory text by Professor Leo Van Puyvelde, Honorary Director of the Royal Museums of Fine Art of Belgium; translation by D. I. Wilton. Illustrations in an eight-color process, printed in the Netherlands. Frontispiece shows painting as a whole which conveys 'the spirit of northern Baroque art and the genius of its most famous representative.' Details of horses and warriors, lurid skies and bloody carnage do full justice to the violence of the canvas. Paragraphs on artist and composition, technique, and finally on the history of the picture." Library J

Kirkus 18:130 F 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 110w
Manchester Guardian p4 O 3 '50 60w

RUBIN, RUTH, ed. Treasury of Jewish folksong; selected and edited; piano settings: Ruth Post; drawings: T. Herzl Rome [poetry adaptations: Isaac Schwartz and others]. 224p $4.50 Schocken

784.7 Folk songs, Jewish 50-14685

"A large volume containing 110 songs with piano accompaniment." N Y Times

"A fine, representative collection. . . This handsome volume will be a staple in libraries serving Jewish communities; and in a situation where the need for Jewish music materials is limited, it may well be one of a half-dozen titles in the area." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 75:2015 N 15 '50 130w

"Her 'Treasury' is a haphazard collection that reveals no unifying or coordinating principle. Nevertheless, the volume contains many charming, tender, merry and sad airs. The lyrics are given in the original Yiddish or Hebrew with Latin characters, and are followed by English translations which are in most cases adequate." Philip Rubin
+ — N Y Times p24 S 17 '50 450w

RUBINSTEIN, BERYL. Pianist's approach to sight-reading and memorizing. 67p $1 Fischer, Carl

786.2 Piano—Instruction and study

"Deals analytically with the manual and mental processes of [sight-reading and memorizing]. While the book is not precisely a method, because of its essential discursive style, the theoretical treatment is nonetheless kept closely related to practical suggestion. . . The section on sight-reading isolates the musical requisites involved in proficient sight-reading, with numerous charts and musical examples. . . Part Two deals with memorizing in terms of the components of aural, visual, tactile, and analytical memory." Music Lib Assn Notes

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

"As a treatise and as a practical guide, this book is a serviceable aid to students and teachers of piano." William Graves
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:480 Je '50 400w

RUCKER, LESLIE C. Business helper; for the modern man operating a small business. 133p $2 Rider, J.F.

650 Business. Success 49-11686

"Advice on all the problems facing the man who goes into business for himself, written by someone with varied experience in a number of fields." (Wis Lib Bul) No index.

"Chatty, friendly style that may well appeal to the small business man, who perhaps does not do much reading, and for whom there are not many books which fit his needs and reading taste." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 74:1826 D 1 '49 70w

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:20 S '50

RUDENBERG, REINHOLD. Transient performance of electric power systems; phenomena in lumped networks. 832p il $12 McGraw

621.3 Transients (electricity) 50-3323

"A substantial treatment of transient phenomena in electric power distribution systems. The discussion is limited to circuits with lumped properties, but within this limitation a wide range of causes and effects is considered, such as the charging and discharging of capacitors, instantaneous switching, eddy currents in transformer cores, short circuits in motors and generators, lightning, mechanical inertia effects, earth currents, melting of fuse wires, sparks and arcs, and magnetic effects in lines and machinery. . . This edition is based on the third German edition, but it has been written in English by the author and enlarged to cover numerous topics and recent developments which were not treated in the German version." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 140w

"A thorough treatment of phenomena rising out of short circuits, lightning and many other varieties of disturbances in electric power distribution systems. . . Mathematical parts of the exposition are well buttressed with narrative discussion and illustrative matter. The book is addressed to advanced students of electrical engineering and practicing electrical engineers."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:37 My '50

RUDY, SOLOMON WILLIS. College of the city of New York; a history, 1847-1947. 492p il $6 City College press, inc, 139th st & Convent av, N.Y. 31

378 New York (city). City College 49-49532

"This is more than a history of the growth of an institution; it is an account of the struggle for a momentous principle: that of free higher education for all regardless of race, color or creed. Dr. Rudy, former instructor of history at City College, reviews the long fight to make that principle secure. City College—known first as the Free Academy—opened its doors in 1849 only after considerable controversy. . . When the Free Academy opened, it had a faculty of fifteen and a student body of 150. Today City College, with a faculty of more than 2,000 members and a student body of 30,000, is the third largest college in the country." N Y Times

"It is seldom that any cultural institution has received such brilliant treatment as has the College of the City of New York in this volume by A. Willis Rudy. The result of most careful and exhaustive research, there is no aspect of college life—administration, curriculum, discipline, student affairs, faculty, personnel, alumni assistance—that is not adequately and sympathetically traced." Stephen Duggan
+ Am Hist R 55:1000 Jl '50 280w

"There will always be a place for the anecdotal, sentimentalized, intimate histories of colleges. Yet, here we have another treatment of the history of an American college—one that is scholarly, documented, and in the best tradition of socio-intellectual historical writing." Nathaniel Stewart

RUDY, S. W.—Continued
+ Library J 74:1821 D 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine
N Y Times p19 Mr 5 '50 180w

"Mr. Rudy's full, lucid, and interesting history, written as a dissertation for the doctorate at Columbia University, itself marks another notable milestone in CCNY's progress: it is the first publication of the City College Press, Inc." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ap 8 '50 360w

School & Society 70:383 D 10 '49 50w

RUE, ELOISE, comp. Subject index to books for intermediate grades. 2d ed 493p $6 A.L.A.

016 Children's literature — Bibliography. Catalogs, Subject 50-5751

"This new edition of a basic index for elementary schools replaces, for the most part, the 1940 edition and its 1943 supplement. In the present work, 1800 books in print (including materials through 1948) and 75 out-of-print books dealing with subjects not covered in other titles are indexed. Prices have been corrected and entries revised to conform to a forthcoming list of subject headings for children's libraries prepared by Eloise Rue and Effie N. La Plante. Compiled with the aid of consultants in teaching and library fields, the index lists materials on hundreds of subjects usually studied in elementary schools. It includes both text and trade books and two important series of pamphlets. Revised editions of geographies, histories, and social studies texts are indexed, along with several widely used series of readers." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1940.

Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50

"Besides its obvious value as a tool for locating material on specific subjects, this book will prove a helpful buying guide for teachers and school administrators, since the list of books indexed includes full purchase information, grade levels, and stars to indicate titles recommended for a basic collection in small schools. Intelligent use of this index should make existing collections more useful and should serve as a guide in building a well-rounded group of materials for classroom use." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 75:569 Ap 1 '50 250w

"An invaluable tool." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 9 '50 120w

Wis Lib Bul 46:32 Mr '50

RUESCH, HANS. Top of the world. 236p $2.75 Harper

50-5806

The adventures of an Eskimo family; Ernenek, a great hunter; Asiak, his wife; Ivaloo, their daughter; and Papik, their son. The main action of the book centers around Ivaloo, who finds life among the Southern Eskimos, with their contacts with Christian missionaries, more than she can understand.

Booklist 46:232 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 F 19 '50 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '50

Kirkus 17:676 D 15 '49 130w

"An unusual novel. Recommended." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 130w

"'Top of the World' meets the test of a novel in that its people, strange as they are, become real. They are also likable, even lovable, with a gift for happiness and humor as well as realism. The story has a strange beauty as well as the fascination of the unusual." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 25 '50 750w

"If you're squeamish in matters hygienic, dietetical, sexual, or obstetric, you had perhaps better not tackle the book at all. For Eskimos are primitive folk. . . I can't vouch for the authenticity of this book's account of arctic life. I suppose we shall hear from Stefansson and others on that. But the skill with which Hans Ruesch has entered into the loves and adventures of an 'outlandish' people is not subject to scientific check-up. It is a brilliant feat of poetic imagination." Max Eastman
+ N Y Times p4 F 19 '50 320w

"Mr. Ruesch, who is a very skillful writer, tells about the Eskimos with affection and humor and makes them seem a very sensible and attractive people, although their way of living is not for everybody, of course. . . It should be read as a whole, and, if possible, right through at one sitting."
+ New Yorker 25:96 F 18 '50 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 24 '50 750w

"There's a great deal to be said for these people. Mr. Ruesch says it movingly, factually, and with a rarefied simplicity." C. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 Ap 1 '50 180w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 180w

Time 55:98 F 20 '50 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 6 '50 240w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:575 spring '50 70w

RUKEYSER, MURIEL. Elegies. ltd autog ed. 82p $5 New directions

811 49-50217

Ten poems in which the poet seeks to identify herself with the "life force."

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 170:94 Ja 28 '50 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
New Repub 122:21 F 6 '50 330w

Reviewed by David Daiches
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 25 '50 230w

"T. S. Eliot is enough Miss Rukeyser's senior to have appeared as a pattern to follow. As successful as she has been, the medium is to her a confining one. To wrap her substance in this style is to bury a robust human alive in a shroud that has shrunk in the wash." Helen Wolfert
N Y Times p28 Ap 23 '50 180w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:114 My 20 '50 40w

Reviewed by J. R. Caldwell
Sat R of Lit 33:26 Mr 11 '50 270w

RUKEYSER, MURIEL. Life of poetry. 232p $3 Current bks.

808.1 Poetry 49-50192

A book on "the meanings of poetry today." "'This is not a book of literary criticism,' warns Miss Rukeyser. It maps, nevertheless, the outlines of an esthetic into which are drawn, among others, the findings of Whitehead, Gibbs, Freud, and ultimately Hegel. Fundamental is the conviction of process as reality and of poetry as process, an emotional response, continuous with other forms of experience, 'which accepts a world of process, a dynamic universe of time and growth relations.'" (Sat R of Lit)

"It is disappointing to have to qualify my welcome of this important and badly needed book. The sad paradox is that Miss Rukeyser trips up on the very problem which she explores with such arresting insight—the problem of communication. The book is written in a non-prose style that blurs the argument with ecstasy, that suggests an emotional shorthand, and presents other discouragements. It is certainly 'intelligible.' But the receptiveness it calls for, and the strain it imposes on the receptive reader, unfortunately limit its appeal. I hope that those seriously concerned with poetry will not be deterred." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 185:81 Mr '50 750w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p5 My 1 '50 80w

"To paraphrase Voltaire, it is easy to concur heartily with Miss Rukeyser's point of view and yet quarrel with her mode of expressing it. Her over-emotional and turgid writing, her tortured sentence structure, her hot and often forced images, the general tone of soap-box oratory, do not seem to be the best way to 'sell' an art, which without argument has a hard time thrusting up its head in our brutal civilization."
Kirkus 17:616 N 1 '49 140w

"A lively, passionate, personal book. . .The argument is sometimes spasmodic but is always conducted with a fine fervor; it is the testimony of a poet to the reality and force of poetry in life, and as such it is a richly stimulating document." David Daiches
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 25 '50 550w

Reviewed by Helen Wolfert
N Y Times p28 Ap 23 '50 270w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 30 '50 100w

"Miss Rukeyser disowns little or nothing. With her poet's knack of seeing the symbolic meanings in events and the connections latent in them, and with various and deep reading she adduces and enriches from every quarter of contemporary life, from punctuation to the blues, from Fenollosa to Leadbelly. The idea is, of course, far too big for the book, and strains at the bindings. The energies of her convictions in fact are hardly contained in the prose medium. Her exposition throbs toward the oracular and one has often to wait and let the reverberations subside." J. R. Caldwell
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:26 Mr 11 '50 270w

RUKEYSER, MURIEL. Orpheus; the poem; the drawings by Picasso. ltd ed pa $2 Centaur press, 1726 Baker st, San Francisco 15 811 49-50308

"This long poem seeks to use the story of the murder of Orpheus at the hands of the maddened bacchantes as the basis for an allegory of the artist's death and resurrection." N Y Times

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 170:94 Ja 28 '50 30w

Reviewed by David Daiches
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 25 '50 130w

"Miss Rukeyser has managed skillfully enough to cross Orpheus with Osiris in order to create her myth of the poet-god, surviving death and drawing on his own agony for the substance of his art. The account of Orpheus' self-regeneration attempts to create more suspense than the loose dramatic structure of the poem seems capable of tolerating; and the rather mannered diction of this section weakens the poem where it should be strongest." Milton Crane
+ — N Y Times p14 D 18 '49 170w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:114 My 20 '50 40w

"Vivid and beautiful poetry . . . like the poem and the kind of thinking that caused her to write it." T. H. Ferril
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 8 '50 50w

Reviewed by J. R. Caldwell
Sat R of Lit 33:26 Mr 11 '50 270w

RUSH, WILLIAM MARSHALL (MARK LAYTON, pseud). Duff; the story of a bear; il. by Gardell Dano Christensen. 149p $2.25 Longmans
Bears—Legends and stories 50-9659

Life story of a black bear from his days as a yearling to the time several years later when he has become the biggest bear of the countryside. Duff has a series of battles with other bears and also has to match wits with two men, uncle and nephew, who have a homestead on his range.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

Reviewed by Vernon Ives
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 19 '50 190w

"The author, a student of wild-animal life in the Rockies, has written an authentic and interesting tale for readers from eleven up."
+ Horn Bk 26:477 N '50 60w

Kirkus 18:352 Jl 1 '50 100w

"The story develops so logically, Duff's thoughts seem natural, and it seems as if bears must really think and act as he does. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 75:1840 O 15 '50 60w

"Mr. Rush combines with plenty of action an authentic feeling for the wonderful mountain background, and gives us one of the best animal stories of the year."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 12 '50 190w

N Y Times p26 N 12 '50 140w

+ School & Society 72:175 S 9 '50 20w

RUSHMORE, HELEN. Cowboy Joe of the Circle S [il. by Peter Burchard]. 147p $2 Harcourt 50-9425

Joe, the eight-year-old son of the new boss of Circle S ranch, wanted to be a cowboy. He learned that he had to earn a name as well as learn to be a cowboy. He made a good many mistakes and earned several names thereby, but the day he fought the prairie fire alone he earned his name: Chip of the Circle S. Grades 3-5.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

"Helen Rushmore has created a fascinating story of ranch life that will appeal to both boys and girls." B. J. Russel
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 12 '50 120w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 20w

Kirkus 18:515 S 1 '50 120w

"Readable book for fourth-fifth graders; good read-aloud story for lower grades. Recommended." F. M. Hensey
+ Library J 75:1836 O 15 '50 80w

Springf'd Republican p6D O 8 '50 100w

Wis Lib Bul 46:21 N '50

RUSK, RALPH LESLIE. Life of Ralph Waldo Emerson. 592p $6 Scribner
B or 92 Emerson, Ralph Waldo 49-9006

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Innumerable pieces of fresh evidence, a judiciously balanced interpretation, and a readable style make Mr. Rusk's book the definitive biography of Emerson if one shares 'the biographer's dream of re-creating an entire man, much as a novelist or dramatist of insight and imagination creates a character.' Mr. Rusk has by no means neglected Emerson's ideas, but he is more interested in the man as a personality, sketched against his time and place and in relation to the many other leading personalities he met on his travels. . . Granting his conception of a biography, this is certainly superior to any yet written of an American author." H. H. Clark
+ Am Hist R 55:381 Ja '50 650w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 17 '50 390w

RUSK, R. L.—Continued

"Mr. Rusk's style is clear and pleasing from the first page to the last, and his devotion to his subject quickly wins not only the attention but the sympathy of the reader. Yet with all of Mr. Rusk's erudition and fidelity, I fear we still have not enough knowledge fully to apprehend Emerson's leap from radical minister to radical oracle." S. G. Brown

+ — New Eng Q 22:530 D '49 1050w

"In spite of the publisher's boast this is not 'a new kind of biography,' it is a work of scholarship written with sufficient dramatic force to grip the intelligent but unacademic reader, and as such it has many predecessors; but it does look upon Emerson from a new perspective. By presenting him fumbling and experimenting with ideas before offering them to the public it removes some of that patina of priggish omniscience that has long overlaid the philosophers' fame."

Times [London] Lit Sup p43 Ja 20 '50 850w

"Authoritative treatment is accorded such fundamental matters as the early religious training of Emerson, his education at Harvard University, his lecturing, and his financial straits. Indeed, nearly every individual in Emerson's life and nearly every aspect of his career receive fresh illumination. As critic, the author essays little more than passing summary or comment, but future criticism of Emerson must take into account the pioneer work of this biography."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:339 S '49 900w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY). Between us and evil. 221p $2.50 Doubleday

50-9262

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:371 Jl 1 '50 90w

"Light and flip, but not quite funny."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 1 '50 160w

"A book filled with unlikely actions and a sort of narrative chaos that is presumably intended as farcical confusion." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p24 Ag 27 '50 90w

"'Between Us and Evil' is Charlotte Murray Russell at her best. Uncle Homer and Nephew Johnny are on the job once more and very brightly go after the friend who interrupted Johnny during a rather idyllic scene on the terrace with Ellie." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 27 '50 160w

RUSSELL, JACK. Jill and I and the salmon; with il. by Ralph L. Boyer. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 204p $3 Little

799.1775 Camps and camping. Salmon fishing

Agr50-453

An account of the author's salmon camps in Canada on the Miramichi, Restigouche, and Bonaventure rivers. Mr Russell was forced to retire from business at forty-nine, because of ill health. His fishing camps were set up in order to support himself and his wife, Jill, a former member of the London ballet. He describes the building of the camps, assembling staff and guides, and the running of the camps.

Booklist 46:332 Jl 1 '50

"Filled with entertaining anecdotes and valuable fishing lore, this [is a] delightful book."

+ Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 40w

Reviewed by J. A. Menaugh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 2 '50 300w

Kirkus 18:230 Ap 1 '50 90w

"Strong appeal to nature lovers and sportsmen." R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 25 '50 190w

"The writing is honest, unpretentious and will strike responsive chords in any fisherman's heart. 'Jill and I and the Salmon,' however, is much more than a success story. It describes the life history of the Atlantic salmon and relates the long struggle to unite commercial fishermen and private anglers in intelligent conservation methods." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p41 S 10 '50 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 9 '50 160w

"Thoroughly agreeable, informative (salmon fishing has a language of its own), and unassuming, this book is good reading, and not only for fishermen." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 33:28 S 16 '50 240w

Wis Lib Bul 46:17 Jl '50

RUSSELL, PETER, ed. Examination of Ezra Pound; a collection of essays [by T. S. Eliot and others]. 268p $3.75 New directions

811 Pound, Ezra Loomis

"This is a compilation of tributes to Mr. Pound in the form of essays by T. S. Eliot, Edith Sitwell, Ernest Hemingway, G. S. Fraser, and others." School & Society

"What is valuable in this book is the light it throws on Pound's poetry—which, after all, is the question at issue. It may not convince one that the 'Cantos' is the greatest poem of our day. . . But it will send one eagerly back to Pound for the extraordinary and subtle beauties of his verse, and it will renew one's astonishment at the extraordinary reach of his influence in contemporary letters." Robert Peel

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 D 9 '50 800w

"Although we feel that the shining fruits of Pound's scholarship and poetic genius are often rotten at the core with moral disintegration, this volume is a just tribute to an influential innovator and skilled technician."

Kirkus 18:579 S 15 '50 190w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 20 '50 550w

Reviewed by Kathleen Raine

New Statesman & Nation 40:510 N 25 '50 900w

"It is not astonishing that men of diverse backgrounds and interests, in uniting to do a man homage, should agree on the excellence of his work. What is remarkable is that the masters and the journeymen gathered here, whether they discuss Pound as a poet, a critic, an historian, a Sinologue, an economist, or a philosopher, discover the same reasons for that excellence." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 D 3 '50 1500w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 33:24 D 2 '50 650w

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 30w

"This is an interesting book, for, by describing his vital personal influence, and in one or two sketches picturing him as the impresario of modern poetry, the book is partly a record and partly an explanation of the literary fashion which Pound set for a certain group of writers. It is an important book, for it attempts to convince the reader of the greatness of Pound's poetry, where it does not already assume this. It is also an affecting book, for it shows to what extreme of uncritical admiration friendship and gratitude may carry the disciple. But it is a bad book, if it is meant to be 'an unbiased and representative criticism.'" Richard Murphy

+ — Spec 184:516 N 17 '50 1450w

RUSSELL, SHEILA MACKAY. A lamp is heavy; il. by Jean McConnell. 257p $3 Lippincott

50-5581

A novel based on the life of a nurse while in training. In the course of Susan Bates' story all the high points in any nurse's course are brought out from the bedpan era to obstetrical and mental cases.

Booklist 46:337 Jl 1 '50

"Set forth with some humor and complete honesty. . . Not a career story nor a hospital romance, but a first-rate explanation of exactly what nursing entails." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 26:213 My '50 70w

"In the early pages the style is a touch coy and forgivably sentimental. As the months of tough training roll along, Susan gets a better grip on her job and her story, and shows up as a likeable, capable person with a flair for nursing and an intelligent curiosity about its aims, possibilities and place in the bigger scheme of things." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 2 '50 290w

"This book would seem to have been written principally for the teen-age and high-school group but would certainly afford amusement to anyone contemplating a nurse's career and to those who have previously passed through the mill. The style is simple and characters not overly well developed, but a noticeable lack of sentimentality and some good, sound evidence about the pitfalls surrounding nursing are present. The author remembers well just how heavy that lamp can be and is yet able to reminisce with humor and detachment." Stephanie Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:14 Jl 15 '50 230w

RUSSELL, WILLIAM RICHARD. Wind is rising. 292p $3 Scribner

50-14746

"Problem novel of Negro share croppers in the Delta and their social plight, centering around two brothers—one, 'Brother', falsely convicted of murder; the other, 'Beal', determined to help him." Library J

"Avoids the creative sterility of most problem novels and resists the temptation of the pat answer. Some four letter words and incidents, so examination before purchase indicated. Otherwise, warmly recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ — Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 130w

"A frankly polemical novel, 'A Wind Is Rising' loses what impact it might have had by straining the reader's credulity at every point—in plot, in characterization, in reportage."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 3 '50 600w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
N Y Times p32 N 5 '50 360w

"Some of Mr. Russell's characters— in particular his white folks—are too simply drawn. But in Beal, his hero, he has created a real person and accomplished the difficult task of portraying the transformation of a true innocent into a mature, socially aware man. His scenes of Delta life and of New York Negro life ring true. He writes with a fine indignation that is very persuasive. Though his story has been told before, it is good to have it told again." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R of Lit 33:21 D 23 '50 290w

RUXTON, GEORGE FREDERICK AUGUSTUS. Ruxton of the Rockies; collected by Clyde and Mae Reed Porter; ed. by LeRoy R. Hafen. 325p il $5 Univ. of Okla. press

917.8 West—Description and travel. Mexico—Description and travel. Canada—Description and travel. Indians of North America

50-9832

"In effect an autobiography compiled from Note Books and printed works, arranged and edited; illustrated by contemporary drawings. World wide travels of young Englishman, but mostly adventure and hunting in Canada, Mexico and Western America 1837-47. Author lived and hunted with Indians, vividly describing hunts of game, large and small." Library J

"Good for sporting collections, but extremely important as early Americana. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1907 N 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ N Y Times p20 O 29 '50 400w

"In a way, the volume is Ruxton's own life story, told in his own words. Indeed, it comes closer than previously published material, since here many changes made after his death by his mother with the mistaken notion that she was improving his prose have been restored to their original form. Ruxton's notes on his school-days are about as succinct as anyone could make them. . . The first part of this volume is brand-new material and is therefore a significant contribution to Western Americana." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 18 '50 1000w

Reviewed by Frank Waters
+ Sat R of Lit 33:23 O 28 '50 850w

S

SABATO, ERNESTO R. The outsider; tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís. Am ed 177p $2.50 Knopf

50-7073

A novel in which an imprisoned Argentine painter tells of the events leading to the murder of his mistress.

Booklist 46:287 My 15 '50

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 7 '50 650w

"Except for Marie, the characters emerge as masks. The locale is Argentina, but might well be any suburb of Hades. Very special, very Latin in appeal."
Kirkus 18:140 Mr 1 '50 140w

"Though marked by restraint and economy the story is well paced and moves steadily and swiftly to the climax. The reader sees clearly the inexorable and relentless pressures on the mind of the advanced neurotic which lead inevitably to insanity." Harold Lancour
+ Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 100w

"Although it resembles Albert Camus's 'The Stranger' in its devices and in its concern with human isolation, 'The Outsider' is less impressive than the French novel. Perhaps the difference lies in the difference between an analysis of human motive and a poetry of human motive. Camus's novel contained the poetry; the Argentinian's seems arid and dry by comparision." Alfred Hayes
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 14 '50 550w

"With such a protagonist, sympathy is virtually impossible to achieve; and the book must be judged, therefore, for its psychological insight or ability to maintain suspense and interest. Psychologically it succeeds wonderfully until the act of violence, where a sudden concern with sentimental love seemed, to this reader, to vitiate (and cheapen) the fused effect of lovelessness and impotence that the author had legitimately isolated." B. V. Winebaum
+ — N Y Times p30 Ap 23 '50 240w

"Maria remains a passive figure, little more than a doll, without desire or other motive. Numbness and frenzy not being very likely antagonists, one begins to feel that Castel is tormenting himself before a dummy that his particular madness drove him to covet and finally destroy, a spectacle that provokes one to a sort of impatient pity, nothing more."
— New Yorker 26:122 Ap 22 '50 130w

"The overall structure is close knit, but suffers in the beginning chapters from weak illustrative material in support of major points. In addition, the early paragraphs bear overtones suggestive of the short story form, and it is not until the first face-to-face contact of the central characters that the novel form develops. These are minor points which detract little from the whole. . . Future works by Mr. Sabato should be similarly welcomed by English readers everywhere if this translation is a good example of his craftsmanship." R. H. Uhlig
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 9 '50 900w

SABATO, E. R.—Continued

"The writing itself is felicitous enough to keep one reading with a certain fascination (perhaps, you think, Maria will come clear in the end) and the translation from the Spanish by Harriet de Onis would appear to be altogether impeccable. At its best this sort of thing would fall into the tour de force classification. One can only note that Ernesto Sábato is a writer of considerable ability, hung, unfortunately, at the moment in some limbo between Albert Camus and Graham Greene." Hollis Alpert

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ag 5 '50 320w

SACKVILLE-WEST, EDWARD. Inclinations. 246p $3.50 Scribner

809 Literature—History and criticism

50-9377

Critical essays on "thirteen novelists, four poets, a diarist and a painter. Racially England claims the majority of these, but France has seven and Germany three." (Spec) No index.

Kirkus 18:445 Ag 1 '50 170w

"Many of the author's isolated insights have point and can pierce, and his appreciations are sensitive and often quite moving, but it is doubtful whether in the end his tastes and opinions add up to more than a persistent game of cat's cradle with the fringes of literature."

New Yorker 26:166 N 4 '50 140w

" 'Inclinations' . . . is a pleasant book by a pleasant man, who writes with ease and authority and certainly not as the scribes. A bitter friend of mine once defined a literary critic as any person who hates literature. If the definition is sound Mr. Sackville-West cannot be a literary critic because he obviously is passionately devoted to literature, as he is to music and painting. These predilections emerge on every page." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 S 23 '50 700w

"Throughout this book we are made to feel that a critic's best equipment is insight, sensibility and finally the ability to reveal his more subtle gradation of feeling in face of a masterpiece. . . Sometimes a touch of fastidiousness, a touch almost of hauteur—in the preface for example—may irritate a reader, but he is far more likely to feel a continually growing respect for a scholarship that is so mellow, and that reveals itself without any ostentation, rooted still in the classical standard of the past, and yet so sympathetic to the modern mind." Monk Gibbon

+ Spec 184:26 Ja 6 '50 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p72 F 3 '50 3400w

SAGE, DANA. 22 brothers. 247p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

50-7234

Mystery story.

Kirkus 18:78 F 1 '50 60w

"Despite Sage's inability to create character and despite a wealth of stilted dialogue, it is hard to imagine any armchair adventurer passing up this story. In 'The 22 Brothers' the yarn's the thing and it is spun with gusto."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 30 '50 150w

"It's too bad that the right-minded hero and the villains who pursue him are not more believable than the brightly inked figures in a comic book. But the jungle trip up the Rio Paraguay, through the heart of the sinister Chaco, is well worth the ride. Dana Sage's murder melodrama-cum-mystery contains all the standard ingredients of its genre; it should fit well enough in your vacation rucksack, if you're planning that book-bag in advance." H. M.

+ N Y Times p29 My 21 '50 220w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 14 '50 80w

Springf'd Republican p12C My 21 '50 120w

SAGER, GORDON. Invisible worm. 307p $3 Vanguard

50-10266

In the first chapter of this novel an elderly, wealthy American woman is found dead, a suicide, in the bedroom of her handsome Sicilian villa. Immediately a great number of people, in America, in Sicily and elsewhere, friends, relatives, servants, begin to speculate as to why she committed suicide and in the course of their wonderings, a great deal is revealed concerning Madeleine West's past life.

Kirkus 18:481 Ag 15 '50 160w

"The story is rambling and unnecessarily obscene at times; its only point is trying to show to what lengths a frustrated, not-too-well-liked person will go to gain companionship. Not recommended." Anne Whitmore

— Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 100w

"In what might be called a self-murder mystery, Mr. Sager has performed the rather astonishing feat of constructing a witty and amusing farce around a suicide." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 19 '50 440w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p33 O 8 '50 150w

"Mr. Sager writes lightly and with polish, producing a briskly melancholy tale that is easy to read and just as easy to forget."

New Yorker 26:137 O 21 '50 80w

Reviewed by John Brooks

Sat R of Lit 33:65 D 2 '50 380w

SAGER, GORDON. Run, sheep, run. 295p $3 Vanguard

50-5860

"Mr. Sager transports a number of Americans and Europeans to Nunca-Nunca, a remote island in the West Indies, and encourages them to excite each other to various tiny madnesses of love, curiosity, and disgust." New Yorker

Reviewed by Feike Feikema

— + Chicago Sun p6 Mr 8 '50 500w

" 'Run, Sheep, Run' is amiable, light-hearted entertainment; one will find amusing passages and scenes; but essentially the novel, tho a good performance for a first novelist, is froth." August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 F 26 '50 400w

Kirkus 17:679 D 15 '49 120w

"In 'Run Sheep Run' Mr. Sager, writing both brightly and perceptively of the people who retreat to the fringes of our customary world, has made a considerable contribution to an understanding of their motivations." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 My 7 '50 500w

"Because the author has no sympathy for his characters, the reader can have none. Though 'Run Sheep Run' is written in language that is at times clinical, at times pointlessly obscene, Mr. Sager's style can be vivid and dramatic. He knows how to create atmosphere, how to stage a climax, how to tell a story. The trouble is that 'Run, Sheep, Run' adds up only to a deep contempt for life and the dignity of man." Hilda Osterhout

— + N Y Times p27 F 12 '50 230w

"A good many people are involved, and Mr. Sager records almost all the vibrations that take place, annotating them with a barefaced lack of inventiveness. One of the characters, Mrs. Amelia Macy, is really interesting. It is too bad that her creator did not feel ambitious enough to give her the attention she deserves."

— + New Yorker 26:118 F 25 '50 110w

"By no means a profound affair, the story is engagingly told, in its brittle way. . . Mr. Sager writes brilliantly and manages his story so well that you'll finish it even though your nose may wrinkle more than once at the perfume of decay that floats over this exhibit of Freudian inwardnesses." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 8 '50 700w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 33:34 Mr 25 '50 320w

SAINT EXUPERY, ANTOINE DE. Wisdom of the sands; tr. by Stuart Gilbert from the French Citadelle. 350p $4 Harcourt
848 50-10032

"Published in France as Citadelle, this is Saint-Exupery's philosophy of life brought forth from a lifetime of thought. He employs as his narrator a ruler of a great desert empire who gives his legacy of wisdom to his people. The language is Biblical, the way of life is that of ancient peoples of the sands and oases." Library J

Booklist 47:92 N 1 '50
Bookmark 10:31 N '50 50w

"The beloved aviator seems to have lost his way in the clouds and skies he described so magnificently in previous works and the translation, thick and wordy, cannot compare to Galantière's crisp, pure rendition of Wind, Sand and Stars, by the same author." J. D. Casgrain
Cath World 172:238 D '50 300w

"Those who read Saint-Exupery's mystical and disturbing City of God will read it, I think, with deep emotion. He gives us his philosofy not as an abstraction but in terms of the realities of storm and warfare and the passions of men. Tho he renders the surface of life with exactness and feelings, he is continually stirring up the bottomless mysteries beneath." J. F. Nims
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 22 '50 500w

"It has both the merits and the defects of a work that has been long in the writing, its text gradually accumulating through the years. Its main directions are clear, but its course is circuitous and repetitious. Its framework is such as to make this desultory character almost inevitable. The whole is a monologue by the absolute monarch of a desert empire who at times reports the wise words he had heard his father speak and at times gives utterance to his own sentiments and principles." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 67:1392 N 22 '50 1600w

"Hailed as one of the most important French books published in the last decade, Saint-Exupéry's posthumous work is indeed written in the noblest tradition of that country. The author's own high ethical and literary standards are reflected in every page, as is the finest French military tradition of devotion to duty, discipline and sacrifice." Helene Iswolsky
+ Commonweal 53:205 D 1 '50 950w
Kirkus 18:621 O 1 '50 230w

"For some, this unusual book will meet a need and they will respond to it fully. . . It is recommended for general purchase, but fewer copies will be needed than for the author's earlier works." G. D. McDonald
Library J 75:1657 O 1 '50 130w
Nation 171:349 O 14 '50 100w

"We in America, being concerned with what man should do, and not with what man should be, are not able to measure the kind of torment of the spirit in which this book was written. It is deeply traditionalist, and on what might be called its political side it would have been a wiser book if Saint-Exupéry had been free to examine our traditions, which are profoundly different from those of the European democracies. But the American reader who perceives the true sense of Saint-Exupéry's parable will find that he has penetrated to the core of some of our deepest spiritual questions. . . Mr. Stuart Gilbert's translation is scrupulous beyond praise, fluent, flexible, and eloquent. It errs, perhaps, in adding honey ('lo and behold,' 'forsooth,' 'methinks') to a style mellifluous enough to begin with." Lewis Galantiere
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 15 '50 1350w

"As one who admired 'Night Flight' and 'Wind, Sand and Stars,' this reviewer would have found it a privilege to be able to say that this book is all that its ardent (but awkward) translator claims. Something of the author's early magic remains: the vocation of lonely distances and desert spaces. There is still the communicated sense of natural beauty; of the human predicament, of time and eternity. Yet there is something now explicit which in the earlier works at most hovered, a lyric shadow, or echoed, a poetic overtone. Saint-Exupery's mistique has here turned political. What in the vocabulary of politics would sound like the grimmest authoritarianism, presented in the diction of God, Love and the Infinite, seems to suggest the deliverances of a religious prophet, a dedicated mystic." Irwin Edman
+ — N Y Times p18 O 8 '50 850w
New Yorker 26:139 O 21 '50 180w

"Stuart Gilbert has kept his translation on an elevated plane. It is a book that cannot be read lightly. For some readers, it will be more than a candle in the dark, in fact, for many, it may carry a dozen torches. It is the kind of book one hopes will survive the atomic age." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 26 '50 250w
Time 56:106 O 16 '50 550w

ST NICHOLAS (magazine). Second St Nicholas anthology; ed. by Henry Steele Commager. 586p il $5 Random house 810.8

A further selection from the St Nicholas magazine, following the compiler's earlier volume (Book Review Digest 1948). Contains family stories, adventure, historical romance, sports, animal stories, nature stories, humor, verse, and illustrations.

Cath World 172:240 D '50 40w
Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 19 '50 550w
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 50w

"Once more the big Christmas question finds an answer suitable to children, or to anyone who has been a child, in this handsome, happy volume." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 2 '50 500w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '50
Kirkus 18:655 N 1 '50 170w

"The wonder is only that the Commagers could have steeled themselves to omit such rich stuff in their first collection. Don't make the mistake of thinking this handsome volume is for antiquarians; the juices are still there." R. B.
+ Nation 171:682 D 23 '50 300w

"Some of the stories, especially the fairy tales, must call for a suspension of disbelief, even in young readers. But the basic magazine journalism was sound, in the days when the American horizon sufficed and mechanical inventions had not yet captured the imaginations of the young." Harry Hansen
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 12 '50 900w

"There is much in this rich feast for everybody. . . For most people there will be at least one bête noire of childhood. My vote goes to Frances Hodgson Burnett's 'Editha's Burglar.' 'Too goody-goody' was the verdict then—and now." N. M.
+ — N Y Times p38 N 12 '50 400w
Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 14 '50 700w
Sat R of Lit 33:42 D 9 '50 270w

SALES, FRANCIS DE, SAINT. See Francis de Sales, Saint

SALINAS, PEDRO. Sea of San Juan; a contemplation [poems] tr. by Eleanor L. Turnbull; with Spanish original. 89p $2.75 Humphries 861 50-14866

"Pedro Salinas is possibly the finest living Spanish poet. This is his third volume of translated poems to appear in this country." N Y Times

SALINAS, PEDRO—Continued

"In this reviewer's opinion, Salinas' work excels the better known Federico Garcia Lorca's in many ways: Lorca's is an almost elementary though genuine poetry; Salinas' poems are rich, complex and full of reverberations—a finer, more cultivated instrument." Jose Garcia Villa

+ N Y Times p44 D 3 '50 270w

"If the light and shadow in Salinas's poetry were occasionally shifted and out of balance; if there were a greater rise and fall in the tide of his emotions, the reverie might suffer but the stature of Salinas would gain in the excitement that belongs to great poetry."

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:42 N 18 '50 360w

SALISBURY, ALBERT P., and SALISBURY, JANE S. Two captains west; an historical tour of the Lewis and Clark trail; drawings by Carter Lucas. 235p il maps $7.50 Superior pub.

917.8 Lewis and Clark expedition 50-8706

A conducted tour of the route taken by Lewis and Clark nearly 150 years ago. They followed the Missouri river to its source; and sailed down the Columbia River to the Pacific ocean. The Salisburys follow this trail, identifying and photographing the route and as many campsites as were discoverable. Maps. Index.

"If you're looking for an unusual travel adventure this summer, of either the arm chair variety or by automobile, this is it. . . The book is not only a well written and interesting adventure story, but is of historical interest, giving new light on two of America's greatest and bravest explorers." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 23 '50 230w

Kirkus 18:381 Jl 1 '50 110w

"The Salisburys have chosen well, got the main points in and have been sensible enough not to make too much fun of Clark's highly original way of putting things, including his spelling. Now and then they can't very well help it. After all, there is a certain charm of a special kind in learning that they proceeded up the Missouri in what Clark chose to set down as a 'jentle brease.' " J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 4 '50 850w

"This reviewer has always wondered why somebody didn't do exactly what the Salisburys have done. Well, here it is, summa cum laude." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 S 23 '50 180w

SALISBURY, JOHN KENNETH. Steam turbines and their cycles. 645p $9; college ed $7.50 Wiley

621.165 Steam turbines 50-8600

"Treatise on the engineering aspects of steam turbines. Not only does it cover the subject more thoroughly than any other recent book, but it contains original treatments of several important topics such as the calculation of heat balances." (Library J) Exercises for students at ends of most chapters. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1195 Jl '50 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:64 Jl '50

"The treatment is not highly mathematical, but commendably practical and comprehensible. The book should find use in technical colleges at the senior class level, and should be useful also as a reference for those interested in the art or status of steam turbine design."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:392 S '50 180w

SALZMANN, JEROME, comp. Chess reader; the royal game in world literature. 366p il $5 Greenberg

794.1 Chess 49-10985

A collection of materials on chess including poetry, prose and reproductions of pictures and diagrams. The materials are arranged in chronological order beginning with the Greek Mencius and the Chinese Confucius of the third century B.C. and ending with an excerpt from the book Cybernetics, by Norbert Wiener, published 1948.

"While a lover of the royal game may feel that the compiler has given too little space to our modern view, with its downright realism, the volume deserves to be recommended not only to chess fanatics but to laymen who know nothing about the game and wonder why wooden creatures spend so much time over a wooden board in a state of apparent paralysis." Alfred Kreymborg

+ N Y Times p32 N 20 '49 180w

"A fine book to browse in." H. L. Varley

+ Springf'd Republican p3D Ja 22 '50 270w

SAMPSON, ARTHUR. Ted Williams; a biography of the kid. (Most valuable player ser) 180p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Williams, Theodore Samuel. Baseball 50-7864

An account of the career of the American league's most valuable player. Index.

"That great but unpredictable figure, Ted Williams, emerges clearly from the haze of error and legend and distortion in this fine study by a Boston newspaperman. You will like The Kid better and understand him more easily when you have read it." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 11 '50 50w

"Admirers or critics of this lively personality will be disappointed in the portrait here stretched as it is to saint dimensions."

— Kirkus 18:255 Ap 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:1191 Jl '50 40w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 4 '50 200w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p6 My 21 '50 220w

Springf'd Republican p12C Je 11 '50 190w

SAMUEL, MAURICE. The gentleman and the Jew. 325p $3.75 Knopf

B or 92 Jews 50-9222

"An autobiography and a study of the moral problems of our times, book first describes the author's childhood in England and his turning away from the Jewish heritage; then describes his realization of the errors in the materialistic concepts of life and his return to the Hebrew prophets. Special section examines the Zionist movement and the creation of the State of Israel." Library J

Bookmark 10:6 O '50 40w

Kirkus 18:345 Je 15 '50 190w

"Recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 150w

"Maurice Samuel is a gifted writer who has given us some very perceptive studies of Jewish life and destiny. This new work, however, is valuable only in revealing how patient history is in allowing the most implausible generalizations about her varied patterns of thought and life." Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 171:292 S 30 '50 1200w

"The final portion of 'The Gentleman and the Jew' is especially penetrating. The book as a whole, however, will stimulate and enlighten any Jew, any Gentile, any gentleman. The philosophy of the gentleman is perhaps too superficially treated, but for what he set out to do Mr. Samuel has succeeded admirably; he says sharply and ably something which very much needs to be said." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 17 '50 1000w

New Yorker 26:148 O 14 '50 140w

SANDBURG, CARL. Complete poems. 676p $6 Harcourt

811 50-11502

"Herein are somewhat more than 800 pieces written between the years 1910 and 1950. Seven books are now fastened and sealed into one book. How the pieces came to be written would make a long chapter in autobiography or a fair-sized book in itself. During the forty years of these writings came the First World War, the gay postwar prosperity years, the Great Depression, the Second World War, peace and the Cold War, global drama on a colossal scale." (Carl Sandburg in Notes for a Preface.) No index, but a complete table of contents.

Booklist 47:154 D 15 '50

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 17 '50 420w

Kirkus 18:690 N 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 171:536 D 9 '50 220w

"There is more pure gold in 'Complete Poems' than Fort Knox could ever contain." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 19 '50 2200w

"It was not accident that Sandburg should write the great biography of Lincoln, a biography perfectly suited to Lincoln's genius. For Sandburg is, like Whitman, the Lincoln of our poetry. At a time when we are tempted to betray ourselves, tempted into irrationality, into superficiality, into cynicism, he celebrates what is best in us and recalls us to our heritage and to our humanity." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Times p1 N 19 '50 1850w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 N 18 '50 1450w

Time 56:100 D 4 '50 800w

SANDBURG, CARL. Lincoln collector; the story of Oliver R. Barrett's great private collection. 344p il $7.50; ltd ed $15 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Barrett, Oliver Roger 49-11761

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by D. C. Mearns
Am Hist R 56:145 O '50 1150w

"A valuable and interesting book and a gracious tribute to a great collector who generously made his loved documents available to researchers and thereby advanced the study of history." T. H. Williams
+ Ann Am Acad 270:158 Jl '50 240w

Booklist 46:231 Mr 15 '50

"In Carl Sandburg's presentation of the Oliver R. Barrett collection of Lincolniana we find a novel approach to historical and biographical material. This regular printing of an earlier limited edition contains both more and less than a regular biography. Letters, diaries, newspaper clippings, documents, and photographs provide a graphic setting for an approach to understanding Lincoln's period; but sheer weight of detail beclouds a clear impression of Lincoln's nature." Russell Lord
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 8 '50 550w

"The volume will tell you much about the raw material out of which the tragic Civil War developed." Paul Kiniery
Commonweal 51:686 Ap 7 '50 390w

Kirkus 18:129 F 15 '50 190w

"Reading it is like going through the jumbled contents of an old desk; there is no great discovery but somehow the period comes quite magically to life."
Nation 170:555 Je 3 '50 40w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:194 Je '50 360w

SANDERS, A. H. Electroplating. 118p il $2.75 Int. textbook

671 Electroplating 50-7256

"Basic theory and techniques of general application are outlined. About one-third of the space is taken up with concise discussions of special techniques followed in the plating of specific metals; chromium plating is included. The book has potential interest for practical workers just entering the electroplating industry and for hobbyists who wish to do small-scale plating in a home workshop." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:876 My 15 '50 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:38 My '50

SANDS, LESTER BRUTON. Introduction to teaching in secondary schools. 421p $3 Harper

373 Teaching. Education, Secondary 49-10393

"[This] is a practical handbook that deals with most of the professional questions confronting the beginning teacher and sets out in unexpected detail most of the educational methods, materials, and principles of learning found in American secondary schools. The book should prove useful to student teachers who are preparing to work at the secondary-school level." (School R) Index.

"Despite some dogmatism and a tendency to categorize smoothly the traditional and modern educational procedures, Sands is generally fairer than most writers of his pedagogical persuasion to the conservative position. . . The book's teaching apparatus is very satisfactory, but there are too many misprints in proper names." W. W. Brickman
+ — School & Society 72:85 Ag 5 '50 360w

Reviewed by John Withall
+ School R 58:305 My '50 950w

SAN LAZZARO, GUALTIERI DI. Painting in France, 1895-1949; tr. by Baptista Gilliat-Smith and Bernard Wall. 132p pl $7.50 Philosophical lib.

759.4 Painting, French 50-5176

"Lively, informal survey of painters and movements from the days of the Impressionists to the present. The author is frank in his estimates and injects personal reactions into the judgments. A recurring theme is the importance of the collector and dealer in establishing a painter or group. Illustrations in black and white only. The book will be enjoyable to those with some knowledge of the subject rather than as a student's introduction." Booklist

Booklist 46:243 Ap 1 '50

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:782 My 1 '50 80w

"Reading this book is like listening to a clever man putting forth his opinions, none of which are dull, but many of which are open to disagreement. Readers will find the author's ideas stimulating, but because the presentation assumes a sound knowledge of the period the beginner is advised to leave this book alone." Stuart Preston
+ — N Y Times p29 Ja 29 '50 140w

"Whether you use this book to gather added information on the personalities, abilities and accomplishments of French painters for appreciation classes or as a museum guide for your personal satisfaction, Painting in France will fulfill the purposes equally well."
+ School Arts 49:10a Ap '50 160w

SANSOM, SIR GEORGE BAILEY. Western world and Japan; a study in the interaction of European and Asiatic cultures. 504p il maps $6 Knopf

952 Japan—Civilization. Japan—History. Acculturation 50-5199

A study of the cultural relations of the West and Asia, particularly Japan, from pre-Christian times to 1894. The work was originally planned as a supplement to the author's Japan: A Short Cultural History (Book Review Digest 1932). Index.

Reviewed by D. M. Brown
+ Am Hist R 55:906 Jl '50 950w

SAMSOM, G. B.—Continued
Reviewed by J. F. Embree
Am Soc R 15:575 Ag '50 750w

"This is the book that college teachers have been waiting for, who, themselves unacquainted with Far Eastern languages and therefore locked out of a scholarly knowledge of the history and culture of the area, are yet called upon to instruct undergraduates in the field. . . G. B. Sansom, author in 1931 (revised in 1943) of Japan: A Short Cultural History, brings a rich experience of both Europe and Asia to the writing of this present book. . . The book would be more serviceable if it contained good maps and a bibliography. Many chapters have brief discussions appended of a bibliographical nature but the book obviously rests upon a wealth of printed material for which there is no guide." O. G. Darlington
+ — Ann Am Acad 271:191 S '50 600w
Booklist 46:230 Mr 15 '50
Bookmark 9:184 My '50 50w

"Sansom, whose name is greeted with automatic doffing of hats among Japan experts, has surveyed the impact of western civilizations on the east in a magnificently scholarly and readable study. His reluctant conclusion boils down to this: the east accepts foreign things quickly, but excludes foreign ideas with a stubbornness and hostility totally unsuspected by Americans." Walter Simmons
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 5 '50 550w

"An important book and one that has been awaited eagerly. Sir George Sansom, diplomat, author of the one essential book on traditional Japanese civilization, and now director of the Columbia University East Asian Institute, has again conveyed to us the fruit of long reflection and research in a book as remarkable for its grace and style as it is for its stimulating interpretation." M. B. Jansen
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 10 '50 900w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 51:657 Mr 31 '50 1300w

"A history that well might be definitive in its monumental examination of the interaction of differing cultures."
+ Kirkus 17:670 D 1 '49 140w

"Highly recommended as a very important work." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 75:170 F 1 '50 150w

Reviewed by Guy Wint
Manchester Guardian p4 O 27 '50 850w

"With a unanimity rare in the scholarly world Sir George Sansom has long been acknowledged as the most distinguished scholar on the Far East. The claim was established twenty years ago by his history of Japan. It is validated by the present book. The only book on the Far East which is as good as this one is Sir George's own earlier book. What gives his books their quality is that he combines exact scholarship on a specialized subject with a rich fund of general ideas and both with literary grace." Nathaniel Peffer
+ Nation 170:183 F 25 '50 1050w

"One could wish that in his delineation of Confucianism in Japan the author had pointed out with what limitations that system of thought had to be disseminated owing to the feudal structure of Japanese society. . . This, however, is a minor point in an uncommonly well balanced book, a work which has a rare charm owing to its humane outlook and its deferential attitude toward the reader. A fine selection of drawings by print artists, and numerous portraits of eminent Japanese lend added attraction." A. W. Hummel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 12 '50 300w

"For all his studious avoidance of the contemporary scene, Sir George has written a book which throws more light on the problems of Asia today than many books specifically devoted to that subject. He has written sound and stimulating history for the historian, and has also produced a highly readable book which should interest and instruct the casual reader who views Asia merely as the newly discovered continent on his own political horizon." E. O. Reischauer
+ N Y Times p7 F 5 '50 1350w
+ New Yorker 25:98 F 11 '50 120w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 19 '50 750w

"He writes with singular grace and his pages will be a joy to those who appreciate a combination of good English with mature and informed insight." K. S. Latourette
+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 F 25 '50 270w
Times [London] Lit Sup p671 O 27 '50 1550w

"An outstanding example of individual research and scholarship. Humane, cultured, and widely travelled, Sir George Sansom has had a lifetime of experience as an official in Asia and moves easily among primary Japanese sources." G. E. Taylor
+ Yale R n s 39:728 summer '50 1200w

SANSOM, WILLIAM. South; aspects and images from Corsica, Italy, and southern France. 198p $2.75 Harcourt 50-9477

"Nine . . . pictures of Corsica, Italy, and Southern France. In each scene, the personality of the place is strong, while human personality is notably absent. Human beings occur, of course, but only as tokens, to be used in black relief against the brilliant life of the city or town, or as moving figures in the large, indifferent landscape." New Yorker

---

"The stories are very, very fine, the prose responsive and subtle, the characters grasped in their unique qualities. Like so many English writers, Sansom has a sharp eye for the accurate little gestures and phrases which characterize, and especially those which work with irony at the same time." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 17 '50 350w

"It is the genius of Mr. Sansom's art that all secondary elements, even the smallest details in a story, are minutely finished, and even where a mood prevails completely the characters retain a definite contour. But how skillfully this is done!" Serge Hughes
+ Commonweal 52:635 O 6 '50 380w
Kirkus 18:536 S 1 '50 180w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:1508 S 15 '50 100w

"William Sansom writes like an angel, and his joy in the performance communicates itself directly to the reader. There is a wonderful leisureliness about the ceremonious unfoldings of his periods as they explore, meticulously, whatever he turns his attention to. Yet Sansom is never precious, and on those levels of thought and feeling which interest him he misses nothing." Ernest Jones
+ Nation 171:345 O 14 '50 900w

Reviewed by Jean Garrigue
New Repub 123:20 N 6 '50 180w

"It is scarcely surprising these days—trends being what they are—when a British novelist of merit, seeking relaxation from his major efforts, turns out a witty, informative and impeccably written travel book. It has remained for the gifted William Sansom, however, to carry this practice one step further and produce what is, in essence, a travel book, which takes the form of a group of short stories entitled 'South.' . . Mr. Sansom uses language as it should be used, as a flexible instrument adaptable to all sorts of tasks." J. J. Maloney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 15 '50 600w

"Built and written impeccably, adorned with ironic twists and a bitter wit, the stories in 'South,' and their implications, engage and inform and regale the mind; they never touch the heart. Yet the emotions are not the supreme criteria, and Mr. Sansom's clear, brilliant language and intellectual integrity, his mastery of means to ends, satisfy all the others." A. S. Morris
+ N Y Times p4 S 10 '50 800w

New Yorker 26:119 S 9 '50 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 19 '50 700w

"'South' is the Mediterranean world. These are stories of Ajaccio, Nice, Naples, Monte Carlo, Florence, Siena, Milan. First of all, Mr. Sansom, who takes joy and sustenance from the physical world, can communicate that world and that joy—no mean achievement. Here is the impact of the South on the sun-starved North, personified in Mr. Sansom with a notebook, for all this overwhelming detail—fresh, instant, exact, inhumanly brilliant—must have been put down on the spot, or Mr. Sansom is a wizard twice over." Eudora Welty
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 S 23 '50 850w

SANTAYANA, GEORGE. Atoms of thought; an anthology of thoughts; selected and ed. by Ira D. Cardiff. 284p $5 Philosophical lib.
191.9 50-3553

An anthology of brief quotations from a contemporary philosopher. "It is an attempt to display single ideas and flashes rather than to arrange highlights in an organized scheme that will present the philosophy entire." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:327 Jl 1 '50

"Mr. Cardiff has diligently combed nearly thirty volumes and many articles for the most seminal sentences and has arranged them intelligently. This book is a genuine mental stimulant in a form pleasant to take." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:823 Jl 5 '50 270w

"It is doubtful whether a book eminently worth doing was ever more poorly done than this. Neither the selections nor the titles affixed to them strike me as of the highest excellence. Here, I admit, there are no objective standards; and so no one's taste is entitled to final preference. But there is another fault of the book on which one is not privileged to be so tolerant. That has to do with the book's usability. The Index is the only resort here, since there are no chapter headings and no obviously logical grouping of quotations. But when the Index is consulted in order to find what Santayana has said on a given subject, the reference is not directly to the page in this book where one will find the quotation but to the page in Santayana's book from which the quotation is taken." T. V. Smith
— Ethics 61:91 O '50 250w

"A luxury item, as regards serious study or general reading, the poignancy of its selections and its excellent index make it an extremely useful quote book. Recommended." Shirley Barker
+ Library J 75:862 My 15 '50 90w

"The 'Atoms,' unhappy phrase I think, are seldom more than single paragraphs, often single sayings. But this philosopher is extremely quotable, and this volume has a great deal that is arresting and memorable. There is a useful index."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 13 '50 40w

"In their provocative brevity these 'atoms' call attention to Santayana's literary rather than to his philosophical accomplishments. And since he is one of the very best stylists writing English today, his editor has been obliged to be cruel rather than ingenious, while creating a model garden on the site of a model farm." Gerald Sykes
N Y Times p5 Je 4 '50 490w

"A philosopher's work, especially the work of such a 'weighty' philosopher as Santayana, does not as a rule lend itself gracefully to streamlining. In the present volume, however, Mr. Cardiff's organization and choice of selections provide a most excellent introduction as well as a rough index to the two dozen or more major works covered." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p7D Je 25 '50 230w

SANTMYERS, SELBY S. Managing men at work. 299p il $4 Int. textbook
658.3 Foremen. Employment management 50-5861

Primarily this is a book for foremen in factories. It discusses the foreman's job, his responsibilities for both the well-being of the men under him and their output, and explains labor laws and labor unions. The main theme is that the worker is a human being and that he must be managed sympathetically rather than arbitrarily." (Library J) Index.

"So many topics of interest to workers are discussed competently that the book can be recommended to them." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:701 Ap 15 '50 70w

"This reviewer dislikes intensely having to make the evaluation he must of Santmyers' book. Small bits of it, here and there, are positively brilliant; but these rare gems are for all practical purposes rendered almost worthless by the great quantities of poor-quality stuff in which they are set. The book obviously is the result of a lot of genuinely hard work; that is regrettable. For, if it is to be judged according to what it professes to be—a textbook for 'grown-up' industrial supervisors—it must be judged a failure." J. W. Taylor
— + Management R 39:492 Ag '50 550w

SANTMYERS, SELBY S. Practical report writing. 118p $2.75 Int. textbook
651.78 Reports—Preparation 50-5862

A book on how to "render a report," with emphasis on the importance of using an outline. "Practical Report Writing first deals with the importance of reports, with the background needed by the writer of reports, with the gathering and organizing of material, and with the writing of the rough draft of the report. The author then deals with putting the report into an understandable and presentable written form." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:403 Mr 1 '50 50w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:498 Mr 15 '50 60w
Management R 39:498 Ag '50 70w

"A simplified treatment which should be very useful to beginners in the field who must study the subject at home."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:30 Mr '50
Wis Lib Bul 46:14 Ap '50

SAPIR, EDWARD. Selected writings in language, culture, and personality; ed. by David G. Mandelbaum. 617p $6.50; text ed $5 Univ. of Calif.
408.1 Language and languages. Culture. Anthropology 50-5978

"The influence of Edward Sapir, 1884-1939, extends even now to modern linguistics, culture theory, and to the border line of culture and personality psychology. The selection from Sapir's writings assembled here, for the most part previously scattered in diverse periodicals, is grouped under three general headings: Language, Culture, The Interplay of Culture and Personality. . . In addition to an introduction which sketches Sapir's life and work, Professor Mandelbaum has written an editorial Preface for each of the parts and sections of the book." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. No index.

"Most of Sapir's writings were in the form of articles for learned publications, many of them obscure; it is a grateful service to have collected them in this reprinting." Weston La Barre
+ Survey 86:263 My '50 850w

"Whenever he allowed himself to generalize, Sapir showed himself a worthy successor of Whitney and an upholder of the parallel tradition of Sweet, Skeat, and Sayce. In spite of the necessarily formidable jargon of modern linguistics, he was a master of clear and picturesque English; and the extensive bibliography, 1906-47, reveals him as a contributor to most of the literary periodicals of the day."

SAPIR, EDWARD—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 11 '50 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:155 Je '50 260w

SAPONARO, MICHELE. Michelangelo; tr. from the Italian by C. J. Richards. 201p 32pl $4 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarroti 50-14841

"Translated from the Italian by C. J. Richards this biography seems to be slanted toward the average reader who likes facts but doesn't want to dig too deep for them. . . Sidelights, too, on the history of the times, on the Medici and Savonarola, on the Vatican and on poets and courtiers and warriors; on Vittoria Colonna, Pietro Aretino, and Bramante." (Library J) No index.

"We welcome this exciting and sympathetic account, by a fellow countryman, of one of the most universal artists ever to have lived. Admirably translated from the Italian by C. J. Richards, this biografy makes good reading. To give it added interest, 32 halftone illustrations of Michelangelo's work have been added." Clarence Seidenspinner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 D 3 '50 220w

"A fine biography of the great artist, this is also a full, vital and colorful account of the Renaissance in which he lived."
+ Kirkus 18:545 S 1 '50 140w

"A lively chronicle; occasional asterisks suggest that the original Italian version may have been meatier. Black and white illustrations rather mediocre and meager." A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:2080 D 1 '50 120w

SARAZEN, GENE. Thirty years of championship golf; the life and times of Gene Sarazen, by [the author] with Herbert Warren Wind. 276p il $3 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Golf 50-7427

"The life story of a professional golfer from boyhood to champion. . . Gives a good idea of the ambitions, the headaches, the kindly assistance and encouragement of friends, the thrills of competition and joys of victory. Chapters on grip, and Sarazen's estimate of modern masters." Library J

"A perceptive study of a man, and excellent golf material."
+ Booklist 46:285 My 15 '50
Bookmark 9:241 Jl '50 20w

"Rich in anecdotes and well written from cover to cover."
+ Chicago Sun p4 My 23 '50 160w

"With Sarazen pouring out a wealth of facts, figures and colorful anecdotes, and Wind arranging them in championship fashion, the result is a 276 page volume that will keep you spellbound from first tee to final putt." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 7 '50 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 60w

Reviewed by Tom Meany
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 14 '50 200w

"Sarazen reveals an honest appreciation of his own shortcomings. And he does not hesitate to give his frank opinions of some of the 'greats' of yesteryear in the sport, nor to advocate current changes of policy for the Professional Golfers Association, which manages professional golfing affairs. The Sarazen story is, all in all, one golfers and non-golfers alike will enjoy" L. A. Werden
+ N Y Times p21 Je 25 '50 230w
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 230w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. The Assyrian, and other stories. 276p $3.50 Harcourt

50-5197

Eleven stories written for magazines. They are: The Assyrian; The parsley garden; The theological student; The plot; The foreigner; The poet at home; The third day after Christmas; The pheasant hunter; The cornet players; The cocktail party; The leaf thief. There is also an introduction: The writer on the writing.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 185:85 Ap '50 800w
Bookmark 9:136 Mr '50 30w

"Some of [the stories] have a bit of a plot but most of them just ramble on with a loose, easy prose. Once the reader adjusts himself to the rambling gait of the prose and if he can take the author's lackadaisical, amateurish philosophizing, he may possibly enjoy these stories."
+ — Cath World 171:73 Ap '50 170w

Reviewed by Florence Medow
Chicago Sun p7 F 26 '50 50w

"It has been my belief for a long time that William Saroyan is a man who doesn't know how to write and doesn't know what to write, but who, by a virtue of a great and compassionate feeling for the frailities of human aspiration, combined with a somewhat artless skill in the weaving of words, manages now and then to produce a masterpiece. These stories support my belief." Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 12 '50 650w

"Saroyan can write like a breeze. A spring breeze that is. You don't expect to find a spring breeze very well organized or very sound. By definition it is light and unpredictable." J. C. Cort
Commonweal 52:182 My 26 '50 280w

"Characteristically Saroyan, in the intensity of preoccupation with Saroyan, these are stories that devotees will relish for the atmosphere, the sensitive characterization and the whimsical philosophy, while the average short story market, demanding engrossing plot, must look elsewhere."
Kirkus 18:3 Ja 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian
New Repub 123:20 Ag 7 '50 550w

"Those who are Saroyan fans will not be disappointed in this collection, for there is enough of the old Will in it to satisfy them all. But they may receive a bit of a jolt (and a good thing, too) when they read 'The Assyrian.' For the people in 'The Assyrian' are no longer 'the beautiful people.' " J. J. Maloney
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 22 '50 600w

"Saroyan has stirred the mixture again, candidly, engagingly and provokingly, but something new has been added. . . The new thing in Saroyan's book is a disillusioned fed-upness which reaches almost masterpiece dimensions in 'The Assyrian.' " Whit Burnett
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 22 '50 600w
New Yorker 25:100 Ja 21 '50 200w

"Saroyan at his least successful, can be very, very inadequate, and his newest collection of short stories is one about which even his most ardent admirers are likely to be quite unhappy. It seems safe to venture that most of these pieces would never have been printed had their author been Joe Doakes rather than William Saroyan. Most of these short stories, to put the matter simply, are not very good." William Peden
— Sat R of Lit 33:15 F 4 '50 550w

"The Assyrian collection suffers precisely from the fact that Saroyan is so busy creating his own character that he has little time left for the characters in his stories. Bright and shiny on the surface but mushy and sentimental at the core, the stories are pretty much standard Saroyan."
— + Time 55:78 Ja 23 '50 440w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:159 Je '50 270w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:576 spring '50 20w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Twin adventures; The adventures of William Saroyan; a diary [and] The adventures of Wesley Jackson; a novel. 225;285p $3 Harcourt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-6550

"This book contains a diary and a novel written at the same time over a period of 33 consecutive days and nights during the summer of 1944. The novel was published in 1946 [Book Review Digest 1946], the diary is here published for the first time. They are under one cover for the convenience of the readers and because in relation to one another they constitute a single work: an hour-to-hour chronicle of a writer at work on the writing of a novel, and the novel itself." Author's note

---

"Score for this book: one minus, one plus. It consists of a bright novel, 'The Adventures of Wesley Jackson,' and a dull, meandering diary, 'The Adventures of William Saroyan.'" Mary Sandrock

— + Cath World 171:230 Je '50 250w

"It is an absurd book. And yet—and yet—there is a strange quality of vitality in Saroyan which, so far as I am concerned, still holds its charm, even though his vogue has somewhat subsided." W. E. G.

Christian Century 67:846 Jl 12 '50 350w

Reviewed by Joe Dever

Commonweal 52:72 Ap 28 '50 1400w

"An uninhibited report on the pains and pleasures of creation, the diary offers with the novel an unusually frank commentary and its text." H. W. Hart

Library J 75:558 Ap 1 '50 100w

"It doesn't seem possible that anyone, much less the dynamic Saroyan, could write so much about himself and remain so colorless in the process; and one wonders if it was not perhaps a kind of whimsy . . . which made him fill 225 pages with only the most unimportant details." Nona Balakian

New Repub 123:19 Ag 7 '50 310w

"The publishers apparently felt that readers would want to know how Mr. Saroyan went about the business of putting his novel together and how he lived in wartime London. Actually the reader could not be interested less. . . The notes on how the novel progressed are fragmentary, and tell the reader little that he can't discover by reading the novel itself. This, in fact, is recommended. 'The Adventures of Wesley Jackson' emerges now as a pretty good war book." W. K. Zinsser

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 9 '50 800w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '50 600w

New Yorker 26:122 Ap 8 '50 160w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 33:15 Ap 22 '50 900w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 7 '50 190w

"The journal is chiefly interesting as a portrait of the author, his habits of work and sleep, his sentimental delight in popular songs and street-singers, the books he buys and his manner of reading, and some interesting facts about the prices he gets for stories. Most significantly, perhaps, it furnishes the student of psychosomatics a considerable body of data on the author's painful physical and psychological reactions during a period of creative activity."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:278 S '50 340w

SARTON, MAY. Shadow of a man. 304p $2.75 Rinehart

50-7235

"Francis Chabrier, a twenty-six-year-old Bostonian, is beset with a number of troubles. His mother's recent death has upset him very much, he is divided in heart by the fact that he is half French and half American, and he is perturbed by his apparent inability to fall in love. A visit to Paris, where he has a love affair, solves his problems, at least to his own and his family's satisfaction." New Yorker

---

Booklist 46:276 My 1 '50

"Sophisticated, for the mature reader."

Bookmark 9:244 Jl '50 50w

"Miss Sarton's prose though thin is often delicate and charming but the novel is weakened by flabby characterization and illogical motivation." Mary Sandrock

— + Cath World 171:394 Ag '50 200w

"The plot is neither complicated by adventures [altho emotionally he has one tremendous adventure] nor crowded with people and events. But when the reader has finished 'Shadow of a Man' he has himself had a literary adventure which is as rare as it is satisfying, for he has read about people who are real people and about places which have as passionate a being in its pages as they have to the sensitive person who can sense the souls of spots on earth, each with as distinct and as real a personality as any of the persons who walk their streets." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 7 '50 600w

"If the manner of Francis' development seems a trifle oversimplified and melodramatic, it is nevertheless plausible within limits. . . More sympathetic to the author is the French scene, to which she brings warmth and atmosphere. Miss Sarton's writing is a delight."

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 10 '50 360w

Kirkus 18:144 Mr 1 '50 130w

"Sensitive writing; a minimum of action and plot." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 75:775 My 1 '50 80w

"Makes too free with the novel form. Here is the lyrical novel, or the novel of sensibility oversimplified. There is in it a general atmosphere of right thinking and good feeling about life and about, specifically, what a young man in the progress of his soul ought to do with life; but being a novel of sensibility without, actually, a real situation, its wisdom and cultivation of spirit do not come to grips with any of the problems suggested by the education of the hero." Jean Garrigue

New Repub 122:20 My 8 '50 260w

"Because it is a quiet, restrained and dignified book, warm and compelling; it deserves to be read for itself. And as in all sound works, it amuses and it instructs. Either way, the book will serve its reader well." Viola Young

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 28 '50 600w

"Her book is sensitive, perceptive, alive to delicate shades of feeling, and unquestionably sincere. Miss Sarton, however, takes her curiously immature hero a bit too portentously; he doesn't seem as attractive and as interesting to the reader as he quite obviously does to his creator." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p20 My 11 '50 360w

New Yorker 26:114 My 6 '50 200w

Reviewed by M. S. Douglas

+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 Ag 12 '50 880w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Baudelaire; tr. from the French by Martin Turnell. 192p $1.50 New directions

B or 92 Baudelaire, Charles Pierre 50-6845

An Existentialist interpretation of Baudelaire and his more personal works. This essay was originally written as an introduction to Baudelaire's diaries and letters.

"The case is brilliantly analysed and the book is a document worth having, but on the plane of literature it does not add much to T. S. Eliot's previous remarks on Baudelaire, that damnation is a form of salvation and that willed evil implies a positive state of beatitude and a belief in good." J. Chiari

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 27 '50 430w

"Perhaps the only point to be made in a short review is that the figure created by M. Sartre is not to be taken for Charles Baudelaire (1821-67), French Romantic poet. Otherwise, the essay is well written and well translated, colorful, interesting, and even—in a grisly way—exciting." Hayden Carruth

Nation 171:192 Ag 26 '50 410w

SARTRE, J. P.—Continued

"The distinctive note of this book, what makes it a remarkable work, is the degree of intellect, wrong-headed and paradoxical though it often is, exercised in the writing of it. And cleverness is a quality which, in this country at any rate, we have come to associate rarely with literary criticism. Still, it is easier to admire this book than to find it useful." Richard Wollheim

+ — New Statesman & Nation 39:612 My 27 '50 1150w

"Though this little book by Jean Paul Sartre was not written to increase the understanding of Baudelaire's verse, the reader will return to the 'Flowers of Evil' and to the poet's letters with a wiser and more seasoned palate. Fortunately, the volume is not marred by the oddities of the existential language or the cruder and stale psychoanalytical vocabulary." Edward Dahlberg

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 6 '50 800w

Reviewed by Edouard Roditi

Poetry 77:100 N '50 1100w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 14 '50 160w

"As an initiation to the splendours and miseries of Baudelaire, it is a work that inspires a melancholy horror for the pathetic enfant terrible of literature. Now and again a lively phrase is caught in the web of argument. Perhaps too much of the essay is concerned with abstractions. . . Yet M. Sartre has new and convincing things to say about Baudelaire's cult of the past, his liaison with Poe 'because Poe was dead,' his frigidity and dandyism." Paul Dinnage

+ — Spec 184:190 F 10 '50 550w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). Stories, 1949. 320p $2.75 Random house

Short stories—Collections (37-27266)

Contents: Ornery kind of kid, by W. Saroyan; Forbidding doorway, by G. Kersh; Moon crazy, by W. R. Shelton; Man who said no to the king, by S. Young; Duck that flew backwards, by D. Tracy; Crisis in the house, by R. Knight; Beautiful beachcomber, by S. McNeil; Afraid to live, by J. W. Vandercook; Man who posed as Stalin, by E. Hope; Trial by water, by J. Durant; Price of divorce, by P. Duganne; Impossible play, by F. O'Rourke; How can I go home? by P. Marcus; President's advice, by A. Flack; Terror at daybreak, by P. Horgan; Dear little fool, by A. S. Turnbull; Tin-can skipper, by J. Marmur; Pilgrims of the storm, by E. Orcutt; Journeyman lover, by P. Jones; Doomsday deferred, by W. F. Jenkins.

"The anthology is a potpourri of fantasy, humor, sports, and solid, but far from pedestrian, short stories that cover a wide range of subjects. There is one common factor, however: All are well written. And, with one or two exceptions that could easily be the fault of the reviewer, all make good reading." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 20 '50 200w

Kirkus 18:218 Ap 1 '50 100w

"Judging by the entries in this latest of the series, 1949 can not have been a banner year on Independence Square. Of the twenty stories included, perhaps one-third are more or less what the editors have said a good 'Post' story ought to be. They are expertly written. They hold the reader. They entertain. Another third are mediocre, even by slick-paper standards. The remainder are about as appetizing as a batch of bad fudge." Richard Match

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 17 '50 700w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 22 '50 380w

Time 52:74 Ag 7 '50 280w

SAUNDERS, JOHN BERTRAND DE CUSANCE MORANT, and O'MALLEY, CHARLES DONALD. Illustrations from the works of Andreas Vesalius of Brussels; with annotations and translations, a discussion of the plates and their background, authorship and influence, and a biographical sketch of Vesalius. 248p 96pl $10 World pub.

611 Anatomy, Human—Charts, diagrams, etc. Vesalius, Andreas

"The purpose of the present work is to make available to the general reader, the student of art, of science and of medicine, the illustrations from the works of Andreas Vesalius through the medium of which they may gain some insight into this achievement of science and art. . . To facilitate this purpose each of the illustrations has been briefly annotated. First there appears in italics Vesalius' own legend to the drawing followed by an explanatory note which in many instances, owing to the nature of material, is perforce somewhat technical and therefore will be of greater interest to the physician or biologist than to the general reader or to the artist." (Introd) Contains a biographical sketch of Vesalius.

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein

New Repub 123:25 D 11 '50 60w

"In its pages, Renaissance medicine and science come to life and history takes on for every reader the living character which scholars have always found in it." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p4 Je 25 '50 200w

"There will never be another such edition, for the blocks were lost in the bombing of Munich. This edition is essentially a copy of the plates of the 1934 Icones Anatomicae, with translations of the original captions by Vesalius. The authors, of the University of California and Stanford medical school respectively, have done an excellent job with the text, and the publishers are to be congratulated on their venture in fine book making. The plates are clear and sharp and the paper stock is excellent. This is a volume to be treasured by artist and physician as well as by the student of the history of science." J. W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 18 '50 220w

"A monument to the memory of a great medical pioneer, the book belongs in every medical, art, public, and private library." D. B. Thorburn

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 Ag 5 '50 400w

SAUNDERSON, MONT HARRIS. Western land and water use. 217p il $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

333.7 Land utilization. Water supply—West. West—Industries and resources 50-3341

"The author points out that with the increasing population and quickening industrialization of the western states, conservation of their soil and water resources is of paramount importance. He presents a factual survey of damage already done by overgrazing, burning of brush and forests, and drainage of swamps. He shows that positive and up-to-date land management and conservation policies for the western states are urgently needed. Mainly, he argues for a stronger federal policy, but he advocates federal and state cooperation in certain kinds of conservation measures." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:311 Je 15 '50

"An important addition to the literature on conservation." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 90w

"The author's presentation is dispassionate, restrained and scholarly, but it is written in the language of the scientist-analyst, and the lay reader may find it somewhat difficult going." A. H. Carhart

+ N Y Times p37 Je 11 '50 550w

Reviewed by R. W. Howard

Sat R of Lit 33:28 S 9 '50 380w

"The book will be most useful, not to technicians, but to legislators, administrators of government agencies, and others who have the responsibility of shaping policies and devising programs to promote the wise and efficient use of land and water resources in the arid West. Although the literature on the subject is already large, the clarity and courage with which the issues are faced in this book will make it a valuable addition to many libraries."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:321 S '50 240w

SAVAGE, GEORGE. Ceramics for the collector; an introd. to pottery & porcelain. 224p pl $4 Macmillan

738 Collectors and collecting. Pottery 49-11816

An illustrated handbook providing basic facts about pottery and porcelain. The first part of the book describes the potter's materials; the second traces the history of pottery in the Orient; the third is a discussion of Islamic, Spanish, and Italian work; and the fourth deals with continental faïence and stoneware. The remainder of the book is devoted to porcelain in Europe, especially in Germany, France, and England. Bibliographies. Glossary. Index.

Bookmark 10:38 N '50 20w

"Students will find [this] valuable and informative." Carolyn Stull
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 5 '50 200w

"The 140 illustrations and eight pages of drawings of pot shapes should prove instructive to beginners, while the extensive bibliography will provide plenty of leads to more detailed information. Mr. Savage does not provide a catalogue of potter's marks—a forgivable omission because there are so many marks to list—but names the classical handbooks which the serious amateur should consult." L. R. Sander
+ Sat R of Lit 33:39 Ja 7 '50 150w

SAWYER, RUTH (MRS A. C. DURAND). Little red horse; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 108p $2.50 Viking

50-10125

Michael, a little Wisconsin boy with a great fear of the ocean, was taken on a vacation to a Florida island by his father and mother. Michael was determined to be miserable until he saw the little red horse on the Inn piano. As a great concession Granny, the Inn's owner, allowed Michael to play with the little red horse, and things began to grow better. Soon Michael was collecting shells, and even a little live sea horse became his. In the end Michael not only lost his fear of the ocean, he learned some valuable lessons. For ages six to ten.

Booklist 47:104 N 1 '50

"A season full of high adventure comes to a close with only one shadow. Michael can't take the red horse home. The way he learns to give up something he wants very much makes a strangely beautiful ending to an excellent story." M. B. King
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 12 '50 180w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '50

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 26:456 N '50 80w

Horn Bk 26:470 N '50 80w

Kirkus 18:464 Ag 15 '50 150w

"Smooth, skillfully written story." A. B. McCreary
+ Library J 75:2082 D 1 '50 80w

"[Michael] learns a hard lesson, perhaps one a bit beyond other children of seven: how to lose what you most want to keep and bear it wisely. His solution about the toy not really his own is a bit mystical, yet, as Mrs. Sawyer builds it up, inevitable. It may not be understood by children Michael's own age. But the book is full of many kinds of beauty, both of the real place and of a small boy's heart." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 12 '50 220w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner
N Y Times p42 O 22 '50 180w

Reviewed by G. C. Castor
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 12 '50 120w

Sat R of Lit 33:45 N 11 '50 140w

SAYLES, GEORGE OSBORNE. Medieval foundations of England. 1st Am ed rev 482p $5 Univ. of Pa. press

942.01 Great Britain—History—Medieval period, 1066-1485. Great Britain—History—Anglo-Saxon period, 449-1066 50-8464

A history of the development of English social, political and religious life from the end of the Roman occupation to the thirteenth century. The author is a professor of history in the Queen's university of Belfast. Index.

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 23 '50 70w

"Here is first-class historical scholarship and historical writing."
+ Christian Century 67:1201 O 11 '50 350w

"The book is full of learning, yet it is one which the layman can easily follow and enjoy." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 164:17 S 15 '50 110w

"A factual, readable volume."
+ Current Hist 19:106 Ag '50 40w

"It is apparent that vast scholarship and years of research have gone into the writing of this work, but the tone is so unpretentious that the general effect is that of pleasant, but highly informed conversation. Excellent short reading lists are appended to each chapter for the reader desiring more detailed studies of particular periods or subjects referred to in brief by Professor Sayles." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 30 '50 220w

SCARNE, JOHN. On card tricks. 308p il $3 Crown

795.43 Card tricks 50-10617

"Tricks are given in order of difficulty, from those suitable for the amateur to others for the habitual life of the party. Instructions are divided into presentation and effect (including patter) and exposure of the secret. Some are favorites of Dunninger, Thurston, and others; some are inventions of the author." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 47:131 D 1 '50

"The smooth running patter and presentation to many classic card effects give new and sharper teeth to old saws. A good part of the contents are tricks heretofore known only by professionals and advanced amateurs, but with all need for dexterity removed." Abril Lamarque
+ N Y Times p33 N 19 '50 150w

SCEVE, MAURICE. Sixty poems; introd, tr. and comment by Wallace Fowlie. 150p $3 Morrow

841 49-50241

A selection of sixty poems from the works of this French Renaissance poet (1500?-1564). The poems are given in French and in translation, and facing each page is a commentary to aid in the interpretation of the poem. Bibliography. Index.

"His remarks are succinct and lucid; occasionally also they sound not only didactic but impatient, as if Mr. Fowlie were pressed for time as well as space, and were telling his students that they'd better get the idea the first time, and no nonsense about it." R. H.
+ Nation 170:287 Mr 25 '50 190w

"T. S. Eliot has called to our attention the relationship between modern poetry and that of the so-called 'metaphysical' poets of the seventeenth century. A major reason for this fine selection is Mr. Fowlie's thesis that a similar relationship exists between Scève and the French symbolist poets, particularly Baudelaire and Mallarmé." M. H. Irvine

SCEVE, MAURICE—Continued
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 29 '50 230w

SCHACHT, MARSHALL. Fingerboard; poems; introd. by F. O. Matthiessen. 63p $2.25 Twayne 811 50-7236

"[These poems provide] a self-portrait of the artist as a city-dweller, finding his delight in New York and Boston and making his rare escapes to the civilized wilds of New England or into music. When Nature in a less tame form enters this book, the resulting pastoral bears the title 'On Meeting a Snake in a Tenement Hall.' " N Y Times

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 75:1189 Jl '50 90w

"In his rhythms and stanza-patterns Mr. Schacht displays a modest variety, without being very adventurous or imaginative; in his context of mainly true rhymes his occasional excursions into assonances disturb me a little. . . As for his merits: Mr. Schacht does not verbalize, does not show off. . . No; he is what he is, modest, sensitive, decent—one has the impression of character forming the lines." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 170:234 Mr 11 '50 450w

"Mr. Schacht's work is distinguished by delicacy and precision of utterance, his masters in poetry—Eliot, Frost, and Emily Dickinson—have taught him well what poetic resources may lie in colloquial speech and old forms. The result is poetry rich in texture and informed by intelligence and wit." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p18 F 5 '50 220w

"This book should give poetic pleasure to readers on several levels: those who say they don't understand 'modern' poetry (this book is a literal today), those who look for an acute awareness of the way we all live (this book has it, all up and down the scale), those who don't like to seek meaning through complex form (but complexity has been cut back and sung into lyric form), and those who simply like to read a good book. Without analysis this is good reading, and with it even better." John Holmes
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 My 20 '50 490w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 5 '50 120w

SCHAER, HANS. Religion and the cure of souls in Jung's psychology; tr. by R. F. C. Hull. 221p $3.50 Pantheon bks.
131.3464 Jung, Carl Gustav. Psychology, Religious 50-7888

This study based on Jungian psychology treats of religion as a psychic function. Dr Schaer is a Protestant theologian.

"This book is worthy of very serious study; and, in my judgment, only that kind of study will find the rich gold that is in it. It will, I feel sure, convert many a Protestant minister away from his adherence to Freudian psychology of religion, which will seem almost, if not quite, an anachronism." Erdmann Smith
+ Christian Century 67:923 Ag 2 '50 1600w
School & Society 71:302 My 13 '50 30w

SCHAPIRO, JACOB SALWYN. Liberalism and the challenge of fascism; social forces in England and France (1815-1870). 421p $5 McGraw 323.4 Liberalism. Fascism. France—Social conditions. Great Britain—Social conditions 49-2025

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

" 'The prime object of this book,' Professor Schapiro states in his parting sentence, 'has been to emphasize the great and lasting value that bourgeois liberalism gave to democracy and to "its way of life." ' No doubt it did; but a work which ends its analysis with 1870 precisely cannot demonstrate that conclusion. Its conclusions, moreover, are theses needing further demonstration." T. I. Cook
Am Hist R 55:337 Ja '50 1450w

"As history and as the evolution of a political faith, this story is well worth knowing and this book does an excellent job of interpretation, particularly for an American audience. Mr. Schapiro's prose is smooth. By concentrating on the development of ideas and the interplay of economic forces he keeps an extremely important era in admirable focus." P. R. Levin
+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 F 25 '50 320w

Reviewed by R. P. Holben
Social Studies 41:93 F '50 1850w

SCHECHTMAN, JOSEPH B. Population transfers in Asia. 149p pa $1.50 Hallsby press, 225 Varick st, N.Y. 14
323.1 Minorities. Migration, Internal 49-9390

"This volume is primarily concerned with advocating population transfer as the only practicable solution of the Israeli-Arab conflict. A chapter is devoted to the Hindu-Moslem clashes arising from the partition of India, and another recounts the plan to gather Armenians into the Soviet Armenian Republic, and also plans to transplant Assyrian Christians from Iraq. But there have been many other recent population transfers in Asia—in Korea, Burma, Indonesia, Manchuria, and elsewhere. This book is not a survey of Asiatic population problems. What Mr. Schechtman is interested in is the case for uprooting minorities in politically difficult areas, so that politically (or religiously) homogeneous states may be organized." Geog R

"Quite apart from its main thesis, Schechtman's comparative study of the four cases is valuable. Most readers will be familiar with some of the facts, but not with all of them. The features common to all four cases provide a necessary insight into the contemporary social structure of the Middle East." Kingsley Davis
+ Ann Am Acad 268:208 Mr '50 500w
Foreign Affairs 28:330 Ja '50 40w

Reviewed by J. B. Condliffe
Geog R 40:517 Jl '50 600w
Survey 85:408 Jl '49 10w

SCHENCK, HILBERT, and KENDALL, HENRY. Shallow water diving for pleasure and profit. 138p il $2.50 Cornell maritime 797.2 Diving, Submarine 50-10091

" 'Intended to teach the beginner how to build, buy and operate—safely—shallow water diving equipment.' Simple descriptions, drawings, photographs. Underwater fishing and photography. Mask and helmet diving." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:72 O 15 '50

"An excellent handbook in a comparatively new field." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1907 N 1 '50 40w

SCHENK, WILHELM. Reginald Pole, cardinal of England. 176p il $3 Longmans
B or 92 Pole, Reginald, cardinal 50-6816

A biography of Reginald Pole, who was a cousin of Henry VIII, was very nearly Pope, and became Archbishop of Canterbury. It "sets Pole firmly against the humanist and Catholic background of sixteenth-century Italy. It shows how Pole had a double conflict to resolve; the conflict with his patron and king, which led to exile, and the inner conflict over the claims of the contemplative and active life, which was resolved in favour of the latter and which led to the See of Canterbury." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"This unpretentious, small book is something more than an impressive life of Cardinal Pole. By reason of the author's scholarship, breadth of view, clarity of style, it becomes a high ranking monograph in the field of politico-religious history."

+ Cath World 172:79 O '50 150w

"This can be recommended as probably the best book on Pole, if shapeliness and conciseness are any criteria, or the careful scholarship that Dr. Schenk shows on every page. His death while his book was in the press is a real loss. Nobody, however, will ever, I fear, be able to make Cardinal Pole wildly exciting." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 52:302 Je 30 '50 550w

"A book which has the rare gift of being both scholarly and readable." A. P. d'Entrèves

+ Hibbert J 48:413 Jl '50 1100w

"It is a readable and well-documented study." T. S. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 3 '50 280w

"The odium resulting from [Pole's] abortive attempt to restore Roman Catholicism under Queen Mary I, joined to certain faults of character which he displayed, have made him distant and antipathetic to succeeding generations of Englishmen. By treating Pole as a leading Catholic reformer and European humanist, the late Dr. Schenk has gone some way towards restoring a balance. This life is a distinguished and deeply sympathetic study, and Dr. Schenk's approach is manifestly just." Philip Magnus

+ Spec 184:24 Jl 7 '50 750w

"Dr. Schenk's method is scholarly. Gleaning as he was in a field so carefully reaped by James Gardner, he was not able to make any great discoveries, nor add very much to the facts of Pole's life. His contribution is an interpretation of these facts, and he has done well in putting into their proper perspective the early years of Pole's career, and the value of his response to the Continental movement for reform within the Church. The study is sincere and sensitive, concise, straightforward, and simple, too simple, indeed, in its appreciation of the politics of an age that was so essentially political."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 24 '50 900w

SCHERF, MARGARET. Curious custard pie. 218p $2.25 Doubleday

50-8315

Detective story.

"It has its moments of originality and hilarity, and is good reading all told."

+ Kirkus 18:249 Ap 15 '50 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 9 '50 200w

N Y Times p19 Jl 23 '50 170w

"Not one of the most exciting, but pleasant enough."

New Yorker 26:100 Je 24 '50 100w

"Delectable dish of thrills and laughter. Gets out of control at end but by that time only purists will care. First rate!"

+ Sat R of Lit 33:37 Jl 8 '50 40w

SCHEVILL, FERDINAND. The Medici. 240p il $4 Harcourt

945.5 Medici, House of. Florence—History 49-50140

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"In his recent book on The Medici, Professor Schevill deals with the same developments which he treated on the last 170 pages of his earlier History of Florence and he tells the story very much in the same way—sometimes even in the same words. . . The first two chapters of the new book, which outline the events preceding the rise of the Medici to power, contain a remarkably clear survey of the Florentine constitutional development and should be useful as 'assigned reading' in courses on the Renaissance. On the other hand, a certain drawback of the present book is that, because of its exclusive concentration on the individualities of the Medici family, these extraordinary personalities become rather isolated from the historical background; they appear too independent from their class, from the social groupings and economic forces of their time, and, in its general effect, the book seems much more traditional, much more remote from modern scholarly research than the History of Florence." Felix Gilbert

— + Am Hist R 55:965 Jl '50 240w

Reviewed by G. S. Hooker

Chicago Sun p7X Ja 22 '50 160w

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 9 '50

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Repub 122:20 F 20 '50 750w

"Mr. Schevill demonstrates to the reader's satisfaction why the Florence of the Medici contributed so generously to the civilization of the Western world. Moreover, his appraisal of its leaders is a fine piece of work." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 29 '50 370w

"I take exception to [the author's] cavalier dismissal of G. F. Young's 'The Medici' 'as the subjective divagation of a sentimentalist with a mind above history.' . . And I half wish he had included the younger, ducal Medici, if only so that he could tell us of Giovanni delle Bande Nere, the one Medici who was a warrior. But in virtually all other respects the book is admirable. It is concise, clear, and convincing. It is instructive, yet good reading, too." T. C. Chubb

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 Mr 25 '50 700w

"All the obstacles have been overcome by Mr. Schevill, overcome so completely that only experts will realize, perhaps, how much underbrush had to be cleared out of the way to make a smooth road for the narrative. . . This is a political history, mainly a study of the conduct of public affairs, rather than a narrative about the intellectual and cultural activity of fifteenth-century Florence. Because the Medici enhanced their reputations by becoming patrons of letters and the arts, however, the author does discuss their relationships with scholars and artists, and even considers the broader question of how far the Medici deserve credit for the Florentine Renaissance. Here, unfortunately, the treatment is too slight, but the flaws are relatively unimportant."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:73 Mr '50 320w

SCHIFFER, DON, ed. My greatest baseball game. 219p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball 50-12051

"Thirty-four of today's big leaguers—among them Luke Appling, Lou Boudreau, Joe and Dom DiMaggio, Larry Doby, Bob Feller, Tommy Henrich, Ralph Kiner, Stan Musial, Don Newcombe, Andy Pafko, Phil Rizzuto, Jackie Robinson, Johnny Schmitz, Warren Saphn, Ted Williams, and Gus Zernial—tell, thru the medium of various sports writers, their memories of their own 'greatest game.'" Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 47:160 D 15 '50

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 29 '50 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:1908 N 1 '50 40w

SCHILLING, BERNARD NICHOLAS. Conservative England and the case against Voltaire. 394p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Voltaire, François Marie Arouet de. Eighteenth century. Conservatism. France —History—Revolution 50-6649

The first section of the book is concerned with a statement of the nature of conservative tendencies in men. The second part of the book, called The Case Against Voltaire "traces the history of Voltaire's reputation in England, especially as it developed, under the stress of the French Revolution, into the evil image of the atheist and conspirator who had wrecked the social order in France by destroying faith in the Church and its teachings." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Moore

Am Hist R 56:190 O '50 350w

SCHILLING, B. N.—Continued

"Although it presents little that is new, this discussion of the conservative temper of eighteenth-century England is admirable and is supported by illustrative quotations from many sources."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:335 S '50 240w

SCHILLINGER, FRANCES (MRS JOSEPH SCHILLINGER). Joseph Schillinger; a memoir by his wife. ltd autog ed 224p il $5 Greenberg

B or 92 Schillinger, Joseph 49-50191

A memoir of the author of the Schillinger System of Musical Composition (Book Review Digest 1946). The book is by Schillinger's widow and consists largely of biographical details and anecdotes about his pupils. No index.

"The story is a pretty one . . . though no important contribution to musical literature. Nevertheless, those who have invested in the Composition probably will be interested in it." Leonard Burkat

Library J 74:1908 D 15 '49 70w

"Books about musicians by their wives are rare, but probably no one but his wife could have written so informatively and entertainingly about the author of the most compendious of contemporary efforts to base the art of music upon the art of speech. . . Celebrities of all sorts flit in and out of the pages, usually as tags to humorous anecdotes. Though the book is light reading, a complete list of Schillinger's students could well have been appended." Charles Seeger

Music Lib Assn Notes 7:476 Je '50 750w

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR, ed. Albert Einstein, philosopher-scientist. (Library of living philosophers) 781p $8.50 Lib. of living philosophers

530.1 Einstein, Albert. Philosophy

"Departing a little from the usual pattern, this volume begins with 'autobiographical notes' by the subject, the original German text and an English translation of the same on opposite pages—about 50 pages of each. . . Twenty-five essayists contribute chapters on modern physics and on aspects of Einstein's work. For the most part these are, of necessity, highly technical. For readers who cannot breathe easily in the rarefied atmosphere of the highest mathematics, the most rewarding chapters will be those which deal with philosophy. The following topics suggest the reach of these chapters: 'Einstein and Logical Positivism,' 'The Philosophical Significance of the Theory of Relativity,' 'Einstein's Theory of Knowledge,' 'Relativity Theory and Idealistic Philosophy,' 'Einstein's Relativity from the Standpoint of Critical Realism,' 'Einstein's Influence on Contemporary Philosophy,' and 'Einstein's Social Philosophy.'" (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. N. Alyea

Chem & Eng N 28:3376 S 25 '50 220w

"The volume is abundant with repetition and technical, rather than philosofical, matter. Even one after dinner speech and one specimen of philosofical loose talk managed to crash the gate. But there is no excuse for not organizing the essays into several groups and protecting the reader from being tossed back and forth between different subjects. . . Not more than 10 essays can be classified as at least partly philosofical. Twelve of the remainder [by Born, de Broglie, Dingle, Gödel, Heitler, Infeld, Laue, Lemaitre, Menger, Milne, Pauli, Robertson] are technical and assume a knowledge of physics. They either reverently summarize Einstein's work in statistical mechanics, relativity, and quantum mechanics, or present the author's own contributions to those fields." A. W. Wundheiler

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 5 '50 550w

Christian Century 67:82 Ja 18 '50 1050w

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '50 1750w

Reviewed by J. Bronowski

New Repub 123:17 Ag 21 '50 2500w

"Strangely enough, most of the scientists who contribute essays to this volume are famous for their work in the field of quantum mechanics rather than in relativity. The two theories are recognized by scientists as being in fundamental conflict although both are very useful where they can be applied. Scientists who have an adequate background in both theories will see the sparks fly in the sections where Einstein and the quantatists lock horns in battle. There are many pages on which mathematical equations appear, some easily understood, others quite abstruse. It may bring some consolation to the general reader to know that 95 per cent of the scientists who read the volume will also skip the tensor calculus equations without bothering to work out their specific meaning." John O'Neill

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 15 '50 1600w

"Though scores of volumes have been written on relativity and on the quantum theory, there is a place for this compilation. It stands apart because it links philosophy with physical science and because it asks searching questions about Einstein's meaning while he is still alive. But it is no dish for the ordinary reader." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 8 '50 1100w

"The autobiographical notes are offered in German as well as English. Equally compelling in either language, they are written in a vein of the profundity of simple logic that permits a very close acquaintance with one of the world's most brilliant intellects. The bibliography further details the breadth of Einstein's work, cataloguing his immense world-wide influence on present-day thought and action." R. H. U.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 16 '50 400w

School & Society 71:79 F 4 '50 80w

"The volume is a superb piece of bookmaking, enhanced by a detailed index and a complete bibliography of Einstein's scientific and nonscientific writings, interviews, letters and speeches." H. M. Helfman

+ Social Studies 41:236 My '50 360w

SCHIMANSKI, STEFAN K., and TREECE, HENRY, eds. New romantic anthology. 243p pl $2.50 New directions

820.8 English literature—Collections. Romanticism [49-48906]

"This anthology is an attempt to show how widely spread is the Romantic attitude in British writing today." (Acknowledgements) There are five general essays; three essays on romaticism in modern poetry, the cinema, and the novel; selections from English, Irish, Scottish, and Welsh poetry; and three short stories: The virgin and the woman, by P. V. Carroll; The moment of truth, by Antonia White; The Jew in the moon, by Michael Sayers.

"Here is the essence of what one feels after reading this book—the romantic spirit is an enormously vital thing and must be sustained, but when one tries to make an art from it alone, he will fail for the very reason suggested in the preceding quotation—the romantic is immature in his lack of adequate experience. The best things in this book are an essay and a poem by Herbert Read, much too old now to be called a new romantic." Paul Engle

Chicago Sun p8 Ja 15 '50 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 23 '50 240w

"Alex Comfort states that his mission is to speak for the voiceless masses, but nowhere in this collection is the spoken word used to give mankind any real hope for the future. . . The whole business is rather depressing."

— Spec 183:60 Jl 8 '49 260w

"Readers, approaching such a serious anthology as this, will attempt, of course, to dismiss colloquial overtones from their minds; but they may find that the notion of romanticism that is left there, outside the context of a particular movement in the early nineteenth century, is a vague one. By the time they have read the five introductory essays here, that passively vague notion may have become actively confused. There are points in these essays with which most readers will agree; but what does singularly fail to emerge is any coherent statement of the romantic principle itself. . . There is much that is stimulating in this anthology, but as a whole it perhaps reflects an unfortunate tendency on the part of English editors and literary publicists to concoct 'movements,' out of extremely disparate individual efforts, on a very slight provocation."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Jl 15 '49 1550w

SCHLAIFER, ROBERT OSHER. Development of aircraft engines [and] Development of aviation fuels [by] S. D. Heron; two studies of relations between government and business. 754p $5.75 Harvard univ. Division of res.

629.13435 Airplane engines. Airplanes—Fuel. Industrial research. Science and state 50-5355

"This volume presents two complementary studies on the relationship of government and industry in the development of aircraft engines and aviation fuels. The first study, Development of Aircraft Engines, traces the history of specific engine developments in the United States, Britain, and Germany to throw light on questions of policy and incentives, and on the reasons for success or failure. Professor Schlaifer concludes that the primary objectives should be to maintain in existence a sufficient number of experienced private firms, set proper goals for them, and then give them the resources and freedom required for their work. Development of Aviation Fuels is concerned both with improved aviation fuels and with the part that fuel has played in the development of the piston-type aircraft engine." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Indexes.

"Valuable book. . . The work is the first comprehensive account of the course of developments in the important realm of aircraft power, and of the respective contributions made to that development by government and industry. The part by S. D. Heron is a highly informative account of the evolution of aviation fuels and of their influence on the development of the piston-type aircraft engine." T. A. Boyd

+ Chem & Eng N 28:1242 Ap 10 '50 280w

"While these studies may be of primary value to aviation executives in industry and government, the chapters of technical history ably recorded by both authors will interest a much wider circle of readers."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:251 Je '50 250w

SCHLARMAN, JOSEPH H., bp. Mexico: a land of volcanoes; from Cortés to Alemán. 640p il maps $5 Bruce pub.

972 Mexico—History 50-7237

The story of Mexico from Cortés to Alemán. The author spent ten years preparing and checking his manuscript, and during those years he visited practically every part of Mexico. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Am Hist R 56:236 O '50 160w

"If you have any questions about Mexican history you will find the answers in this book of 640 concisely written pages. It is the result of 10 years' research, study, travel, and observation. Every statement is carefully authenticated. He sought and found original documents in Europe and America." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 7 '50 460w

"The book is full of factual information and it does tell the story of Mexico from its beginning to modern times. It has been done with considerable thought and research. It is accurate and in parts interesting. Unfortunately, it is a rehash of too much that has been written over and over again. While it does present a graphic picture of Mexico, it does not produce any new material." H. C.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 7 '50 600w

Reviewed by S. G. Inman

Survey 86:418 S '50 150w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1888- . American as reformer. 127p $2.25 Harvard univ. press

301.1535 Reformers. Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions 50-14677

This volume contains lectures delivered in the spring of 1950 at Pomona College, Claremont, California. In it "Arthur M. Schlesinger proves that the American spirit has always sought to improve the condition of the people. He correctly traces the main sources of this desire for reform to the humanitarian fervor of the Declaration of Independence and to our faith in the ethical and religious teachings of Christianity." (N Y Times)

Booklist 47:89 N 1 '50

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 15 '50 230w

"The whole story is not told in this slender volume, and the reader doesn't have to agree with all Mr. Schlesinger's conclusions to find his challenge useful." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 O 14 '50 850w

Kirkus 18:455 Ag 1 '50 150w

"Highly competent, interpretive history, urged for all collections covering the field in any depth." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 75:1403 S 1 '50 130w

"The American as Reformer is one of those rare books against which a reviewer can bring, as his only just and serious complaint, the charge that it is too short." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 123:27 O 30 '50 700w

"There is a remarkable range of material in this little book."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 26 '50 180w

"There is but one slight error in emphasis which I would point out in this admirable little book. That is the somewhat provincial tendency which Mr. Schlesinger seems to share with many men from Massachusetts of believing that the movers and shapers of American history were generally Boston-based." P. H. Douglas

+ — N Y Times p3 O 15 '50 1450w

New Yorker 26:188 N 18 '50 170w

Reviewed by Robert de Roos

San Francisco Chronicle p29 D 10 '50 700w

Reviewed by Irving Dilliard

Survey 86:510 N '50 400w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1917-. The vital center; the politics of freedom [Eng title: Politics of freedom]. 274p $3 Houghton

321 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Liberalism. Communism. Totalitarianism 49-5453

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"In establishing his thesis, Mr. Schlesinger reviews the communist record and the liberal failure circumstantially and in detail. And he is well aware of what a realistic liberalism implies: 'If we believe in free society hard enough to keep on fighting for it, we are pledged to a permanent crisis which will test the moral, political, and very possibly the military strength of each side.' Here is an invitation to faith without illusion which I trust Mr. Schlesinger's generation will hasten to accept. If any faith at all can save, it is this faith, for its form is intelligence and its force freedom itself." H. M. Kallen

+ Ann Am Acad 26:245 Ja '50 450w

Reviewed by Martin Gardner

Ethics 60:297 Jl '50 700w

Foreign Affairs 28:502 Ap '50 70w

SCHLESINGER, A. M.—Continued
Reviewed by J. L. Rauh
Harvard Law R 63:724 F '50 1600w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
New Eng Q 23:280 Je '50 220w

"While this book presents a fairer picture of the American scene, or at any rate of such parts of it as are dominated by the younger generation, Mr. Schlesinger has all the handicaps of the 100 per cent. American in his approach to Europe; and to read his book in company with Mr. Kohn's will give to Europeans the perhaps salutary but undeniably disagreeable shock of a cold douce on a bleak day. . . Nothing of the diversity of European tradition, and hardly anything of the grim material misery of much of contemporary European life, is reflected in Mr. Schlesinger's pages. The economic problem is conceived primarily in American terms. No suspicion is entertained that economic policies good for the prosperous and highly productive American economy, which received a mighty stimulus from the war, may be a disaster for the war-shattered economics of the European continent."
Times [London] Lit Sup p287 My 12 '50 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:208 Je '50 240w

SCHLICK, MORITZ. Philosophy of nature; tr. by Amethe von Zeppelin [ed. by Walter Hollitscher and Josef Rauscher]. 136p $3 Philosophical lib.

530.1 Physics—Philosophy 49-11727

"This is not aimed at developing a new system of philosophy, but rather to teach a scientific way of philosophizing, described as being one of the most logical and radical attempts to overcome the cleavage in philosophical systems." (School & Society) Index.

"To readers of English there seems to be little in this brief book that has not been more fully and equally clearly presented in the popular works of such authorities as Eddington, Jeans, and Julian Huxley, who are firsthand investigators in these fields, as apparently Schlick was not. The translation reads well, and appears to have been conscientiously and accurately done." W. K. Wright
+ — Crozer Q 27:169 Ap '50 340w

Reviewed by M. H. Thompson
Ethics 60:228 Ap '50 110w

"The most interesting and helpful section of the book is an appendix on the history of the idea of atomic images of nature. This section is recommended as an excellent reading assignment for the student of philosophy of science." C. W. C.
+ J Philos 47:644 O 26 '50 300w

School & Society 70:288 O 29 '49 40w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. Playtime for you. 63p il $2 Scribner

793.7 Amusements 50-9224

Photographs showing a small boy (the author's son) and a slightly older girl playmate engaged in simple activities which any parent could use when a child asks "What can I do now?"

Booklist 47:17 S 1 '50

Horn Bk 26:490 N '50 60w

+ Kirkus 18:462 Ag 15 '50 90w

"All is really simple and really fun. A seven or eight year old who can read could use the book alone, and keep the younger children happy for hours." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 20 '50 150w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p6 N 12 '50 60w

SCHMITZ, ELIE ROBERT. Piano works of Claude Debussy; foreword by Virgil Thomson; ed. and designed by Merle Armitage. 236p il $5 Duell

786.4 Debussy, Achille Claude 50-9660

"This book is not intended to subtract from those which have been written about Claude A. Debussy. Nor will it attempt to dispose of the private life and inner thoughts of the man whom I profoundly admired. This book is solely concerned with a part of the musical heritage he left us—that part written for the piano." (Author's note) Includes a biographical sketch, and a chapter on characteristics of Debussy's personality. Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 18:377 Jl 1 '50 150w

"Pianist-author somewhat overreaches himself in the attempt to lay down a broad foundation for the study of Debussy's two-hand piano works. At his best when discussing the compositions in detail with the idea of guiding the pianist-reader in matters of formal analysis, interpretation, and points of performance." C. K. Miller
Library J 75:1298 Ag '50 80w

"It is a thoughtful and mature reference book and though I am at variance with certain of its premises and conclusions, there is much to provoke the intelligent music lover and the inquiring musician." Abram Chasins
+ N Y Times p29 S 10 '50 850w

"The book is so complete, thorough, authoritative and important that one wishes it might have been better edited. Like many writers brought up to speak French or German, Schmitz never learned that the word 'genial' has an entirely different meaning in English from what it has in Continental languages, and some other words are misused, too—'fatuous,' for example, where the context indicates that 'sumptuous' was intended." A. F.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 5 '50 350w

"Whatever one may think of Schmitz's piano playing—and opinions sharply varied—there is no doubt that he had closely identified himself with the great French composer, and his love and belief in the music shine through every page of this book. . . As a reference book, of course, the text is of value. Schmitz prefaces each piece under discussion with dates of composition, pertinent data, perhaps an anecdote or two. Throughout the discussions, moreover, he does valuable work stressing the fact—which deserves wider acceptance than is its lot—that there are strong classic elements in Debussy's music. . . Schmitz never quite puts his finger on the magic he is trying so hard to conjure." H. C. Schonberg
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:27 S 30 '50 450w

SCHNEIDER, DANIEL EDWARD. The psychoanalyst and the artist. 306p pl $4 Farrar, Straus

131.3487 Creation (literary, artistic, etc). Psychoanalysis 50-7246

"Dr. Schneider, a novelist as well as a psychoanalyst, rebuts the view that art has its foundation in neurosis, and sets forth a new theory concerning the nature of the artistic gift and of artistic technique. . . Artistic technique is 'a conscious mastery of the inherent power of the unconscious in its work of dream formation.' Dr. Schneider illustrates all this and offers further theories about the creative process in investigations of Oedipus Rex, the Journal of Delacroix, three painters (Chagall, Picasso, and Van Gogh), Death of a salesman and Macbeth." (Atlantic) Bibliography. No index.

Atlantic 186:87 Jl '50 180w

"There is no doubt that the author has seen problems and has delved more deeply into them than many other authors, especially his psychoanalytic comrades. The critical student of a psychology of artistic production may profit somewhat from reading this volume." Rudolf Allers
Commonweal 52:300 Je 30 '50 350w

"A 'tentative exploration' of the common ground which exists between psychiatry and art, this is not only of doubtful general interest but is obscured by some fuzzier psychiatric phraseology (the 'nature of a developing endowment'—the 'creative thrust'—etc.)"
Kirkus 18:85 F 1 '50 180w

"Schneider's exposition of Freudian 'psychoanalytic aesthetics' is excellent. However, when we realize that, according to Freudian theory, we 'regress' in dreams to the infantile, that dreams express evil, primitive and perverse impulses, incestuous desires, wishes to destroy rivals, unrestrained hate, death wishes against parents, relatives and friends, we see that the author has quite a problem on his hands." Patrick Mullahy
New Repub 122:19 Je 19 '50 600w

"According to Delacroix, great artists suppress 'useless, repellent, or foolish' details. So, on the whole, does David Schneider, a practicing psychoanalyst and novelist, in this illuminating study of the gifts and techniques essential to the creation of a masterpiece. . . Dr. Schneider's standards are high, and he refuses to encourage mediocrity." F. H. Lyell
N Y Times p33 Mr 26 '50 140w

"The general reader as well as the artist and the specialist in psychiatry will find that this readable volume is quite stimulating and offers many fresh insights." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 25 '50 250w

"The general approach is professional. The style is readable and temperate and avoids Dr. Goitein's giddy flights. Yet many of the theories and conclusions are open to serious doubt." J. T. Soby
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:38 Jl 1 '50 1150w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:353 S '50 280w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, NINA. Let's look under the city. [38p] il $1.50 Scott, W.R.

620 Engineering—Juvenile literature 50-6510

"How city dwellers get their water, electricity, gas, telephone, and waste disposal is told in simple text and detailed pictures, tracing each service from an apartment building under construction through the pipes and cables under the city streets to its source. . . Ages 5-8." Booklist

"A useful supplementary book for social studies."
+ Booklist 46:237 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 9 '50 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:203 My '50 80w

"Vigorous informative writing. Some may miss the experimental aspects of the other books in the series, but this is geared to a younger group (as well as their older brothers and sisters) for questions start at kindergarten level."
+ Kirkus 18:176 Mr 15 '50 210w

"Simple enough for a six-year-old to understand but suitable for all ages. A must for every library." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 75:704 Ap 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Ap 16 '50 190w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
N Y Times p16 Jl 23 '50 110w
Sat R of Lit 33:41 My 13 '50 60w
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 70w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:290 S '50 60w
Wis Lib Bul 46:28 Ap '50

SCHOEN, MAX. The man Jesus was. 271p $3 Knopf

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character 50-8980

"A Jewish estimate of Jesus based upon the first three Apostles with comments and elaborations from Jewish sources." (Library J) No index.

"This book written by a Jew should have a wide reading both among Jews and among Christians. It is a well written, scholarly and very readable book."
+ Kirkus 18:597 O 1 '50 130w

"The approach is useful in understanding the historical antecedents and teachings of the man 'who belongs to no one special period and no one particular place.' " R. P. Morris
+ Library J 75:1404 S 1 '50 80w

"Mr. Schoen's book is of uneven scholarship. The latter portions are sketchy and uncertain, and offer poor support to what has gone before. It is in his discussion of Judaism, and Jesus's relationship thereto, that he offers a valuable contribution to the study of the Nazarene. His argument here is sound and its presentation able." J. H. Holmes
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 26 '50 700w

"Accurate or not, Mr. Schoen's Jesus is surely one of the most lovable and moving portraits to come out of recent biblical research." Chad Walsh
+ N Y Times p4 D 24 '50 650w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. Keystone Kelly. 250p $2.50 Morrow

50-8356

A story of a young baseball player, making his way as a major league second baseman. For ages 12-16.

Booklist 47:48 S 15 '50
Kirkus 18:356 Jl 1 '50 140w

"Recommended for moderate purchase for all children's and young people's collections." M. D. Read
Library J 75:1310 Ag '50 60w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 22 '50 80w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 12 '50 50w

SCHOLZ, JANOS, ed. Baroque and romantic stage design; introd. by A. Hyatt Mayor. 40p il $10 Bittner, H.

751.75 Theaters—Stage setting and scenery 50-5226

"Janos Scholz, an eminent collector himself, has selected 122 representative drawings from the leading baroque stage architects and artists and they are beautifully reproduced. Using the then new science of mathematical perspective, these designers created panoramic phantasies so intricate and elaborate that, although not architecturally insoluble, their counterparts in real life would have been beyond the purses of even the wealthiest princes. Nothing could have been more romantic. In an introduction, A. Hyatt Mayor, curator of prints at the Metropolitan Museum, provides historical and technical background." Sat R of Lit

"The 121 beautifully reproduced illustrations have mostly not been represented before. Recommended for theatre, opera, and art collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:405 Mr 1 '50 80w

"The present volume, which includes a detailed bibliography of past and present literature on the subject, is a welcome addition to the pictorial collections on stage design." A. S. Plaut
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:300 Mr '50 420w

"The catalogue of plates by Mr. Scholz constitutes a highly informative set of notes on the artists and architects represented." L. R. Sander
+ Sat R of Lit 33:70 My 6 '50 150w

SCHONBERG, ARNOLD. Style and idea. 224p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

780.4 Music 50-8187

A collection of articles, some previously published in Germany or Austria, others written in English and previously published or appearing here for the first time. The articles are dated from 1912 to the present. Contents: The relationship to the text; Gustav Mahler; New music, outmoded music, style and idea; Brahms

SCHONBERG, ARNOLD—Continued
the progressive; Composition with twelve tones; A dangerous game; Eartraining through composing; Heart and brain in music; Criteria for the evaluation of music; Folkloristic symphonies; Human rights; On revient toujours; The blessing of the dressing; This is my fault; To the wharfs. Index.

Reviewed by K. G. Roy
Christian Science Monitor p8 Ag 19 '50 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50

"Schoenberg's style resembles a stream of free association direct from the analyst's couch rather than an organized structure of thought. The subject of discussion is rarely perceived until the middle of the essay; paragraphs follow hard upon each other with no apparent connection; digressions are frequent and often purposeless. . . If Schoenberg is ultimately accepted as a great composer, this book will of course have historical and sentimental value. Otherwise, its chief virtue is its revealing guilelessness." Harold Brown
— + Nation 171:43 Jl 8 '50 700w

Reviewed by Cecil Smith
New Repub 123:20 D 18 '50 110w

"About forty years ago Arnold Schoenberg brought forth upon his startled continent a new type of composition. The fur is still flying. Schoenberg, now 76, remains a controversial figure, and 'Style and Idea' is not going to do much to make him less so." H. C. Schonberg
N Y Times p7 Je 25 '50 450w

SCHOONOVER, LAWRENCE L. Gentle infidel. 304p $3 Macmillan
50-6237

"A historical novel of medieval Turkey, culminating in the capture of Constantinople by Mohammed II, in 1453. . . A Christian orphan kidnapped by Turks, trained as Moslem janizary, opposes his unknown Italian guardian arms smuggler. After high adventure he is dramatically reconverted to Christianity, and regains wealth and love." Library J

Booklist 46:262 Ap 15 '50

"A rip-roaring historical novel, conventional in form, but with a much better-drawn background than is usual in this type of book. . . It is all highly diverting, the stock characters more than usually alive." H. T. K.
+ Canadian Forum 30:94 Jl '50 170w

"Not the acme of historical novels, but a competent, easy-reading minor opus." Mary Sandrock
Cath World 171:231 Je '50 170w

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun p21 Mr 19 '50 370w

"Mr. Schoonover has been too preoccupied with the minutiae of background, setting and detail to fully realize the tremendous possibilities of the theme and the period he has set out to portray. The weakness of the piece, it seems to me, lies in the fact that, in the author's zealous effort to faithfully reproduce the period he is handling, the narrative becomes top-heavy with its historical overload." Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 19 '50 420w

Christian Science Monitor p4 Ap 8 '50 240w

"Sheer adventure, fully panoplied and highly colored, with two dimensional characterization, but fast pace of story."
+ Kirkus 18:34 Ja 15 '50 270w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 140w

"Ultimately this novel resolves into a contest of character—a Christian boy mistakenly inducted into the Janissary corps, properly proud of honors he attained, beckoned by circumstance of his Venetian origin and heritage. Mr. Schoonover could have grown very portentous about all that, but he doesn't. His story smiles." E. B. Davis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 19 '50 400w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p40 Mr 19 '50 320w

Reviewed by T. C. Chubb
Sat R of Lit 33:31 Ap 8 '50 270w

SCHORER, MARK, ed. The story; a critical anthology. 606p $3.35 Prentice-Hall

Short stories—Collections. Short story
50-4884

"This is an anthology of short stories designed to assist the reader in appreciation and critical evaluation of the story as a literary form." School & Society

Reviewed by S. E. Lind
New Repub 123:22 D 11 '50 150w

"I am not sure that I am altogether delighted by a series of questions that follow most of the stories. . . Be that as it may, Mr. Schorer's selections are first-rate and off-beat, his commentary keen and capable." Harvey Breit
+ — N Y Times p36 N 5 '50 250w

"Perhaps the chief weakness of Mr. Schorer's book is that in order to illustrate his thesis he has been forced to compromise somewhat in the selection of his stories. He does not always have the best (or even one of the best) stories by certain authors. . . Yet one cannot help being impressed by the fact that, despite these limitations, Mr. Schorer has assembled a much more exciting collection than most of those with which we were familiar before the present critical tendency to take the short story seriously began. Even if one disagrees with his principles (which I do not), one will still find here a stimulating collection of modern stories." R. B. West
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:15 D 9 '50 650w

School & Society 72:368 D 2 '50 20w

SCHOYER, PRESTON. Ringing of the glass. 343p $3 Dodd
50-13931

The scene is the China coast during the period between the surrender of Japan and the arrival of the Communists. Alan Stuart, a handsome young American business man, fell in love with Genevieve Young, a Eurasian whose ancentry was part French, part Chinese. At a crucial time in their friendship Alan failed her, but Gen kept her faith in him, and eventually she was proved right.

"When a book as good as this one fails to excite my enthusiasm I can only conclude that there is some deficiency in the story or myself. For it is a good story; make no mistake about that. Preston Schoyer has put not a little suspense and excitement into it, and the setting is unusually interesting. Yet tho I read it with absorbed attention, I could not help feeling that I did not care much what happened to Mr. Schoyer's characters." Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 17 '50 550w

"The book would be eminently worth while as a study of the problem of the Eurasian even if it had no further virtues to recommend it to the intelligent reader—and to any reader interested in a thoroughly lively story." Randall Gould
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 N 11 '50 600w

"A convincing, fast-paced, and thoroughly readable story about life in Shanghai, Hong Kong, and points between. This is an achievement, for the China-coast cities have proved treacherous stuff to most novelists. . . The narrative runs on swiftly, so swiftly, in fact, that it was some time after I had finished the book before I began to feel dissatisfied with the facilely contrived happy ending I had at first welcomed." J. J. Espey
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 17 '50 650w

"An authentic and very readable novel of the Orient. . . Schoyer writes as well of such timeless problems as the Eurasian question as he does of the problems of post-war China.

'The Ringing of the Glass' will appeal to the general reader who is not forced by the author to wade through unexplained Chinese expressions and little private jokes of Old China Hands." M. J. Tweedy

+ N Y Times p32 S 10 '50 320w

New Yorker 26:132 O 7 '50 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 26 '50 180w

"The chief objection here is that this is a trivial tale and looks even more trivial against its elaborate and exotic setting." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 33:32 N 4 '50 140w

Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 30w

SCHROCK, EDWARD M. Quality control and statistical methods. 213p $5 Reinhold

658.562 Sampling (statistics) 50-6999

An explanation of quality control and its applications in industry. Partial contents: What quality control and statistical methods have to offer; Case histories; The meaning of numbers; Summarization of data; Pictorial presentation of data; The quality control chart to identify assignable causes; Modified control chart limits; Use of control chart when known trend exists; Quality control by limit gaging; Use of the variables control chart as a basis for reducing volume of inspection; Binomial and Poisson distributions; Acceptance sampling; Sequential analysis; Least squares and correlation. Glossary. Suggestions for further reading and reference. Index.

"Although it is a good summary of successful experience in quality control, the book is by no means even an introduction to statistical reasoning, or to the logic behind the procedures recommended. The bibliography is unsatisfactory." Cuthbert Daniel

Chem & Eng N 28:4295 D 4 '50 250w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 11 '50 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:40 My '50

SCHUBART, WALTER. Russia and western man; tr. by Amethé von Zeppelin. 300p $3.75 Ungar

901 Civilization, Occidental. Russia—Civilization 50-8795

"Author, German-born former professor of sociology and philosophy at Latvian state university of Riga, is said to live now in Soviet Union, although his whereabouts are unknown. Schubart is an expert on Slavic life and thought, especially Dostoevski. . . Present book was published originally in Switzerland before the second World War and translated into several languages." (Library J) "[The author says] my chief object is to write neither about Russia nor about Europe in themselves, but about a Europe regarded from the East. And I wish less to discuss what has already occurred than to describe what is in process of becoming. The principal task of constructive thinking is to stimulate the inevitable evolution of the future. That future lies in the struggle for supremacy between East and West and in the final compromise between them, as well as in the birth of a West-East world-culture brought about by Millennial man, as I shall call the representative of the new era." (Pref)

Reviewed by Helene Iswolsky

Commonweal 53:124 N 10 '50 650w

"English edition reads fairly fluently; translator Amethé von Zeppelin had not an easy job. The book may find considerable number of readers, due to present tense world situation. However, it is doubtful that Schubart's sweeping generalizations will help them much. No bibliography, no index. Not essential for smaller libraries, but desirable for comprehensive collections on Russian civilization." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 150w

"Walter Schubart is a Latvian philosopher and sociologist whose book deserves a notice only because it has received wide attention in Europe. The unwary reader might buy it under the impression that it offered some valuable insights on the present struggle between Russian communism and the West. But the author regards communism as only a passing phase in the unfolding of the Russian genius. His view of history is a compound of Spengler, Sorokin, and the Russian national messianists who preceded the Bolshevists. His historical generalizations are even less plausible than Sorokin's." Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 171:212 S 2 '50 500w

"In spite of its more than doubtful thesis and its many sweeping and often exasperating generalizations, this book merits the attention of critical readers. It presents in a rare one-sidedness the point of view of the most extreme Slavophiles and Russian messianic nationalists on the future of civilization. . . [The author has] acquired the hatred and contempt of the West held by the most extreme Orthodox chauvinists. Yet for the reader unfamiliar with Slavophile thought the author's analysis of the Russian character and of Western 'decay' will be of real value." Hans Kohn

N Y Times p28 S 10 '50 700w

"At this hour in history, when the alarms proclaim that the final conflict between East and West is ominously near, one could ask for no more provocative reading material than that contained in Walter Schubart's 'Russia and Western Man.' However, the author cannot be suspected of attempting to draw gold from today's headlines, for his book was first published, in German, twelve years ago and now appears in English for the first time, after translation into many other languages. . . 'Russia and Western Man' possesses at least one great virtue: it gives one to think. . . Because it forces one to a realization of the finite character of the present, many will find this twelve-year-old book more readable and stimulating than some of the later journalistic books on Russia, which too often are out of date even before their publication." Sidney Harcave

Sat R of Lit 33:10 Ag 26 '50 1050w

SCHULBERG, BUDD WILSON. Disenchanted. 388p $3.50 Random house

50-10247

"Manley Halliday, has-been literary genius of the 20's, is given a last chance by Hollywood: to co-author a college musical. A trip East to pick up atmosphere serves as catalyst to bring about Halliday's complete physical and spiritual disintegration. As Fitzgeraldian as Fitzgerald, Halliday is the very essence of 'the lost generation', and the novel contrasts effectively the manners and ideology of that period with our own." Library J

"Mr. Schulberg has a ferocious knowledge of Hollywood, and his satiric portraits of Milgrim, the producer, and Al Harper, the agent, are sharp and amusing; so too is his rendition of Hollywood sweettalk. But these incidents cannot divert the mind from the realization that this is essentially a dreary story." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 186:90 N '50 420w

Booklist 47:116 N 15 '50

"Schulberg can fabricate good theater. His pungently drawn characters are dramatically real; they combine to tell a keen, attention-holding tale of modern confusion. The shrewdly bright dialogue rattles off at a fast pace." Mary Sandrock

+ Cath World 172:232 D '50 250w

"A book with brilliant moments, some quite fine flashbacks by Manley as he recalls his past, some dramatic and witty scenes in which Manley is thrown against the slick producers of Hollywood, and some painful incidents in which one feels completely torn between shame that a country should not have received with more enthusiasm so great a man, and shame that so great a man should let his career be twisted by the superficial powers of too soft a standard of living." Paul Engel

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 5 '50 500w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p24 D 7 '50 480w

Discussion by Francis Downing

Commonweal 53:117 N 10 '50 1900w

SCHULBERG, B. W.—Continued

"There are weaknesses: the book seems uneven in spots, too long, and trite and awkward when Schulberg is trying to recreate some scenes with which he appears personally unfamiliar. But there are episodes of great power and vividness, in which the thoughtful reader can discern some penetrating observations on the evils of casting stones." P. V. Farrell

+ — Commonweal 53:124 N 10 '50 1050w

Kirkus 18:316 Je 1 '50 190w

"Schulberg shows a new compassion in this work. Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 80w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 171:487 N 25 '50 800w

"There is something of a decade here, and much of a man and one lively and subtle mind probing the behavior of another. I found it all very interesting and, of course, a little frightening. What does make people, and particularly writers, sometimes break in two in the middle? I wish Mr. Schulberg knew." Richard Lockridge

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 29 '50 1100w

"This man, you quickly detect, is the late F. Scott Fitzgerald, in the disguise of Manley Halliday, once a novelist, now a screen writer. . . The book is so good that one curious point must be made in regard to it. Scott Fitzgerald, in his lifetime, certainly did not lack recognition. Whether he was quite the genius, the sweet prince of narrative prose, that Shep seems to think, may be a moot point, for many will take exception to him, particularly on the score of workmanship. But he carved out a niche for himself, and he still sits in it, for many do him reverence, even now." J. M. Cain

N Y Times p1 O 29 '50 1050w

"Schulberg pities Fitzgerald, but he does not really approve of him, with that approval which starts from creative sympathy and understanding. That is the trouble with the book all along." Alfred Kazin

New Yorker 26:154 N 4 '50 1850w

"It is as sad a novel as any contemporary novelist has written, sometimes heart-breakingly so, as you will discover, yet a magnificently done piece of work." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 29 '50 1450w

"The book has a strangely disjointed effect upon one. You believe on one level and disbelieve on another. Part of this may be due to Mr. Schulberg's failure to convince you of Halliday's past greatness. . . I have the feeling that it is the magnitude of the project, perhaps too large for a man of Mr. Schulberg's talents and experience, which has, in the long run, defeated him." Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 33:11 O 28 '50 900w

Time 56:106 N 13 '50 750w

SCHULTZ, HAROLD SEESSEL. Nationalism and sectionalism in South Carolina, 1852-1860; a study of the movement for southern independence. 259p $4.50 Duke univ. press

975.7 South Carolina—History. Sectionalism (U.S.) 50-7328

"Study of the movement for Southern independence, particularly the slavery question as the predominant issue in South Carolina. Dr. Schultz (University of Vermont) considers men and events in the period, and offers his own conclusions from the evidence." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"With lucid style and impeccable scholarship, Professor Schultz throws new light on these little-known years before secession. By implication, he shows the parallel between enforced abolition and enforced civil rights, the Old South and the New, without sanctuary in either political party. His book is more than a study of the secessionist movement; it foreshadows the entire Confederacy." M. L. Coit

+ Am Hist R 56:142 O '50 470w

Current Hist 18:295 My '50 30w

"Although analytically-minded specialists in Southern history will be grateful for the data the author has accumulated by combing the archives, the general reader will be especially attracted by the flowing narrative in which he has couched his eventful and often tempestuous tale. Another heartening example of the recent flowering of Southern historical scholarship." M. E.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:45 My 6 '50 150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:336 S '50 260w

SCHULTZ, THEODORE WILLIAM. Production and welfare of agriculture. 225p $3.50 Macmillan

338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Agriculture—Economic aspects 49-50141

A series of studies of American agricultural policy, in which the author endeavors "to untangle the economic strands of that policy. I try to isolate and make explicit the objectives that have guided policy since World War I, and to indicate in this connection the stress that has been placed upon equality for agriculture, income, prices and upon the family farm as a social and economic institution." (Pref) Index.

"For this book Professor Schultz has drawn on a dozen or more essays he has written on agricultural economics and policy since the war. There is some repetition, or more accurately, some unnecessary reiteration of key assumptions and contentions, and a few of the topics—a short and rather cursory discussion of grazing policy, for example—are there, one supposes, less because they belong than because the author had some comments in stock. Its origins notwithstanding, the book is a well-rounded commentary on the important contemporary issues of principle and policy concerning agriculture." J. K. Galbraith

+ Am Econ R 40:460 Je '50 700w

"In view of the scarcity of this kind of analysis and the importance of the subject, no one interested in economics or agricultural policy can afford not to read Professor Schultz's book." Karl Brandt

+ Ann Am Acad 272:251 N '50 900w

"An excellent reference book for economics courses."

+ Social Studies 41:192 Ap '50 10w

SCHURMACHER, EMILE C. Knee pants; il. by Donald McKay. 244p $3 Crowell

B or 92 50-5430

Reminiscences of the author's "growing up" in New York in the years of transition between the horse and buggy days (father was a veterinarian) and the automobile (father owned the first automobile on Eighty-seventh street).

Booklist 46:193; 216 F 15 '50; Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by Will Davidson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 5 '50 300w

"How Emile grew out of knee pants into manhood, makes an engaging story. It also paints a nostalgic picture of New York when progress and change were gradual—a leisurely process as measured as the clipclop of a horse's hoofbeats on city pavements." C. B. Burnett

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 14 '50 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '50

Kirkus 17:686 D 15 '49 190w

"Boyish escapades and adventures told in pleasantly amusing, engaging style." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:104 Ja 15 '50 90w

"Undoubtedly the kids who live in New York's East Eighties still have a lot of fun. Any boy as enterprising as young Emile C. Schurmacher would be bound to. Perhaps some one of them will write a book some day about his childhood in the quaint 1950s. But such a book must inevitably lack much that gives charm to this story, beginning in 1911, when Emile was eight." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 5 '50 550w

"There's excellent period detail here, along with the hilarious predicaments of a boy trying hard to grow up." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p29 F 26 '50 140w

"His book is good-natured, unpretentious, and far more plausible than many of its kind."
+ New Yorker 26:111 Ap 1 '50 120w

SCHWARTZ, BERNARD. Law and the executive in Britain; a comparative study. 388p $5.50 N.Y. univ. press

350 Executive power 49-10657

"This book compares the limitations hedging the exercise of executive authority in Great Britain with those developed in the United States. The nature and extent of delegated legislation and administrative justice in Britain are described, and analysis is made in some detail of the safeguards which have been devised by Parliament and, more significantly, by the courts to protect the rights of the individual while the government—that is to say, the executive—presumably promotes the public interest." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The fundamental shortcoming of Mr. Schwartz's treatment of both American and English cases is that he makes no attempt to get behind what the courts are saying to discover what they are doing." J. R. Pennock
Am Pol Sci R 44:196 Mr '50 850w

"The book will take its place with the significant treatises in the field; it is written with tolerance and with moderation." J. W. MacDonald
+ Columbia Law R 50:548 Ap '50 1000w

Reviewed by L. L. Jaffe
Harvard Law R 63:1088 Ap '50 1600w

Reviewed by J. P. Roche
Social Educ 14:334 N '50 350w

"A competent study in a field of growing importance. . . The work concludes with a valuable chapter on the use of executive power in times of national emergency."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:511 D '49 240w

SCHWARTZ, DELMORE. Vaudeville for a princess, and other poems. 106p $2.75 New directions

811 50-9969

"The short prose pieces in the first part of the book are studies of various topics. On divorce, on Hamlet, on Othello, or on promiscuity. . . The second part, an excursion into the True, the Good and the Beautiful, eight poems tasting of the world, ends on the note, in 'Disorder Overtakes Us All Day Long.' 'What is our hope, except to tell the truth?' . . The third part is made up of forty poems, many of them sonnets." N Y Times

Kirkus 18:411 Jl 15 '50 80w

"The poetry of Mr. Schwartz suffers its most severe criticsm at the hands of the author's own prose, for the latter is amusing, clever—if at times a bit glib—witty, bright, full of satirical energy and bounce, in short, extremely readable, whereas the verse tends to be solemn, owlish, abstract, tiresome, and, to my ear at least, almost entirely earless." Rolfe Humphries
Nation 171:490 N 25 '50 280w

"This book is more than a vaudeville show. It is put together to be an entertainment, yet it is calculated to insinuate some deeper feelings where they will last. There is little of fury or rage, much of philosophic understanding, and a hardworked control over what is being said. The poems erect substantial orders to mirror the actual urban world, urban life, and the foibles of both." Richard Eberhart
+ N Y Times p24 N 5 '50 450w

SCHWARTZ, HARRY ADOLPH. Foundry science; fundamentals underlying foundry practice. 286p il $6.50 Pitman

671 Foundry chemistry. Metallurgy 50-5595

"Essentially this book is a presentation of the scientific knowledge which relates to the melting and casting of metals. It does not deal with actual foundry processes but with such related topics as changes of state, super-cooling, heat transfer, rates of chemical reactions, and statistical control. It is addressed to engineering students preparing for positions in connection with foundries and for engineering personnel already associated with foundry work." (Library J) Supplementary reading. Indexes.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:326 F 15 '50 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:22 Mr '50

"Dr. Schwartz has carefully and clearly summarized the various fields of physical chemistry, thermodynamics, electricity, nuclear physics, and crystallography in the hope that the reader can apply these tools to foundry problems. Although he has tried to minimize mathematical explanations of the fundamental laws of science, there is still a large proportion of the discussion of each subject devoted to formulas applicable only to ideal conditions not found in foundry practice. The book is, however, almost unique in gathering and digesting those phases of fundamental science which are pertinent to metallurgical problems in the foundry."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:252 Je '50 240w

SCHWARTZ, SELWYN S. Horn in the dust; poems. 63p $2 Twayne

811 50-7239

"Selwyn Schwartz here publishes his fourth volume of poems in English, the first two, 'Blue Monday' and 'Amerika,' having been written in Yiddish." N Y Times

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p5 F 13 '50 60w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 23 '50 100w

"In the present book the reader is at a loss to know why he is unable to read them as the writer intended. Certain words and symbols constantly recur; blue and green, windows and mirrors, sleep and flame, blood and bones and the leaf and the stone. But the poems are too abstruse to be very intelligible: there is a minimum of representation or statement." Maurice Irvine
N Y Times p42 Mr 19 '50 240w

Reviewed by Julia Randall
— Poetry 76:232 Jl '50 330w

"Words crackle like popcorn in the electric-vocabulary of Selwyn S. Schwartz. He does violence to language, wrenching words out of their accepted meaning, hitching verbs to strange nouns and objects. At times this tyrannical attitude is successful, as it is among certain of our moderns. . . The Pegasus of Mr Schwartz is a mustang, unbridled and unsaddled, yet curiously hobbled by the poet's deliberate technical tyranny over his ideas and vocabulary." A. M. Sullivan
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:29 Mr 11 '50 180w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. The mystery of the Kingdom of God; the secret of Jesus' messiahship and passion; tr. with an introd. by Walter Lowrie. 174p $3 Macmillan

232.95 Jesus Christ—Passion. Jesus Christ—Messiahship 50-6882

"Reprint of the author's first theological work, written in 1901 and appearing in English in America in 1914. This new edition is identical with that of 1914, even to Walter Lowrie's introduction." Library J

Booklist 46:264 Ap 15 '50

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 164:17 S 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin
Crozer Q 27:280 Jl '50 450w

"So great is the esteem in which Schweitzer is held that this 'dated' book will undoubtedly find many readers. It is a book which will be of especial interest to theologians and to those among them who are interested in the development of Christian thought in the last fifty years."

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT—Continued
+ Kirkus 18:56 F 1 '50 190w

"Important to a thorough understanding of Schweitzer's theory, it will be read also, in spite of its age, because of the now generally accepted opinion that the author is the greatest living man. Larger libraries at least, will want to purchase." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 75:400 Mr 1 '50 70w

"In some respects it is unfortunate that in reprinting this epoch-making book the publishers have not provided new and critical introductory material. Here the reader will see only one end of the stick. By now Walter Lowrie's introduction is of interest mainly as evidence of the first impact of Schweitzer on English-speaking peoples. There may be great value, however, in this sort of republication." Paul Ramsey
N Y Times p14 Ap 2 '50 550w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 30 '50 120w

SCOTT, MRS ALMA OLIVIA (SCHMIDT) (GEORGIA TRAVERS, pseud). Wanda Gág; the story of an artist. 235p il $3 Univ. of Minn.

B or 92 Gág, Wanda 49-50098

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"In this biography, written by Wanda's intimate friend, there is present a lovely picture of the creative artist herself. Glimpses of the little Gágs in New Ulm, of Wanda bravely shouldering the responsibility for the younger ones, of the drudgery she accepted with gaiety and courage, all these are appealing. Through it all run the veins of Wanda's idealism, of the integrity of her art, the steadfastness of her purpose. This book has inspiration for a young artist in any field." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 26:48 Ja '50 150w

"Recommended for teen-agers and students of children's literature." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 75:502 Mr 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by B. W. Shaffer
Sat R of Lit 33:46 F 11 '50 110w
Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Ja '50

SCOTT, DUSTIN C. Mojave Joe; il. by Robert Candy. 185p $2 Knopf

Coyotes—Legends and stories

Story of a coyote living in the Mojave Desert. Mojave Joe had a yearning for human companionship, if the humans did not get too near. He was especially fond of young Mel Brant. The day he saved Mel from a blood-maddened dog, the ranch owner vowed he would protect Joe for the rest of his life. When he was caught and sold to an Ohio Zoo, Mojave Joe escaped and made his way back to the home valley, where Mel heard his well-known howl and welcomed him home.

"Interest is well sustained in this ably written adventure story of wildlife, and is pointed up with many black and white drawings." V. I.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 12 '50 150w
Kirkus 18:388 Jl 15 '50 170w

"Fascinating story even if there is doubt that a coyote could really do all these things." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 80w

"An exciting and well-told adventure story for any youngster who likes animals. The black and white pictures are numerous and effective." M. P. Allen
+ N Y Times p42 O 15 '50 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 12 '50 250w

SCOTT, EDGAR. How to lay a nest egg; financial facts of life for the average girl; il. by Richard Decker; introd. by Emily Kimbrough. 65p $1.50 Winston

332.024 Finance, Personal. Investments 50-10033

"A short introduction in homely language, aimed at inducing the holders of small savings to 'invest in America' by buying stock—explaining how to do it, what organization and marketing arrangements are behind the system she is buying into, how it is made as safe as possible, and other points that take the fear and mystery out of such normal dealings." Library J

Booklist 47:110 N 15 '50

"There's plenty of sound ABC information on investments in this amusingly and seemingly lightweight presentation. . . Now and then the style is too flippant for the tastes of some, but in the main the light touch will provide the key to the allergic female."
+ Kirkus 18:381 Jl 1 '50 210w

"Entertaining and instructive, practically painless, and not for girls only." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:1667 O 1 '50 100w

"Anybody can understand the basic facts of financial undertakings as presented by Mr. Scott. And particularly everybody should, girl or woman, man or boy. The clarity and precision of this financial adviser take us easily through Venture Capital, stock and bonds, securities' acts, Estate Planning and broker's commissions. . . Anybody who has even contemplated buying a share of stock, or making a will, or going into a bank, might profit by reading 'How to Lay a Nest Egg.' Organizations that put out solemn tomes on financial research might profit by having Mr. Scott rewrite some of them so they would be intelligible." Lorine Pruette
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 1 '50 700w

Reviewed by Lucy Freeman
N Y Times p33 O 1 '50 150w
Wis Lib Bul 46:13 N '50

SCOTT, FRANKLIN DANIEL. United States and Scandinavia. (Am foreign policy lib) 359p $4 Harvard univ. press

948 Scandinavia. U.S.—Foreign relations—Scandinavia. Scandinavia—Foreign relations—U.S. 50-7563

"A serious review of Scandinavian countries —Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, and to a lesser extent, Iceland and Greenland—and their historic, cultural, and diplomatic relations with the U.S. There is an extended examination into their activities and attitudes during World War II and reconstruction, as well as into the position in the cold war and possible alignment in case of another war. The author's conclusion is that relations between the U.S. and Scandinavia stand on a firm foundation of friendship and fundamental common interest. An appendix gives economic and political information." (Booklist) Suggested reading. Index.

"It recommends itself immediately by being vividly written so as to catch and to keep the reader's interest and by the evident first-hand knowledge of the subject. Obviously, the author knows Sweden better than the other Scandinavian countries, quite naturally so since the starting point of his Scandinavian studies was the history of Sweden. But he has made honest and mostly successful efforts to grasp the development and the problems of the other countries as well; he is even able to produce new information from the archives of Norway." Halvdan Koht
+ Am Hist R 56:73 O '50 900w

"The author is confident that the relations between the United States and Scandinavia stand on a firm foundation of friendship and fundamental common interest. His book is an important contribution to a broader appreciation of the problems we face in making that foundation secure. It is a good addition to the 'American Foreign Policy Library' under Sumner Wells' editorship." J. J. Robbins
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:765 S '50 900w

Reviewed by A. B. Benson
Ann Am Acad 272:212 N '50 480w

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"The author is well informed and highly informative, sympathetic in his approach but judicial in his estimates." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 2 '50 200w

Current Hist 19:39 Jl '50 30w

Foreign Affairs 29:152 O '50 30w

"Aside from the importance of the subject matter and its thorough documentation, it is a pleasure to stress the fine quality of the writing, which makes easy reading of what might have seemed overfreighted text with facts and figures."
+ Kirkus 18:200 Mr 15 '50 180w

"I wish that the author had given a more detailed and more understanding interpretation of the latest chapter in America's relationship with Scandinavia. That, of course, is the chapter dealing with the North Atlantic Pact. . . But on the whole the book is a valuable guide to understanding a part of the world that must have a close relationship with America. It is an important contribution to the kind of knowledge so vital to America's role in the world today." Marquis Childs
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 16 '50 900w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p9 Jl 30 '50 500w

"Professor Scott's style is compact, unlike many of the panegyrics of praise of the Northern nations recently launched by American presses about the earthly paradises of the North. Thus he emphasizes the verity and integrity and objectivity of his treatise. The book is a little encyclopedia of what we most need to know about the Northern democracies and their states of welfare and their claim on our military, economic, and political cooperation." H. G. Leach
+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 Ag 12 '50 600w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:346 S '50 260w

SCOTT, JOHN DICK. The margin. 274p $2.75 Knopf

50-9177

Story of the love affair between Margaret Warriner, a British Civil service employee, and Colin Shirlaw, a movie director.

Christian Science Monitor p6 O 7 '50 170w

"There is something of the mystery story technique in this kind of character delineation. The author parcels out faults so widely among his characters that any one of them might be the villain—or the hero. However, the process is handled with intelligence and restraint, and the result is merely a group of normally imperfect individuals." C. H. Weiss
+ Commonweal 52:563 S 15 '50 550w

"Assured, aware rather than affecting, this indulges little sentiment and offers more for the discriminating rather than the popular reader."
+ Kirkus 18:340 Je 15 '50 170w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 30w

"This book is very well written, shrewdly observant but without irony. Such forbearance, unusual in this kind of story, is a part of its strength." Norman Sharpnel
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 29 '49 230w

Reviewed by Michael Swan
New Statesman & Nation 38:309 S 17 '49 270w

Reviewed by Iris Barry
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 19 '50 410w

"For all its quiet, almost bloodless manner, this novel is uncommonly literate and disturbing. Neither social satire nor documentary propaganda, it has none the less a deadly seriousness behind its suave spoofing of Britain's Civil Service and movie land." Richard McLaughlin
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 20 '50 400w

New Yorker 26:86 Ag 26 '50 60w

"People amused, worried or disturbed by what they conceive to be the Washington bureaucrat and his gobbledegook will find that the British counterpart of the bureaucrat is not much different from the American stereotype. The author of 'The Margin,' however, does a masterly job in showing what makes these government employees on various levels tick. The dialogue seems quite real and true to life, but the same can not be said for some of the characters." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 10 '50 650w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 33:38 O 14 '50 230w

"Mr. Scott's novel is much more than competent. The characterization is excellent (and this excellence extends to the minor characters), the story interesting and entertaining. . . Wisely, Mr. Scott has not attempted too much; the simplicity of the story has allowed him to achieve a neatness of construction which shows off to the best advantage his sensitive observation of character and the vitality of his dialogue."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p517 Ag 12 '49 160w

SCOTT, JOHN IRVING E. Finding my way. 344p $3 Meador

371.8 Students 49-11682

"Presents the methods by which a student beginning his higher education may gain an understanding of college life. It deals briefly with problems which concern most students: campus activities, how to study, examinations, term papers, social and religious life, vocational choice and adjustment. There are appended bibliographies for further reading in the specific areas. There are also self-testing devices which should be of value to students." Crozer Q

"This is a book that can be given with confidence to the young person who asks: 'Tell me, what can I expect in college?' " C. E. Batten
+ Crozer Q 27:286 Jl '50 110w

Reviewed by H. E. Paine
Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 90w

SCOTT, JOHN WILLIAM ROBERTSON. See Robertson Scott, J. W.

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Tippy; pictures by Beth Krush. [46p] $1.75 Harcourt

50-6552

The story of a kitten's daylong search for a home with playmates. For ages 5-8.

Booklist 46:249 Ap 1 '50

Bookmark 9:162 Ap '50 50w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 30 '50 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

"A real personality has Tippy, and the wash drawings by Beth Krush will enchant both small listeners and those adults to whom kittens appeal. There's humor and charm, and they help tell the story where second year readers might find the vocabulary tough going."
+ Kirkus 18:203 Ap 1 '50 130w

"Enchanting picture-book story of an enterprising kitten's search for a suitable home. . . Children in second and third grades can read this themselves. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 75:784 My 1 '50 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 7 '50 80w

"Every word seems right and in the right place and the illustrations are fine, too." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p18 My 21 '50 120w

Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 26 '50 50w

Wis Lib Bul 46:25 My '50

SCOTT, WILLIAM RUFUS. Water that Jack drank; paintings by Charles G. Shaw. [22p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

628.1 Water—Juvenile literature 50-10238

"As in 'This Is the Milk That Jack Drank' the rhythms and structure of a favorite Mother Goose rhyme are used here to tell the story of water. Thus the water in 'the glass that stood on the shelf in Jack's house' is traced back from faucet, pipe and main to reservoir and river and finally to the rain, the cloud and the fog." N Y Times

Kirkus 18:509 S 1 '50 80w

"A charming book with appropriate illustrations." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 75:1912 N 1 '50 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 N 12 '50 70w

"Water is a more abstract subject than milk and bread, and so this book lacks the concrete appeal of the other stories in the series, and the pictures too, though bright and crisp, have a certain coldness. It is, however, an excellent simplification of a complicated subject for the youngster with an inquiring mind." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p34 O 8 '50 140w

SCOVILLE, WARREN CANDLER. Capitalism and French glassmaking, 1640-1789. 210p pa $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

338.476661 Glass manufacture and trade A50-9250

"The position of the glass industry in the rigidly controlled French mercantilist system is analyzed in detail in the twelve chapters. The account given of government-granted regional monopolies, local taxes on transportation, and intense provincialism helps to explain the atomization of French economy that has persisted into the twentieth century. . . There are also chapters on technological evolution, labor and labor conditions, and on the marketing of glass. The book is addressed primarily to professional economists and historians." U S Quarterly Bkl

"If Professor Scoville's materials are any indication, the sort of things done by Bertrand Gille for the iron industry during this same period could certainly have been done here as well. This shortcoming is especially surprising from the pen of a historian whose study of the industrial revolution in the American glass industry placed so much emphasis on the men involved, and who, in this case, chose 'capitalism' as the first word of his title. In general, however, the book is an exceptionally solid monograph, indeed one of the best in the field of French industrial history. . . His statements are superbly documented, his conclusions moderate and judicious, and his speculations are kept within bounds and labeled as such." D. S. Landes

+ — Am Hist R 56:100 O '50 650w

"Those interested in the political, economic, or social conditions that affected the early growth of European capitalism will find valuable material in this monograph."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:183 Je '50 150w

SCOWCROFT, RICHARD PINGREE. First family. 345p $3 Houghton

50-5979

Story of a large, prosperous middle-class family growing up in a western town in the 1920s and '30s.

Booklist 46:156; 232 Ja 15 '50; Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 12 '50 500w

"Accuracy of representation and fullness of character seem, for the subject of 'First Family,' not quite enough: readers must resuffer familiar frustrations and stupidities without the satisfaction of finding them assimilated into an imaginatively fresh insight." Priscilla Heath

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 9 '50 240w

Reviewed by James Van Zant

Churchman 164:16 Je 1 '50 70w

"An ultimately sobering, saddening portrayal of the diminution of high hopes in shabby realities, this has a slow, cumulative effectiveness."

Kirkus 18:6 Ja 1 '50 200w

Reviewed by M. A. Johnson

Library J 75:494 Mr 15 '50 90w

"'First Family' runs along easily with telling detail in its picture of people, clothes, places and events, as it portrays a family that must have its prototype in many American cities and towns. It is probably outside the scope of the novel to ask whether, except possibly for the individuals concerned the lives of most of these people were worth the living." David Tilden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 5 '50 650w

"This is a full book, and an honest one. Written with fine control, it has the power of moving, of touching, even of disturbing. It is all natural and human. On its chosen temporal level it projects the slow, regretful fading of assurances and values, until at the end—instead of the original warmth and immediate goodness of the family community—there is only the tentative solitary hope that somewhere in time ahead there may yet be 'something.'" Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 5 '50 400w

"Mr. Scowcroft is fine when he deals with the family in its time of good health and good spirits, but after the depression, when the household breaks up, he seems to suffer a severe letdown, which he passes on to his characters, and through them to the reader."

+ — New Yorker 26:122 Mr 18 '50 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 27 '50 1000w

"There are warmth and humor in this book: the poignancy derives largely from them: and some memorable scenes—Papa's last game of golf, Harriet's dying through a Christmas holiday, Gus's encounters with a 'queer' girl at State University. Mr. Scowcroft's style is not particularly distinguished and he seems notably blind to landscapes (though the locale is a mountain state, there's not a vivid scenic description in the book), but he can recreate for you the lost Jazz Age and Depression moods and he presents his people with a profound, clear-eyed compassion." K. S. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 Mr 11 '50 700w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 9 '50 150w

SCULLY, FRANK. Behind the flying saucers. 230p $2.75 Holt

629.133 Rockets (aeronautics). Hallucinations and illusions. Interplanetary voyages 50-9662

"The author says there are such things as flying saucers, that three containing human bodies 36 to 42 inches in height have landed on this hemisphere, that they travel on magnetic lines of force and have come from Venus. His descriptions of the ships have been obtained from scientists engaged in examining and dismantling them. All of this is interspersed with general discussions of some of the sane and insane theories of the structure of the universe held by scientists and pseudo-scientists, the possibilities of interplanetary travel and the utilization of magnetic lines of force. An annotated bibliography covering the period 1947 to 1950 is included." Library J

Booklist 47:2; 57 S 1 '50; O 1 '50

"Many a reader will have his credulity outraged by this book. If compelled at pistol point to make the choice, this reviewer would recommend the work as fit reading only for children but never for adults beyond the fairy tale level of intelligence." Roy Gibbons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 10 '50 600w

"This is a book which will have wide sale and great appeal among those who like tall stories. It is well flavored with technical jargon and mysterious, scientific-sounding phraseology. But certainly no scientist will consider it seriously for a minute." H. B. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 25 '50 420w

Kirkus 18:404 Jl 15 '50 170w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 150w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 15 '50 350w

"It is remotely possible, of coure, that Mr. Scully could have the inside track on what he calls 'one of the biggest stories in history.' More likely, his eccentric book will succeed only in stirring up confusion." Sidney Shalett
N Y Times p39 S 10 '50 460w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 14 '50 1150w

"SRL does not take the position that flying saucers are a myth. There have been enough descriptions from such steady observers as air-line pilots to put us on our guard. An age that can produce an atomic bomb is capable of other feats equally amazing. We are prepared to admit that where there's smoke there may be flying saucers. What we take exception to is the irresponsibility of palming off random speculation as fact. What we deplore is the studied exploitation, à la Velikovsky, of a current hankering for superstition." Ronald Gelatt
Sat R of Lit 33:20 S 23 '50 2500w

"This is an amazing book, in which Mr. Scully proves himself an able latter-day Charles Fort, and quite possibly an extremely important document. Its faults are obvious: There is no definite proof whatever except for statements made to Mr. Scully by incompletely identified sources; Mr. Scully never has seen a saucer himself; there are no pictures; there is no official documentation except the Air Force statement denying the existence of saucers, which Mr. Scully punctures quite successfully. What are we to believe? It's still for you to decide." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p12C S 17 '50 470w

Time 56:75 S 25 '50 650w

SEABORG, GLENN THEODORE, and others, eds. Transuranium elements; research papers. 2v 1732p il $15 McGraw

546 Transuranium elements 49-50437

"This publication is a set of 162 papers by 114 authors and is primarily concerned with the mode of production and the nuclear and chemical properties of neptunium, plutonium, americium, and curium with about 25 papers devoted to techniques and to the chemistry of elements immediately below uranium. The papers are written as journal papers and range from short notes on the preparation of individual compounds to a lengthy evaluation of the electronic structure of the heavy elements and their place in the periodic table. The first volume covers the discovery and characterization of neptunium and plutonium. . . In volume II the thermodynamic properties of several plutonium compounds are reported. This volume also includes the papers on the other transuranic elements and some work on the elements from radium to uranium." Chem & Eng N

"The two books will doubtless, in time, be collectors' items; their historical value cannot be denied. The editors and authors have preformed a real service to industry and pure science alike in bringing to publication information which was, for a period, ensnared in the dank, stagnant bogs and swamps of secrecy." D. M. Yost
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:3833 Ag '50 650w

Reviewed by J. W. Irvine
Chem & Eng N 28:1872 My 29 '50 280w

"The editors are to be commended and thanked for a difficult but necessary task well done." J. M. Miller
+ Chem Eng 57:312 Jl '50 1050w

SEABURY, SAMUEL. New federalism. 311p $5 Dutton

320.15 Federal government. State, The. Industry—Organization, control, etc. 50-8838

Judge Seabury has served as judge of the New York city court, the State Supreme court, and the Court of Appeals. In his book he has provided "an inquiry into the means by which social power may be so distributed between state and people as to insure prosperity and progress." (Subtitle) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 47:128 D 1 '50

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 29 '50 60w

Current Hist 19:291 N '50 60w

"A book for students and thoughtful readers on political economy."
+ Kirkus 18:293 My 15 '50 340w

"Book contains many interesting observations and ideas, which, however, are not too well organized. Appeal limited to intellectuals with reading stamina." H. H. Bernt
Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 150w

Reviewed by Theodore Norman
New Repub 123:20 N 27 '50 900w

"The present work of Judge Seabury would be grossly misjudged if it were to be taken as a mere attack on the New Deal or an apology for laissez faire. The judge has his own ideas upon current politics; they break through the surface of his argument now and then, like rocks in a well-tilled soil. But the work itself, learned and erudite, is addressed to the most fundamental of modern political problems. It raises issues which both the Left and the Right must face, if they are to make liberty meaningful in the twentieth century. Few men have Judge Seabury's qualifications for such an analysis." August Heckscher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 30 '50 1200w

"'The New Federalism' is a book informed with a high and noble purpose; it is motivated by the urgency of delivering to mankind a hopeful message of peace and prosperity under the rule of justice. These are hard times. We have a bewildering number of actual problems to solve and the vision of the future sketched here is too abstract to be of any present use." Asher Brynes
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 6 '50 1350w

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols
Pol Sci Q 65:620 D '50 600w

"Judge Seabury has written an exciting, simple, brave, but deliberative book. I was delighted with this volume particularly because Judge Seabury, more than any leading citizen of New York City, stood as a symbol of the extension of political power into the realm of even moral controls." M. L. Ernst
+ Sat R of Lit 33:8 Jl 29 '50 1000w

SEAGER, ALLAN. Old man of the mountain, and seventeen other stories. 278p $3 Simon & Schuster

50-7000

The author, a novelist and teacher at the University of Michigan, has chosen eighteen of his favorite stories written during the past fifteen years. They have appeared previously in magazines and several have been in the O'Brien and O. Henry annual collections. The title story, which is of novelette size, won first prize in the College faculty short story contest of 1947. The locales of the pieces vary: hospitals, college campuses, a Rio de Janeiro hotel, an English village pub, and several American cities and towns.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 14 '50 600w

"These stories are inevitably uneven; the best of them are excellent, the others are readable." John Cournos
Commonweal 52:134 My 12 '50 230w

"Patterned but interesting reading."
+ Kirkus 18:116 F 15 '50 160w

SEAGER, ALLAN—Continued

"Technically accomplished, and with a variety of theme and treatment, the collection should interest the student of professional writing as well as the serious reader." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 75:694 Ap 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by Jean Garrigue

New Repub 122:21 Je 26 '50 40w

"Mr. Seager is a most expert story-teller. . . If there is a defect common to this group of stories, it is a certain lack of subtleness. In these days when the bulk of the most highly regarded short fiction is so nebulous that one feels that the last page or two of the manuscript must have been lost in transit between the editors and the printers, this is not a very damning statement. Yet, such is Mr. Seager's skill at depicting character and situation, that whenever he chooses to make his point twice within the same story, it seems not only somewhat condescending of him, but also wasteful." J. J. Maloney

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 30 '50 600w

"Seager's moods are genuine and spring naturally from that fortuitous blending of subject and a creative personality. Occasionally a character gets out of hand—as is likely to occur when the author is a writer and not a mere typewriter pounder. . . However, 'The Unicorn,' a brilliant contrast between a rich American and her English lover; 'The Conqueror,' with its irony and pity for a 19-year-old in uniform; 'Game Chickens,' about a man who took fighting cocks much more seriously than he did Negroes, could become a permanent part of our literature. And after fifteen years, 'This Town and Salamanca' is still one of the most lyrical stories in English." Harry Sylvester

+ — N Y Times p32 Ap 30 '50 400w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 22 '50 270w

"Mr. Seager is a skilled performer who seldom drops a stitch. He tells a story well and with a disarming simplicity. He is, moreover, an astute observer of human emotions and relationships presented in terms of situations or incidents which avoid both the commonplace and the extravagant. Individually, however, Mr. Seager's stories are more impressive than collectively. The volume, in spite of the author's skill and perceptivity, is in some ways a disappointment." William Peden

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:12 Je 3 '50 450w

SEAMAN, JULIAN, ed. Great orchestral music; a treasury of program notes [il. by Roy Colonna]. 476p $5 Rinehart

785 Orchestral music 50-13939

This book is a compilation of excerpts from program notes, musical journals and newspapers, dealing with the most popular orchestral works of composers from Bach to the present. The arrangement is alphabetical by composer, with each composer introduced by a short biographical sketch by the editor.

Booklist 47:57 O 1 '50

"A guide to more enjoyable and better informed listening of the greatest and most enduringly popular works for the orchestra from Bach to the present day, this volume is for the student or lover of fine music who seeks the history and background of a given piece of music, along with a glimpse or two of composers as human beings, and is good for radio, phonograph or television listeners as well as concert goers."

+ Kirkus 18:408 Jl 15 '50 220w

"Sacrifices thoroughness to coverage and in general aims to support the listening-can-be fun school of thought, but contains plenty of meat. Public and school libraries, especially, will need to invest." C. K. Miller

+ — Library J 75:1298 Ag '50 140w

"As curious a mish-mash as you are likely to find in any library." C. S.

— San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 10 '50 150w

"The thoughful reader will wonder why, in the light of modern scholarship, the editor chose a brief and mediocre treatment of the Berlioz 'Fantastic' Symphony dating from the turn of the century. And why 'Peter and the Wolf' rated two and a half pages and the Sibelius Second less than a dozen lines. But then every anthologist has to draw the line somewhere." James Lyons

Sat R of Lit 33:31 N 25 '50 320w

SEARCHLIGHTS on delinquency; new psychoanalytic studies dedicated to August Aichhorn on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, July 27, 1948; managing ed: K. R. Eissler. 456p $10 Int. univs. press

132.6 Psychoanalysis. Crime and criminals. Aichhorn, August 49-7622

"This book is a symposium of new psychoanalytic studies by thirty-six authors, dedicated to August Aichhorn on his 70th birthday. . . There is a four-page biographical note about Aichhorn by the Editor which gives at least an inkling of why this great educator of 'Wayward Youth,' [Book Review Digest 1935] who found in the psycho-analytic method the tool he had long sought, has so many distinguished and devoted disciples in America, Europe and Asia. . . The rest of the book [is] grouped into seven sections—General Problems, Clinical Problems, Technique and Therapy, Etiology and Development, Social Psychology, Penology and Surveys." (New Statesman & Nation) Bibliography of August Aichhorn's writings.

"This volume contains a miscellaneous collection of papers of varying merit but enough of them are excellent contributions to make it worth the reader's while." Bruno Bettelheim

+ — Am J Soc 56:104 Jl '50 1250w

"The book is rather hard going for the uninitiated general reader. It is inevitably full of psychologists' jargon. . . But everyone will be stimulated by the keenness and disciplined scientific attitude of these psychotherapists in dealing with the interesting but exasperating patients from whose cases they have themselves learned so much." C. M. Craven

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:312 S 17 '49 850w

"The papers themselves are uneven in value. The editorial claim that they constitute a 'representative cross-section' of the subject is true only with great reservations." Fredric Wertham

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 20 '49 650w

"This series of papers is very stimulating, particularly because of the variety of viewpoints, and marks a definite stage in progress in diagnosis of delinquency. If the style and language were less technical this valuable book would have a wider appeal." W. B. Sanders

+ Social Forces 28:218 D '49 900w

SEARS, MINNIE EARL. List of subject headings; with practical suggestions for the beginner in subject heading work [6th ed. ed] by Bertha Margaret Frick. 558p $4 Wilson, H.W.

025.33 Subject headings 50-6615

"Included are practical suggestions for the beginner in subject heading work by Minnie E. Sears, revised by Bertha M. Frick. This is the first edition to be published since the issuance of the new A. L. A. and Library of Congress cataloging rules. Many new headings have been added as well as notes defining the meaning and scope of subjects. There are other helpful changes in typography, capitalization and filing." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 46:235 Mr 15 '50

Special Libraries 41:261 S '50 70w

Wis Lib Bul 46:12 Ap '50

SEARS, PAUL BIGELOW. Charles Darwin; the naturalist as a cultural force. (Twentieth century lib) 124p $2; college ed $1.50 Scribner

B or 92 Darwin, Charles Robert

"After a sketch of the status of science and society at the time of Darwin's work, and a brief outline of the influences present in his personal background, Sears presents an analysis of the theories themselves and a record of opposition and support. Over half the book is devoted to a delineation of the direct and subtle effects of Darwin's statements on all sciences, social science, education, culture, religion, politics, and psychology." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:199 F 15 '50

Current Hist 18:228 Ap '50 10w

Kirkus 18:17 Ja 1 '50 30w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 11 '50 160w

Reviewed by Philip Morrison
New Repub 123:27 O 9 '50 500w

"It is highly desirable that Darwin's work should be simply explained and its cultural bearing clearly stated, so that laymen may readily grasp its meaning and be able to distinguish between truth and perversion in its application. Paul Sears, professor of botany at Oberlin, has done just this in this brief, scholarly and highly readable book." H. M. Parshley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 19 '50 450w

"To prepare the reader for appreciating the historical significance of Darwinian ideas, Dr. Sears offers a thumb-nail sketch of the history of civilization since antiquity. He has many apt things to say in this connection, but he is not always a reliable guide. . . What Dr. Sears makes quite clear is the part played by Darwin in winning acceptance for the view that man is continuous with the rest of organic nature. For this the reader should be grateful." Ernest Nagel
N Y Times p6 F 26 '50 650w

"The author is an ecological botanist with pronounced opinions on everything from the gentlemanly conduct of the Civil War to the practicality of Jewish dietary laws, and his pursuit of intellectual history sometimes strays rather far afield. The writing is unusually poor, even for a scientist."
— New Yorker 26:124 Mr 18 '50 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 16 '50 120w

"No less than a first-rate ecologist like Professor Sears could have handled Darwin so well. . . Professor Sears faithfully recounts the more or less familiar 'high-explosive' effects that Darwin's thesis had among scientists, clergy, and laymen the world over. But the most cogent part of his book is his analysis of Darwinian influences on our contemporary world." P. H. Oehser
+ Sat R of Lit 33:24 F 25 '50 600w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 5 '50 180w

"This is a book which can be confidently recommended to the ordinary reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p360 Je 9 '50 240w

SEAVER, GEORGE. Nicolas Berdyaev; an introduction to his thought. 122p $2 Harper

197 Berdíaev, Nikolaĭ Aleksandrovich

An introduction to the ideas of Berdyaev, modern Russian theologist and philosopher, who died in Paris in 1948. "He may perhaps best be regarded as the last of a line of Russian nineteenth-century thinkers—Herzen was the most distinguished of them—who invoked western European radical doctrine against the abuses of Russian autocracy, and then, reacting strongly against the west, returned to faith in a Russian national tradition." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Mr. Seaver furnishes a brief but comprehensive and comprehensible introduction written from a point of view which, as he says, is in general agreement with that of his subject. A careful study of these 122 pages will give the reader rather more than a good general idea of Berdyaev's thought."
+ Christian Century 67:1426 N 29 '50 190w

"Berdyaev is not easy reading, and this book is no popular interpretation. There is gold there, but you have to dig for it."
Kirkus 18:699 D 1 '50 180w

Reviewed by Russell Southwell
Spec 184:482 N 10 '50 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 14 '50 700w

SECKLER-HUDSON, CATHERYN (MRS REUBEN GEORGE STEINMEYER). Bibliography on public administration; annotated. 55p $2 Am. univ. press

016.35 Public administration—Bibliography

"While addressed primarily to students and practitioners of public administration and government, most of the material contained in this annotated bibliography is of direct interest to the business reader. Covers a wide selection of books and periodicals on organization and management, research and research methodology, administrative theory and principles, economics, budgetary administration and control, personnel management, public relations, etc." (Management R) Index.

"Fills a definite need and should prove valuable to students, librarians, public officials and others who have an interest in public administration and government." Julian Fahy
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:221 Mr '50 130w

Management R 39:499 Ag '50 70w

SEEGER, ELIZABETH. Pageant of Russian history; decorations and maps by Bernard Watkins and Erik Magons. 433p $4.50 Longmans

947 Russia—History—Juvenile literature
50-9892

"Earlier period up to nineteenth century presented rather in traditional manner, with many a king and battle, and greater stress on the political than cultural side, now and again more pageant than history. Description of later period brings out very well gulf between rulers and ruled, leading eventually to revolution, and describes building up of country by Bolsheviks; book closes with second world war." (Library J) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:45; 63 S 15 '50; O 1 '50

"The simple writing puts the book within the reader competence of a high school senior and makes it relaxation for an adult." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p25 N 12 '50 90w

Christian Science Monitor p8 S 30 '50 460w

Current Hist 19:230 O '50 60w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 26:457 N '50 50w

"It is beautifully written, impartial history which will help to a better understanding of the background that has produced the Russia of today." Helen Fernald
+ Horn Bk 26:485 N '50 160w

"For young and adult guessers and squinters behind the Iron Curtain this readable, clearly-visioned history of Russia should be required reading."
+ Kirkus 18:426 Ag 1 '50 310w

"Written in fluent style, with decorations and maps by Bernard Watkins, work can be recommended for school and public libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:1404 S 1 '50 100w

"Miss Seeger's excellent bibliography of her source books in many languages suggests that nine-tenths of the Russian story is in the nearest library for those who really want to get the hang of either the best or the worst of it. One could wish she had sketched in a few of the American figures, like Ledyard, Franklin, John Paul Jones, or the Russian and American scientists who have worked together. But her Pageant sticks to great migrations, the peasant movements and kindles interest for further exploration of the high spots and of the past." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 N 12 '50 850w

SEEGER, ELIZABETH—Continued

New Yorker 26:191 D 2 '50 50w

Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 120w

Wis Lib Bul 46:25 N '50

SEELEY, MRS MABEL (HODNEFIELD). Beckoning door. 219p $2.50 Doubleday 50-5542

Detective story.

Booklist 46:304 Je 1 '50

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p4 F 17 '50 250w

Kirkus 17:663 D 1 '49 100w

"Mrs. Seeley tries to give this novel her familiar aura of romantic suspense, but it's not as successful as her others."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 12 '50 130w

"A novel compounded of love, anguish, plot clichés and unexplained loose ends, distinguishable from any dozen other Had-I-But-Known items only by its attractively limned background of a Minnesota small town. Acceptable enough as a routine suffering-heroine novel, it comes as a disappointment from a writer of Miss Seeley's early successes." A. B.
— + N Y Times p14 F 12 '50 180w

"Overwritten and not particularly alarming, this is a disappointing book to come from the author of such first-class specimens as 'The Whispering Cup' and 'The Crying Sisters.' "
— New Yorker 25:95 F 4 '50 140w

"Now we are annoyed. This is NOT the Mable Seeley of yore and we're inclined to think it's her own fault. She's as painstaking as ever in her wonderful descriptions of Middlewestern life but she's not as painstaking as ever in the fashioning of her puzzle. Let's remember that a murder-mystery is a narrative and not a series of descriptions, however fine those descriptions may be." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 5 '50 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 S 1 '50 60w

Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Mr '50

SEELY, SAMUEL. Electron-tube circuits. 529p il $6 McGraw 621.384132 Vacuum-tube circuits 50-5525

"Although primarily a textbook for upper-class and graduate students in electronics, this book holds potential interest also for electronic engineers out of college and even for mature amateurs. A wide range of circuits is covered, not only in radio but also in radar, television, electronic control, and electronic computers. Special attention is given to the characteristics of circuit elements and circuits so as to prepare the reader for practical design of electronic apparatus. Some material from Electronics by J. Millman and the author [Book Review Digest 1942] has been incorporated in this work." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:499 Mr 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:38 My '50

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:392 S '50 170w

SEGHERS, ANNA. Dead stay young. 478p $4 Little 50-8705

Pictures the life in Germany during the years 1918 to 1945. The author uses Germans of all classes in order to present her story: rich and poor; peasants and Prussian army officers; factory workers; intellectuals; business men; Nazis and anti-Nazis.

"Miss Seghers reasons that one is either a Communist or a Nazi, treats with disdain industrialists, peasants, aristocrats and bourgeois. . . The effect is murky and opaque, with characters who are like fish swimming in a wall tank, visible for a time and then darting out of sight. Incidentally, the heavy handed style causes the characters to resemble flatfish." Mary Sandrock
— Cath World 172:74 O '50 200w

"There is a rich, convincing reality in the treatment of the years. But the people of this novel never seem to be rendered as human beings important in themselves; rather, they seem type figures selected carefully to represent forces and elements important to the author's purpose of fictionizing recent history." Richard Sullivan
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 6 '50 350w

"Miss Seghers has made no concessions to readers unfamiliar with German affairs. Her references to interwar events and political movements are casual and unelaborated. Her style also is often heavy. But the result is authentic. Characters and events may soon blur in the reader's mind, but the feel of Germany, seen from the inside, will remain. 'The Dead Stay Young' is a sincere contribution, not to the literature of condemnation, but to the literature of understanding." Ruth Chapin
+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 29 '50 600w

"Miss Seghers writes of her country with a singular lack of bitterness. In her almost academic objectivity, she appears to be offering a sociological supplement to a history text-book. Her sympathies are clearly anti-Nazi, but there is no impassioned rhetoric here, no crushing zeal. Her concern is with the realities. But the very detachment of the novel and its concentration upon the whole, rather than upon individuals, detract from its literary power. Little attachment or sympathy is generated for any character. The people are real, but they are caught in the relentless sweep of history." C. H. Weiss
+ — Commonweal 52:440 Ag 11 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:265 My 1 '50 210w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 75:980 Je 1 '50 120w

"Miss Seghers has brought compassion to her careful account of life in Germany between 1918 and 1945. This is about as much as can be said for her. 'The Dead Stay Young' . . . is packed with information which remains information. . . Everything exists on one level of monotony, as if the novel were exclusively an act of will." Ernest Jones
— + Nation 171:133 Ag 5 '50 150w

"It is an ungrateful job to withhold enthusiasm from this novel of high purpose, but although it deals with recent history, the total effect of The Dead Stay Young is curiously anachronistic and stale. Possibly, it is because the author has offered no new insights into well-known, though valid material. Possibly, the material is not handled well enough to give it real stature. Or could it derive from the reader's feeling that the political novelist should be ready to isolate and examine the new postwar strains of the old virus?" Kate Simon
— + New Repub 123:21 Ag 28 '50 400w

"From her very beginnings Anna Seghers never concealed her leanings toward the extreme Left. In 'The Dead Stay Young,' a sense of heroism imbues all her figures that stand left of center, whereas their opponents, aristocrats, middle class people, peasants and workmen, are surrounded by an air of pathetic, if not scurrilous, failure. Anna Seghers has a better taste than most of her comrades: the message of her book, her political creed, is more cleverly camouflaged; but her intentions are obvious. . . Although the concept of her novel forbids Anna Seghers any deeper characterization of her figures, she shows herself a competent craftsman in drawing thumbnail sketches, especially of women and young people. . . The translator of Anna Seghers' book has remained anonymous. And rightly so. For who would like to be held publicly responsible for some of the boners made here?" Heinz Politzer
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 30 '50 900w

"Miss Seghers has sympathy with only a few of her characters: with Marie, the valiant, simple-hearted girl who dedicates her life to her illegitimate son, Hans, and her three stepchildren, and with Hans and his underground co-workers. When telling about Marie, Miss Seghers reveals the power and warmth she displayed in her novel 'The Seventh Cross.' The remaining two-thirds of this ambitious book suffer from two defects: faulty technique, and an unfortunate political bias." Richard Plant

— + N Y Times p12 Jl 30 '50 500w

"A very long novel, toneless, gray, and full of names—but with no principal character worth mentioning."
— New Yorker 26:71 Jl 29 '50 70w

"Miss Seghers' analysis of how it all came about in Germany is a warning signal for anyone who can interpret it. Here is how the Nazi kind of thing creeps upon any nation that permits it to begin. Here is a diagram of the way it happens, step by apparently harmless step. It is this, to my mind, that is the most significant thing about Miss Seghers' book. That it also presents a moving and credible story, in which people you can know and understand live and act and die, is what makes it a solid, well executed piece of work." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 31 '50 900w

"The wealth of events in these twenty-seven fateful years of German and European politics and their complexities force [the author] to compress the historical background material to the utmost. In many instances important historical episodes—important also for her story—are barely hinted at in a conversational aside. Readers not equipped with the best of memories, or too young to recall that period, will more often than not be at a loss to grasp the political motives for the actions of her protagonists and take what these characters do, or fail to do, only for the effect of inborn villainy or weakness. . . We are entitled to wonder whether Anna Seghers, by reducing the conflict almost entirely to the Communist vs. Fascist issue, has done justice to the whole picture." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 33:14 Jl 29 '50 700w

SEIDENBERG, RODERICK. Posthistoric man; an inquiry. 246p $3.75 Univ. of N.C. press
301 Man. Civilization. Progress 50-13890

An attempt to prophesy the future of mankind. "In the prehistoric period when man was passing through various stages in evolutionary development, instinct was dominant over intelligence. In what might be termed the historic period, an equilibrium—unstable to be sure—between instinct and intelligence has been reached. We have either passed or are about to pass out of that stage into the post-historic period, where the organizing drive of intelligence will assume a higher and higher importance, and instinct will be more and more subordinated. Meanwhile the depersonalization of the individual will increase until a final state of automatism will be reached." (Library J)

"This breath-taking treatise on the meaning of history is written by a layman, a New York architect, Roderick Seidenberg, who displays an impressive knowledge of science, psychology, sociology, anthropology, philosophy, and history. His book is highly commended by divers authorities who, though they disagree with his viewpoint, affirm that he has made a challenging contribution to the study of man's destiny. Readers with a taste for bold speculations on this subject should find Post-Historic Man a stimulating adventure." C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 186:94 N '50 1000w
Kirkus 18:452 Ag 1 '50 110w

"A book that the serious-minded and thinking will wish to pursue. Recommended." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 75:1658 O 1 '50 150w

"Since men thinking metaphysically really do seem to be divided by temperament into the groups James sought to describe in his familiar contrast of 'tender-minded' and 'tough-minded,' it was inevitable that some one should arise to challenge the present vogue of Toynbee and his like. This Mr. Seidenberg has done with clarity, firmness, and—for a philosopher of history—great brevity in this interesting volume. He achieves the brevity by concentrating on the general statement of his theories and eschewing the detailed illustrations from recorded history so dear to Toynbee. Mr. Seidenberg has been his own Somervell." Crane Brinton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 15 '50 950w

"I find Mr. Seidenberg's book important, not because it variates the theme of the Huxleys and Orwells, not because it explains the noble despairs of Kierkegaard and Kafka, not because it shows up the romanticism of Sartre and his fellow metaphysical-melodramatists, but because it reveals the sterility and falsity of the liberal mind." Waldo Frank
Sat R of Lit 33:18 O 28 '50 2800w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). Homecoming. 277p $3 Dodd 50-6185

The return of a local hero after World war II is told on two levels: his own story, as he mentally reviews it; and the story which is brought out by the crowd of newspaper reporters who greet him.

Reviewed by Josh Greenfeld
Chicago Sun p7 Ap 9 '50 200w

Reviewed by Warren Abbott
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 26 '50 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 75:319 F 15 '50 70w

"The mechanics of 'Homecoming'—slabs of reminiscence between layers of interview—dilutes the drama. The novelist is hampered by her formula, or possibly by a milieu in which the eloquence of epithet runs to 'brazen hussy,' 'that old harridan' and 'you wastrel.'"
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 26 '50 180w

Reviewed by Meyer Berger
N Y Times p35 Mr 26 '50 90w

SEIFERT, SHIRLEY. Turquoise trail. 409p $3.50 Lippincott
Magoffin, Susan (Shelby)—Fiction 50-6798

A novel based on the diary of Susan Shelby Magoffin who made the overland journey from Missouri to Mexico at the time of the Mexican war.

"Neither Samuel nor Susan is a fully realized character, but their story provides a framework for little-known aspects of the Mexican war."
Booklist 46:226; 276 Mr 15 '50; My 1 '50

"Because she is a skilled and careful craftsman, Miss Seifert's story . . . is interesting. But it seemed to me that she never invested her emotions in the characters of this story as she did in Manuel Lisa of 'Those Who Go Against the Current,' and her failure became mine as a reader." V. P. Hass
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 18 '50 450w

"This is historical fiction or fictionalized biography that is both entertaining and accurately informative. . . Recommended." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 75:862 My 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 75:1841 O 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by Edward Stansbury
N Y Times p23 Je 18 '50 130w
Wis Lib Bul 46:18 N '50

SELDES, GILBERT VIVIAN. Great audience. 299p $3.75 Viking 791.4 Moving pictures. Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting 50-10499

"A look at the three popular arts—movies, radio and television—by the author of The Seven Lively Arts [Book Review Digest 1924]. The three great entertainment industries are here analyzed and appraised in terms of their products, their complex business set-ups, and their influence on our tastes and standards." (Kirkus) No index.

SELDES, G. V.—Continued

Booklist 47:33; 153 S 15 '50; D 15 '50

Reviewed by B. R. Crisler
Christian Science Monitor p6 D 9 '50 650w

"Good reading and sounder advice than is likely to be taken."
+ Kirkus 18:545 S 1 '50 230w

"Lack of an index is the only valid criticism that anyone could offer to this politically and intellectually aware book by an author who recants his philosophy concerning The Seven Lively Arts and the theory of the audience always being right. Nevertheless it is highly recommended for theatre, literature and censorship collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 50w

"It is mostly questions that 'The Great Audience' offers, rather than answers. Such answers as Mr. Seldes does supply are honest and unsweetened, but at the same time vague in outline and inconclusive. . . The information set down [here] is highly readable. Though the author deliberately hides his critical side behind his fact-finding side, there are passages of artistic criticism reminiscent of the style, at once solemn and nimble, of 'The Seven Lively Arts.' " John Lardner
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 19 '50 800w

"Gilbert Seldes has written a timely, constructive and controversial book." Jack Gould
+ N Y Times p9 D 31 '50 750w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 26:121 O 28 '50 2800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 17 '50 900w

"A valid and vital essay." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 D 16 '50 1250w

"Two flaws mar this excellent little social history. . . . First, the title, 'The Great Audience,' is really a misnomer. . . A second error is of a more general nature. Mr. Seldes' terminology includes the 'entertainment arts,' 'popular arts,' 'mass media'—he uses these phrases repeatedly without careful discrimination among them or between them and the more traditional concepts." L. M. Parrott
+ — Theatre Arts 34:2 D '50 850w

SELF, MRS MARGARET CABELL. Horseman's companion; il. by Wesley Dennis. 212p $3 Barnes, A.S.

798.2 Horses—Training 49-11563

The author, who has written several books on horsemanship, here has a volume of more or less disconnected essays on various phases of buying and training horses and teaching children how to ride. Style is anecdotal and informal.

Booklist 46:331 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by Will Davidson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 5 '50 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '50

"A rare book, brimming over with the author's contagious love of her subject."
+ Kirkus 17:604 N 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:49 Ja 1 '50 20w

SELL, FRANCIS E. American deer hunter; ed. by Ellis Christian Lenz. 174p il $3.95 Stackpole & Heck

799.27 Deer hunting Agr50-467

" 'Offered primarily as an aid to the prospective deer hunter, or one with limited experience,' by an experienced hunter, and with many illustrations. Deals with white-tail, Columbia black-tail and mule deer. Discusses rifles, snapshooting, equipment, stalking, trailing etc." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 47:72 O 15 '50

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1908 N 1 '50 50w

SELLERY, GEORGE CLARKE. The Renaissance, its nature and origins. 296p il $3.75 Univ. of Wis. press

901 Renaissance 50-4422

"The author describes his work as an essay on the Renaissance, not a history. It is the author's opinion that the Renaissance was not a revolution caused by the rediscovery of the ancient classics but an evolution caused by the energies of the peoples of Western Europe." Current Hist

"Brevity and erudition, a rare conjunction, are happily mated in this essay on the Renaissance."
+ Atlantic 186:82 S '50 180w

"The small book covers an enormous area and passes judgment on many men; but its pages make delightful reading and the views it expresses are always reasonable."
+ Cath World 172:80 O '50 130w

Current Hist 19:165 S '50 40w

"I marvel that Mr. Sellery feels it necessary to attack the theory that the Revival of Learning was the mainspring of the Renaissance. In so doing he is beating a dead dog. Surely everyone now knows that the Revival of Learning was a symptom, not a cause. The Renaissance was an age of discovery or of rediscovery—the classics, like America, were but one of the things discoverd or rediscovered. Even so, here is an excellent little guide to a great period. Particularly effective are its vignettes of the dramatis personae." T. C. Chubb
+ — N Y Times p20 S 17 '50 360w

SELLEW, CATHARINE F. Adventures with the giants; il. by Steele Savage. 132p $2.50 Little

293 Mythology, Norse 50-6633

Folk tales of the Norsemen for grades 4 and 5. The fourteen stories describe the activities of the gods, dwarfs, and wicked giants who were held responsible for all kinds of natural phenomena. Glossary.

Booklist 46:279 My 1 '50

Bookmark 10:11 O '50 40w

"The stories make good reading, and the illustrations in color and black and white contribute atmosphere and dignity."
+ Kirkus 18:97 F 15 '50 150w

"Excellent, brief collection of Norse folklore. . . Recommended for ages 9-12." Clara Adams
+ Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 80w

"Writing is prosaic and ineffectual; the characters never achieve heroic stature, and the epic spirit of the saga is totally missing." Eulalie Steinmetz
— Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 60w

"The thirteen stories are well chosen, and told vigorously yet in a style fairly easy to read at primary age. The large type and the famous Mr. Savage's superb pictures, printed in two colors, make this a most distinguished and attractive book. We hope that children will like it so much that they go on to the longer tales, especially Colum's."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 7 '50 230w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
N Y Times p30 My 14 '50 140w

New Yorker 26:186 D 2 '50 80w

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). Play with trees; pictures by Fred F. Scherer. 64p $2 Morrow

582 Trees—Juvenile literature 50-8832

"The author tells the children how to know and appreciate trees. She shows them how to distinguish the seeds, how to plant them so that even city children may have a tiny arboretum. She tells them how the life of a tree is sustained through its leaves and how one can count the age of a tree through the rings in its inner trunk. She shows them how to collect and preserve the leaves and stems and buds." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 47:17 S 1 '50

"Invaluable for the classroom nature study groups and alert youngsters who enjoy the out-of-doors."
+ Kirkus 18:419 Ag 1 '50 150w

"Fine first book on trees." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 75:2158 D 15 '50 90w

"Millicent Selsam tells in simple language enough about trees to spark a youngster's interest, then describes easy experiments to do at home." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p42 N 5 '50 120w

"It is a charming book, both in text and illustrations. It might easily lead the younger boys and girls to a new and interesting hobby."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:66 N 11 '50 100w

SEQUENZIA, VENERANDO SOFIO. Rome and Italy, 1950 guide for the Holy year tourist. 212p il pa $1.50 European cultural bur, 94 Edwards st, Hartford 5, Conn.

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 50-19

"Paper-bound compilation of facts and figures covering all of Italy in telegraphic prose. Capri is dispatched in three lines, and the magnificent Dolomites somehow get telescoped into the piece on Venice. But this one is best when it provides such unexpected but thoroughly useful information as the names and numbers of trains which have restaurant cars, the rail distances between principal cities, railway fares, and such." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by C. M. Cianfarra
N Y Times p32 Ap 2 '50 100w
Sat R of Lit 33:41 F 25 '50 110w

SERGE, VICTOR. Case of Comrade Tulayev; tr. from the French by Willard R. Trask. 306p $3 Doubleday

50-9058

On a cold winter's night a young clerk, on impulse, shot and killed a highly placed member of the Communist party in Russia, Comrade Tulayev. The young man escapes, but, in the far flung investigations of the "plot," three other men, of far greater importance, are pursued to their death, men who are not guilty of this crime, at least, but men who have roused the distrust and enmity of the rulers of Russia. The author, who died in 1947, was an old revolutionary who had lived in exile, in France and Mexico, since the mid-thirties.

"Serge's novel, prophetic when it was written, offers a hideously real diagram of Communist thinking. Here is an answer to the Communist 'confessions,' an explanation of why men facing certain death confess crimes of which they are not guilty." Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p16 S 3 '50 800w

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 3 '50 500w

"Serge explores the whole social milieu of that grim world where history is rewritten to order and one can doubt even the actuality of one's own past. His characters move their tense and tortuous way through plot and counterplot under the shadow of the Kremlin. Against this huge relentless background one senses the poignant movement of human lives. For this book is in the great tradition of the European novel. It is the Human Comedy of a police state, with a sense of urgency and doom hanging over the winter-bound capital, where the innocent confess their guilt and punishment falls on the guiltless, and where the explanation of events is given not as a historical formula but with the actuality of flesh and blood." Francis Russell
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 8 '50 600w

"It is dramatic, and it is truthful (though at times bordering on the incredible in depicting the extreme human degradation resulting from the highest principles of integral communism). It is the reflection of a noble and long-suffering soul. We must deplore, however, the fact Victor Serge still seemed to think that his own initial generation of militant Communists risen to power were bearers of an integral truth, destroyed by Stalin's opportunism: 'What men!' he writes. 'History takes milleniums to produce men so great! Incorruptible, intelligent, formed by thirty or forty years, and pure, pure!' To this we shall object that poison, however 'pure,' is still poison." Helene Iswolsky
+ — Commonweal 52:564 S 15 '50 650w
Kirkus 18:393 Jl 15 '50 160w

"Although wordy, it is a stark, terrible picture of modern Russia." R. W. Henderson
+ — Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 150w

Reviewed by Frederic Morton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 3 '50 650w

"Gide has described the sense of failure which surrounded Serge, his nervousness, his purely Russian morbidity and delicacy, but in the novel there are no traces of what he called 'Serge's instinctive sense of failure.' In the novel Serge found himself. Here at last, writing when he was very ill, he showed his power; and in 'The Case of Comrade Tulayev' there is a brilliance, a detachment and a sparing imagination which will surprise those who have read only his pamphlets." Robert Payne
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 27 '50 650w

"There are books, very often of the highest distinction, that give one the sense of their authors' having lived largely in order to write them. 'The Case of Comrade Tulayev' is such a book, and yet every page serves notice that the author was more than a talented and painstaking observer of affairs; he was a participant in them." Brendan Gill
+ New Yorker 26:97 S 30 '50 750w

" 'The Case of Comrade Tulayev,' written in the years 1940-42, is [the author's] considered, mature indictment of what he believed to be the vilest betrayal, the greatest counter-revolution in history. . . The technique of 'The Tulayev Case' makes us spectators rather than participants. But it is a fine piece of work of its kind. And never has it been more important than it is in this autumn of 1950 for us to understand what this novel has to tell us. Mr. Trask's translation appears to be excellent." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 33:21 S 9 '50 850w
Time 56:79 Ag 28 '50

SEROFF, VICTOR ILYITCH. Rachmaninoff. 269p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Rachmaninoff, Sergei

A sympathetic biography of the Russian composer and pianist. The author introduces some new material on his life to American readers; especially Rachmaninoff's letters to Marietta Shaginian, the Russian poet, and to his friend Vilshau. Illustrated with photographs. List of Rachmaninoff's compositions. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:231 Mr 15 '50

"The book is filled with interesting glimpses of such great personalities as Tschaikowsky, Scriabin, Medtner, and Koussevitzky. The turbulent musical life of Moscow in the late 19th and early 20th centuries is well presented. There are comments by Rachmaninoff on Kreisler, Heifetz, Hofmann, Horowitz, and the Philadelphia and New York orchestras. The little picture section is fascinating—especially the part given over to old photografs." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 12 '50 500w

"Few others than the student will find it interesting; perhaps to students this may be an enlightening documentation of those influences which affected the man as well as the composer."
Kirkus 18:20 Ja 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Leonard Burkat
Library J 75:697 Ap 15 '50 70w

SEROFF, V. I.—Continued

"A number of letters, hitherto unknown to English readers, are reproduced and we can be grateful for them. Nevertheless the account clings to a pedestrian level and musical criticism is rarely attempted. Matters of special interest to American readers are studiously avoided. . . Though the book is not without interest, it is but the bare beginning of the biography of a remarkable man whose friends must wait longer for a comprehensive description of his art, career, and personality." E. N. Waters

Music Lib Assn Notes 7:474 Je '50 550w

"Despite a great deal of human insight and a remarkable amount of well correlated data presented to the American reader for the first time [the author] fails to give a completely satisfactory clew to Rachmaninoff's personality. Perhaps it cannot be done. Certainly his book has many excellent qualities; terse and succinct, it does not try to romanticize its héro; it gives the reader an illuminating picture of Moscow's artistic feuds between 1910 and 1918; it furnishes the reader with an excellent catalogue of Rachmaninoff's works, and a sizable bibliography." Nicolas Nabokov

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 19 '50 1000w

"Readable, well-documented biography. . . This brave attempt makes interesting reading. But it is not the definitive life of Rachmaninoff. Perhaps there never will be one." Moses Smith

+ N Y Times p28 F 26 '50 450w

New Yorker 26:103 Je 3 '50 330w

"What manner of man was Rachmaninoff? What is the secret of the fascination that his music exercises in such different environments? This conscientious and informative biography by Victor I. Seroff, a Russian-American writer and musician who knew Rachmaninoff personally, gives an answer to the first question if not to the second." Nicolas Slonimsky

Sat R of Lit 33:19 Mr 25 '50 1200w

SETTEL, ARTHUR, ed. This is Germany; introd. by Lucius D. Clay. 429p $4 Sloane

943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 50-8504

A collection of twenty-one articles on post-war Germany, written by journalists or correspondents of experience. Biographical notes. No index.

Booklist 46:325; 351 Jl 1 '50; Jl 15 '50

Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 20w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 16 '50 550w

"It is a story worth reading. For directly or indirectly it is part of every present-day American's past and future history." Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 29 '50 1150w

Kirkus 18:229 Ap 1 '50 390w

"This is one of the most useful books in the fast growing literature on post-war Germany. . . Recommended especially for public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 75:978 Je 1 '50 170w

"Here is shrewd, well-informed and thoroughly honest reporting of what was thought most significant. It is a book in which the news fraternity may take legitimate pride. And yet, I suggest, the reporting is better than the choice of subject matter, which tends to be conventional and unimaginative." Telford Taylor

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 9 '50 1200w

"This is one of the best analyses of Germany under the Occupation that has come to my attention. It sums up what twenty experienced American and British correspondents have written for their papers and covers in honest and informed style every phase of that self-perpetuating problem which is Germany." Delbert Clark

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 9 '50 700w

"The product of many minds, chapters in 'This Is Germany' tend to overlap and repeat themselves on tangential matters. Rather than use a pruning pencil, editor Arthur Settel has allowed each writer to tell his story independently of what precedes or follows. The result is short on symmetry but long on impact." Hal Lehrman

+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 Ag 26 '50 650w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Jl '50

SEUSS, DR, pseud. See Geisel, T. S.

SEVERN, DAVID, pseud. See Unwin, D. S.

SEVERNS, WILLIAM HARRISON, and FELLOWS, JULIAN ROBERT. Heating, ventilating, and air-conditioning fundamentals. 2d ed 666p il $6.50 Wiley

628.8 Heating. Ventilation. Air conditioning 49-50350

"A relatively inclusive work, covering basic principles, applications and useful engineering data. It is designed primarily as an engineering college textbook, but it is useful also for library reference on such matters as the effect of surface finishes on radiators; descriptions and discussions of various systems of house heating; and information on new developments such as the heat pump. The authors are members of the faculty of the University of Illinois. In comparison to the first edition [Book Review Digest 1938] there are about 200 pages of new material, many new problems, and a fair number of new illustrations." Library J

Booklist 46:235 Mr 15 '50

Eng N 144:42 Mr 16 '50 40w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:111 Ja 15 '50 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:7 Ja '50

SEVERSKY, ALEXANDER P. DE. See De Seversky, A. P.

SEWARD, WILLIAM. Skirts of the dead night. 158p $2.50 Bookman associates, 42 Broadway, N.Y. 4

50-34277

Detective story.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 6 '50 40w

"The head of the English Department at William and Mary makes his detective-writing debut with an amateurish hodgepodge of all the worst hack thrillers of twenty years ago." A. B.

N Y Times p20 Je 4 '50 100w

"It's a slick and literate job." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 4 '50 130w

SEYMOUR, MRS ALTA HALVERSON. Secret of the hidden room. 211p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

49-10645

Mystery story for ages twelve to fourteen.

"The mystery is mild but the story develops much charm in the relationships of the young people and in Caroline's attempt to discard her explosive, tomboyish nature. She succeeds only in cutting herself off from fun and has to learn the hard way that the secret of success is, 'Be yourself, Kelly.' " M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun p3S F 4 '50 140w

Kirkus 17:513 S 15 '49 80w

"Pure mystery with better than average characterization." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 75:502 Mr 15 '50 80w

SHACKLE, GEORGE LENNOX SHARMAN. Expectation in economics. 146p $3 Cambridge
330.1 Economics 49-9445

"This book is a theoretical discussion of the role of expectations in decision-making by 'rational' individuals contemplating large-scale commitments. The three main aspects of the work are: criticism of previous theories, elaboration of an alternative hypothesis, and application of this hypothesis in the discussion of four particular problems." (J Pol Econ) Index.

"My thought is that, while it is well to show the futility of mathematical probability theory which reduces enterprise largely to chance (e.g. Keynes), it does not help much to reduce the enterpriser's purposive evaluations of outcome to a matter of feelings of pleasure and pain." L. H. Haney
Ann Am Acad 269:163 My '50 450w

"There will be general agreement that Shackle's main hypothesis is intriguing and in many respects novel. However, the testing of it has not been given adequate consideration. The chapters on applications are formulated more with the aim of elaborating than of testing, and to this it will be worth while for the author and other economists to turn." W. C. Hood
+ — J Pol Econ 58:449 O '50 600w

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. Golden Shakespeare; an anthology; compiled by Logan Pearsall Smith. 700p $3 Macmillan 822.33 50-3520

An anthology of extracts from Shakespeare, chosen by Logan Pearsall Smith. The book could serve as a companion and complement to the compiler's earlier essay On Reading Shakespeare (Book Review Digest 1933).

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 23 '50 400w

"Selecting out the gold and discarding the rest may focus attention upon the precious material, but it destroys the pictures. Nevertheless, for those 'dainty moments' in which one wants only pure poetry and is willing to let the drama filter in as best it can in glittering fragments, this anthology is nearly perfect. No one could have done the job better than Logan Pearsall Smith has done it, even though I would have included some of the sonnets that he left out." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:617 My 17 '50 850w

"This beautifully produced book and Pearsall Smith's own introduction are the product of rich scholarship and taste. Even at its most exasperating 'The Golden Shakespeare' never falls short of his high standards of patient scholarship. He loved Shakespeare, and his anthology may come to be regarded as the biggest of his achievements."
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 5 '50 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 13 '50 80w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 26:99 My 27 '50 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 18 '50 100w

"The anthology is commonplace and curiously old-fashioned. It has, as Pearsall hoped, a historical interest, but Quiller Couch, Walter Raleigh, Robert Bridges and the present Laureate would have done much better in this kind. It is true that Pearsall Smith did not live to complete his commentary, but the introduction is but the residue and rinsings of the essay. with much familiar matter on the taste of Pope and Keats and such misleading remarks as that 'the love of perfection was unsought for in our literature before the time of Milton.' . . Nevertheless, those who like to hear what they have already heard, and who agree that old wine, old books, old friends are best, will be glad to have [the book] at their beds head." George Rylands
— + Spec 184:282 Mr 3 '50 800w

"It would be hard to imagine a richer and more pleasantly arranged anthology if one had to be made, and the introduction goes far to disarm in advance the 'whole-hogger.' Shakespeare lovers, of all tastes, will find this book a quick way back to a thousand favourite places—but might they not have been given the speaker of every extract as well as the line-reference?"
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 3 '50 800w

SHANNON, JASPER BERRY, and others, eds. Study of comparative government; an appraisal of comparative trends; essays written in honor of Frederic Austin Ogg. 338p $4 Appleton
320.4 Political science. Ogg, Frederic Austin 50-5140

"These are essays written in honor of Frederic Austin Ogg, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, 1914-48, who has been a leader in the growth and crystallization of the study of politics in the United States." School & Society

"This is no systematic conventional treatment of comparative government. Rather it is a happy collection of insights into largely unexplored areas of our discipline, with examples and illustrations drawn from the diverse political laboratories of the entire world." S. K. Bailey
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:483 Je '50 550w

Christian Century 67:764 Je 21 '50 150w

School & Society 71:48 Ja 21 '50 50w

"The essays form a good introduction to the substantive topics treated, and to the general field of comparative government as developed in the United States by a distinguished pioneer in the field. The editor's Introduction presents a sensitive appreciation of Professor Ogg and of the teacher-student association that characterizes the American university at its best."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:209 Je '50 270w

SHAPIRO, LIONEL. Torch for a dark journey. 273p $3 Doubleday
50-9537

A tale of international intrigue involving among others, an American oil magnate, an American newspaper man, a Hungarian adventurer, a Czech scientist and a Czech communist.

Kirkus 18:365 Jl 1 '50 170w

"This adventure story . . . has all the time tested ingredients. . . Though substitutions have been made to keep the material contemporary, this is not a social document. Story makes light summer reading." C. J. Roth
Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 100w

"Spectator of the drama and wiser than any of its participants is Albert Bonneval, the ancient who guarded the customs hut and examined the papers of infrequent foot travelers between France and Belgium. . . 'Torch for a Dark Journey' depicts the plight of a world bankrupt of such philosophy and wit." George Conrad
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 24 '50 500w

"It is obvious that all of the appropiate ingredients have been assembled. Mr. Shapiro does well with them, skillfully shaping his story and employing with resourcefulness the brittle style that is suitable to such tales. To suspense and romance he adds humor—a rather fierce humor when he is writing about newspapermen and a surprisingly gentle humor when he is portraying a highly individualistic customs officer named Albert Bonneval. As it proceeds to its climax the story sweeps one along, but, unlike most thrillers, the book can be savored along the way." Granville Hicks
+ N Y Times p50 S 24 '50 380w

Sat R of Lit 33:33 N 4 '50 370w

SHARP, FRANK CHAPMAN. Good will and ill will; a study of moral judgments. 248p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

160 Ethics. Judgment (logic) 50-7733

"The author of this posthumously published work taught philosophy for many years at the University of Wisconsin and was well known for his contributions to the field of ethics. In this inquiry he seeks an objective standard for decisions of right and wrong and an objective validity for moral judgments. His method consists in posing casuistical questions to several generations of college students, asking them the reasons for their answers and evaluating them against traditional ethical doctrines in the history of philosophy." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Garnett
Ann Am Acad 272:271 N '50 380w

"As teachers very well know, an ethics text which combines scholarship with originality and technical skill with compelling interest is a rare book; this one embodies these four qualities. . . There are several reasons why teachers of ethics will certainly want this work readily available for their own use and the use of their students. For one thing [it] is distinctive in its method. . . This method makes for another major asset of the book: it furnishes the teacher with very carefully designed questions which can be used in any ethics class. . . The author's statements about the way in which the questions were constructed and presented to his students, and his report of the results of his inquiries, could have been much better than they are. . . However, Sharp's ethics classes must have been alive and fairly bristling with controversy which, under his guidance, was productive as well as provocative. Wise users of this text will be able to introduce some of this zest into their instruction in ethics." C. W. Kegley
+ — Christian Century 67:702 Je 7 '50 1150w

Current Hist 19:106 Ag '50 30w

Reviewed by R. G. Stephens
Ethics 61:85 O '50 240w

"The author's own position, utilitarian in a carefully specified sense, is that the ultimate source of moral judgments is in benevolence and malevolence, and these are the key concepts in a theory which he develops in an interesting, if not altogether systematic, fashion."

Sat R of Lit 33:35 Ag 19 '50 270w

"Should prove fascinating and profitable reading for the layman as well as for the professional moralist."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:296 S '50 250w

SHAW, ARCHER HAYES, ed. Lincoln encyclopedia. See Lincoln, A.

SHAW, FREDERIC JOSEPH, and others. Oil lamps and iron ponies; a chronicle of the narrow gauges; decoration by E. S. Hammack; maps and lettering by Frederic Shaw, ltd autog ed 187p il $5 Bay bks. ltd, suite 230, 742 Market st, San Francisco 2

385 Railroads—U.S. Railroads, Narrow gage 49-10282

Monograph on eight of the old narrow-gauge railroads of California and Oregon. All have now vanished. The work is based upon old files of narrow gauge railroad photographs and whatever other historical data could be located.

"The pictures, mostly of old locomotives, are excellent, and the historical sketches are pleasant mixtures of plain facts and personal anecdotes." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 100w

"It is conceivable that the writing of 'Oil Lamps and Iron Ponies' will not be hailed as a masterpiece of English style, but its art and production are enormously creditable to the authors, particularly the title page. . . The narrow gage may vanish but never from the printed page, and 'Oil Lamps and Iron Ponies' is a good deal more than just another item in the ever-growing bibliography of specialized railroad literature. It is an authentic item of Western Americana and a delightful book to read and own." Lucius Beebe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 7 '50 270w

"The book is a handsome production job and contains a valuable sheaf of old photos, maps and locomotive scale drawings." W. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 27 '49 550w

SHAW, IRWIN. Mixed company; collected short stories. 480p $3.75 Random house 50-10065

"Includes thirteen stories from Shaw's three earlier collections of short stories, published in 1939, 1942 and 1946, and adds to them seven stories which have never appeared in book form." N Y Times

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 5 '50 500w

+ Kirkus 18:484 Ag 15 '50 200w

"The most complete collection of Shaw's short stories to date. Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 110w

"In a collection of thirty-seven stories there are bound to be a few which are undistinguished. Sometimes there is a certain superficial slickness, a manner too knowing, a sort of pat formula effect. But even here the craftsmanship is impeccable, and when one considers that these few stories are greatly outnumbered by the genuinely fine ones, it would appear that 'Mixed Company' will be respected by all admirers of the American short story." J. J. Maloney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 22 '50 650w

"The cumulative effect is extremely impressive and leaves no doubt about Shaw's rank as a short-story writer." R. G. Davis
+ N Y Times p4 O 15 '50 1100w

"The collection is an important one. Mr. Shaw is probably the most artistic and articulate exponent of the socially-conscious short story writing today." William Peden
+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 N 18 '50 600w

SHAW, IRWIN. Report on Israel [text] by Irwin Shaw and [photographs by] Robert Capa. 144p il $3; pa $1.50 Simon & Schuster

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel 50-3713

"Irwin Shaw and Robert Capa were in Israel at the same time, but on separate assignments; the joining of Mr Shaw's magazine articles with Mr. Capa's pictures is, therefore, an imposed collaboration. Mr. Shaw wrote four tight sharp-eyed, reportorial pieces on Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, Galilee, and the celebration in Tel Aviv of Israel's first Independence Day; Mr. Capa wandered about making photographs of places and people, most of them unmentioned in Mr. Shaw's prose. The result is a series of glimpses of the Jewish state." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"'Report on Israel' contains Irwin Shaw's deft and brilliant reportage. . . But the spirit of the land eludes this account. The same is true of the superb photographs by Robert Capa. They are masterly examples of the photographer's art, but why is the illustration on the cover, significantly entitled 'The Face of the People,' the uncharacteristic one of an orthodox bearded Jew with a skullcap, carrying a beam of wood? While there are wonderful scenes and faces among the illustrations, one cannot escape the feeling that Robert Capa has too often sacrificed the picture for the picturesque." Marie Syrkin
— + Nation 170:626 Je 24 '50 140w

"Neither separately nor together do the prose and pictures build a pattern; they do, however, present some admirable close-ups of Israeli types, Israeli modes of life, and Israeli problems. Mr. Capa, incidentally is the better reporter; his pictures are not only striking examples of the photographic art; they are interviews and descriptive essays." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 28 '50 450w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman
Sat R of Lit 33:27 Ag 5 '50 500w

"One particularly noteworthy feature of this book is that it is not a propaganda piece, either pro or con. Both Shaw and Capa are enthusiastic about the new nation, but they do not gloss over or ignore some features of the country which, as yet, are not wholly satisfactory." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 23 '50 190w

SHEARMAN, HUGH. Finland; the adventures of a small power; pub. under the auspices of the London institute of world affairs. 114p maps $2.25 F. A. Praeger, inc, 105 W. 40th st, N.Y. 18

947.1 Finland—History

A brief account of Finnish history from the Middle Ages to the 1948 elections. List of important dates in Finnish history. Index.

Booklist 47:155 D 15 '50

"Recommended for public and college libraries, since reliable information on Finland [is] not plentiful in English." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 75:2003 N 15 '50 140w

"The political history of Finland, as well as Mr. Shearman's outline of Finland's striking economic development during the nineteenth century . . . is very well told. Much more open to criticism are the subsequent chapters dealing with the last few decades." Alexander Werth
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 4 '50 800w

"An excellent sketch of the country's development, a concise and balanced account of recent events as well as enough facts about earlier happenings to help understanding of the Finnish position and point of view. Those familiar with Finnish history will find nothing new here, but the book should persuade some readers and remind others to search more deeply and widely into an interesting subject."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 23 '50 500w

SHEDD, MARGARET COCHRAN (MRS O. M. KISICH). Return to the beach. 276p $3 Doubleday 50-11619

"As death comes slowly to Paul, wounded on a beach landing during the war, there is the inner acceptance but never the spoken admission of what will come. For Abel Goade, Paul's great grandfather, with his predatory, patriarchal pride, racked by his recollections of the past, Paul is the only lien with the present; for Stephen, Paul's father, awkward, ineffectual, there is a sense of guilt towards Paul accentuated by the failure of his marriage to Ellen; for Laura, who had grown up with Paul, and who marries him now, there is only the consciousness of their love which obliterates the knowledge of the little time they have; and for Paul, there is the attempt to find the meaning of his death and a faith which will offset the fear that he has died in vain." Kirkus

Booklist 47:174 Ja 1 '51

"There's a subtlety here, if not without artifice, which will attract a more discerning, feminine audience."
Kirkus 18:616 O 1 '50 180w

"Sensitive characterizations, warm human romance, and good writing make this novel worth while. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 10w
New Yorker 26:150 N 25 '50 90w

"Like all serious fiction this novel is one in which each reader will find and make his own interpretations. It is enough, I think, to say that the book deserves to be read slowly, seriously and thoughtfully. Only so can the reader discover for himself what Miss Shedd has to say to him." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 24 '50 900w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. Lift up your heart. 308p $3 McGraw

248 Conduct of life. Christian life 50-14249

An inspirational book by the author Peace of Soul (Book Review Digest 1949). Monsignor Sheen gives advice on the growth of spiritual power which will lead to greater happiness.

Booklist 47:55 O 1 '50

"An out and out Catholic book, but many another will want to read this book, for when Fulton Sheen speaks people listen; when he writes, people read."
+ Kirkus 18:600 O 1 '50 220w

"Although Monsignor Sheen writes as a Roman Catholic, a large part of what he has to say will find agreement among readers of other faiths." N. K. B.
+ N Y Times p43 S 10 '50 410w

SHELDON, RICHARD. Poor prisoner's defense. 243p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 50-10147

Mystery story.

Booklist 47:98 N 1 '50
Kirkus 18:372 Jl 1 '50 110w

"The suspense is superbly maintained."
+ New Repub 123:20 N 20 '50 80w

"What could have been a most dramatic and intriguing story is told pedantically with an overabundance of legal detail. Nevertheless the story itself forces the reader to plow through its obstacles."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 3 '50 200w

"Most of the story moves at a leisurely British pace. However, if you don't insist on breathless speed, the minute behind-scenes details of the English legal system at work are entertaining in their own right. What's more, the piling on of convincing details eventually results in a whirlwind finish." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p13 D 24 '50 150w

"The slow-seeming pace is deceiving; there are suspense and urgency behind it." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 5 '50 70w

" 'Poor Prisoner's Defense' should satisfy even the most hardened mystery story fan." L. W. A.
+ Springf'd Republican p4D O 22 '50 120w

SHELDON, WILLIAM HERBERT, and others. Varieties of delinquent youth; an introduction to constitutional psychiatry. 899p il $8 Harper

364.363 Defective and delinquent classes. Juvenile delinquency. Psychology, Pathological 49-11847

"The author attributes juvenile delinquency to a single causal factor—biological irresponsibility. Sheldon would argue that delinquency is the outgrowth of the weakening of the human stock. An antithesis of the Freudian method, Sheldon's approach is that behavior and personality are closely related to the physical structure. He probes the human body instead of the mind. Our whole society is delinquent, Sheldon writes, in that it is allowing bad reproduction to drive out good." (San Francisco Chronicle) Contains case histories of 200 delinquent males. Index.

"Because of the abnormal inclusiveness of Sheldon's concept of delinquency—a cataloguing of impairments, insufficiencies, gross deviations—it is hard to see what contribution to the understanding of civil delinquency is made. His concept has the wrong label, it seems to me. He should have talked about constitutional deviation and have left out code violation. The book should have been named The Varieties of Deviant Youth and should have stopped short of including legal delinquency in the Index of Disappointingness." W. C. Reckless
Am J Soc 56:124 Jl '50 950w

"In his fourth and latest book Dr. Sheldon continues a project so ambitious, so tenderly and thoughtfully conceived, so energetically executed, so peculiarly American that it is no wonder that a place has been claimed for him as the most interesting descendant in the line of William James." Gerald Sykes

SHELDON, W. H.—Continued
+ Nation 171:318 O 7 '50 1250w

"A highly technical and involved volume written primarily for psychologists, anthropologists and medical men, this book is thoroughly documented with photographs, diagrams and case histories." Phil Mezey
+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 D 11 '49 230w

"Sheldon's empirical data may be accurate enough but his methods of generalizing them are statistically naive. Conclusions are drawn throughout the volume from a direct comparison of the differences of the means of his various samples of delinquent and normal populations. Nowhere does he apply any of the current tests for measuring the statistical significance and predictive validity of these differences. But when he comes to discuss the more complex problems of institutional structure and function, scientific caution is forgotten. Here opinions ranging over a wide gamut of human knowledge are set forth with a pontifical finality and emotional violence that have no place in scientific discourse." H. E. Jensen
— Social Forces 29:105 O '50 1250w

"We are impelled to comment that the turbulent stream of the author's brilliant mind has poured out only a meager minnow or two of explanation of the causes of juvenile delinquency and a whole school of trail-confusing red herring." Sheldon and Eleanor Glueck
Survey 86:215 Ap '50 850w

SHELLABARGER, SAMUEL. King's cavalier. 377p $3 Little 49-50409

"Tale of a young cavalier who turns against the other members of his family who join forces with the Bourbon conspiracy against Francis I of France in 1523. He enters the king's service, becomes involved with the beautiful Anne, who is a secret agent for England in the plot, is accused of treason, and nearly loses his head." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 46:113; 159 D 1 '49; Ja 1 '50

"An engrossing novel of 16th century France with authentic background and credible characters."
+ Bookmark 9:108 F '50 40w

"A simple, bracing, un-mental exercise which should rank A on a Legion of Decency fiction list because the characters definitely prefer sword-play to sex." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 170:473 Mr '50 260w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p7X Ja 15 '50 450w

"This story rates well above the mill run of historical romances because of the quality of its writing. Mr. Shellabarger has put together a well knit, closely integrated story, avoiding everything that does not contribute to the forward motion of that story. . . The plot is neither too complicated nor too contrived. There are few surprises; in fact, the reader can nearly always anticipate what's coming next, but in spite of that there is no lack of suspense; the reader always wants to know just how it will happen. . . Samuel Shellabarger has woven in enough of thrills, of colorful, convincing characters, and amusing incidents to make this book about as good a piece of light reading as the year is likely to produce." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 15 '50 550w

"Samuel Shellabarger combines intensive study with the ability to create romance in the best Dumas tradition. His 'King's Cavalier' may lack a little of the mounting interest of his 'Captain from Castile' and 'Prince of Foxes'—possibly because sympathy for the King and his cause has to be rather palpably bolstered, and because the Cavalier who defended it is less breathtaking than the heroes of the other novels. . . A reader who might consider himself beyond sword-play fiction can hardly deny the value of the background of European sixteenth-century psychology and scenes in French chateaux, Lyons, and Geneva; while one who might feel delayed by so much background will accept it for the plenitude of action. Nearly everyone, in brief, ought to be happy."
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 12 '50 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '50

"Faster paced and more exciting reading, than its predecessors, Captain from Castile and Prince of Foxes. But somehow, good entertainment though it is, there is loss in perceptive awareness of period and characters, in quality of presentation, due, perhaps, to the emphasis on picaresque adventure romance."
+ — Kirkus 17:608 N 1 '49 250w

Reviewed by E. B. Davis
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 8 '50 550w

"Mr. Shellabarger goes light on character and description, heavy on plot; if you miss a page or two, you are apt to find that you have lost the thread. . . The behavior of the characters seems to be governed by other books and movies rather than by living people. Working at this second remove from reality would seem to reduce novel writing to a sort of expert paper-doll cutting. Well, Mr. Shellabarger cuts expertly, and it is fun watching him for a while. Certain rules are strictly followed; no lurid sex or torture scenes." John Brooks
N Y Times p5 Ja 8 '50 750w

New Yorker 25:85 Ja 14 '50 100w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 22 '50 600w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ja 21 '50 550w

"Mr. Shellabarger is a scholar. Not only does he contrive vivid scenes and live characters—often all good or all bad—but his detailed knowledge of those times cloaks this tale of olden days with authenticity and enables him to avoid anachronisms. 'The King's Cavalier,' a Literary Guild selection, is serious work made to seem spontaneous by the author's imagination and enthusiasm, and tops of its kind." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p3D Ja 22 '50 420w

Time 55:86 Ja 9 '50 390w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Ja '50

SHEPHARD, ESTHER (MRS C. E. SHEPHARD). Cowherd and the sky maiden. 80p il $4 Pacific Rim pubs, 10780 Ridgeview av, San Jose, Calif.
811

"Mrs. Shephard's book is, she explains 'a retelling, in verse (decorated with rhyme and assonance) of an ancient Chinese legend; with an after-piece explaining the background of the legend.' The story is the familiar one of the sky maiden who came to earth, wed a mortal, and after some years was summoned back to heaven, leaving him and their two children to mourn." San Francisco Chronicle

"One of the most delightful of all Chinese legends. . . Mrs. Shephard has recounted the tale in felicitous verse, illustrated by old drawings and supplemented by notes. The book is exceptionally beautiful in design, the cover outlined in bamboo." Dorothy Graham
+ Cath World 171:479 S '50 190w

"Miss Shephard's long poem is not technically expert, but its naïve prose cadence and picturesque primitive quality are appropriate to the subject. The prose afterword is enthralling. Fresh material and an unspoiled enthusiasm are brought to the effort of illuminating the subject of Chinese legend and poetry." J. N. North
+ Poetry 76:359 S '50 170w

"In the after-piece Mrs. Shephard gives considerable attention to Chinese writing, village customs, the calendar and its reform, kitchen gods, and many other matters. An interesting section is her setting of two poems in Chinese characters, each with its English meaning adjoining." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 14 '50 160w

"Esther Shephard retells this story in verse, with the forthright naivete of a Chinese shadowplay in a country courtyard. It is one of the right ways of telling it. . . Illustrations, from Chinese paintings and woodblocks, are well reproduced." Jeremy Ingalls

+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 My 20 '50 280w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p12C Je 11 '50 120w

SHEPHERD, HILTON D., and others. Introduction to modern business. 563p il $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

658 Business. Industrial management 50-8557

"An introductory course in business training—how business is organized, managed and controlled, the interrelationships among the various departments, and how each department contributes to the operation of the organization. A major objective is to assist the student to orient himself in the business world, and each section dealing with a particular phase is followed by vocational guidance material to enable him to consider it as a possible career." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 75:1297 Ag '50 70w

School & Society 71:400 Je 24 '50 50w

SHEPHERD, WALTER BRADLEY. New survey of science. 511p il $4.75 Harcourt

509 Science—History 50-5930

"A thorough revision of Science Marches on" (Book Review Digest 1939) with the addition of two chapters and a preface. Index.

"Here is so much original thinking, together with the richly illustrated thesis that logical, orderly thinking is necessary if mankind is to understand properly how material, physical objects and relationships can be interwoven for teleological purposeful ends." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 My 13 '50 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 16 '50 60w

Wis Lib Bul 46:14 Ap '50

SHERMAN, MRS EDITH (BISHOP). Bright college year. 274p $2.50 Doubleday

50-9354

"Jan Jones comes from Iowa to a big eastern woman's college for her freshman year and experiences the usual class activities, from hazing, dates, new roommate problems and working for a scholarship." Wis Lib Bul

Horn Bk 26:483 N '50 50w

+ Kirkus 18:358 Jl 1 '50 160w

"Girls 12-16 will enjoy vicariously a life all wish to share." Eleanor Kidder

Library J 75:1675 O 1 '50 110w

"The excitement and exhilaration as well as the uncertainties of freshman year are well recaptured; high school girls will enjoy the enthusiastic descriptions of all the college rites, traditions and festivities." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 22 '50 110w

"A better than average school story, based on the author's first hand acquaintance with college girls at Wellesley. For the high school girl looking forward to her first year at college."

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:28 S '50

SHERMAN, FREDERICK C. Combat command; the American aircraft carriers in the Pacific war; with a pref. by William F. Halsey. 427p il maps $5 Dutton

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. Airplane carriers 50-5131

"A compact, one-volume history of the entire naval war in the Pacific, from Pearl Harbor to the surrender, including enough on the land fighting to keep the perspective clear." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:217 Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler

Chicago Sun p6S F 8 '50 500w

"It is pleasant and instructive to read this fast-moving history of the Pacific naval war which pulls no punches. Adm. Sherman is certainly qualified for the job he has undertaken." Lloyd Wendt

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 29 '50 450w

"Most of the incidents related in unfolding this history of the most titanic war the world has ever witnessed, have previously appeared in more or less authentically described accounts; but here we have them assembled in a continuous narrative that holds the reader's interest." F. L. Oliver

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15 '50 490w

Kirkus 17:641 N 15 '49 190w

"Like many of the other war memoirs which have appeared recently, this account fails to take sufficient note of simultaneous events and actions involving other branches of the armed services." Donald Wasson

Library J 74:1903 D 15 '49 100w

"It is salted, naturally, with the admiral's recollections and gives full value to the contributions of the aircraft carriers, which were a dominant weapon from the first and of decisive importance throughout the last two years of the war. The admiral includes his own crisp comments on the methods adopted and the lessons to be learned, but in general the aim is to review the whole story and leave the conclusions to the reader. If the result adds little that is distinctively new, it provides a useful and accurate summary." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 5 '50 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p6 F 5 '50 1150w

Reviewed by Bernard Rawlings

Pacific Affairs 23:336 S '50 280w

Reviewed by J. E. Pegues

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 19 '50 700w

SHERMAN, HAROLD MORROW. You can stop drinking. 245p $2.49 Creative age

178.6 Alcoholism 50-14105

"A book about drinking which is self-help in approach and therapy and except for the suggestion that you contact a doctor, a minister or a friend for additional assistance, leaves it largely up to you. Why you drink; the duality of your conscious and unconscious self; what childhood hangovers precipitate; the inferiorities, insecurities you are escaping; the adjustment of a sex problem; elimination of fear, and time and again the efficacy of a strong faith in God—this the coverage." Kirkus

"One questions whether this is forceful enough, or professional enough to do much good."

Kirkus 18:446 Ag 1 '50 120w

"The book is not to be dismissed as fanatical or censorious. It is constructively and lucidly helpful and even sympathetic to prevailing sophistication. The numerous instances of difficulty that are cited leave no doubt as to the gravity of the problem." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p45 S 24 '50 270w

Reviewed by Yvelin Gardner

Survey 85:570 D '50 240w

SHERMAN, RAY WESLEY. How to win an argument with a communist. 251p $2.50 Dutton

335 Communism. Utopias 50-14098

"After discussing classic utopias, the author considers utopian-communistic societies in America: Plymouth Colony, Fourierism, Icaria of Cabet, Shakers, Oneida Community, Harmonists, etc. He finds in all that they inevitably lead to dictatorship. . . Communism is then studied, its methods shown, the Communist Manifesto (text complete) critically examined, and demonstrated to be one more unworkable utopia with its noncommitant dictatorship." (Library J) Annotated bibliography. No index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50

Kirkus 18:405 Jl 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 110w

"Interesting especially in the sixty pages devoted to our early idealistic communities, brightly if somewhat crudely written, this is not a profound book. It tells, one feels, but part of the story." Frances Witherspoon
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 N 12 '50 460w

"This is no subtle academic volume. It operates on a down-to earth level; it does not engage in subtleties and sometimes it overplays a point. But the sum total is commendable and constructive. There is no particularly polished writing here; it's the sort of book a hard-working editor of a country weekly might put together—angry, hard-boiled, factual, and honest. Valuable ammunition for the battle of moral survival." Martin Ebon
+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 D 9 '50 230w

"A book which might well be read by every one who is not quite sure what communism is, and wherein it differs from democracy." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p12C S 17 '50 240p

SHINN, GLENN LEVI. Routing and misrouting of freight; rights, obligations, liabilities, explained and clarified. 177p $4 Simmons-Boardman

656 Railroads—Freight. Shipment of goods 49-11781

"This volume is a thorough discussion of the rights of shippers and carriers, respectively, in connection with the routing of freight shipments. There are separate chapters dealing with shipments routed by the shipper, partially routed shipments, and unrouted shipments. Additional chapters deal with ambiguous and conflicting routing instructions, and with indefinite and incomplete routing. Consideration is given to the effect of embargoes on routing rights and duties; to liability for misrouting; and to the measure of damages in misrouting cases." (Ann Am Acad) Table of cases. Index.

"The use of stylized diagrams enables the reader to follow closely the intricacies of routing principles. The book should be useful to all students of traffic and of traffic law. Experienced traffic men, although familiar with much that is in the book, will doubtless find in it information on some matters which have not come within the range of their experience." D. P. Locklin
+ Ann Am Acad 268:237 Mr '50 270w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 26 '50 20w

SHIPMAN, NATALIE (MRS GURDON SALTONSTALL WORCESTER). Once upon a summer. 254p $2 Bouregy & Curl, inc, 22 E. 60th st, N.Y. 22

50-5843

A novel describing two couples' summer in a Berkshire village. Anson realizes his spinal disease is fatal and both he and his wife Christina learn to face death philosophically. Seeing their bravery, the second couple, Dan and Kay, begin to accept life as mature individuals.

Booklist 46:233 Mr 15 '50

"Still in the soap opera field, this however has none of the obnoxious qualities of that type and its lack of vulgarity, sensationalism and triteness is welcome in romance."
Kirkus 18:3 Ja 1 '50 110w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Ap '50

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Lightfoot; the story of an Indian boy; il. by Tom Two-Arrows. 122p $2 Viking

50-10128

Story of an Iroquois Indian boy from babyhood to his fourteenth year. Includes much of Iroquois legend, history, and customs. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 47:121 N 15 '50

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst*
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 26 '50 140w

Kirkus 18:465 Ag 15 '50 130w

"Recommended for superior readers in fourth and fifth grades." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 75:2083 D 1 '50 60w

"A remarkably good Indian story." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 12 '50 140w

"Native legends are deftly unfolded in the course of the tale, and there are no dressed-up adventures—only the quiet, though stimulating, ones that an Indian lad necessarily encountered in the process of growing up."
+ New Yorker 26:181 D 2 '50 70w

"Like all of Miss Shippen's books, it is told in crystal-clear prose, and it has dignity and authenticity. The drawings, by an Indian who fought in the Second World War, are in strong, clear black lines. It is the kind of record that will bring pleasure and have value for many years."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:65 N 11 '50 60w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Passage to America; the story of the great migrations. 211p $2.50 Harper

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. U.S.—Foreign population 50-12860

"After an introductory reference to the first two great migrations of history, that of the Germans into the Roman Empire in the fourth and fifth centuries, and that of the Mongolians under Genghis Khan in the thirteenth century, the book is given over entirely to the three-century migration of people to America. The emphasis is actually, however, on the time following the Revolution, establishing first the fact that English blood and custom are the largest factors in our culture." (Horn Bk) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '50 30w

"The narrative moves easily and smoothly, and the book should arouse the interest of anyone over twelve or thirteen who looks into it." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 26:487 N '50 160w

"Of necessity the attempts to place exact geographical location and establish 'national' characteristics result in generalizations, but this is stimulating for all young Americans, at home or in the classroom."
+ Kirkus 18:521 S 1 '50 170w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p14 D 31 '50 220w

"A scholarly and imaginative account."
+ New Yorker 26:191 D 2 '50 80w

"'Passage to America' was not written as propaganda, yet its very nature makes it a weapon fitted to any hand that is raised in the fight for freedom. . . It is good in these days to find a book that in strong but not bitter style denounces tyranny and, without any frantic flag-waving, upholds the democratic way of life." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 33:53 O 21 '50 320w

SHIRER, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. The traitor. 374p $3 Farrar, Straus
50-10771

"Obviously based on the story of William Best, Axis Sally and others who worked for the Germans against the Allies in the recent war, this is a study in character. Somewhat of a thriller, it is nevertheless a convincing account of how a man can become a traitor, and while the man is as contemptible as all such creatures are, at least his actions are made understandable." Library J

———

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50

"My own earnest wish is that the author had stayed away from fiction and stuck to the reporting which he knows how to do. In this novel it is the informational rather than the fictional quality which seems impressive." Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 26 '50 360w

"In the field of fiction Mr. Shirer is, understandably enough, not at home. But though his book does not qualify as a distinguished novel, it is highly readable, and its central theme is of sufficient dramatic impetus and psychological attraction to hold the reader's interest from the first to the last page." Ernest Pisko

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 N 21 '50 480w

"In exposition, in description, in reporting, The Traitor vigorously gives us back bleak memories; in plot structure and characterization, it bears the marks of a partially mastered technique in the making."

Kirkus 18:568 S 15 '50 250w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

Library J 75:1824 O 15 '50 80w

"The story is not new; a great many foreign correspondents tried to tell it at the time. Shirer himself told it well in Berlin Diary. But it bears repeating, and in novel form it has a powerful impact, especially at this particular moment in history when so many of us have forgotten so much that happened so recently. . . This book will disturb you, but you must read it!" Robert St John

+ New Repub 123:18 N 13 '50 1200w

"[Shirer's] first venture in fiction, is a powerful, absorbing, extremely provocative novel. It tells a swift-paced, dramatic story that keeps the reader under constantly increasing tension until the final page." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 5 '50 1250w

"As a primer of European history, between 1932 and 1945, this book is excellent. The author of 'Berlin Diary' knows the Third Reich's shrewd, ruthless strategy as well as the vacillating politics of the Western powers, and his presentation never lacks fire. Often, however, he seems so overwhelmed by his materials that his characters change into mere mouthpieces of different shades of opinion." Richard Plant

+ — N Y Times p50 N 12 '50 270w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 8 '50 700w

SHOEMAKER, SAMUEL MOOR. Freedom and faith. 125p $1.75 Revell

261 Liberty. Sociology, Christian 49-50160

"Nearly all the material in this book has been given on [the author's] 'Gems For Thought' broadcasts." In it the rector of Calvary Episcopal Church, New York, attempts to show how the ills of our time may be cured by the redemptive power of God in Christ.

———

"The chapter on the essentials of democracy is good, and one can only wish the author could have stuck to such a positive analytic note throughout." Frederick Wilson

+ — Churchman 164:18 Mr 15 '50 240w

Reviewed by Roger Pippett

N Y Times p20 Ja 15 '50 200w

SHONDELL, TATE, and TREMPE, ED. Teach your dog new tricks. (Whittlesey house publication) 118p il $2.50 McGraw

636.7 Dogs—Training Agr50-446

"How to train your dog, break his bad habits and teach him useful and entertaining tricks is explained in concise text and illustrative photographs by experienced dog trainers." (Bookmark) No index.

———

Booklist 46:330 Jl 1 '50

Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 30w

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 10 '50 110w

"Excellent book for any library." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 75:1199 Jl '50 70w

SHOOLMAN, REGINA LENORE, and SLATKIN, CHARLES ELI. Six centuries of French master drawings in America [foreword by Charles Sterling]. 256p $7.50 Oxford

741.944 Drawings 50-6159

One hundred forty-five drawings by French artists selected from American collections, both private and public. The text contains catalog data and other information for each drawing, followed by critical notes.

———

"While only the frontispiece, a Watteau, is in color, showing the tint of the paper and the color of the chalk, the quality of the reproductions is such as to indicate well the original media; and in all cases these are indicated in the text." David Burnham

Commonweal 52:50 Ap 21 '50 600w

"An important addition to an art library."

+ Kirkus 18:154 Mr 1 '50 150w

"A treasury of reproductions of drawings in public and private collections so full of variety that everyone's taste can be satisfied and delighted. . . . A handsome volume, worth the price." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:1189 Jl '50 80w

"The editors have provided for both the casual reader—or looker—and the student by equipping each illustration with an informative commentary and an elaborate bibliography. This text is particularly useful because many of the drawings have been reproduced, if at all, in obscure sales catalogues or periodicals. The choice of the drawings is naturally something that no two people can be expected to agree on, any more than any two people can be expected to select the same poems for an anthology. Yet much as this reviewer misses certain favorites . . . there are very few drawings (aside from some obviously ambitious misattributions) that he would like to eliminate." A. H. Mayor

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 Je 3 '50 490w

Reviewed by Denys Sutton

Spec 184:326 S 22 '50 750w

"American collections are rich in drawings of the French school, and it was an excellent idea to collect in one volume a group of 150 of the finest examples. They can be useful not only for reference but also for study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p551 S 1 '50 1150w

SHORE, WILLIAM. Witch of spring. 348p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy
50-9196

Romantic novel of New Orleans in 1835.

———

"The dramatics evolved by Mr. Shore have little of the zest of the Yerby creations. He lacks an eye for detail, an ear for conversation, a verve for characterization. 'The Witch of Spring' consequently is stilted and unconvincing." Lloyd Wendt

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 22 '50 260w

"A big, sticky historical, soggy with sex, murder and magnolias."

— Kirkus 18:369 Jl 1 '50 200w

SHORE, WILLIAM—Continued

"Overburdened with stale characters and awkward descriptions of their puppet-like performances. . . Mr. Shore reveals a certain talent for handling straight action. If he had carried his slave revolution to a conclusion, describing for the reader the violent fury of such an undertaking, his story might have achieved some success." J. M. Grant

— + Sat R of Lit 33:55 O 7 '50 150w

SHORT, ERNEST HENRY. Painter in history. new ed 452p 114il $6 Norton

750.9 Painters. Painting—History [49-11091]

A history of painting from prehistoric times to the present. Illustrations, in black and white, are grouped at the end of the volume with references to pertinent pages in the text. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50

"This complete study of art is deeply significant for the art student because of the vast amount of material covered as well as the interesting way in which it is written."

+ School Arts 49:4a Mr '50 250w

SHORTLEY, GEORGE HIRAM, and WILLIAMS, DUDLEY. Physics; fundamental principles for students of science and engineering. 2v il v 1 $6; v2 $7.35; to schools v 1 $4.50; v2 $5.50 Prentice-Hall

530 Physics (50-7129)

"Designed as an introduction to college physics, but the student is presumed to have had a course in high-school physics and introductory college courses in chemistry and mathematics. The authors are members of the faculty of Ohio State University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1195 Jl '50 140w (Review of v 1)

"A rigorous, comprehensive treatment of basic physics. The subject scope of the book is wide, and the discussions of most topics are full."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:61 Jl '50

"The authors have kept in mind the needs of advanced students and of professional scientists and engineers for a reference treatment of the fundamentals of physics that is both lucid and accurate."

+ School & Society 72:31 Jl 8 '50 30w

SHOWALTER, MARY EMMA. Mennonite community cookbook. 494p col pl $3.50; de luxe ed thumb indexed $4.50 Winston

641.5 Cookery 50-8465

Collection of traditional Mennonite recipes which have been arranged by a home economist so that they may be used by the present-day cook. Some old favorites have been dropped, but salads and other modern dishes have been added. The book is authorized by the Mennonite community association, Scottdale, Pa. Index.

Booklist 46:348 Jl 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '50

Reviewed by Elizabeth Guilford

J Home Econ 42:826 D '50 250w

"Not a cookbook for the beginning cook or the small family. But a superb cookbook for the big family kitchen and the housewife who still thinks in terms of a bountiful table. Particularly enticing are the breads and cakes."

+ Kirkus 18:348 Je 15 '50 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 75:2153 D 15 '50 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 1 '50 600w

"The 'Mennonite Community Cookbook,' in addition to being an outstanding collection of interesting recipes, is so unusual in its text and design as to be a welcome addition to cookbook collectors, of whom there is an increasing number and whose joy over an exciting cookbook equals that of the more familiar collector of 'antiques.'" Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 30 '50 500w

SHRIBER, MRS IONE (SANDBERG). Never say die. 218p $2.50 Rinehart

50-12147

Mystery story.

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50

Kirkus 18:440 Ag 1 '50 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 O 29 '50 120w

"A writer sensitive to the value of words, Mrs. Shriber spins her tale adeptly and with mounting excitement. It may not be her best book, but it is absorbing and suspenseful." Elizabeth Bullock

+ N Y Times p46 N 12 '50 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 19 '50 80w

"Disappointing."

Sat R of Lit 33:55 O 28 '50 60w

SHUB, BORIS. The choice. 205p $2.75 Duell

947.084 Russia—Politics and government 50-10127

"Were it not for Shub's Army experience repatriating Soviet DP's and as political advisor to RIAS, the American radio in Berlin, his thesis that a wedge may yet be driven between the Soviet leaders and large disaffected groups might appear ingenuous. He proposes a Presidential proclamation guaranteeing freedom and democratic institutions to all who renounce Politburo control, supplemented by a UN Human Rights resolution, and a high-powered propaganda campaign." Library J

Booklist 47:69; 93 O 15 '50; N 1 '50

"The appeal of the book is not limited to its debatable recommendation. The author describes the very effective psychological warfare carried on by the American radio station in Berlin, with which he was associated." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 5 '50 550w

"This excellent book, if it gets the attention it deserves, will accelerate a wholesome trend." James Rorty

+ Commonweal 53:100 N 3 '50 550w

Kirkus 18:577 S 15 '50 270w

Reviewed by Scott Adams

Library J 75:1658 O 1 '50 130w

"'The Choice' is more than an absorbing journalistic record. It is an exhortation to make the best possible use, before it is too late, of the weapon that modern communications technique has placed at the top in the arsenal of democracy, the weapon of the world." Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 22 '50 950w

"All too often discussion of how the present tension between the Soviet Union and the United States can be ended, ignores the key variable which Boris Shub pushes into the foreground: the 200,000,000 people of Stalin's Russia. Mr. Shub's thesis, briefly put, is that mass disaffection exists in the U.S.S.R. and that it is the Achilles' heel of the Kremlin. That is why this is a valuable book." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p5 N 5 '50 500w

New Yorker 26:154 N 25 '50 180w

Reviewed by A. Z. Carr

Sat R of Lit 33:39 N 25 '50 600w

Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 350w

SHULMAN, MAX. Sleep till noon; il. by Bill Crawford. 191p $2 Doubleday
50-6849

A burlesque on modern middle-class morality, by the author of Barefoot Boy With Cheek (Book Review Digest 1943).

"This book is perfect reading for the inhabitants of a crazy world. It comforts us with the thought that in the realm of Shulman's imagination things are even zanier." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p9 Ap 16 '50 220w

"Shulman can be, and has been, funny. But one can get enough of him, and, for me, this is it." Lloyd Wendt
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 9 '50 230w

Kirkus 18:74 F 1 '50 160w

"No doubt it will be welcomed by readers who relish slapstick and striptease in black and white."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 14 '50 80w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
— N Y Times p43 Ap 16 '50 180w

"A number of thoroughly mildewed quips, of the type that faculty advisers try, not always successfully, to restrain their young charges from sneaking into college comic magazines, have been dusted off by Mr. Shulman for his latest literary project and strung together on a slim narrative chain."
— New Yorker 26:122 Ap 22 '50 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 30 '50 220w

Reviewed by Lee Rogow
Sat R of Lit 33:37 Ag 19 '50 270w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 23 '50 90w

"Here and there Shulman throws in a few new twists. Too often, however, the jokes just lie there; and the arch, in humor as in feet, can be terribly painful when it falls flat."
— + Time 55:99 Ap 10 '50 350w

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SICRE, JOSE GOMEZ. See Gomez Sicre, J.

SIDGWICK, NEVIL VINCENT. Chemical elements and their compounds. 2v 854;850p $14 Oxford 546 Chemistry [50-4087]

"The author states: 'This book is an attempt to discuss in detail the properties of the elements and their compounds in the light of modern ideas of atomic and molecular structure. . . The basis of classification is, of course, the Periodic Table, the simplest arrangement for exhibiting the relations of the elements. . . The references I have tried to bring up to the summer of 1948. . .' Volume I takes up the first five groups of the Periodic Table. Volume II is devoted to groups 6, 7, and 8." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"The book is a readable, indeed for the chemist, a fascinating account of the chemistry of the elements and their compounds in the revealing light of recent knowledge. Its correlation of hitherto disconnected and heterogeneous data has revivified the whole subject. It does not aim to replace the encyclopedias, but it does, neverthelesss, afford a surprisingly complete picture of general descriptive chemistry." A. B. Lamb
+ Am Chem Soc J 72:5353 N '50 490w

"In achieving his stated purpose Prof. Sidgwick is extraordinarily successful. His flair for writing is well known and the present volume maintains his high standards. Sidgwick's books have always been pioneering works for which there was a genuine need. . . A real need has existed for a comprehensive inorganic chemistry reference work of purchasable size, yet of advanced content. This is the first available book in English meeting these modest qualifications." C. D. Hurd
+ Chem & Eng N 28:3724 O 23 '50 460w

SIDNEY, WILLIAM, pseud. See Dieterle, W.

SIEDEL, FRANK. Ohio story. 288p $2.50 World pub.
920 Ohio—Biography

Based on a radio program of the same name this book contains popularly written sketches of some of the famous people who have called Ohio home. Included are stories of Annie Oakley (sharpshooter); Procter (of Procter and Gamble); Peltier (astronomer); Henry Sherwin (paint manufacturer); Lew Reese (Scio pottery); and others.

Kirkus 18:200 Mr 15 '50 250w

"The jacket of the book remarks that the radio programs on which this book is based have been broadcasting since 1947 and have proved to be among the most popular in the midwest. The prose of the book follows radio script style closely; the stories contain few dates or qualifications and a great deal of imaginary dialogue." Stewart Holbrook
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Jl 16 '50 400w

"In radio circles, the results have been highly regarded. However, Mr. Siedel's scripts do not appear to good advantage in print. Despite the reworking they have undergone for publication purposes, they retain all too strong a flavor of the broadcasting studio." Robert Hagy
N Y Times p28 My 7 '50 170w

"Entertaining and informative collection." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 33:24 O 28 '50 140w

SIEGFRIED, ANDRE. Switzerland: a democratic way of life; tr. from the French by Edward Fitzgerald. 223p maps $3 Duell
914.94 Switzerland 50-9378

"With the training of an economist, the predilection of a historian, and the point of view of a humanist, the author synthesizes a picture of modern Switzerland out of the economic and historical factors and the divergent human elements which have gone into the making of the country." (Publisher's note) Maps. Index.

Booklist 47:59 O 1 '50

"The book is a very fortunate change from the bold and superficial judgments of many international investigators of this small democracy. It is the honest opinion of an economist, conscientious and penetrating; of a tireless traveller who, having sojourned in many countries has studied their structure, mentality, and psychology, and therefore finds himself in a position to judge and compare. In the solid examination he has made of Switzerland, the Swiss themselves will find much to learn." Laure Rièse
+ Canadian Forum 30:120 Ag '50 600w

Reviewed by Leon Harpole
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 29 '50 70w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 22 '50 500w

Current Hist 19:229 O '50 30w

"A tightly packed but very readable and impartial account." Laurence Haward
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 11 '50 450w

"To his numerous studies on the countries of the Old and New World Siegfried has now added this pertinent volume on Switzerland. It is a well merited tribute to a people about whom Americans and Europeans know too little, a people who offer an admirable example to this distracted generation." Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 10 '50 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 26 '50 250w

"In general this study is only moderately interesting and marred by several faults. One is the author's frequent attempts to achieve

SIEGFRIED, ANDRE—Continued
nuance. . . For such a brief book (200 pages) [the author] is often repetitious, and has been ill-served by a remarkably inept translation." Robert Halsband
Sat R of Lit 33:48 S 16 '50 320w

"M. Siegfried has travelled widely, and his books on foreign countries enjoy a high regard in France. Switzerland has obviously depressed him. He has not even had the spirit to criticise the country. He simply sets forth at length the least interesting of facts. In not one single chapter does he successfully dissimulate his boredom. . . Historians of post-war economics will not, however, be wholly disappointed. The exceptional year of 1946 in Swiss industry and trade is here analysed in detail; for example, the proportion of watches made entirely in one factory is compared with the proportion made in parts in several. But on the whole this book is like the science of arithmetic, in that it offers rather little to engage a mind that has no aptitude for figures." Maurice Cranston
— + Spec 184:254 F 24 '50 450w

"English visitors to Switzerland are concerned to reach the lakes and mountains; they have no eyes for the politics of the country. The admirable survey by M. André Siegfried should help them to avoid this error. His graceful book is an attempt to capture the spirit of Switzerland and to explain how it works, an analysis at once economic, political and social."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 3 '50 1000w

SIEPMANN, CHARLES ARTHUR. Radio, television and society. 410p $4.75; college ed $3.50 Oxford

384.5 Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting 50-8505

"In this book an attempt has been made to describe the facts about radio and television and to combine those facts with a consideration of the social and psychological effects of broadcasting. The first purpose of the book is to bring to the general reader the history of a cultural revolution and to show what has been discovered by research concerning the effects of radio and television upon our tastes, opinions, and values. The second purpose is to deal with broadcasting as a reflection of our time and to throw light upon the problems of free speech, propaganda, public education, our relations with the rest of the world, and upon the concept of democracy itself." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by E. E. Smead
Am Pol Sci R 44:1041 D '50 300w
Booklist 47:35 S 15 '50
Bookmark 10:6 O '50 60w

"The most comprehensive and by far the best treatment of the subject to date." James Rorty
+ Commonweal 52:537 S 8 '50 2500w

"This is a forceful, intelligent book which is addressed to a variety of potential audiences. For the student of government-industry relations it contains a careful and observant account of the development of federal policy since the inception of American broadcasting, and it provides, so far as I know, the first full comparison of the American with the Canadian and the British experience." David Riesman
+ Nation 171:366 O 21 '50 1900w

Reviewed by Saul Carson
New Repub 123:21 O 23 '50 340w

Reviewed by Jack Gould
N Y Times p25 O 8 '50 600w

"Mr. Siepmann's is not a 'popularly' written book by which I mean that it requires serious and close attention. His arguments are lucid but so carefully presented that the reader must think step by step with the author." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 23 '50 950w

Reviewed by R. L. Shayon
Sat R of Lit 33:11 D 16 '50 800w
School & Society 72:96 Ag 5 '50 40w

"The influx of new mass communication media during the past half century has been staggering. . . Charles A. Siepmann has studied this malestrom and, combining an ample supply of background, philosophy, and wisdom, has returned with an account both readable and profound." Hillier Krieghbaum
+ Survey 86:516 N '50 300w

SIEVERS, ALLEN MORRIS. Has market capitalism collapsed? a critique of Karl Polanyi's new economics. 387p $4.75 Columbia univ. press

330.9 Capitalism. Polanyi, Karl 49-50262

"Professor Sievers devotes his thesis to the views of Professor Karl Polanyi on the rise and disintegration of the market economy (especially 'The Great Transformation' [Book Review Digest 1944]). Using Polanyi's writings as a jumping-off point, the author deals with the rise of capitalism, of money, of the machine, and of the market, the last three the capitalist trinity." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"The author has undoubtedly found merit in the study. Only in a few places can he be pictured as an apologist for Polanyi. On the whole, his criticism is balanced. He has been able to give us the story with the minimum of direct quotation." Asher Isaacs
+ Ann Am Acad 269:161 My '50 390w

"The first question concerns whether The Great Transformation is sufficiently important to justify so detailed a critique. Here a negative answer seems in order. . . Certainly, it has not assumed the status of an 'authority,' so that disciples study its text for specific answers. . . Since this is so, a more general approach to Polanyi's thought would be preferable. Has Market Capitalism Collapsed? represents the material from which a more interesting and more valuable book could be derived. . . Sievers' book is helpful, since it represents careful thought concerning the Polanyi theses and further stimulates thinking concerning the important issues involved. In general, Sievers' criticisms of The Great Transformation seem to be justified." H. M. Oliver
J Pol Econ 58:366 Ag '50 700w

"The author's own thought tends to be blurred in the technique, but the work will be useful to economists equipped and ready to challenge or, indeed, to defend, the existing order. (The work criticized seems, unfortunately, to be out of print)." J. E. Cross
Library J 75:176 F 1 '50 150w

"We should all be grateful to Professor Sievers for this thoughtful view of Polanyi's work." S. E. Harris
+ Sat R of Lit 33:39 Ja 28 '50 700w

SILVER, MAXWELL. Way to God. 303p $3 Philosophical lib.

296 Jews—Religion 50-6883

"To restate the prophetic religion of the Hebrew prophets in modern terms is the aim of Dr. Maxwell Silver in this thoughtful volume. He was prompted to the task by way of answering certain questions of his son, to whom he was giving religious instruction. His method is to examine various religious and philosophical systems (as expressed by Jeremiah, Aristotle, Lucretius, Spinoza and others) and to discuss their relative values and special contributions to man's pursuit of truth. The chapters are varied in form—some are cast as dialogues, others as narrative or exposition—and offer persuasive argument for the special validity of the prophetic Hebrew tradition." (N Y Times) Index.

"The book stands as a personal record, warm and sensitive, with its farewell word, 'God be with you, my son!' reaching to every father's heart; yet at the same time it is a lucid, critical presentation of theistic faith." E. T. Ramsdell
+ Christian Century 67:1047 S 6 '50 1050w

"Dr. Silver, who, though thoroughly trained for the rabbinate, after a few years as a religious leader turned aside to business, has written a very worthwhile volume on the problems of religion." I. G. Matthews
+ Crozer Q 27:350 O '50 1000w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p20 O 22 '50 140w

SILVETTE, HENRY (BARNABY DOGBOLT, pseud). Maiden voyage. 320p $3 Dutton 50-8566

A satire on the adventures of an American college professor in England on a fellowship grant. He was supposed to be in pursuit of material on a metaphysical poet, one William Charnelhouse. In the course of his explorations he was led astray more than once by the American who had been his shipboard companion.

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 24 '50 450w

Kirkus 18:284 My 15 '50 180w

"'Maiden Voyage' is almost as full of wise comment as it is of wisecracks. [The] performance is both crude and shrewd—and as disarming and somehow charming as an elephant dancing." F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Jl 23 '50 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
N Y Times p18 Jl 23 '50 410w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 27 '50 120w

"Dogbolt is very good with the machinery of scholarship; he strips all its gears and strews it lovingly with sand. He can write bad metaphysical quatrains that are convincing. He can tick off the Cambridge dons, the modern British poets, the American professorial gentry, to the last intoned syllable. It is a pleasure to watch him knocking these pates together gleefully, to the accompaniment of shrieks unholy from the ghost of the lecherous Charnelhouse. . . To top this, the tireless Dogbolt has yielded all through the book to a strange compulsion toward one joke, and a very dubious one." N. L. Rothman
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:25 Jl 29 '50 600w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 6 '50 120w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Snow was black; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 246p $2.75 Prentice-Hall 50-7596

"It recounts the adventures of a young tough brought up in a brothel, from the time he commits a murder for no reason at all, till he experiences a not quite believable regeneration while in prison." Library J

— Cath World 172:800 O '50 20w

"Simenon, a master of suspense, has written a novel that leaves the reader with its characters fresh in memory days after the book is finished."
+ Chicago Sun p4 My 23 '50 160w

"The book is distinguished chiefly by the pretentiousness of its conception and the falseness of its characterization." Milton Crane
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 2 '50 550w

Kirkus 18:141 Mr 1 '50 160w

"This full-length novel of life in an unnamed European town during the occupation lacks the charm and distinction of the early Maigret stories but Simenon is always a competent story-teller. . . Recommended for those who like them hard-boiled and ribald." Shirley Barker
+ — Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 80w

"The present exceptionally bleak novel could be summed up by saying that the snow is dirty in the beginning and becomes progressively blacker as the plot unfolds." Justin O'Brien
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 28 '50 500w

"The novel is excellently written and full of suspense, but the symbolism often seems strained, and at times the wallowing in the sexual and the repulsive becomes intolerable." Rene Fueloep-Miller
+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 30 '50 600w

New Yorker 26:117 My 20 '50 90w

"It is difficult to analyze a story of this nature which deals with the most obdurately sinful and base of youths without feeling a certain repugnance for it. Absorbing and shocking as it is, it cannot be redeemed by any legerdemain on the author's part by which this young man who has brought so much suffering and vileness into other people's lives is relieved of his sins on the threshold of the gallows." Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:18 My 27 '50 800w

SIMON, CHARLIE MAY (HOGUE) (MRS JOHN GOULD FLETCHER). Saturday's child. 189p $2.50 Dutton 50-8890

"Margaret and Letty Dare living in Memphis, Tennessee, were as different as sisters could be. Margaret wanted money, beautiful clothes and social position; Letty was eager for a career. The larger part of the book is concerned with their everyday life, problems and romances. Then yellow fever strikes the city and minor problems are forgotten as Letty helps to nurse the sufferers and Margaret discovers new values in life." Horn Bk

Horn Bk 26:384 S '50 70w

Kirkus 18:563 S 15 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 75:1675 O 1 '50 70w

"This is the sort of junior novel librarians pray for. It has love interest—two romances, in fact—handled without coyness, and made an incidental part of a thoroughly interesting story. And although the narrative is set in Memphis of the early Eighteen Eighties, Margaret and Letty are not period figures." M. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p42 N 19 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 N '50

SIMON, MARON J., and others. Complete garden handbook; botanical consultant: G. L. Wittroch. 451p il col pl $5 Van Nostrand
635.9 Gardening Agr50-425

Information for gardeners on planning and achieving a garden. Contents: A planting plan for your property; How to work a flower garden; Flowering plants for the home garden; Roses; Trees, shrubs, and lawns; A small orchard for the home; How to work a vegetable garden; How to buy woody plants; Garden pests and their controls; Flower arrangement; Plants for indoors; Garden aids at a glance. Index.

"An unusual feature of the book is the space given to advice on flower arrangement with generous illustrations in color. . . 'The Complete Garden Handbook' might be described as selectively comprehensive." Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 23 '50 200w

"One wonders why nothing is said about the principles of arranging the plants in a flower bed or border, about weed control in either flower or vegetable garden, and why the discussion of wild gardens is limited to precisely 5½ lines. We suspect, too, that more than one gardener will raise a skeptical eyebrow at the implication that the only sure way to get rid of dandelions is to cut them out '2 or 3 inches below the ground.' . . On the other hand, the lists of recommended plant material are generally sound, and a basically creditable job has been done in varying them to fit climatic and other cultural conditions in different parts of the country." R. S. Lemmon
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 Ap 16 '50 280w

SIMONS, HENRY CALVERT. Federal tax reform. 161p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press
336.24 Taxation—U.S. 50-6771

"Conclusions of the late Professor Simons on the federal tax structure, with the reasoning for his criticisms, and his suggestions for a comprehensive personal income tax system. There are numerous interesting comments on tax problems, including distaste for the Ruml Plan." (Current Hist) No index.

"The editor of this book in a prefatory note repeats an opinion that the important literature on public finance would take up very little space, a considerable part of which would be occupied by the work of Henry Simons. If only for its boldness of conception and brilliance of satire, this posthumous contribution of Simons' should pass muster for the exclusive circle. . . Henry Simons' parting shot at the tax system is a fitting memorial to a rare spirit, an incisive mind, and an uncompromising conscience." H. M. Groves
+ Am Econ R 40:686 S '50 950w

Current Hist 19:106 Ag '50 40w

"This posthumous essay by the late Henry C. Simons again emphasizes the clarity of his thought, as well as the often frustrating peculiarity of his assuming that the reader has a background of technical knowledge equal to his own." S. C. Sufrin
+ — Ethics 61:82 O '50 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:322 S '50 240w

SIMONSON, LEE. Art of scenic design. 174p $6 Harper
792 Theaters—Stage setting and scenery 50-7282

"A pictorial analysis of stage setting and its relation to theatrical production." (Subtitle) The study covers the period from the Renaissance to the present. Contains working drawings and photographs.

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

+ Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 30w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 23 '50 70w

"Highly recommended for theatre and art collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:870 My 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Saul Colin
+ N Y Times p25 Ap 23 '50 370w

"Lay readers may be left with the impression that it would be easier and quicker to write a new 'Hamlet' than to stage it."
New Yorker 26:75 Ag 12 '50 90w

"Mr. Simonson gives us with this fine book something which the public has wanted for a long time—a work in English which deals with scenic design, its origin and development up to our time, written by a man whose distinguished career as a designer and vast experience as producer and teacher allow him to see all the problems, historical, architectural, technical, and artistic, through the eyes of a practical stage-man." Janos Scholz
Sat R of Lit 33:11 D 9 '50 650w

"For me, of course, one of the most important contributions the book makes is its clear understanding of the designer's relationship with the director and their mutual responsibility to the success of the artistic whole of a production. We receive much valuable information, not only on the technique of building, painting, and lighting scenery (and without the ponderous terminology of a technical text) but the aesthetics of theatre as well." Ralph Alswang
+ Theatre Arts 34:8 Jl '50 280w

SIMPSON, MRS JOYCE TILLERY. Ladder to the sky; il. by Kurt Werth. 239p $3 Crowell
B or 92 50-6731

"The spidery skeleton of an oil derrick is the ladder the Robinson family plans to climb to its heart's desire, a colonial mansion. The eldest daughter tells how the locale of that mansion shifted among the boom towns of the East Texas oil fields and how its floor plan and architectural features were amended. The dream is never realized, the mansion never built, but that is incidental to the story of the ups and downs of an independent wildcatter during the boom years which followed World War I." N Y Times

Booklist 46:352 Jl 15 '50

"There's a nice family feeling here as well as much of the fascination, the excitement of a big, bright bonanza which may be here today—or gone tomorrow. Good reading."
+ Kirkus 18:128 F 15 '50 170w

"Technical aspects of oil-well drilling are presented in authentic detail, but entertainingly and with such clarity that even the layman can understand and enjoy them. . . Especially recommended for teen-agers." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 75:773 My 1 '50 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 D 10 '50 110w

"Several excellent novels have considered the drama of oil, but this is not one of them. We learn from the jacket that the book is based upon the life of Joyce Simpson's father. A factual biography of such a man might have made an absorbing story. Mrs. Simpson has failed to recognize the romance of fact, nor has she achieved a novel." Hoffman Birney
— N Y Times p39 Je 11 '50 230w

"A good-natured, rather sentimental, unpretentious sort of book." Ruth Teiser
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 26 '50 200w

SIMPSON, LOUIS. Arrivistes: poems, 1940-1948. 100p pa $2 Fine editions 811

"Louis Simpson's first collection of poems. . . The book represents the author's selection of poems written between his seventeenth and his twenty-sixth year, and may therefore be forgiven a certain unevenness of tone and manner." N Y Times

"[The author is] a young man of experience and sophistication, and his poems show a self-consciously quizzical observation of life that seems appropriate in the circumstances. There is irony here, and cleverness: there are some arresting images, some unusual and well imagined situations, and a tone which suggests at different times Beddoes, Laforgue, and the early Auden. But, almost to the reader's surprise, the result is rarely poetry. Some witty and startling lines—yes; but not a single poem of sustained effectiveness." David Daiches
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 8 '50 360w

"Displays a curious and pleasing talent, characterized by wit, intelligence and a possibly dangerous inclination to give fancy its head without counting the cost." Milton Crane
N Y Times p28 F 19 '50 420w

SIMPSON, WILLIAM DOUGLAS, ed. Castles from the air; with an introduction and notes. 128p 112pl $8 Scribner
728.81 Castles. Architecture, Medieval 50-5563

Aerial photographs of 112 castles located in England, Scotland, and Wales. Each picture is accompanied by a brief historical and architectural note. The arrangement is alphabetical by name of castle. An introductory chapter gives the social and historical background of the English castle.

Booklist 46:197 F 15 '50

"England, Scotland and Wales provided rich harvest; the castles are alphabetically arranged for ready reference (one wishes there had been end paper maps, with locations indicated). . . Of definite travel interest as well as good social history supplement."
+ Kirkus 18:15 Ja 1 '50 170w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 80w

SIMS, MARY SOPHIA STEPHENS. YWCA—an unfolding purpose. 157p $2 Womans press 267.5 Young women's Christian associations
50-6074

"The history, policies, and purposes of the YWCA from its beginning as a religious social group [in 1855] to the present international organization interested in every aspect of the welfare of girls and women." (Booklist) Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:255 Ap 15 '50

"[The author] tells the story of the YWCA with clarity and precision, relating it with great understanding to the period she has covered. There are also some excellent comments on the development of social work, with particular reference to community planning and social agency financing. To the readers of the earlier chapters it may seem that Miss Sims has over-emphasized the Christian purpose of the organization, but they will find themselves understanding the author's intent and the nature of the YWCA better as the book progresses. . . For the YWCA member it is a useful handbook with excellent historical data which has long been needed. For both the member and the general reader, interested not only in the development of women but in the development of social institutions, it is a good case story." J. D. Britt
+ Survey 86:267 My '50 220w

SINCLAIR, MRS KATHLEEN HENRIETTA (NASH-WEBBER) (BRIGID KNIGHT, pseud). Not by any single man. 309p $3 Doubleday
50-7843

A romantic tale of England in the time of the Napoleonic wars. Catherine Gray, serene and beautiful daughter of a Kentish farmer, is the central figure, altho the actual romance of the story is centered in Madeleine, the half-French daughter of Catherine's husband.

Booklist 46:316 Je 15 '50

"For one who has admired the South African novels of Brigid Knight, 'Not by Any Single Man' adds up to a jarring disappointment." V. P. Hass
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 16 '50 450w
Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 22 '50 190w

"A book for women who wish to be treated with respect for their intelligence."
Kirkus 18:214 Ap 1 '50 230w

"The clock of melodrama ticks steadily on. Sometimes, in the later chapters, a change in beat seems imminent. Catherine shows signs of stepping out of character and succumbing to natural feelings. Fear, jealousy and a sense of loneliness put in brief appearances. Then, lulled by the monotonous ticking, they soon droop again." Roger Pippett
N Y Times p38 Je 11 '50 270w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
— Sat R of Lit 33:21 Jl 8 '50 360w

SINCLAIR, MRS MARJORIE JANE (PUTNAM). Wild wind. 250p $3 Day
50-6772

A story of interracial marriage. The heroine is Lucia Gray, a New Englander, seeking peace from a broken marriage in the Hawaiian islands where her great-grandmother had once been a missionary. Kaupena, a college-educated Hawaiian, is the hero. Their struggle for a happy marriage is a long one, before near tragedy finally paves the way for a deeper understanding between Lucia and Kaupena.

"Mrs. Sinclair's love of the Islands, her understanding of the people burn clear in 'The Wild Wind.' But as fiction it is disappointing; its characters, with the exception of old Lokalia, too much only types or figureheads; its promises of conflict and drama unfulfilled. Hints early placed of delicate mystery and tension, of the ripe working out of elements natural and supernatural, past and present, find no culmination." L. T. Nicholl
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 16 '50 550w

"It may be difficult for the casual Western reader at first to understand Kaupena's initial attraction for Lucia, but as the book develops in incident and subtlety, so does the nature of its hero, and Mrs. Sinclair's resolution is completely satisfactory." Jane Cobb
N Y Times p25 Je 25 '50 140w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 33:16 Jl 22 '50 190w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. Another Pamela; or, Virtue still rewarded. 314p $3 Viking 50-6910

A picture of life in the United States in the 1920s. The story is told in letters, written by a parlormaid, a reincarnation of Richardson's Pamela. Pamela is a Seventh-Day Adventist, and a very pious one. Her employer hopes that the fresh unspoiled girl will have a good effect upon her adored but amoral nephew Charles. Like her predecessor, the modern Pamela resists the advances of Charles, and having resisted, marries him.

Booklist 46:194; 262 F 15 '50; Ap 15 '50
Chicago Sun p15 Je 13 '50 140w

"Altho there is much humor in the letters —unconscious humor on the part of Pamela, that is—and altho she is at times somewhat touching in her strict morality, she is frequently boring and always a little unbelievable. In fact, Mr. Sinclair has chosen the wrong model and adhered too faithfully to it." Kesley Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 14 '50 430w
Christian Science Monitor p6 Je 3 '50 1050w

"We wonder whether even the fatal charm of the creator of Lanny Budd can entrap the American public with a story of the rewards of virtue. To be sure, the sophisticate can read between the lines a tongue in cheek arraignment of the lives of those to whom riches mean lure for cranks. A crazy world seen through untutored eyes."
Kirkus 18:115 F 15 '50 260w

"As a stunt the story is moderately clever and has some humor. It is far too long and includes lengthy quotes from Richardson's book. Author's reputation will bring requests but the demand probably will not last. Recommended for limited purchase. Rental libraries will buy it." E. S. Brown
Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 210w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 30 '50 600w

"One is particularly interested in Mr. Sinclair's attitude toward his heroine. Most contemporary authors could write about such a character only with their tongues in their cheeks. Mr. Sinclair, however, finds much to approve of in his Pamela . . . and he permits her to acquire some of his values as she goes along. This involvement with the heroine gives the book certain engaging qualities. Even so, it was reckless of Mr. Sinclair to include so many quotations from Richardson's novel." Granville Hicks
+ — N Y Times p30 Ap 23 '50 400w

"The heroine is just as smugly virtuous as Richardson's, just as delighted when her boss decides to marry her, and after a couple of hundred pages, just about as dull."
New Yorker 26:119 My 20 '50 180w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 4 '50 700w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Sat R of Lit 33:14 Ap 29 '50 700w
Time 55:98 My 8 '50 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:284 S '50 230w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. Enemy had it too; a play in three acts. 127p $2.50 Viking 812 50-9402

A play about the future. A virus known as Bio has wiped all but a few of earth's human beings. Among the few were an American scientist and his two children living in Colombia, and a family of Icelanders. In New York they find a group of evil and mad men in control. Two crew members of the spaceship Hastem, returning from Mars with two Martian women, arrive. The women stay on earth. But the spaceship with a new cargo returns to Mars.

Booklist 47:92 N 1 '50

Kirkus 18:378 Jl 1 '50 200w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 20w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 O 15 '50 270w

Reviewed by Saul Colin
N Y Times p26 S 24 '50 330w

"In this new play, which is both entertainment and timely prophecy, farce and serious drama, Mr. Sinclair projects a frightening picture of the next world war's aftermath. . . No average Broadway sex rehash is this, but a play that dares to take for its theme the vital question of war and sane survival in our atomic age." Frank Jones
San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 8 '50 370w

Springf'd Republican p8D O 1 '50 240w

SINEVIRSKY, NICOLA. Smersh; ed. by Kermit and Milt Hill. 253p $2.75 Holt
B or 92 Secret service—Russia. Spies
50-9970

"Smersh is a contraction of the Russian words, smert, shpionam, and means, 'death to spies.' It is the secret counter-intelligence arm of the NKVD or MVD, the soviet political police. . . Nicola Sinevirsky is very likely a nom de plume for a young Carpatho-Ukrainian of peasant stock, who was educated as an engineer. He believed his homeland, which was in Hungary, should be reunited to Russia, altho he was strongly opposed to communism. . . The book is the story of [the author's] adventures as an interpreter with Smersh, the most secret arm of NKVD." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 47:2; 93 S 1 '50; N 1 '50

"This story of the incredible operations of soviet counter-espionage is one of the most startling revelations of what goes on behind the iron curtain. Its swift pace gives the terrifying picture of what goes on wherever the shadow of the Red Star falls." Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 1 '50 410w

Kirkus 18:497 Ag 15 '50 190w

"The writing is adequate, the message urgent." M. G. Checrallah
Library J 75:1826 O 15 '50 130w

"One can sympathize whole-heartedly with Nicola Sinevirsky for escaping from the Soviet clutches. His disjointed book, though it does not contribute much about the Russian practices that is new, confirms what we knew already." Marcus Duffield
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 22 '50 500w

"Much of this book's description has the ring of truth and coincides with reports on Smersh activities in other quarters. Yet this reviewer is troubled by the fact that no evidence is presented to back the account, and by the fact that Mr. Sinevirsky's story sounds at times just a little too pat." Harry Schwartz
N Y Times p10 O 8 '50 450w

Reviewed by Ward Moore
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 29 '50 500w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman
Sat R of Lit 33:40 N 25 '50 600w

SINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. History of biology; a general introduction to the study of living things. rev ed 579p il maps $5 Schuman
574.09 Biology—History 50-7001

This is a revised edition of a book which first appeared in England in 1931, and the same year was published in the United States, with some slight revision, under the title Story of Living Things (Book Review Digest 1932).

"Many students and teachers of biology will be glad to hear of the publication of this second edition, for Charles Singer knows the fascinating story of biology's development and he knows too how to write. . . It is a suggestive and stimulating book, written with lively interest and with great simplicity. The style is clear and concise, the choice of illustrations excellent." M. L. Austin
+ Am Hist R 56:78 O '50 750w

School & Society 71:400 Je 24 '50 20w

SINGER, ISAAC BASHEVIS. Family Moskat; tr. from the Yiddish by A. H. Gross. 611p $3.95 Knopf 50-14988

Novel about Jewish family life in Warsaw from the end of the nineteenth century to the beginning of World war II. The story is about a rich man's family, with their relatives, friends, and hangerson, and their customs and religion.

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50

Kirkus 18:530 S 1 '50 190w

"As sheer story-telling this sprawling, heaving, churning, lustful (and excellently translated) narrative is very effective. In spite of its great length, panoramic sweep, multiplicity of interwoven plots, and bewildering variety of bizarre characters, locales, and situations, the novel moves at a fairly brisk pace, sustaining the reader's interest from the first page to the last." Joshua Kunitz
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 19 '50 1150w

"Out of all this there rises a sense of life—boundless, frustrated, but undying. Mr. Singer deserves credit for not having glossed over its gory sides, and for never trying to romanticize Chassidic and Polish-Jewish life into something quaint and folkloristic. Of course, the scene he depicts is gone forever, and his novel may well be one of its lasting monuments. Still, the novel, reminiscent of Turgenev and Balzac, stands because of its narrative qualities, its completely credible characters, its throbbing vitality—even if the events and incidents sometimes threaten to overflow the shores." Richard Plant
+ N Y Times p34 O 22 '50 500w

"Mr. Singer writes in a very busy tone that seems to imply he has a great deal to tell and time to tell it only once, and in the long run his book becomes a collection of folk customs and habits and attitudes rather than a novel about human beings."
New Yorker 26:185 N 18 '50 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 26 '50 600w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 33:18 N 25 '50 410w

SIRI, WILLIAM E. Isotopic tracers and nuclear radiations; with applications to biology and medicine; with contributions by Ellsworth C. Dougherty [and others]. 653p il $12.50 McGraw 574.1072 Tracers (biology). Radiotherapy
49-11266

"Of the three parts of which the book is composed the first is devoted to a concise survey of the fundamentals of nuclear physics and chemistry. . . Part II is devoted to the techniques of nuclear science. . . The last section presents a brief survey of applications to biology and medicine of the available radio and stable isotopes. The book concludes with a bibliography containing some 1785 references to general and original research papers dealing with the applications of about 50 elements, including the common stable isotopes used as tracers, arranged by elements. Numerous reference tables and graphs of ranges, cross sections, decay schemes, etc., are also included." (Am Chem Soc J) Index.

"Topics are well correlated and the whole is well written even though a number of authors have contributed various chapters. While there are a few errors, they are in general fairly obvious to the reader. . . The book is a storehouse of information and cannot fail to be of great value to investigators in these fields." E. O. Wiig
+ — Am Chem Soc J 72:2822 Je '50 170w

"The volume is highly technical and will probably be most used as a reference work by scientists experienced in the field of nuclear physics; it may also find use in senior or graduate college courses in its subject."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:115 Mr '50 280w

SIRINGO, CHARLES ANGELO. Texas cowboy; or, Fifteen years on the hurricane deck of a Spanish pony; taken from real life; with bibliographical study and introd. by J. Frank Dobie and drawings by Tom Lea. new ed 198p $3 Sloane

917.64 Cowboys. Frontier and pioneer life —Texas 50-8707

A reprint of a Western classic which first appeared in 1885, and has appeared in various guises and reprintings since. It is a picture of the cowboy's life on the southwestern plains. The author was born in 1855 and died in 1928. This edition has a long introduction by J. Frank Dobie.

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

"An exciting true tale packed with thrills, gunplay, badmen, fast riding, buffalo roping, and other range adventure. It has more exciting action than can be found in any dozen fiction westerns put together." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 23 '50 300w

"In the pages of this popular book, Charlie Siringo told the story of his life as a cowboy with restraint and reticence. There was not an ounce of bravado in this man whose courage was legendary. . . Time has now made history out of a book which was once mere train entertainment." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:323 Je 1 '50 250w

"The Siringo opus may be a 'classic' of its sort because of its historical significance in the literature of the West, but Siringo wasn't much of a writer. He was naive, almost illiterate, though what he wrote was for the most part authentic enough, and now and then a touch of sly, old-fashioned humor breaks through. Maybe it comes down to this: It was not much of a book, but a whale of a thing for an unlettered Texas cowboy." Stanley Walker
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 30 '50 550w

"The first edition of 'A Texas Cowboy' is today a decidedly rare item of Western Americana, and even the later paper-bound reprints, sold by thousands on Western railroad trains, command high prices. The book has been out of print since 1914, and this new issue with chapter headings and tailpieces by Tom ('The Brave Bulls') Lea represents a distinct service to lovers of Western books." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 23 '50 500w

"The new book will be a must for collectors of Western Americana, not only because of what the beloved Will Rogers once said of it—'Why, that was the cowboy's Bible when I was growing up—' but also because J. Frank Dobie has written an introduction and bibliography of 40 pages, and El Paso's Tom Lea has illustrated it with more than 30 sketches. For the first time, the story Siringo wrote 'for money—and lots of it' is handsomely presented." A. R. Bosworth
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 16 '50 850w

"This is the Southwest for real—real because Siringo found it easier to tell the truth than to make things up and he obviously wanted to tell the truth anyway. Mr. Dobie's good introduction has some admirable examples of cowboy reading and the hunger for it." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 S 16 '50 270w

SISKIND, CHARLES SEYMOUR. Electrical machines, direct and alternating current. 521p il $4.75 McGraw

621.313 Electric machinery 50-3798

"Designed primarily for use as a college textbook. . . The discussion is limited to generators, motors, transformers and converters. . . The text is supplemented by more than 300 illustrations and an abundance of review questions. Besides college students, the book should be useful to electricians, maintenance men and other practical workers. The author is Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering in Purdue University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 47:8 S 1 '50

N Y New Tech Bks 35:54 Jl '50

SITWELL, EDITH. Canticle of the rose; poems: 1917-1949. 290p $3.75 Vanguard

821 49-50410

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Booklist 46:229 Mr 15 '50

Bookmark 9:105 F '50 40w

Reviewed by Margaret Avison
Canadian Forum 29:262 F '50 280w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p6S Ja 23 '50 350w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 170:93 Ja 28 '50 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
New Repub 122:19 Mr 6 '50 600w

"Miss Sitwell has so drastically edited her earlier work that it is rather overwhelmed by her later, more sibylline utterances. In her introduction, she traces her progress, in great technical and allusive detail, from her early lighthearted and oblique 'experimental' manner to her later hymns and apocalyptic visions, as if she were never part of a pre-1914 movement and as if she had never heard of Baudelaire, Rimbaud, and Verlaine. Her range is unusual, but older readers will regret the excision of much that would show her earlier gift for romantic nostalgia and bizarre improvisation to be quite original."
New Yorker 26:105 Mr 11 '50 120w

Reviewed by Richard Ellmann
Yale R n s 39:543 spring '50 550w

SITWELL, EDITH. Poet's notebook. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 276p $4 Little

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation. Poetry 50-10500

"Fundamentally this is Edith Sitwell's commonplace book in which she has copied passages from the poets and their critics. Yet her brilliant mind and facile pen have so worked upon these quotations that some of her notes come very near to being formal literary essays. Half of the book is devoted to Shakespeare. . . Other poets whom she includes are Pope, Blake, Baudelaire, Verlaine, Chaucer, Dunbar, Skelton, Gower, Smart and Hopkins." (Library J) No index.

"When she is reading Shakespeare it is with her mind full of Plato, of St. Augustine, of Pausanias, of Meister Eckhart, of St. Catherine of Genoa—she illuminates passages in Shakespeare by invoking now one and now another. What she finally gives us, of course, is her Shakespeare—often a very wonderful thing, a delight in itself and a lesson in reading." J. F. Nims
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 26 '50 500w

"A piquant and perceptive book of criticism."
+ Kirkus 18:548 S 1 '50 150w

SITWELL, EDITH—Continued
"Recommended for all of the larger literary collections." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 75:1658 O 1 '50 130w

"What emerges from these pages, above all, is the personality of the woman who sits in her library, pencil in hand. She is a great lady and a poet, and her Notebook, with all its imperfections, retains the grace, the nobility, that belong to both." Babette Deutsch
+ — New Repub 123:22 D 18 '50 700w

Reviewed by Margaret Webster
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 17 '50 900w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. England reclaimed, and other poems. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 122p $2.75 Little 821 49-11762
For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p6S Ja 23 '50 80w

"More than half the book is devoted to the series of character sketches of English lower-middle-class life which made such a hit when read aloud by him during his recent tour of this country. Their charm is all on the surface; they are affectionate, whimsical, gently satiric, couched in lucid, swiftly-moving free verse, every word of which should be immediately understandable when read aloud. One feels, however, that the aristocratic Sir Osbert has no understanding whatever of the inner life of his characters—indeed, he hardly seems to believe that they have an inner life. They are to him baroque bits of period furniture, and nothing more." Vivian Mercier
Commonweal 51:638 Mr 24 '50 200w

"Sir Osbert's selection of poems in England Revisited tends to be didactic, satirical and pastoral rather than lyrical. But his basic referents are his sister's too: personal nonconformism rooted in an aristocratic traditionalism." M. L. Rosenthal
New Repub 122:20 Mr 6 '50 170w

Reviewed by David Daiches
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Mr 19 '50 450w

"Osbert has always been the prose satirist in his remarkable family, and one remembers his poetry down the years as being rather sharp-edged, especially about the more footless members of his own and other English classes. In this volume, however, his acerbity is somewhat blunted in favor of a charm that often slips over into sentimentality, whether in memories of English types, in scenes of travel, or in 'poems of the wars.'"
New Yorker 26:106 Mr 11 '50 80w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p3D F 12 '50 170w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. Noble essences; a book of characters. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 356p $4.50 Little
B or 92 Sitwell family. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-9728
The fifth volume in Sir Osbert Sitwell's memoirs. It is given over in the main to reminiscences of his friends, rather than to his family. Among them are: Sir Edmund Gosse; Ronald Firbank; Gabriele D'Annunzio; Ada Leverson; W. H. Davies; Rex Whistler; Arnold Bennett. Index.

"Sir Osbert offers us a host of witty sayings and witty anecdotes (and some, inevitably, which seem overvalued). Here, in sum, is a portrait gallery of writers and painters that is hung with near masterpieces." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 186:87 O '50 850w
Bookmark 10:31 N '50 30w

"All the sketches are good, but each reader is bound to find a favorite. The chapter on Arnold Bennett—the Sitwells' 'Uncle Arnold'—is particularly delightful for its combination of clear-eyed candor, shrewd criticism, and skilful portraiture. Sir Osbert's pleasure in Bennett's foibles is everywhere tempered by his warm affection." Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 22 '50 450w

"With this, the fifth volume of his autobiography, Sir Osbert Sitwell brings to an end, triumphantly, his elaborate, richly embroidered, and highly personal attempt to paint, in carefully organized and lasting colors, the picture of British society in which he passed his youth and his early maturity, and which has now vanished with the hansom cab and taxation at two shillings in the pound." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 O 7 '50 1100w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 53:207 D 1 '50 390w

"On the whole he is a great English gentleman, kind, generous, witty, zestful, arrogant—and odd—a refreshing mixture and only in the end does one sense his deep despondency over the passing of his class. One of the few first rate pieces of writing of our day. A 'must' for almost anyone, especially lovers of the arts."
+ Kirkus 18:442 Ag 1 '50 400w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 150w

"Witty, readable, and often moving, these brilliant portraits of talented men and women are certain of success."
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 29 '50 650w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 171:462 N 18 '50 1000w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 40:327 S 30 '50 2350w

"The feast is varied and succulent as ever. Of course one may not meet superb dishes like his father, Sir George, and Henry Moats for the first time again. But all these Sitwell books have become a matter for permanent enjoyment. . . Certainly the fifth volume of this autobiography is as good as any of the others, and for the moment the very best." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 1 '50 150w

"You never know whom you will meet or where you will go in these pages, but once met, a person, a place is forever tranfixed. What happens in 'Noble Essences' is like those fireworks which, once ignited, produce glittering fountains endlessly out of one another. Just before the last three or four fountains fade from the sky, little fiery goldfish dart brilliantly among their glowing waters, and so among Sir Osbert's portraits dart his recollections of minor celebrities, faded beaux and belles; long demolished mansions and clubhouses, what a long-dead wit said to an appreciative audience, also gone these many years, on a paraselene evening which nobody save Sir Osbert now remembers." Leo Lerman
+ N Y Times p3 O 1 '50 1750w
New Yorker 26:133 O 7 '50 140w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts
Sat R of Lit 33:25 D 2 '50 900w

"This 'Book of Characters,' as it is described by the author, rolls and rambles as widely as its four predecessors, exploring by digressions, sometimes in highly unlikely places, almost any subject on which Sir Osbert holds views, and yet doing this in such a way that the whole is informed by a distinctive character which, as with the preceding volumes, makes it more than a mere continuation of a life-story." Christopher Sykes
+ Spec 184:386 O 13 '50 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p612 S 29 '50 3250w

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL. Spain. (Books on the countries of Europe) 148p pl maps $4 British bk. centre 914.6 Spain—Description and travel. Spain—Social life and customs [50-8558]
A descriptive guidebook to Spain, based on the author's many visits between the two wars, as well as his three separate trips since 1945, taken with the wrting of this book in mind. He divides his book into three sections: Andalucia; Castile and Aragón; and Valencia and Levante. Index.

"Although it seems hardly fair to speak of shortcomings in a book which maintains so consistently high a level of both writing and feeling as does Mr. Sitwell's 'Spain,' nevertheless it must be noted in passing that there are one or two points which may well prevent it from attaining any wide popularity. The first of these is that Mr. Sitwell's clearly deep knowledge of several aspects of Spanish culture leads him to concentrate upon them to an extent that, while delightful to those already acquainted with Spain, may seem exaggerated to those not yet initiated. The second is his apparently overwhelming animus against the Spanish Republic, which preceded and was overthrown by the present dictatorship." J. G. Harrison

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 3 '50 750w

"It is all reduced to a dead level of picturesqueness—admirable but hardly adequate." J. W.

— + Manchester Guardian p4 Je 16 '50 190w

Reviewed by Beach Conger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 30 '50 140w

"Sacheverell Sitwell's admirable book is modeled to a great extent upon Theophile Gautier's 'Voyage en Espagne' of a hundred years ago, which depicted Spain as a quaint and exotic land of gypsies, bandits, decaying castles and cathedrals. . . The author, the well-known English poet and art critic, virtually ignores politics and political problems in this book—which is just as well in view of the fact that his scattered references reveal a romantic devotion to the Franco regime." T. J. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 6 '50 750w

"This is not a work for anyone curious about the present state of the country. Mr. Sitwell faces the past with a fearless eye, and it is typical of his approach that in the entire book there is not one reference to Francisco Franco."

New Yorker 26:74 Jl 8 '50 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 30 '50 350w

"It is for the glimpses which he gives of the less-known places that those who have already some knowledge of Spain, and desire more, will be most grateful. . . One fault alone has to be found with Mr. Sitwell's book—the extraordinary inaccuracy of its orthography, not all, unfortunately, attributable to slips in proof-reading. There are pages with as many as four or five such mistakes, and there can be few with none. Italian prepositions, and even names, are light-heartedly substituted for Spanish ones; there are countless mistakes in termination, accent and gender. The index is plentifully sprinkled with errors." E. A. Peers

Spec 184:692 My 19 '50 600w

"The discerning English traveller in Spain still needs his Ford and Street. This book is not, and is not meant to be, like those, a handbook; but it will add richly to his knowledge, experience and enjoyment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Je 16 '50 1550w

SKAAR, GRACE MARION. What do they say! [pictures by the author]. [20p] $1 Scott, W.R.

50-9296

Simple pictures and brief question and answer text about animal sounds for two-year-olds.

Horn Bk 26:371 S '50 50w

Kirkus 18:509 S 1 '50 80w

"Recommended if needed." Mary Strang

+ Library J 75:2018 N 15 '50 50w

"The boldly designed, simple pictures have a superb, fresh artistic power." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 N 12 '50 100w

"Small children will enjoy the question-answer form of the book almost as much as this reminder of their superior talent! The illustrations are large and clear with just that touch of detail that pleases, without confusing, the very young listener at reading time." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p33 N 12 '50 130w

SKINNER, CORNELIA OTIS (MRS ALDEN S. BLODGET). Nuts in May; drawings by Alajálov. 188p $2.75 Dodd

817 50-9604

A collection of thirteen articles, all but one of which appeared in the New Yorker. They deal with various aspects of the author's life, from the over zealous actions of family and friends on the opening day of a new play, to the trials of being the mother of a young son who goes to a select boarding school.

Booklist 47:33; 36 S 15 '50

"'Nuts in May' is delightful and vigorous. In it the reader shares Miss Skinner's giddy joy of living. It is a picture of a woman who apparently never has an idle moment." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 24 '50 220w

Reviewed by C. B. Burnett

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 1 '50 270w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 26:503 N '50 60w

"A thoroughly entertaining work, with decorations by Constantin Alajálov, an artist who is agreeably witty in his own right. His comments on the text, if so solemn a noun may be used to describe Miss Skinner's brand of fun, do more than illustrate; they enhance. Skinner & Alajálov make a first-rate comedy team, in fact, and my only complaint is that their act isn't nearly long enough." J. R. Parker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 24 '50 850w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy

+ N Y Times p8 S 24 '50 1050w

"In the case of Cornelia Otis Skinner, I'm afraid any reader of this column will be dealing with a prejudiced man. Whatever she writes, I'm going to like it even before I open the covers. With that much by way of warning, Miss Skinner's new book . . . is exactly what Skinner enthusiasts will expect from her, and even those who have read the sketches in the magazine will find—as is always the case with Miss Skinner—that they're quite as good the second time, or even the third or fourth or tenth. . . I must enter one demurrer. It concerns her piece 'Seaweed Sewer,' a purported burlesque, satire or whatnot on 'Cannery Row.' I still love Miss Skinner dearly . . . but I'd be just as happy if she hadn't included that one." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 2 '50 700w

"It is definitely light fiction, designed to amuse, and Miss Skinner's tone is that of an entertaining dinner companion, making a story diverting, embroidering an anecdote with humor, but not necessarily enlightening us." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 D 2 '50 500w

Springf'd Republican p8D O 1 '50 110w

SKORNIA, HARRY JAY, and others. Creative broadcasting; with twelve scripts for broadcast. 407p il $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall

791.4 Radio broadcasting 50-13049

"A practical textbook for workshop groups. Includes information on music and copyright clearance, casting, sound effects, scripts, and production. Twelve broadcast scripts are printed in full; appendix gives trade publications, sound, music and script sources, bibliography, and glossary." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 47:131 D 1 '50

SKORNIA, H. J.—Continued

"This seems to be the most valuable volume yet issued on the problems of radio broadcasting for the beginner. . . Highly recommended to middle sized, large public and college and university libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 50w

SKROTZKI, BERNHARDT G. A., and VOPAT, WILLIAM A. Steam and gas turbines. 395p il $5 McGraw

621.165 Turbines 50-6911

"The book describes the general arrangement and assembly of steam and gas turbines—the operating principles involved—their performance limitations—and the auxiliary and control devices needed for operation. Short-cut methods for estimating expected performances of new turbines are outlined, as are methods for checking the performance of existing units against original guarantees or tests. The book includes the latest design of reheat steam turbines, automatic-extraction turbines, small-output gas turbines, regenerative-cycle units, and power-gas generators or free-piston compressors. Oiling systems of all turbine types—from the small auxiliary-drive to prime-mover—are covered in detail." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:876 My 15 '50 80w

"Excellent book."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:48 My '50

SLATER, JOHN CLARKE. Microwave electronics. 406p $6 Van Nostrand

621.38 Radio—Short wave. Electronics 50-7026

"Mainly, it is a mathematical treatment based on the theory of orthogonal functions. This mathematical method is developed so that it can be applied generally to the predictions of microwave behavior. The author was one of the pioneer researchers during World War II who worked at the Bell Telephone Laboratories and the Radiation Laboratory at Massachusetts Institute of Technology on radar design and particularly on the magnetron. The book is a development of this work, and it embraces not only the author's contributions but the contributions made by others to the mathematical solution of microwave problems." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"An essential book for engineers at work in the field of radar design and physicists concerned with the phenomena of electro-magnetic waves in the milimeter and centimeter ranges."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:38 My '50

"The book is well organized, and shows to effect Professor Slater's skill in exposition. It is a monograph suitable as a reference work for the advanced worker in the field; it incorporates much new material not readily available heretofore."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:243 Je '50 250w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Immortal Magyar: Semmelweis, conqueror of childbed fever. (Life of science lib) 211p il $3.50 Schuman

B or 92 Semmelweis, Ignác Fülöp 50-9729

Biography of Ignaz Philipp Semmelweis (1818-1865) the Hungarian doctor, who specialized in obstetrics in Vienna, and first advocated that doctors "wash their hands" before examining patients. He met with such opposition that he fled from Vienna in 1850. Fifteen years later he died, insane. Index.

Booklist 47:74 O 15 '50

Kirkus 18:407 Jl 15 '50 220w

"The biographer has portrayed the dramatic and tragic figure of Semmelweis so vividly, that this biography should rank high in the year's literary awards. Scholarly research and humane interpretation grace this first long story in English of the immortal Hungarian physician. . . Of permanent value in all types of libraries." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 75:1404 S 1 '50 130w

"Such a fateful tale in medical history deserves to be related, as it is here, with accuracy and devotion." T. H. Maren

+ N Y Times p26 O 1 '50 650w

New Yorker 26:149 O 14 '50 120w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Stubborn heart. 307p $3 Doubleday

50-8218

A sequel to The Dark Garden (Book Review Digest 1946). Here the doctor-hero of the former novel looks on with horror and then sympathy as his wife converts their plantation into a hospital for whites and Negroes. The time is the Reconstruction period.

Booklist 47:98 N 1 '50

Reviewed by F. N. Litten

Chicago Sun p4 Jl 16 '50 450w

"No one, I suppose, will ever accuse Dr. Slaughter of writing 'literature' but, on the other hand, I doubt that many will deny he is a whale of a spinner of tales. Certainly I won't make the accusation or express the doubt, because 'The Stubborn Heart,' accepted on its rather shallow level, gave me an exciting and interesting evening of entertainment." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 25 '50 470w

"The descriptions of surgery will not appeal to all readers."

Christian Science Monitor p6 Jl 1 '50 230w

Kirkus 18:263 My 1 '50 160w

"Like all the Slaughter novels it emphasizes medicine and surgery and builds an exciting plot of romance and intrigue around contemporary history. The reader is not involved in the action and the characters are described rather than known." K. A. Shorey

Library J 75:980 Je 1 '50 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ag 27 '50 70w

"High-grade medico-historical fiction—in this reviewer's opinion, the best Slaughter novel to date." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p26 Je 4 '50 400w

"The entire book is poorly written and the characters portrayed are grotesque and lurid exaggerations." Stephanie Benét

— Sat R of Lit 33:26 Jl 29 '50 180w

SLEMP, JOHN CALVIN. Twelve laws of life. 112p $1.50 Am. Bapt.

222.16 Commandments, Ten. Jesus Christ—Teachings 50-7418

"A study of the Ten Commandments and related teachings of Jesus." (Subtitle) The author is a Baptist minister, educator and editor.

"Dr. Slemp is a skilled expositor. The present volume, addressed chiefly to young people, may be considered as having grown directly out of his ten years of experience as editor of Uniform Sunday school publications for the American Baptist Publication Society, and indirectly out of a much longer period as a Bible student, a teacher and a religious editor. The emphasis upon the broad and spiritual interpretation which Jesus gave to the ancient law and upon the modern applications prevent any lapse into legalism." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 67:845 Jl 12 '50 290w

"Many teachers and not a few preachers will welcome this [book] for its stimulating effect upon their own presentation of the material. It is not easy, in fact it seems almost impossible, to teach or preach the Decalogue in any strikingly new manner, and the author wisely disavows any such purpose. Rather, he brings together pertinent examples and illustrations, correlated biblical passages, and his own religious insight and pedagogical skill, to present a meaningful and stimulating discussion of these laws of life." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 27:286 Jl '50 110w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Mr Mushroom. [32p] il $1.25 Macmillan
50-7615

"A little picture book for children before six. 'Mr. Mushroom lives under a . . . (Where do you think?)' Every page has a chance to guess before you turn over, and every answer begins with an M. This imaginary little man, and his marriage to Miss Mite (who first said 'Maybe!') and their love feasts of mush, milk, and marshmallows [is depicted in small sketches]." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:322 Je 15 '50

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:282 Jl '50 50w

Kirkus 18:259 My 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:628 Ap 15 '50 40w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 70w

"A rather slight bit of whimsey, but it combines its guessing with that sort of pretend which almost all four-and-five-year-olds do like. Mr. Slobodkin's little sketches, with their gay colors, have great charm."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 7 '50 100w

"The illustrations are colorful and delicate in Mr. Slobodkin's unique style. Nursery school children to whom this was read delighted in the question-answer form of the text, but were disappointed by many stumpers that required too much knowledge to answer." Miriam James
+ — N Y Times p18 Je 25 '50 110w

Sat R of Lit 33:38 Je 10 '50 110w

SLOCUM, VICTOR. Capt. Joshua Slocum; the life and voyages of America's best known sailor. 384p il maps $5 Sheridan

B or 92 Slocum, Joshua. Voyages around the world

A combination of biography and log of the famous voyage around the world in the sloop Spray, which Captain Joshua Slocum managed alone, when he was over fifty. This book by his son was completed just before his own death at seventy-seven. The famous circumnavigation of the globe took three years (1895-1898) and in that time Captain Slocum covered some 46,000 miles. Index.

Booklist 46:274 My 1 '50

"This absorbing volume of blue water adventure is one of the most important sea books in many years, one every reader of Capt. Slocum's famous 'Sailing Alone Around the World' should own." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 19 '50 420w

Kirkus 18:201 Mr 15 '50 200w

"A highly interesting biography." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 40w

Reviewed by Felix Riesenberg, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 23 '50 380w

"This story of Josh Slocum's life was written by his eldest son, Victor, who died only shortly before the book was published. Victor had shared some of his father's adventures, and seemingly had an admiration amounting to awe for his father. The book is colored by this feeling; there is no critical illumination of Joshua's character. Instead there is a devoted chronicle, confusing and incomplete now and then, of a man who showed enormous skill, resource and courage in the first voyage of its kind in history." C. B. Palmer
+ — N Y Times p31 Ap 30 '50 330w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:32 Jl 8 '50 650w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 30 '50 180w

Time 55:98 Mr 20 '50 650w

SLONIM, MARC L'VOVICH. Epic of Russian literature from its origins through Tolstoy. 367p $5 Oxford

891.709 Russian literature 49-11763

A study of Russian literature from 863 to the death of Tolstoy in 1910, written by a Russian-born scholar now on the faculty of Sarah Lawrence college. A second volume will bring the history of Russian literature up to date. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:230 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 D 11 '49 140w

"Marc Slonim is a scholar, writer, and professor of considerable standing; and his new book has much to say about the powerful traditions of Russian literature. . . For original insights one will still find indispensable V. S. Pritchett, Prince Mirsky, Virginia Woolf. But for able summary of the stature and attitude of Russian letters, for sound judgment based on a lifetime of reading, this book will do admirably." Harold Orel
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 11 '50 210w

Reviewed by Helene Iswolsky
Commonweal 51:488 F 10 '50 1700w

"The style is readable and interesting. We do not find rhetoric or purple patches, but the English flows smoothly in a clear and flexible style. For the most part he writes English as if to the manner born, but occasionally the critical reader is aware of an ineptitude. . . I recommend this book. Readers who have the patience to get beyond its formidable opening pages will be greatly enlightened and informed —they will become better acquainted with the Russians. The book has everything except the fourth dimension of life—and without that '. . . I feel chilly and grown old.' " W. D. Ferguson
+ — Crozer Q 27:257 Jl '50 3000w

Current Hist 18:99 F '50 50w

"While Helen Muchnic's Introduction to Russian Literature [Book Review Digest 1947] is still recommended to beginners, Slonim's treatise, product of mature scholarship, is preferable for serious students. Essential for college and large public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 74:1817 D 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by S. Dobrin
Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 11 '50 500w

Reviewed by Hubert Creekmore
Nation 170:627 Je 24 '50 800w

"Mr. Slonim's book is a distinguished performance, the rich result of many years of scholarly effort in this field. If the second volume maintains the high level of accomplishment of the present one, American readers will have available to them for the first time in one work the whole exciting story of Russian literature and in a form worthy of its great achievements." E. J. Simmons
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ap 2 '50 1350w

"He has succeeded in weaving historical background, biographical data and esthetic appreciation into one generally convincing pattern. Some of Mr. Slonim's judgments, however, are open to criticism. This is particularly true of the introduction in which he summarizes Russian literary development up to the later part of the eighteenth century." Michael Karpovich
+ — N Y Times p24 F 19 '50 450w

"Mr. Slonim has some solid virtues. There is not much on Russian literature in English, and a good deal of the little there is is biassed or superficial. Mr. Slonim is conscientious, intelligent, and impartial."
+ New Yorker 25:88 Ja 28 '50 180w

"The book is an excellent scholarly study, carefully indexed, with considerable material not previously used in English studies." E. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 27 '49 220w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 33:18 Mr 4 '50 450w

SLONIM, M. L.—Continued

"Mr. Slonim has evidently wide knowledge of his subject, but his judgments are seldom very individual, he has few graces of style, and he makes less use than he suggests of the new material and researches of recent years in the Soviet Union. . . No doubt, however, as the somewhat flashy title suggests, the book is intended for the elementary student. As such it is informative and methodical. Russian titles are rarely given, and there are only occasional extracts in translation of prose and verse."

Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Ap 28 '50 360w

"Mr. Slonim's undertaking of a survey of Russian literature since the second half of the eighteenth century shows in its first volume a remarkable achievement. . . The book is valuable because of the author's ability of selection, his lack of bias, and the manifestation of knowledge and taste. But it can also be welcomed, because a clear picture of the social and political background is given, with a stress on the significance of Russian nineteenth-century literary critics whose names are virtually unknown outside their country."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:154 Je '50 200w

Reviewed by Janko Lavrin

Yale R n s 39:548 spring '50 500w

SMART, CHRISTOPHER. Collected poems; ed. with an introd. and critical comments by Norman Callan. 2v set $5 Harvard univ. press

821 [50-63]

This edition of Christopher Smart contains all that is known of his work except his Latin poems, translations of Horace and Phaedrus, and the libretti of two operas. The introduction contains a sketch of his life, and there is a collection of critical comments on his work by other writers. Index of first lines.

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 171:490 N 25 '50 180w

"Mr. Norman Callan, the editor of this Collected Poems of Christopher Smart, has added to an informative introduction a fascinating section of critical comments on Smart's writing, from the eighteenth century to the present day. Smart's unevenness as a poet has led to a great instability of reputation—he has been both extravagantly praised and contemptuously dismissed. Here at last, in this new edition, which contains all the known poems, except the translations and Latin verses, is a chance for the common reader to make his own judgment of Christopher Smart." H. A. L. Craig

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:101 Jl 22 '50 1400w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

Poetry 76:220 Jl '50 400w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 33:76 N 11 '50 60w

"When, on account of space and expense, Mr. Callan has to choose between poems and notes he wisely chooses the poems, but since it may be a long time before we get another edition as comprehensive as this, it seems a pity that he did not include the one or two doubtful poems which, as he himself tells us, may yet be proved to be Smart's. . . It may be expected that many readers will turn with special curiosity to those poems not easily available till now, and by doing so they will be able to get a much clearer view of the general shape and graph of Smart's poetic development."

Times [London] Lit Sup p56 Ja 27 '50 3400w

SMART, CHRISTOPHER. Poems; ed. with an introd. and notes by Robert Brittain. 326p il $4 Princeton univ. press

821 50-8272

Christopher Smart, an English poet and eccentric, was born in 1722 and died while on parole from a debtors' prison in 1771. In his 70-page introduction Mr Brittain furnishes a detailed discussion of the man and his poetry. The 200 pages of text contain the bulk of Smart's poetry.

"Christopher Smart's reputation as a poet moves in the limbo where it can neither live nor die. At his best, he could write religious lyrics, devout, intense, and not without a touch of inspiration. But he was seldom at his best." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 67:763 Je 21 '50 750w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S 3 '50 130w

"As an introduction to the work of a remarkable poet, too long known only for his aberrations and weaknesses, Mr. Brittain's volume should be heartily welcomed." J. L. Clifford

+ N Y Times p38 O 15 '50 800w

New Yorker 26:124 S 9 '50 160w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 33:21 S 30 '50 50w

"It is Editor Brittain's hope that today's readers will give poor Smart 'his rightful place in the front rank of English devotional lyricists.' At any rate, Brittain's efforts may rescue Smart from his long imprisonment in a literary footnote."

Time 56:80 Jl 10 '50 750w

SMART, MRS MOLLIE STEVENS. Babe in a house; photographs by Louise and Bob Van der Meid. 212p $2.75 Scribner

649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene. Parent and child. Children—Management 50-5670

A manual for parents, containing advice on how to prepare for the birth of a child, and how to take care of the baby once it has become a member of the family. Brief bibliography. Index.

"There was need of a book of this nature not written for a professional group, but accurate, and easily readable, with easily read print, on good paper, with excellent photographs, each of which tells its own story. This book has all of this and can be heartily recommended." P. B. Hirsch

+ Am J Pub Health 40:1329 O '50 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '50

"The treatment of the father's side of this new-baby situation is especially reassuring and helpful as is the down-to-earth discussion of the problem of the new baby versus the older children in the family. . . The use of contrasting case studies to illustrate points is an effective way to enable the new or prospective parents to fit themselves into the picture and arrive at their own solutions. . . Parents should read the book before and again after the baby comes. Grandmothers should read it too." E. L. Pillar

+ J Home Econ 42:666 O '50 450w

Kirkus 18:43 Ja 15 '50 90w

SMIT, JAN OLAV, bp. Angelic shepherd; the life of Pope Pius XII; adapted into English by James H. Vanderveldt. 326p il $4.50 Dodd

B or 92 Pius XII (Eugenio Pacelli) pope 50-6532

A biography of Pope Pius XII. "Written by Bishop Smit, who has known Eugenio Pacelli since his Roman school days, and who has lived in Vatican City for the past 20 years, the volume details the life of the pontiff from his boyhood to his present reign as the 261st successor to St. Peter." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Bibliography. Index.

"The first half of the Holy Year has naturally produced a veritable spate of books dealing with the history of the Church, with various aspects of the Vatican, and with the daily life of His Holiness Pope Pius XII. Among these, Angelic Shepherd should certainly rank high in spite of the rather weak title." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 171:398 Ag '50 220w

"Interesting and well-documented, it is nevertheless so overly-rhapsodic in tone that even the rightfully-admiring members of his own church will regard this biography as being less than definitive." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun p9 Ap 14 '50 200w

"In tracing his progress as diplomat, bishop, cardinal, and pope, the author embellishes his narrative with many intimate impressions and original anecdotes, thus giving a lifelike quality to his story. . . It is an interesting, accurate and scholarly portrayal of one of the most versatile leaders of our day and its perusal will yield rich dividends in pleasure and enlightenment. It is a classic in its field and merits the widest circulation." J. A. O'Brien
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 2 '50 400w

Reviewed by H. G. J. Beck
Commonweal 52:181 My 26 '50 230w

"An excellent biography. . . A valuable book highly recommended for the public and reference library." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:317 F 15 '50 150w

"This book adds little to our knowledge of the political problems with which Bishop and later Cardinal Pacelli had to deal. . . The reader who can make allowance for a certain amount of ecclesiastical diction will find himself being beguiled by description and anecdote. . . Yet much is fresh, appealing and rewarding." G. N. Shuster
+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 19 '50 850w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly
Sat R of Lit 33:26 My 27 '50 220w

SMITH, ALSON JESSE. Faith to live by; introd. by Ralph W. Sockman. 222p $2.50 Doubleday

234.2 Faith 49-10474

"A 'practical' handbook on the use of faith in daily living. The author, a clergyman who has seen the results of the use of faith, is concerned about people's undeveloped inner resources for meeting the issues of life, and he seeks to lead them to an understanding of the nature and function of faith." N Y Times

"A clergyman with an extensive and varied experience as a pastor, the author gives us a readable and practical book on the uses of a vital religious faith for everyday living."
+ Kirkus 17:540 O 1 '49 110w

"Many of the victories of faith are plainly outlined here. . . Examples within the experience of ordinary people make these uses of faith understandable. But some readers—I, for one—may wonder if the way to bring these experiences down to earth necessitates the slangy, breezy language of this book." G. R. Stephenson
N Y Times p21 S 25 '49 230w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 F '50

SMITH, BRUCE. Police systems in the United States. rev & enl ed 351p $5 Harper

351.74 Police—U.S. 49-48594

"Surveys the functions of rural, city, state, and federal police, the organization of the forces, and the trends toward cooperative function. The book was first published in 1940 [Book Review Digest 1941], it is now revised and a chapter on police and the traffic problem has been added." (Booklist) Index.

"It will prove a most valuable contribution to the literature of political science." D. E. J. MacNamara
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:218 Mr '50 380w

Reviewed by Thorstein Sellin
Ann Am Acad 267:223 Ja '50 140w
Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50
Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 300w

SMITH, DAN THROOP, and BUTTERS, JOHN KEITH. Taxable and business income. 342p $4 Nat. bur. of economic res.

657 Income 50-5132

"It explains the differences between the concepts of reported book profits and taxable income, and tries to determine the extent of divergence, the components of net income, and the relative importance of the deviations caused by each component. Based on S.E.C. and federal tax data for 1929-37." Library J

Reviewed by H. E. Hoagland
Ann Am Acad 271:206 S '50 400w

Reviewed by B. U. Ratchford
J Pol Econ 58:448 O '50 900w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:872 My 15 '50 70w

"The book is a product of much cooperative effort by the authors, the National Bureau of Economic Research, and several government agencies. The numerous technicians in the particular fields the book covers will profit greatly from this pioneering venture into an important area."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:184 Je '50 240w

SMITH, DAVID NICHOL. John Dryden. 93p $1.75 Cambridge

821 Dryden, John

"These four lectures on 'John Dryden of Trinity College' were delivered, one a week, in the University Lecture Rooms, Cambridge, in October and November 1948." (Pref) They are: Early verse and criticism; Plays; Satires and religious poems; Translations, odes, fables. Index.

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 13 '50 170w

"Dryden is admittedly not an easy poet to discuss in detail and it is difficult to withhold admiration from the architecture of Professor Nichol Smith's four lectures. Faced with the baffling variety of early poems, prose, heroic plays, All for Love, Satires, Religious Poems, Odes, Fables and Translations, he passes from one to the other imperceptibly, yet without losing a sense of the single vision behind them all. Such variety of achievement is paralleled by the variety of critical response." Iain Fletcher
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:635 Je 3 '50 650w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 23 '50 110w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Sat R of Lit 33:34 O 28 '50 230w

Reviewed by Adam Fox
Spec 184:730 My 26 '50 450w

"The man and the writer are firmly established in their literary contest and the book should provide a friendly introduction to the study—or, better still, the reading—of the poet, and so continue the campaign in his favour that Professor Nichol Smith has been carrying on in Oxford for so many years."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Mr 24 '50 1250w

SMITH, EDWARD CONRAD, and ZURCHER, ARNOLD JOHN, eds. New dictionary of American politics. new ed 437p il maps $3.25 Barnes & Noble

320.973 U.S.—Politics and government 49-49609

"This is the fourth revision of a reference work first published in 1888 and brought up to date in 1924, 1944, 1946 and now in 1949. In its present form it is entirely new in type, and 500 new terms have been added, bringing the total to more than 3,500." (N Y Times) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1944.

Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 5 '50 70w

"Recommended." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 75:495 Mr 15 '50 140w

"The number of references rises with the increasing complexity of American government, the mass of precedent set by the Supreme Court and the laws and treaties which govern the land. This is a process which adds to the usefulness of a book like this one." L. V. Updegraff
+ N Y Times p27 F 5 '50 140w

SMITH, E. C.—Continued

"A reference work of permanent major importance for all who take intelligent interest in the past and present conduct of American politics and government."
+ School & Society 71:64 Ja 28 '50 30w

SMITH, EDWARD ELMER. First Lensman; il. by A. J. Donnell. 306p $3 Fantasy press 50-5730

"Concerns a space war between the men of good-will on the mother planet, Earth, assisted by non-human allies from many other systems, and some distinctly evil earthlings, aided by their subject allies, who are dope peddlers, pirates and ruthless conquerors. Actually, the forces of evil are only physical personifications which have been borrowed by the metalists of Eddore, who know no emotion but a savage lust for power; and the men of good-will are aided by the secretive inhabitants of Arisia, who confer on some of the chosen best a wrist lens which gives them telepathic powers." N Y Times

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p5 Mr 6 '50 60w

"There are battles of gigantic fleets in space, force beams that tear whole worlds apart, intrigues, love affairs, even an election campaign—all told with such verve and at so rapid a pace that the reader never realizes that the adjective in the term 'science fiction,' has completely abdicated in favor of the noun." Fletcher Pratt
N Y Times p31 Mr 5 '50 200w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 33:32 Je 17 '50 50w

SMITH, ELSDON COLES. Story of our names. 296p $3.75 Harper
929.4 Names, Personal 50-6884

An account of the origin, development, and meanings of surnames, Christian names, and nicknames. Many anecdotes are included thruout the study. Partial contents: How and when surnames originated; The classes of surnames; Your name and you; Nicknames; American names; Names in other countries; Primitive names; Curious names; The psychology of names. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:274 My 1 '50
Chicago Sun p22 Ap 23 '50 90w

"This book is packed with both serious and amusing information on the unexpectedly interesting subject of names. . . This is an excellent browse book. One can open it at almost any point and immediately become engrossed." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 16 '50 280w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 3 '50 600w
Kirkus 18:50 Ja 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 16 '50 460w

"This book may be compared to the first edition of Mencken's 'American Language.' It will delight the literate and convert Philisters to a scholarly hobby. It will be cited as an authority, and even in times of distraction it will be read with pleasure." Cabell Greet
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 23 '50 240w

"One of the most readable books yet written in the field." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 29 '50 850w

"This is an informative and amusing book. . . There is an index of names, but there should have been a general index as well because there is a great deal to which the reader will want to return." Bergen Evans
+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 Ag 12 '50 800w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 My '50

SMITH, EMMA. Far cry. 248p $3 Random house
49-50363

"Fourteen-year-old English born Teresa Digby, embattled and sensitive, was hurried off to India by her father to spite her mother who had gone to America and been married there these ten years. The long voyage to India fed the little girl; the strange, almost terrifying land of India nearly overset her, until she found her place with her brother-in-law on a tea plantation high in the hills." Library J

Booklist 46:150; 172 Ja 1 '50; Ja 15 '50
Bookmark 9:136 Mr '50 60w

Reviewed by Dorothy Langley
Chicago Sun p6S Ja 18 '50 160w
Kirkus 17:628 N 15 '49 130w

"Skillful, perceptive novel, recommended heartily." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 74:1819 D 1 '49 70w

"In The Far Cry we recognise from the first sentence an imagination that catches in words both the humour and the poetry of life. For Miss Smith has an unusual gift for being sensitive to the pathos and perplexity of human relations and yet light-hearted and gay. She observes sharply but without malice, and she loves the absurd. . . Among minor characters Miss Spooner is delightful, and the psychic atmosphere of India is powerfully suggested through the rich pictorial detail. Altogether it is a novel that continually captivates by its warm intelligence." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 30 '49 210w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 170:138 F 11 '50 380w

"Miss Smith has such talent and promise that a reviewer must criticise her in the highest category, and I feel the book has a fundamental fault of construction—the long voyage out. Evidently Miss Smith has made this voyage herself, and being so good a descriptive writer, she has enjoyed making her characters go through her own experiences—experiences which we finally see have very little to do with her novel. She has all the equipment to write about people and the interplay of character with an almost Jane Austen-like perception; documentary description doesn't give her talent full play." Michael Swan
+ — New Statesman & Nation 38:492 D 29 '49 360w

"'The Far Cry' marks the first American appearance of a young British novelist of decided merit. Still in her midtwenties, Emma Smith possesses a writing talent that is not only exceptional but also objectively mature. Her delineation of character in 'The Far Cry' is subtle and well-rounded; and the panoramic background which she describes is poetically and vividly clear, evoking mood as well as image." Blythe Morley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 15 '50 600w

"The plot is slight; the characters are few. But this first novel is most impressive as sheer description of a sensitive girl's awakening to the world of color and sound. And since this awakening takes place on the shores of Africa, in the streets of Calcutta and the tea gardens of the Himalayan foothills, all acutely observed by the author herself during a recent trip, the book has also an unusual documentary interest." Nancy Lenkeith
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 15 '50 220w

"For my part, Miss Smith could have gone on a while longer. Her description of the heroine's spangled emotional life hadn't yet palled on me, and, with a single exception, I was quite taken with the company she was keeping. The exception is a greathearted tea planter to whom the heroine, guided by a child's sure instinct for integrity, is strongly drawn. . . 'The Far Cry' is an acceptable, even attractive, book, and it is one that serves to deepen the mystery of why the sour note in a story is so often sounded by a character the author is clearly for." John Broderick
+ — New Yorker 25:94 Ja 21 '50 850w

"Twenty-five-year-old Emma Smith already shows more than mere promise with her sure feeling for compactness and transition, lively dialogue, and sharply balanced characterizations. The slight excess in imagery and occasional tendency to introduce a personal judgment are the only lapses in an otherwise admirably restrained and well-planned novel." K. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 12 '50 310w

"Miss Smith, an astoundingly young woman, has written a novel loaded with a venerable sagacity. It is brilliant. It glistens. It commands, and it utterly seduces the senses. With authority and subtlety she probes her characters. That we remain on the other side, in a way observing the dissection, only heightens the effect. It is almost as if an aura had become tangible." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 33:20 F 25 '50 450w

"Immature in thought though it is, somewhat derivative in style—its brand of sensibility too often echoes Miss Elizabeth Bowen—not very substantial as story telling, this novel . . . has nevertheless a freshness, astringency and poetic awareness that Miss Smith has turned to very good account." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec 183:480 O 7 '49 90w

"Miss Emma Smith writes on a note of feminine sensibility, happily leavened by a sense of the ridiculous which occasionally becomes humour. Her account of the child Teresa's travels, in Africa and India, with her super-egotistical father, Mr. Digby, is in places highly entertaining, and the unfamiliar backgrounds are always keenly observed. . . Her first novel marks a definite advance in her career, and if the influence of Miss Elizabeth Bowen sometimes becomes perceptible, the Far Cry is none the worse for it. The descriptions of Calcutta streets, on the other hand, are a trifle over-documentary, a fault which, no doubt, will disappear with more experience."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p613 S 23 '49 180w

SMITH, EUNICE YOUNG. Jennifer gift; il. by [the author]. 256p $2.50 Bobbs

50-6951

Sequel to The Jennifer Wish (Book Review Digest 1949). The time is 1908 and Jennifer and her family are living in Illinois. For the first time Jennifer is going to a one-room school. But her main achievements are her friendship with a little crippled girl, and her surprise Christmas gift for her family. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 46:266 Ap 15 '50

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 75:988 Je 1 '50 70w

"Little girls will like this world of 1908, so busy and exciting without any television or radio, where horses took you everywhere, and a beautiful lamp was important."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 7 '50 270w

"This sentimental record has occasional sharp observations and witty touches of dialogue which show what the author might achieve if she would lay down those rose-colored glasses." Marjorie Fischer

N Y Times p26 Ap 16 '50 200w

SMITH, GEORGE EVERARD KIDDER. Switzerland builds; its native and modern architecture; phot. by the author. 234p $7.50 Bonnier

720.9494 Architecture—Switzerland

50-58202

"Text and photographs by the author, with a preface which explains the complexities of a tri-lingual country; an introduction by Dr. Siegfried Giedion; maps, old prints, and enlightening sketches all add up to a volume which is far more than a treatise on architecture, native or modern, on plants and hospitals, homes and recreation centers. Rather it is a useful tool for adult education, showing how men in their thoughts and in their use of suitable materials can live with each other, with mountains and in valleys beside brooks and torrents and make a harmonious whole of their existence." Library J

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 75:1509 S 15 '50 100w

"As a gifted architect and a photographer of genius Kidder Smith is unusually well equipped for the task. This superbly produced Swedish book, well designed by the author, relates building to history and landscape as well as to function." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 123:26 D 11 '50 110w

"Some may find the Swiss 'style', if one can use that word so obnoxious to architects, a little stark and overly functional at the expense of warmth and spontaneity, but there is no denying the self-reliance, the engineering virtuosity and the supreme common sense."

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 10 '50 320w

"I wish [the author] had dug a little deeper into that part which already belongs to history. It would have prevented him from making a few mistakes such as implying that modern architecture was christened 'International Style' right at its start. . . Kidder Smith searches with a keen eye and has arranged his material well. . . He sees quite clearly the rather rugged, orderly, thrifty background of the Swiss. His sixty pages on 'native architecture' are excellent, although I wish that he had made more than a passing reference to the Baroque and to the eighteenth-century styles, both of which played so important a part in the Swiss architects' consciousness." William Lescaze

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:39 S 2 '50 1050w

"Mr. Kidder Smith gives an introductory survey of the old buildings of the country, illustrating by some beautiful photographs and a sometimes almost too streamlined text the characteristic response of each canton to the challenge of environment and history. This part of the book will be revealing to architects and laymen alike, for the stupendous natural scenery of Switzerland is apt to distract the attention of the visitor from the works of man. . . Dr. Giedion has written an instructive introduction to the three cultures of Switzerland as a background both to the old and the modern architecture of the country. The book is profusely illustrated and most of the photographs are of an excellent quality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p563 S 8 '50 1800w

SMITH, GUY HAROLD, ed. Conservation of natural resources [contributors: Charles A. Dambach and others]. 552p il maps $6 Wiley

333 Conservation of resources 50-9971

"A collection of essays on various aspects of conservation, written by the outstanding living American authorities. Topics covered include soil conservation, grassland resources, forest resources, water supply, minerals, wildlife, fisheries and man. . . The book is designed primarily as supplementary reading for college students. . . This is the third edition. The majority of the chapters carried over from the preceding edition have been rewritten. Nine of the contributors appear first in this edition." (Library J) This work is a revision of Our Natural Resources and Their Conservation, edited by A. E. Parkins and J. R. Whitaker (Book Review Digest 1936, 1939).

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

"Professor Smith has accomplished wonders with a subject that could have been handled encyclopedically, without color or interest except to those most directly associated with conservation activities. That the book may have wide public appeal is due in no small measure to his editorial capacities and his ability to pass on the torch of inspiration that guided such famous conservation pioneers as 'Teddy' Roosevelt, Charles Van Hise, George P. Marsh, Gifford Pinchot, Major J. W. Powell, Herbert Hoover and the 'Other' Roosevelt." Herbert Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 9 '50 400w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1832 O 15 '50 140w

SMITH, HANNAH (WHITALL) (MRS ROBERT PEARSALL SMITH). Philadelphia Quaker; [her] letters; ed. by her son Logan Pearsall Smith; with a biographical pref. by Robert Gathorne-Hardy [Eng title: Religious rebel]. 234p $3 Harcourt

B or 92 50-9664

Hannah Smith, a celebrated Quaker preacher, was the mother of Logan Pearsall Smith, who selected these letters and edited them. They cover the period between her fifteenth and seventy-ninth year. There is a biographical preface by Robert Gathorne-Hardy.

Booklist 47:95 N 1 '50

Bookmark 10:31 N '50 40w

"On starting these letters one says, 'I wish I'd known this woman.' By the end of the book, one feels he does know her. Hannah Whitall Smith draws her various self in the round with no stroke wasted, and certainly without publication in view." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 O 28 '50 1100w

Kirkus 18:494 Ag 15 '50 170w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 20 '49 290w

"The letters are worth reading as a picture not of the times but of [Hannah] herself."
+ Nation 171:349 O 14 '50 110w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 38:488 O 29 '50 2000w

"These letters glow with the utmost vitality and sincerity of feeling, the most independent powers of observation and remark, and the most gay, warm good humor." K. A. Porter
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 24 '50 1650w

"A charming book, revealing in an intimate and entertaining fashion the personality of a woman who was religious without being sanctimonious and sprightly without being coy." G. S. Stokes
+ Sat R of Lit 33:13 N 4 '50 550w

Reviewed by Warren Postbridge
Spec 183:646 N 11 '49 440w

" 'I have just discovered that my mother was a most remarkable and brilliant letter writer.' This was a remark made by the late Logan Pearsall Smith, who selected these letters and here and there annotated them, to the final editor—Mr. Robert Gathorne-Hardy. Reading the book, few would dispute Mr. Pearsall Smith's claim and all will be grateful to Mr. Gathorne-Hardy for the admirable and workmanlike way in which he has prepared the letters for publication."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p675 O 21 '49 900w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. People named Smith; il by Leo Hershfield. 255p $2.75 Doubleday

817 50-10077

"A compilation of information, a good deal of it very diverting, about the possessors of what is currently by far the most widespread surname in the United States and Great Britain. Mr. Smith, who probably qualified as the most indefatigable of the whole clan, hasn't limited himself to a geographic survey, however. His Smiths turn up in history, fiction, the Social Register, Who's Who, Sing Sing, and elsewhere." New Yorker

Booklist 47:92 N 1 '50

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8 O 8 '50 550w

Reviewed by J. R. Savage
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 8 '50 600w

Kirkus 18:542 S 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Red Smith
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 3 '50 700w

" 'People Named Smith' is chock-full of fascinating information and we have no hesitation in recommending it." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p7 O 8 '50 600w

"An exceedingly thorough piece of work, which may, unfortunately, pall a bit on readers who bear the name of, say, Robinson."
New Yorker 26:140 O 21 '50 80w

"Mr. Smith provides a fine and rich feast of fact and anecdote for anybody—Smiths or others." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 9 '50 1050w

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:36 D 2 '50 650w

SMITH, HENRY NASH. Virgin land; the American West as symbol and myth. 305p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

978 West 50-6230

"A study of the manner in which the West of the nineteenth century influenced and shaped the life and character of American society. During this period of an ever-advancing frontier, such collective representations or images as a westward course of empire, the wild-west hero, and the West as the Garden of the World, achieved almost universal cognizance. It is with these 'symbols' and 'myths,' as they are reflected in the literature of the time, that the author is chiefly concerned." (Library J) Index.

"All in all, this brilliant interpretative analysis will make a permanent contribution to a better understanding of the role of the West in American history." G. C. Osborn
+ Ann Am Acad 272:220 N '50 400w

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 2 '50 500w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p6 O 14 '50 950w

Current Hist 18:230 Ap '50 30w

"Because of the book's specialized approach, and its critical analysis of American nineteenth century novels, periodical articles, poetry and essays, it will be of interest primarily to students of American literature and history." J. E. Brown
Library J 74:492 Mr 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 170:303 Ap 1 '50 1050w

"As one who has spent more than twenty years in his field, working toward the first volume of the trilogy which the book implies, I would not be honest if I failed to say flatly that 'Virgin Land' is magnificent. It is so systematized that sometimes, I think, its explanations are too pat and explain too much. It is so abstracted that sometimes it treats as the cause of historical process an idea which some of us would regard as a result of rationalization. . . But it is a major achievement in both history and criticism, a book which from now on can never be left out of account." Bernard DeVoto
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 9 '50 1700w

"A study that is sure to stand as a lasting contribution to the field opened familiarly by Frederick Jackson Turner and his 'The Significance of the Frontier in American History.' " A. B. Guthrie
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '50 1000w

Reviewed by H. F. Graff
Pol Sci Q 65:637 D '50 550w

"The theme is as old as Homer. This book poses the issues with informed and informing discernment." T. H. Johnson
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 My 13 '50 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:195 Je '50 210w

"Mr. Smith has done a fine and most illuminating study of myth and symbol for a West whose eastern and western boundaries seem to be the Appalachians and the Rockies and whose southern boundary appears to extend diagonally from the western tip of Kentucky to the plains of Texas." R. H. Gabriel
+ Yale R n s 39:746 summer '50 1400w

SMITH, HOWARD KINGSBURY. State of Europe. 408p $3.75 Knopf

940.55 Europe—History 49-11351

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"There are sharp comments on political and economic affairs, many of them startling. Smith's opinions on present day Russia and Germany are particularly worth study."

+ Current Hist 18:100 F '50 70w

Foreign Affairs 28:502 Ap '50 20w

"Howard K. Smith, since 1941 one of America's most familiar evening voices, has managed amid his duties as CBS European news chief to study and ponder as well as to see and report. He has conveyed much of his searching, liberal spirit in his broadcasts. Now he has assembled all that he has learned and felt about Europe—and about America's place in it—in the form of a report that soon turns out to be a tract. And the tract will startle many listeners who have heard Smith's pleasant voice, but not its overtones." W. H. Hale

+ New Repub 122:17 Mr 6 '50 1200w

"Mr. Howard Smith is concerned in the main with what has happened and is likely to happen in the Europe of the Marshall Plan, in the countries on which American policy has been focused. It is, as one would expect, a sombre picture. . . How did it all come about, and who is to blame? . . Mr. Howard Smith is first and foremost a reporter—there are few better—and he is cautious in apportioning responsibility." Aylmer Vallance

+ New Statesman & Nation 39:226 F 25 '50 1500w

"If this catalogue type of book is never easy to read, Mr. Howard Smith has a pretty wit and his book is really worth while. He describes some of his own experiences so that the glow revives." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ — Spec 184:248 F 24 '50 650w

"Howard K. Smith does a brilliant job of providing the background for the current foreground of news stories and radio broadcasts from Europe." Hillier Kreighbaum

+ Survey 86:95 F '50 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p98 F 17 '50 1650w

SMITH, IRENE (MRS LOUIS GREEN). Lucky days for Johnny; il. by Kurt Wiese. (Whittlesey house publication) 64p $1.75 McGraw

50-9236

Story of a small boy whose second grade days were gladdened by a teacher whom he liked very much. Johnny's lucky days included one day which was not a day of the week.

Booklist 47:48 S 15 '50

"Gaiety, bubbling humor, pleasant family relations and excellent characterization make this story of four days in second-grade Johnny's life well-nigh perfect for third-and fourth-grade readers."

+ Bookmark 10:10 O '50 30w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 10 '50 200w

"Keyed to the feelings of children whose early days at school are brightened by an understanding teacher, this unpretentious story radiates sincerity and happiness." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 26:285 Jl '50 100w

Kirkus 18:416 Ag 1 '50 110w

Reviewed by D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 70w

"This delightful, might-be-true story, is exactly right for practice reading for boys of seven or eight. As created by both author and artist, Johnny is most appealing. We hope it often happens, as it did to him, to have a teacher one likes so very much." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 3 '50 180w

"Deceptively simple, this is really an artful little story, written out of a genuine knowledge of the emotions and the humor, both conscious and unconscious, of childhood. It is natural, funny and easy to read." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 27 '50 140w

"This is a friendly, happy story with black and white drawings by a favorite illustrator."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:52 O 21 '50 100w

Wis Lib Bul 46:21 N '50

SMITH, JOE MAUK. Introduction to chemical engineering thermodynamics. 386p $4 McGraw

536.7 Thermodynamics. Chemical engineering 49-50378

"The purpose of this book is to present, from a chemical engineering viewpoint, an introductory treatment of thermodynamics which is sufficiently simple and free from mathematical envelopments that it may be understood by the average undergraduate student. On the other hand, it is designed to be rigorous and sound enough to provide a firm foundation for more advanced work." (Pref) The author is professor of chemical engineering at Purdue University. Index.

"Aside from the confusing statements in the first two chapters and a few minor errors in later sections to which all authors are entitled, Professor Smith has been unusually successful in presenting a modern introduction to the use of thermodynamics in chemical engineering. His book will be widely used for this purpose and also by those who may wish to review or bring themselves up to date in this important field." G. G. Brown

+ — Chem & Eng N 28:1068 Mr 27 '50 320w

"Here we have an excellent new textbook, although certainly not the perfect one on thermodynamics—such there can never be because everyone's ideal coverage would be different." D. F. Othmer

+ Chem Eng 57:320 My '50 450w

SMITH, JOSEPH RUSSELL. Tree crops; a permanent agriculture. 408p il maps $6 Devin-Adair

634.5 Trees. Nuts 50-8655

"A comprehensive survey of the potentialities of nut trees as producers of food and as conservers of the soil. A few other trees and bushes which are not nut trees but do produce food and hold soil on hillsides, such as the carob and the blueberry are discussed also. . . Much of the new material in this edition—and there is a substantial amount of it—deals with progress (and lack of it in some quarters) during the two decades since the first edition of the book was published." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1929. Index.

Booklist 47:118 N 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1832 O 15 '50 180w

"If you're interested, you'd better read this book. The best thing about the author is that he is a practical man. And the next best thing is that he is vitally concerned and wants everyone else to be. That honest concern comes through every line of this volume." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 1 '50 850w

SMITH, LOGAN PEARSALL, comp. See Shakespeare, W. Golden Shakespeare

SMITH, LOGAN PEARSALL, ed. See Smith, H. W. Philadelphia Quaker

SMITH, MRS MAE CONNIE (TROVILLION). Famous pets of famous people; il. by Victor Dowling. 197p $2.50 Dodd

636 Pets. Animals, Legends and stories of 50-5809

"This book, a companion to Famous Dogs, has a similar purpose, that of acquainting its readers with certain prominent figures in the field of history, literature and science. Although the pets make up the major part of the book, it is their famous owners that are featured and portrayed with authentic facts about their ways of life and methods of work." (Introd) Partial contents: Bucephalus, Alexander the Great's war horse that was afraid of his own shadow; Helen Keller, whose early education came from her pets instead of from text books; Ignace Jan Paderewski, and his enthusiastic "pet" audiences; Eugene Field, whose pets kept him from growing old; Raffles, the bird that whistled and talked his way into the United States.

SMITH, M. C.—Continued

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p3 Mr 18 '50 100w

"A welcome addition to our pet story collection." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 5 '50 160w

"Style is uneven; some chapters are very interesting while others drag. Recommended mildly for libraries that were enthusiastic about the first book." Anne Izard
Library J 75:706 Ap 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 4 '50 110w

"Probably because the material was necessarily chosen with an eye to animal interest, it is an oddly varied selection of people presented here. Moreover, the author has a regrettable tendency toward superlatives in describing her subjects. . . However, readers of 10 and up will find this a fairly entertaining collection of animal stories." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p22 F 19 '50 160w

SMITH, MARIAN WESLEY, ed. Indians of the urban Northwest. 370p il maps $6 Columbia univ. press
970.3 Indians of North America. Salish Indians 49-11066

"A group of papers by individual authors, all bearing on the lives and customs of the Coast Salish Indians of the Coast between Vancouver and Portland. There are chapters on diet, religion, crafts, language, and arts. Much of the material was collected under the aegis of Columbia University, where the editor is a faculty member." (Current Hist) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"The reader has difficulty keeping his bearings, with the shifts in localization, level of approach, and intensity of focus that vary with the papers, a difficulty which is not relieved by the device of characterizing the data as Coast Salish. This, however, does not detract from the value of the several studies; they are contributions in a neglected part of Northwest Coast culture." H. G. Barnett
Am Anthropol 52:393 Jl '50 470w

"The sociologist should be warned against the misleading title. The book may be sought in the vain hope that here at last is a much-needed study of the adjustment of Indians to urban life; the phrase 'Urban Northwest' merely has geographic reference. On the whole, however, the book gives valuable data on frequently overlooked aspects of culture among a people who are little known outside the fraternity of ethnological specialists. The book-making is excellent and there are a number of plates and illustrations." Walter Goldschmidt
+ — Am Soc R 15:158 F '50 700w

Current Hist 17:355 D '49 60w

Reviewed by J. J. Honigman
Social Forces 29:93 O '50 400w

"Anthropologists will turn to the volume for papers on specific items of the Salish Indians, their music, languages, folklore, and their baskets, in particular."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:51 Mr '50 200w

SMITH, MOSES. Selective record guide. 300p $4.50 Macmillan
789.9 Phonograph records 50-7372

"Plainly a beginner's book, with a special eye to economy. There are three sections: the basic list made up of 'indispensables,' the second outlining a moderate sized permanent library, and the third embracing suggestions for further development. Each list is fully annotated. The emphasis is on the music itself, with only a casual nod toward interpretations and reproductions." (Library J) Index.

"A top-notch handbook for the record collector—beginning and otherwise—by a distinguished critic who is also a connoisseur of recorded music."
+ Atlantic 185:88 Je '50 120w

Booklist 46:193; 284 F 15 '50; My 15 '50

"Careful exclusion of unnecessary detail and prejudiced opinion enhances the value of this book. With the increased interest in records in Public Libraries, this book should prove a useful handbook for library reference, as well as a practical aid for private collectors."
+ Kirkus 18:48 Ja 15 '50 190w

"By design less comprehensive than the Hall and Kolodin books, this is probably the sanest, soundest and best written of its size and type." P. L. Miller
+ Library J 75:322 F 15 '50 130w

"The book, with its excellent index (which includes performers), might be helpful in forming a record collection in a public library, but only if the librarian felt he could not devote the necessary time to making his own selections from manufacturers' catalogs. The accompanying text, in the style unfortunately becoming more and more prevalent on album liners, would serve as adequate program notes for the novice." M. C. Bartlett
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:571 S '50 800w

"Mr. Smith's advice is balanced and judicious throughout." Howard Taubman
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 30 '50 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 11 '50 190w

"Mr. Smith's musical knowledge is sound and his style easy and readable. His book will be found the answer to many a gift problem." P. L. Miller
+ Sat R of Lit 33:24 Ap 29 '50 400w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 My '50

SMITH, RED, pseud. See Smith, W. W.

SMITH, ROBERT MILLER. One winter in Boston. 393p $3.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster 50-6423

"A cynical success story. . . The setting is Boston during the depression, and the story concerns Emerson [Balzer's] struggle first to get a job, then to be the success he pretends to be. Without the drive or ability to be purposefully unscrupulous, he uses a supposed college background, suave good looks, degrading hypocrisy, to get a temporary department store job. There he meets Mary, similar in background, who helps him and gives him money. He bluffs his way socially, and in the job takes part in petty thievery through his new friend, Cuykendall. Then, when he loses his job, he covers himself by going back as a detective, squeals on Cuykendall, and allows his old friend, Lester, to be falsely involved. This coup finishes his business initiation and gives him a leg up the ladder of success, where Mary would prove a drawback and is ruthlessly left behind." Kirkus

"From the standpoint of its hero, 'One Winter In Boston' is an amoral novel. Emerson is wholly unsympathetic, possessed of traits that would make a conventional sinner blush. Yet, instead of reaping the whirlwind, he winds up on top of the heap. This is realistic, to be sure, but it grates to see the villain answer the final curtain victorious. If this be a flaw, then it is Mr. Smith's only significant one." W.M. Kunstler
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 2 '50 400w

"Well written, with a deftness in dialogue, an ability to evoke the coon skin coat, bootleg era, while focussing on a cast of despicable though pitiful characters."
Kirkus 17:679 D 15 '49 210w

"It is a drab and barren society of which Mr. Smith writes, and he writes about it so convincingly that it is frightening. Unsparingly he gives us a picture of one of the startling phenomena of our culture, the collective personality; the individual who can see himself only through the eyes of others, the man who, for fear of being different can never reveal himself—the total stranger." J. J. Maloney
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 2 '50 600w

"The persons in this novel do not even have enough volition to leave their sick, swart rooms (which are the memorials of their inward malady) and go into the parks or to the river. Almost any regional bumpkin, who has the roots of hills, oaks, fields, in his nature, is a savant compared with these simian city bipeds. This reader, for one, closed Mr. Smith's novel refusing to believe that everyone on this economic and social level can be of such emasculated human texture." Edward Dahlberg
— N Y Times p17 Ap 9 '50 240w

"The men and women involved differ only slightly, and only in gradations of furtiveness, a quality that dominates their talk, their business dealings, and their lovemaking. Mr. Smith succeeds very well in showing us how soiled and dreary these lives are. Whether he should have bothered is another matter."
New Yorker 26:109 Ap 1 '50 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 10 '50 900w
Springf'd Republican p10C My 14 '50 210w

SMITH, SHELLEY, pseud. See Bodington, N.

SMITH, WALTER BEDELL. My three years in Moscow [Eng title: Moscow mission]. 346p il $3.75 Lippincott

327.73 Russia—Politics and government. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. Diplomatic memoirs 49-50332

An account of three years of the cold war in Russia as viewed by the former United States ambassador to Moscow in the period March 1946 to March 1949. Among the subjects discussed are Soviet industry and agriculture, the cultural purge, slave labor, anti-Semitism, the Berlin blockade, the Yugoslav situation, and the possibility of war. The book has been serialized in the New York Times and in shorter form in the Saturday Evening Post. Index.

Reviewed by L. I. Strakhovsky
Am Hist R 55:944 Jl '50 600w

"It is an understatement to say that the book betters its promise. From the first chapter the author displays a discriminating intelligence, a lucidity and cogency of argument, and a breadth of knowledge of Russian history and institutions, that give his work high rank among the best studies of Soviet Policy." P. E. Corbett
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:484 Je '50 1150w

"General Smith 'briefed' himself for his Russian assignment with extensive reading, and his judgments show a keen awareness of the influence of history and geography on Russian policy. His tone is self-effacing, levelheaded, and undogmatic. The result is a very illuminating, readable, and uniquely reliable report, which clarifies and amplifies our knowledge on a wide variety of matters." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 185:82 F '50 750w
Booklist 46:133; 152 D 15 '49; Ja 1 '50
Bookmark 9:105 F '50 60w

"Gen. Smith has made his study as cautiously and analytically as he might have prepared a field order in his capacity as chief of staff to Gen. Eisenhower with the result that his book is both informative and convincing." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p7X Ja 8 '50 700w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 8 '50 700w

"Anyone who has kept in close touch with the reportage from Moscow and the recent books on Russia will find few startling disclosures in the present volume. But as the plain-spoken record of a soldier-diplomat it confirms and documents many a story previously attributed to 'informed sources.'" H. S. Hayward
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 9 '50 1050w

"It is somewhat surprising that General Smith pays little attention to nationality problems in Stalin's multi-national empire. And finally, students of Russian history will not always accept the remarks on Russia's past and its influence on the present. But these are minor shortcomings. General Smith's book will deservedly exercise a great influence on a public eager to receive information on world affairs in our time. It is a human document which happily combines personal stories with interpretations of trends and institutions." Waldemar Gurian
— + Commonweal 51:443 Ja 27 '50 800w
Current Hist 18:164 Mr '50 90w
Foreign Affairs 28:685 Jl '50 60w

"In a very real sense this is a surprisingly useful book. It is, first, as one might expect, a competent and well-written account of our diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia covering a significant three-year period. . . Smith's book is, however, more than a diplomatic history covering three years at an ambassadorial post. It affords us another of those first-hand glimpses, becoming ever more rare, of the economy of Soviet Russia and of the life of its people." C. B. Hoover
+ J Pol Econ 58:264 Je '50 1300w

"A lively and worthwhile account." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:42 Ja 1 '50 140w

"As popular journalism Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith's memoirs of his two and a half years in Moscow were very readable; but were they really worth expanding into a large book? Through no fault of his own, the author really saw extremely little of Russia, and the little islands of solid information contained in the book are scattered through an ocean of 'padding.' . . . All this is written up in an easy but superficial manner, and the Ambassador's attempts at scholarly excursions into the past or into Marxist doctrine are not always happy." A. W.
Manchester Guardian p4 My 2 '50 1020w

"It is no criticism of a brilliant and successful general to say that his account of his ambassadorship to the Soviet Union is a disappointing book on a depressing subject. It is the record of a failure in diplomacy (which almost certainly no living American could have avoided, so stacked were the cards against diplomacy between 1946 and 1949) and it lacks in almost every respect the scale and the depth of the tragedy which General Smith watched at close quarters as a great and victorious coalition broke up into a cold war." Joseph Barnes
New Repub 122:24 Ja 30 '50 1600w

Reviewed by Alexander Werth
New Statesman & Nation 39:520 My 6 '50 1000w

Reviewed by Walter Kerr
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 8 '50 1200w

"General Smith's narrative, whether he damns or praises, is singularly free from the urgent tone of special pleading; he offers no theses for which the foreign Ambassador is inherently unlikely to possess adequate evidence; he avoids speculative flights of pro- or anti-Soviet fancy; he is above all concerned to give an account of his own experience in plain terms. The sense of reality which his book conveys is consequently remarkably strong. . . There are many small points of detail which specialists may question . . . but all in all this remains a model of clear and candid if not very subtle exposition. Above all, it contains a collection of first-hand data (especially on agricultural and industrial production, the state of the churches in Russia and the technique of negotiation) upon which historians of the Soviet Union and its origins will inevitably draw." Isaiah Berlin

SMITH, W. B.—Continued
+ — N Y Times p1 Ja 8 '50 2400w

New Yorker 25:86 Ja 14 '50 120w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Pol Sci Q 65:129 Mr '50 800w

"The book might well have been called 'What I Learned in My Three Years in Moscow' for it is a distillate of the General's experiences and a well-reasoned, utterly unemotional analysis of Russia and Russian policy as he was permitted to see it. 'Beedle,' a good example of the military mind at its best, is not a word-waster, and he crams a great deal into his 346 pages of straight-forward, soldierly prose. . . No one who has read the works of other non-Marxist analysts of Russia will be particularly startled by any of the General's quietly stated conclusions. They are in large part a reiteration of what students of that enigmatic power complex have already reported; their advantage lies in the fact that they bring the picture up to date and they come from a man respected by most Americans." Gordon Pates
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ja 8 '50 1250w

Reviewed by Hallett Abend
Sat R of Lit 33:10 Ja 7 '50 950w

Social Studies 41:380 D '50 10w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Spec 184:542 Ap 21 '50 600w

"This book is in every way an able summary of the situation in Russia today written by a careful and thoughtful observer who is aware both of the strength and of the weaknesses of the Soviet Union." Donald Derby
+ Springf'd Republican p17A Ja 8 '50 500w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p256 Ap 28 '50 1750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:173 Je '50 280w

SMITH, WALTER WELLESLEY. Out of the red; il. by Willard Mullin. 294p $3 Knopf
796 Sports 50-7491

Contains 112 of the sports columns written by the author for the New York Herald Tribune during the years 1945 to 1950. Covers personalities and events in many sports: boxing; baseball; cricket; cockfighting; horse racing; yachting; etc.

Booklist 46:269; 284 My 1 '50; My 15 '50

Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 30w

"Smith has an easy style and dry wit. His casual approach to big and little figures of sports make even his year-old columns good reading."
+ Chicago Sun p4 My 23 '50 150w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 14 '50 100w

Kirkus 18:196 Mr 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 40w

"'Out of the Red' contains several remarkable true stories, involving characters of Hogarthian weirdness, and there are some descriptions of the works of Mother Nature which are—if the author will pardon me for saying so—truly beautiful. The book is illustrated by Willard Mullin, which means that here are joined two of the finest talents of our sports pages today." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 7 '50 1150w

"Reading 'Out of the Red' has been, actually, an educational experience unlike almost anything I have known since first looking into Chapman's Homer. . . I think Red Smith's unique talent—at least my limited knowledge of other sports columnists suggests that it is unique—is his knack of presenting this fabulous world, peopled by Joe Louises and Micky Walkers and Joe DiMaggios and Jet Pilots and duckbilled platypuses, as though it really existed, as though as a matter of fact, Rocky Graziano was a person whom Red Smith had met and talked to, instead of an actor on television." Shirley Jackson
+ N Y Times p18 My 7 '50 550w

New Yorker 26:98 Je 24 '50 170w

"The nicest thing of all about the book is that it doesn't end. Just pick up the Herald Tribune every day (or whichever paper runs him) and there he is, fresh, strangely literate, and funny as ever." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 33:20 Je 10 '50 650w

Time 55:82 My 15 '50 700w

SMITH, WILLIAM GARDNER. Anger at innocence. 300p $3 Farrar, Straus 50-10194

"The scene is a slum in South Philadelphia. The story relates, with compassion, the tragic love affair between a good man and a girl convinced that she is doomed by having been 'born evil.' Ted is, in the Dostoievskian sense, an 'innocent.' Shy and sensitive, his life had been blighted by marriage to a woman whom he does not love; who, scorning him, will not set him free." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) The end is tragedy.

"The whole is, in essence, a bitter commentary on injustice, but it is too immature in its articulation to be effective as a challenge. However, Mr. Smith is a man who obviously has something to say, and his potential power as a social observer is clearly evident." M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '50 390w

Kirkus 18:486 Ag 15 '50 150w

"Violent, brutal in incident and language, this book seems to be, (in spite of much bitterness) a serious attempt to examine the nature of good and evil through a number of characters clearly and realistically drawn. As such it is recommended for collections aiming to include contemporary fiction of literary merit." Robert Kingery
+ Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 130w

"Essentially melodramatic in its plot, frequently rising to scenes of painful violence, 'Anger at Innocence' is nevertheless mainly pitched in a low key. Its muted tone is intentional. By consistent understatement Mr. Smith makes credible a peculiarly baleful environment, and persuades us to contemplate experience in which it would be intolerable fully to participate." Lloyd Morris
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 5 '50 900w

Reviewed by Alan Abelson
N Y Times p24 D 10 '50 170w

SMYTHE, FRANCIS SYDNEY. Behold the mountains; climbing with a color camera; with 57 col. phot. by the author [Eng title: Mountains in colour]. 155p $5 Chanticleer
796.52 Mountaineering. Photography of mountains 49-50218

"A quarto, combining able mountaineer's gift of writing and appreciation of beauty of nature with his skill as photographer, relating his exploits in Himalayas, England, Scotland, Wales, Switzerland, U. S. A. and Canada." Library J

Booklist 46:216 Mr 1 '50

"The blending of prose and pictures is superbly done, and the result is a book to treasure." Will Davidson
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 5 '50 150w

"Here is a contagiously shared passion, given a lively sense of personal adventure and misadventure through anecdotal flavor and a vivid sense of beauties seen and drama experienced. The sections are brief—but the whole forms a superb kaleidoscope of the world's great peaks. The perfect gift for those who share his enthusiasm, and a book for continued enjoyment after the holiday impetus to sales has passed."
+ Kirkus 17:673 D 1 '49 160w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:405 Mr 1 '50 40w

"Fifty-seven plates in full color, this will delight anyone who loves mountains anywhere."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:14 Ja '50

SNOW, CHARLES PERCY. Time of hope. 416p $3.50 Macmillan
50-8342

The second volume of a projected ten, in which the author proposes to present a picture of English life during the first half of the twentieth century. In this volume, Lewis Eliot, the narrator in The Light and the Dark (Book Review Digest 1948) once more takes up the tale, relating the story of his childhood and youth, his training in law, and his unhappy marriage.

"Some readers, I fear, will find the novel turgid. There are times when virtually nothing happens for pages on end. Yet even the arid passages are pieces in the mosaic: they have meaning and a certain bleak power. 'Time of Hope' is a novel in the 18th century tradition, with the faults of the genre and also the compelling virtues." V. P. Hass
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 6 '50 480w

Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 22 '50 300w

"A portrait of the times . . . this story leaves an odd impression of detachment, emotionally, an almost coldly analytical dissection. Better written than the average modern novel, it yet fails to capture the heart of the reader."
+ — Kirkus 18:313 Je 1 '50 230w

"For discriminating readers who enjoy character rather than plot." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 75:1181 Jl '50 130w

Reviewed by Jean Garrigue
New Repub 123:21 O 16 '50 270w

"'Time of Hope' is a good novel, clearly the work of a good writer. But I did not find it as intellectually and emotionally exciting as 'The Search,' and I shall await a few more of the forthcoming eight volumes before claiming to see any special architecture behind the scaffolding." James Hilton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 16 '50 750w

"I found this an absorbing book, a novel in the grand manner made of the stuff that dreams and life are made of." H. F. West
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 16 '50 360w

New Yorker 26:71 Jl 29 '50 160w

"The pages illuminating Eliot's inner nature are magnificent portrayals of an ardent nature tortured by love. They can stand with the finest examples of the novelist's or the biographer's art; one unconsciously thinks of Rousseau and Emma Bovary. In addition, 'Time of Hope' provides a brilliant gallery of characters, each one of whom has a story to tell which contributes to the massive effect of the whole." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 Jl 15 '50 750w

SNOW, DONALD CLIFFORD (THOMAS FALL, pseud). Prettiest girl in town. 280p $3 Harper 50-7723

A novel showing how "the prettiest girl in town" attained maturity thru marriage and motherhood.

"There's a certain honkytonk honesty here, but public libraries will want to watch and ward."
Kirkus 18:146 Mr 1 '50 170w

Reviewed by Nancy Ladd
N Y Times p19 My 28 '50 120w

"The book has humor as well as tragedy and is a commendable start from a young author who should go far." J. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:31 My 27 '50 190w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 70w

SOCKMAN, RALPH WASHINGTON. Higher happiness. 174p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
226.2 Beatitudes 49-50398

An analysis of the Beatitudes which shows how these teachings of Jesus set forth "the higher happiness."

Bookmark 9:105 F '50 30w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun p7 F 19 '50 100w

"Persons who have heard him on the National Radio Pulpit—as practically everyone has, repeatedly—will catch the very tone of his voice here in print, and the familiar but always fresh quality of his thought, and the effective simplicity of his prose." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:242 F 22 '50 140w

"Dr Sockman applies Christian teaching, as it is stated in the Gospels, to the urgent needs of the day. He makes an effective and convincing case that, in those limited areas where it is honestly tested, [it] is found sufficient." N. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 26 '50 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 164:15 My 1 '50 70w

Kirkus 18:52 F 1 '50 130w

"One finishes this reading with a strong feeling that if this is not exactly what Jesus said it is at least what someone should have said. Dr. Sockman is plainly a man who has meditated much on both the ordinary and deep experiences of men, and the results of that examination make an edifying volume." Paul Ramsey
N Y Times p28 F 5 '50 180w

Wis Lib Bul 46:12 Ap '50

SODEN, WILLIAM HORACE, ed. Rehabilitation of the handicapped; a survey of means and methods; with a foreword by Sidney Light. 399p $5 Ronald 331.86 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc.

"A compilation of papers by some 40 leaders in the fields of occupational therapy and rehabilitation." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

School & Society 70:144 Ag 27 '49 30w

"To those interested in human conservation, the symposium offers considerable enlightenment, and should prove of particular value where visual broadening is needed—to the employing industrialist, and the few cerebrally rigid medical directors in industry. . . It deserves its place in all medical, industrial, welfare, and sociology libraries as a good contemporary summary of the day's activities in the preservation and rebuilding of human potential." J. S. Felton
+ Survey 86:158 Mr '50 800w

"The general effect of this symposium is a panoramic and reassuring view of modern rehabilitation, and of the many ways in which it has revitalized concepts of the management of trauma and of chronic diseases. The two-score contributions, many by notable specialists, do not attempt exhaustive discussion of individual problems; this may recommend the book to some readers, to others it may suggest superficiality."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:526 D '49 300w

SOKOLOV, IURII MATVEEVICH. Russian folklore; tr. by Catherine Ruth Smith. 760p $10 Macmillan
398 Folklore—Russia 50-7834

"In the original Russian this huge volume, designed for Soviet teachers and graduate students of Russian folklore, was published in Moscow in 1938. . . The study is divided into three parts. The first part discusses the nature of folklore, the problems of historiography and folkloristics and the theories and contributions to the science made by various Russian and European scholars. . . The second part deals in infinite detail with Russian folklore up to the Bolshevik Revolution. . . The third part deals with folklore of the Soviet period, Russian, as well as that of the other peoples of the U.S.S.R." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

SOKOLOV, I. M.—Continued

Current Hist 19:40 Jl '50 40w

Kirkus 18:125 F 15 '50 210w

"Somewhat obscurely translated (or written) but a must for university and large libraries." E. L. Lewis
+ — Library J 75:396 Mr 1 '50 210w

"The study is enriched with voluminous and exceedingly useful notes, an exhaustive bibliography, a complete list of Russia's 'masters of the popular creative art' and a fine index. Unfortunately the book is rather hard to read. The material is fascinating, and that dealing with the Soviet period is both startling and illuminating, but Professor Sokolov's style, even in the original, suffers from excessive leisureliness, discursiveness and repetitiousness, while in translation, which is, alas, in the case, much too literal and unimaginative, it verges on the soporific." Joshua Kunitz
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 2 '50 600w

"Sokolov's well-documented, vigorously written and systematic survey of his country's folklore is an excellent introduction to the field. Often, the freshness and ingenuity of Russia's oral literature, and especially the musical value of its rhythms, is lost in the translation; nevertheless, the American reader will get some idea here of the scope, themes and poetic power of Russian folklore." Marc Slonim
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 2 '50 900w

"This work has an interest of a kind that could not have been intended by its author. As a comprehensive study of Russian folk literature, past and present—which it was supposed to be—it is disappointing; but as a glimpse into the preoccupations, values, and modes of thought among Soviet scholars it is a revelation." Helen Muchnic
Sat R of Lit 33:13 S 2 '50 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 20 '50 750w

SOLMSEN, FRIEDRICH. Hesiod and Aeschylus. 230p $3 Cornell univ. press

883.2 Hesiod. Aeschylus

"The first part of the book is a study of Hesiod's Theogony and Works and Days (Solmsen agrees with those who deny Hesiod's authorship of the Days), analyzing the relation between the traditional and the novel strands in the two works. The second part examines Hesiod's influence on Solon and Aeschylus." (Ethics) Indexes.

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 60:154 Ja '50 170w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:314 S '49 280w

SOMERS, HAROLD MILTON. Public finance and national income. 540p $5 Blakiston

336 Finance. Income 49-4055

"A comprehensive treatise on public finance from a modern point of view, to include recent developments in government policy, economic theory, and business-cycle analysis. Gives a broad picture of the many points of impact of government policies and of their effects on the general economy of government borrowing and spending and of the various forms of taxation. Some discussion of proposals for tax reforms and inter-governmental relations." (Library J) Index.

"The analysis is competent and, with a few exceptions, each piece of it is well presented. The volume will be useful to many students of the subject. Yet it is not fully successful. . . The book is not an integrated whole. . . A second major defect of the volume, in my view, is the marked lack of proportion in the treatment of various topics, and the great variation in the level of treatment. . . An exception to the generally good quality of presentation is Chapter 2, which presents a statement of the place of government activity in national income concepts that is much more apt to be confusing than enlightening to a reader not already well versed in the field." E. E. Hagen
+ — Am Econ R 40:443 Je '50 650w

"Professor Somers has effectively explored the theory of compensatory fiscal policy as a means of maintaining the national income, stable prices, and full employment. . . His book is a substantial contribution in the application of recent economic theory to public finance." T. R. Snavely
+ Ann Am Acad 268:232 Mr '50 420w

"This book represents one of the most complete attempts thus far to orient a general public finance text in terms of economic effects of expenditure and revenue policies, with particular emphasis on the consequences for the level of national income. Descriptive material is held to a minimum. . . The book is best suited for an advanced course in public finance." J. F. Due
+ J Pol Econ 58:177 Ap '50 700w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:872 My 15 '50 70w

SOMERS, HERMAN MILES. Presidential agency; OWMR, the Office of war mobilization and reconversion. 238p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

355.2 U.S. Office of war mobilization and reconversion

"The political scientist's Baedeker for the jungle of executive agencies established to coordinate executive policies. The OWMR, its predecessors and successors, and the men who ran them, Nelson, Byrnes, Vinson and Steelman, are treated critically in retrospect. The author, whose credentials include service in the WPB, recommends establishment of a permanent Office of Program Coordination in the Executive Office of the President." (Library J) Index.

"The record is useful and useful lessons are drawn from it. But there are eloquent and extensive reticences in the record and inadequate analysis of the lessons: the result falls, so to speak, between the two stools of history and theory. The book is too short to do justice to its aims. On the side of history, the three central chapters spend too much space on background events and policies, at the expense of OWM-OWMR contributions. Also, the story is mainly confined to the Byrnes-Vinson period when the office was in the heyday of its power; the Snyder-Steelman period is passed over briefly and lightly. Yet the decline and fall of OWMR was as instructive as its rise." H. C. Mansfield
+ — Am Pol Sci R 44:1011 D '50 1600w

"Presidential Agency deserves to be widely read, particularly at the present time when the need for closer co-ordination between government agencies is becoming more and more apparent. The fact that the book is well organized and well written enhances both its interest and its usefulness." Leo Fishman
+ Ann Am Acad 272:216 N '50 350w

"A significant contribution to the theory of public administration, but virtually impenetrable to the layman. Serious students of government are advised to carry machetes to hack their way through federal prose, underfootnotes, and initials of government agencies. Thorough, but turbid." Scott Adams
Library J 75:1044 Je 15 '50 130w

"Among the many merits of this book is its indispensability. Here at long last, one hopes, is the beginning of a responsible contemporary literature on the most pressing problem facing Government and the economy today—economic mobilization for war (hot or cold)." Eliot Janeway
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 23 '50 750w

Reviewed by J. D. Millett
Pol Sci Q 65:622 D '50 700w

"This is a clearly written, unprejudiced study." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 6 '50 800w

"Here is a valuable, informative book, made timely not only by our stepped-up remilitarization but by a short concluding section on how to avoid the administrative in-fighting of 1939-46 in the present and future emergencies. For understanding of a deep and important Governmental problem, Mr. Somers should be read. Unfortunately, he hasn't made this easy, for long service in Washington has afflicted his writing style with the disease called Federal prose." P. R. Levin

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:35 O 21 '50 320w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:347 S '50 280w

SOMERVELL, DAVID CHURCHILL. British politics since 1900. 265p $3.75 Oxford

942.08 Great Britain—Politics and government 50-12182

A history of British party politics during the first fifty years of the twentieth century. The author is an English historian, editor of the one-volume abridgement of Toynbee's six-volume A Study of History, and author of English Thought in the 19th Century (1948). Index.

Reviewed by G. J. Scharschug

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 8 '50 280w

"A fascinating account. . . Most important, [the author] has produced an account of British politics as worthy of reading as it is delightful to read." C. H. Weiss

+ Commonweal 53:22 O 13 '50 1050w

Current Hist 19:356 D '50 70w

"Mr. Somervell has written a lively history of party politics covering his own lifetime and that, no doubt, of many of his readers. Since it is hard to examine the history of the past fifty years with the same disinterested gaze that one can apply to earlier ages, such a book unavoidably invites resentments and criticisms. This book will not be palatable to the Left. . . Nevertheless Mr. Somervell deserves congratulation." M. P. A.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 30 '50 360w

"The subject of this book is a lively one, for there has been no lack of drama in British political life during the past half-century, and the author has treated it in a suitably lively fashion. Retired schoolmaster, historian, and digester of Toynbee, Mr. Somervell commands an easy if rather donnish narrative style and shows a considerable gift for candid portraiture." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 171:659 D 16 '50 700w

"It is of course for Mr. Somervell to write history in his own way, but I cannot help thinking it is a pity that he chose this way, for in many previous works he has shown himself a most competent historian. This book indeed is of considerable value to readers content to rely on Mr. Somervell's facts (which are rarely inaccurate, though they sometimes are). . . The first five decades of the twentieth century have been of extraordinary interest politically—and it is an expressly political history that Mr. Somervell set himself to write. His book has a sound index, which makes it a valuable work of reference for the period it covers. A considered history of the half-century has still to be written, and when it does appear it may not very closely resemble the present volume. But meanwhile the present volume serves a useful purpose." Wilson Harris

+ — Spec 184:618 My 5 '50 650w

"The book is well suited to the needs of university scholarship candidates as well as of serious-minded electors. Indeed, the more serious-minded the better, for here, as elsewhere, Mr. Somervell is the best possible corrective to the besetting sin of adolescence and democracy, misplaced solemnity. His judgments are distinguished by that nice balance between charity and pungency which is the prerogative of experienced schoolmasters, and show exceptional political insight. . . It is true that Mr. Somervell has felt it incumbent on him to correct other people's bias on such questions as Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy, but this merely enhances the value of the book to the younger reader, who may be presumed to be sufficiently critical of his parents' failings to justify some attempt to redress the balance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 23 '50 800w

SOMERVELL, HUBERT. Industrial peace in our time; with an introd. by Elton Mayo. 224p $2.50 Macmillan

331 Industrial relations. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Industry and state [50-4948]

"Author states that by the course of industry from the Middle Ages onward, disharmony has developed in industrial relations through the workman losing control of the finished product rather than of the means of production as generally argued; production results from the contributions of property, organization and work; harmony can be recovered by restoring joint control and mutual sharing in the finished product. Exposition based on the Nunn-Bush Shoe Company's share production system, recapturing the workers' whole interest and cooperation for mutual advantage." (Library J) Index.

"The author recognizes many shortcomings in the present industrial structure, and, critical of the promises of communist totalitarianism, he is seeking a more constructive solution. But it is questionable whether vulgar economic history, untrustworthy gross statistics, and a few special case studies of corporate efforts (mostly American) to stabilize seasonal employment provide a sound foundation for the solution of the highly complex problem that Mr. Somervell has set himself. . . The merit of this book lies in the author's awareness of the large-scale disenfranchisement of the worker which has been a concomitant of the expansion of large-scale industry." Eli Ginzberg

Ann Am Acad 272:233 N '50 440w

"An English work with a novel thesis cleverly developed." J. E. Cross

Library J 75:1188 Jl '50 110w

SONNICHSEN, CHARLES LELAND. Cowboys and cattle kings; life on the range today. 316p il $4.50 Univ. of Okla. press

978 Cowboys. Cattle trade. Ranch life 50-14081

"Backed by a Rockefeller grant, Mr. C. L. Sonnichsen, long a teacher of Southwestern literature at Texas Western College, El Paso, traveled 15,000 miles, from Texas to the Tetons, from the corn belt to the Arizona deserts, to gather material for this study of the cow business today—of what sort of people they are, how they are getting along, how their way of life is changing, and what, if anything, is wrong with them." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 47:73 O 15 '50

"A useful, unpretentious book." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 15 '50 900w

"A commendable addition to the long list of worthwhile Americana published by the University of Oklahoma. . . Sonnichsen is a humanist and his interest—and the book's charm—lies in the dwellers on the ranges, the men and women who 'keep alive some of the things this country has always stood for.'" Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p7 S 17 '50 500w

SOODAK, HARRY, and CAMPBELL, EDWARD CHARLES. Elementary pile theory. 73p $2.50 Wiley

541.2 Nuclear physics 50-6807

"Probably not many citizens will ever be concerned with the design of chain-reacting, radio-active piles, but a fair number of scientists are nevertheless curious about their theory and phenomena. This book contains a compact statement of the theoretical knowledge which has been released for publication. It is based upon a series of lectures which were presented by Dr. Soodak at Oak Ridge while he was associated with the Manhattan Project. Dr. Campbell, the second author, is at present on the staff of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory." (Library J) Index.

SOODAK, H.—Continued

"It is doubtful that this book will have wide appeal among chemists in general, but it should prove very valuable to those nuclear chemists whose work or interests demand a somewhat more than qualitative knowledge of pile theory. Several misprints were noted." G. T. Seaborg
+ — Am Chem Soc J 72:5353 N '50 190w

"This mathematical description of the fates of neutrons in a nuclear pile is the heart and purpose of the book. As such it is well done, but most chemists will probably need more to retain their interest or to permit them to make actual calculations." Farrington Daniels
+ — Chem & Eng N 28:4582 D 25 '50 340w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:701 Ap 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:34 My '50

SORENSON, ROY. Art of board membership; foreword by Harper Sibley; cartoons by George Lichty. 160p $2 Assn. press

301.1583 Association and associations. Social work 50-5889

A small handbook for members, chairmen, and executives who must work with boards, or the general public who elect board members. Written primarily for members of voluntary community organizations in the interest of "businesslike methods and good group processes." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:228 Mr 15 '50

Kirkus 18:14 Ja 1 '50 160w

"Recommended for wide distribution." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:403 Mr 1 '50 60w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 S '50

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Altruistic love; a study of American good neighbors and Christian saints. 253p $3.25 Beacon press

171.8 Altruism. Saints 50-8042

"An eminent sociologist deplores the preoccupation of current research with the pathological aspect of human behavior. . . To study the good in society Prof. Sorokin heads the Harvard Center in Altruistic Creativity and Integration. This first report from the Center is a statistico-sociological study of 500 persons honored as 'good neighbors' on the popular 'Breakfast in Hollywood' radio program, 112 people commended for 'good-neighborliness' by Harvard students, and a group of Christian Saints." Library J

Reviewed by J. H. S. Bossard
Ann Am Acad 272:270 N '50 400w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Ethics 61:85 O '50 300w

"This is a worthwhile attempt at a positive view of our civilization and its needs through those individuals of above average (the neighbors) or genius (the saints) capabilities for love, ethical creativity and social living. . . Interesting and heartening reading for use in guiding us toward the development of similar individuals. Inevitably, the market will be limited."
+ Kirkus 18:251 Ap 15 '50 190w

"Should have wide reader appeal." Harold Lancour
+ Library J 75:862 My 15 '50 130w

"The remarkable objectivity of a Kinsey Report seems quite lacking in this study, which starts off with a position that most decent people would accept with or without confirmation from social scientists. The field of ethics and religion in the area covered in this study deals with values and goals, good and evil, and in the present type of sociological study is handled with a good deal of solemnity and pious judgment." I. B.
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 370w

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ag 19 '50 300w

Reviewed by J. M. Paton
Survey 86:568 D '50 750w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Leaves from a Russian diary, and thirty years after. enl ed 346p $3.50 Beacon press

947 Russia—Social conditions. Communism —Russia

To Professor Sorokin's account of his part in the Russian revolution as Kerensky's secretary, published in 1924 [Book Review Digest 1924] is now added a section called Thirty Years after. This is an analytical essay on the Russian revolution as "a gigantic success and a colossal failure."

Am Pol Sci R 44:509 Je '50 30w

Reviewed by P. B. Anderson
Ann Am Acad 272:284 N '50 400w

Reviewed by G. J. Scharschug
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 12 '50 360w

Christian Century 67:563 My 3 '50 420w

Reviewed by Helene Iswolsky
Commonweal 52:252 Je 16 '50 650w

Reviewed by R. E. Kennell
— Crozer Q 27:261 Jl '50 1100w

Kirkus 18:40 Ja 15 '50 230w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 12 '50 60w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 33:55 My 13 '50 240w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 30 '50 650w

SOUTHALL, SARA ELIZABETH. Industry's unfinished business; achieving sound industrial relations and fair employment; foreword by Fowler McCormick. 173p $2.50 Harper

331.1 Discrimination in employment. Industrial relations 50-13412

"This book does not attempt to deal with industrial relations in all kinds of business; its emphasis is on mass-production industries. It draws largely on my experience at the Harvester Company. But it is also the product of information gained through the years from industrial relations managers of other companies, from close association with many private social agencies, and from personal assignments I undertook for government, both municipal and federal. . . I have divided the book into two parts. The first is a general description of big business and industrial relations. . . The second part is concerned solely with one aspect of industrial relations; the employment of minority groups." Pref

Booklist 47:56 O 1 '50

Kirkus 18:275 My 1 '50 220w

"Her book should be read not only by managers and union officials for its technical suggestions, but by all those who have to deal with the defense and strengthening of our ideological position." D. C. Coyle
+ Survey 86:513 N '50 600w

SPAETH, SIGMUND GOTTFRIED. Dedication; the love story of Clara and Robert Schumann [front. and end papers by Fritz Kredel]. 180p $3 Holt

B or 92 Schumann, Clara Josephine (Wieck) —Juvenile literature. Schumann, Robert Alexander—Juvenile literature 50-6819

The love story of Robert Schumann and Clara Wieck is narrated in this book for teen-aged readers. It begins with their first meeting when Robert was eighteen and a student of Clara's father, and Clara was only nine. It ends with their marriage. Lists the recorded works of Schumann. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:277 My 1 '50

Reviewed by Felix Borowski
Chicago Sun p3 Ap 22 '50 110w

"This fascinating little biography is being reviewed as a junior book [but] it makes rewarding reading for any age, from older teen ager to adult." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '50 190w

"There's no great depth here, and little new, but the story makes a sentimental appeal."
Kirkus 18:119 F 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by George Hanson
Library J 75:697 Ap 15 '50 110w

"Dr. Spaeth's stylistic mannerisms are sometimes intrusive, but this is a sympathetic book that achieves its purpose. . . Recommended for all young people's collections, though may be read only by those with serious musical tastes." Clara Adams
+ — Library J 75:1199 Jl '50 90w

Reviewed by Virginia Cunningham
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:483 Je '50 150w

"A musical biography by Mr. Spaeth cannot help but be rewarding. This one is seriously written, for older teen-agers and adults, and is full of interesting musical history, besides its description of the youth of two great musical geniuses." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Ap 16 '50 270w

"The author tells the Schumann story ably, but goes only as far as the marriage. That is making it too easy for himself. Mr. Spaeth not only has wiped out from Schumann's life the shadow of later misfortunes but he even says nothing of the envy of the gods which drove his hero to madness, or of Clara's brave and unsuccessful battle against these gods." H. E. Jacob
N Y Times p10 Ag 27 '50 700w

"The chief value of the book doesn't lie so much in the love story which has become familiar to the average reader but in the stories that lie behind Schumann's compositions which Mr. Spaeth tells with special fervor and understanding." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 23 '50 150w

"Of the Byronic bluebird-chasing and compulsive resistance to normal behavior patterns which characterized his entire life, only occasional glimpses. The whitewash is complete. But it wouldn't be fair to charge the author with any high crimes. There is room for this sort of pie-in-the-sky fictionized biography." James Lyons
Sat R of Lit 33:62 Ap 29 '50 180w

"Through Sigmund Spaeth's skilful presentation most readers will gain increased appreciation for and understanding of the problems of musicians and composers. It will encourage them to go on and read farther in the field." M. R. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 Ag 12 '50 360w

SPANN, JOHN RICHARD, ed. The ministry. 208p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

250 Clergy 49-11646

"Based upon the twenty-ninth Annual Conference on Ministerial Training at Evanston, Illinois, the volume represents the mature wisdom of seventeen eminent Protestant churchmen, each an authority on his special subject. Part I, 'The Minister's Prerequisites,' deals with his qualifications, call, background, preparation, and supreme task. In Part II, 'The Minister's Work,' the following aspects are considered: the minister as preacher, priest, comforter, counselor, religious educator, leader of people and program, and director of public relations. Part III is concerned with 'The Minister's Personal Life' and treats of his health, ethics, temptations, study, home life, and higher compensations." Crozer Q

"In our efforts to recruit men for the ministry, this book will be of invaluable assistance, for it gives a compelling introduction to the meaning and work of the ministry in today's world."
+ Churchman 164:17 F 1 '50 70w

"The chapters are uniformly of a high order with little overlapping, and the total impression is one of unity, comprehensiveness, intellectual honesty, and spiritual persuasiveness. Here is a 'refresher course' for busy pastors, where they may measure their preaching by the insights of Ralph W. Sockman, test their pastoral counseling by the suggestiveness of Otis Rice, and find illustrations and references without which, alas, too many parsons find a book unworthy of their attention. The entering theological student will find the book valuable for orientation. . . If the competent editor had overcome his modesty and had written a longer foreword concerning the actual world in which a minister must do his work, it would have brought a sense of urgency which the book, for all of its worth, does not quite possess. Too often the chapters are more hortatory than provocative, conventional than challenging, descriptive than dynamic." Vaughan Dabney
+ — Crozer Q 27:178 Ap '50 800w

SPEARS, MRS RUTH (WYETH). More painting patterns for home decorators. (Bk2) 64p il $2 Barrows

745.43 Decoration and ornament

Patterns and instructions supplementing the author's earlier work: Painting Patterns for Home Decorators. Contents: Hand-painted trays and tinware; How to use fabric paints; Gifts and home furnishings; Paint your own greeting cards; Kitchen decorations.

Booklist 46:154 Ja 1 '50
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '50

SPECTHRIE, SAMUEL WALDO. Basic cost accounting. 299p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

657 Cost accounting 50-4901

This book "is intended as a text for students of accounting and business who wish to learn the principles, procedures, and executive uses of manufacturing cost accounting . . Each chapter is a full treatment of its considered topic and presents not only the cost principles involved but also the procedures used in their practical application." (Pref) Partial contents: The nature and uses of cost accounting; Outline of the job-lot cost plan; Cost accounting for labor; The normal burden rate; Departmental factory burden rates; Process cost accounting; Operational cost accounting—the basic plan; Cost accounting with the use of cost standards; Cost accounting for residuals and by-products; Cost accounting for joint products. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:1414 S 1 '50 50w
School & Society 72:80 Jl 29 '50 30w

SPEIDEL, HANS. Invasion 1944; Rommel and the Normandy campaigns; introd. by Truman Smith [tr. from the German by T. R. Crevenna]. 176p il maps $2.75 Regnery

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. Rommel, Erwin 50-10416

An account of the Normandy invasion in 1944 by the former German chief of staff of the ground forces in the area. No index.

Reviewed by T. J. Betts
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 5 '50 500w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p20 N 24 '50 800w

Current Hist 19:357 D '50 50w
Foreign Affairs 28:679 Jl '50 100w
Kirkus 18:578 S 15 '50 170w

SPEIDEL, HANS—Continued

"For the military historian, this account . . . should prove invaluable. . . Recommended for larger libraries." A. J. Gaines

+ Library J 75:1823 O 15 '50 110w

Nation 171:661 D 16 '50 220w

"If it were nothing more than an essay in military history, General Speidel's book would still be a notable contribution to the growing volume of literature on the Normandy campaign. The author was Chief of Staff successively to Rommel, Kluge and Model, the German commanders who matched their forces and their wits against the Allies in the first crowded weeks of the Overlord operation, and what he has to say about the German defeat in Normandy is authoritative and of high interest. But 'Invasion 1944' is more than a battle report. It is an absorbing account of the duel between Rommel and Hitler." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 5 '50 1250w

"This book is not history. It is propaganda for a lost cause." Drew Middleton

— N Y Times p40 N 5 '50 800w

New Yorker 26:163 N 4 '50 200w

SPENCER, CORNELIA, pseud. See Yaukey, G. S.

SPENCER, THEODORE. Acre in the seed. 68p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

811 49-10866

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Canadian Forum 29:286 Mr '50 40w

"'An Acre in the Seed' is, and surely will remain, a permanent delight: poetry of experience which is lucid and witty, immediate and ultimate." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 F 11 '50 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 17 '50 120w

"Each of the sixty-six poems in this slender posthumous volume is cast as a sestet. This form, which demands so much more immediacy of effect than the sonnet does, is necessarily epigrammatic, but with gentle skill Theodore Spencer has made it his willing servant. Even in the simple lyrics, the point is made, while at the same time the poet gets through to the emotional association he wishes to evoke, undramatically yet unerringly, too."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:22 Mr '50 180w

SPERISEN, FRANCIS J. Art of the lapidary. 382p il $6.50 Bruce pub.

739.274 Precious stones. Gems 50-6533

Discusses the properties and physical characteristics of precious and semiprecious stones. Includes directions for selecting, grinding, polishing, and carving stones. Intended for the amateur. The author is a professional lapidary. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:272 My 1 '50

"There is nothing superficial about this new work on gems and gem cutting even though it is intended for amateurs." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:701 Ap 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:40 My '50

"A thorough and authoritative treatise. . . Mr. Sperisen's writing is simple and clear, and he has made good use of more than 400 pictures and diagrams to illustrate his text. The volume looks as though it will be the definitive work on the subject for some time to come." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 2 '50 220w

"Carefully prepared in easy-to-understand language, this book should be extremely useful and interesting for the teacher and hobbyist alike."

+ School Arts 49:4a Je '50 100w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Voyages of Christopher Columbus; il. by [the author]. (Landmark bks) 186p $1.50 Random house

Columbus, Christopher—Juvenile literature 50-11712

Fictionized biography of Christopher Columbus for ages nine and over. This is the first in a new Landmark series of books, each intended to "bring to life a great event in our nation's past."

Booklist 47:142 D 1 '50

"The story is familiar, but 9 to 12 year olds will find new life breathed into its hero, as, in this dramatic, sympathetic account, they share the triumphs and heartbreaks of a man whose courage and refusal to give up his vision may not have brought him to the Indies he sought but did succeed in turning men's eyes in the direction of our own land." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 12 '50 210w

Kirkus 18:423 Ag 1 '50 190w

"Mr. Sperry brings all his feeling for the sea and his ability to tell a brisk adventure story to his tale of Columbus; his hero is appealingly real and his fine pictures a moving, dramatic unit." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 120w

"The child who reads this volume will never forget Columbus, the man, his work, or his place in history." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '50 40w

SPERRY, WILLARD LEAROYD. Ethical basis of medical practice; with a foreword by J. Howard Means. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 185p $2.50 Harper

174.2 Medical ethics 50-3852

This book had its beginnings in an attempt to answer some of the moral questions put to the author by doctors at the Massachusetts General Hospital. The author is Dean of the Harvard Divinity School. Partial contents: The specialist and the general practitioner; The nature of conscience; Codes of medical ethics; Democratic vs. totalitarian medicine; Telling the truth to the patient; Euthanasia—pro; Euthanasia—con.

"Only on two points does the author become completely serious and strive to get down to their ethical basis. These deal with the significance of the individual patient, his rights and the doctor's duty toward him; and the subject of euthanasia. Regarding these matters the author has thought and felt deeply, has reasons and convictions, speaks with fine precision and moving eloquence. On other matters he speaks generally and, for the most part, tentatively." H. S. Tigner

+ — Christian Century 67:893 Jl 26 '50 550w

"This book is far more than a code for physicians. Specifically, it is something which has been badly needed for a long time, not only by doctors but by all professional persons, a modern 'Religio Medici.'" F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p43 S 10 '50 270w

"Competent studies of the ethical principles and problems relating to medical practice have been rare. That a divinity school dean should have produced such a study—one so replete with wisdom about and detailed insight into the moral dilemmas of the medical practitioner—speaks both for the author's breadth of concern and for the intimate connections between the vocations of physician and pastor."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:297 S '50 220w

SPICER, BART. Blues for the Prince. 249p $2.50 Dodd

50-7545

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun p5 Je 6 '50 60w

"Conceited sleuth's tiresome narrative dulls interest in yarn unrolled in novel setting."

— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 6 '50 50w

"Not much of a puzzle but interesting because of its jazz background, and the excellent job Mr. Spicer does of showing the relationship between whites and Negroes both in the unbiased world of jazz and the more deeply biased outside world."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 4 '50 160w

"On the subject of jazz, the author is erudite and interesting, but his first person narrator is that tireless and by now fairly tiresome private eye who usually packs a 'persuader,' invariably 'shrugs' into his topcoat, and 'manages a leer' for every dame in sight." Hillis Mills
+ — N Y Times p16 My 28 '50 130w

"Devotees of jazz and blues should find it extra interesting. As murder yarn it packs plenty of excitement and unusual characters. High-grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 My 20 '50 30w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. My gun is quick. 250p $2.50 Dutton 50-5643

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p5 F 24 '50 50w
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 19 '50 50w

"Tough, gory and painfully sentimental, this mystery is the essence of all 'private eye' stories—to the point of sounding like a parody on the better ones."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 26 '50 140w

"As ammunition for the various bodies crying for the suppression or control of crime writing, this new Spillane could hardly be surpassed; as a detective story, it is inferior to his 'I, the Jury' in plot (which is both strained and obvious) and writing (which often approaches parody), but fully equal to it in its attempt to see how far uncensored publishing can go." A. B.
N Y Times p14 F 12 '50 110w

"There is so much bang-bang about this one that you may overlook the fact that the solution is pretty obvious all the way through. We feel pretty sure, however, that you'll read on for sensation's sweet sake even though you figure things out long before Mike Hammer did." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 12 '50 150w
Sat R of Lit 33:32 F 18 '50 50w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. Vengeance is mine! 255p $2.50 Dutton
50-14876

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:439 Ag 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
N Y Times p30 N 5 '50 140w

"Eight people die and it all sounds hackneyed and in execrable taste, but Spillane fans won't care." L. G. Offord
— San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 29 '50 80w

"If you like your mystery fiction tough, racy and told with gusto, then 'Vengeance Is Mine' will not only satisfy but will rank right up at the top of the list." D. F. M.
Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 150w

SPILLANE, MICKEY. See Spillane, F. M.

SPINDEN, HERBERT JOSEPH. Tobacco is American; the story of tobacco before the coming of the white man. 120p il maps $5 N.Y. public lib, 5th av & 42d st, N.Y. 18

394.1 Tobacco—History 50-3963

"This is the second publication of the Arents Tobacco Collection. . . The present volume is an orderly, brief, scholarly survey of the subject with a convenient bibliography. . . The author concludes that the history of tobacco is the record of its 'spread and acceptance from an original American focus of invention. This focus must, I think, have been the highland area of Central America, extending perhaps into southern Mexico.' " Library J

"While it is addressed primarily to the inquiring layman, it is the kind of book which would be very useful in libraries wishing a small book covering the subject; for this is a scholarly, authoritative, and yet concise little volume presented in an attractive format." Theodore Bolton
+ Library J 75:982 Je 1 '50 280w

"Scholarly and engaging little treatise."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 S 16 '50 180w

SPINKA, MATTHEW. Nicolas Berdyaev; captive of freedom. 220p $3.50 Westminster press

B or 92 Berdi͡aev, Nikolaĭ Aleksandrovich
50-7913

"Nicolas Berdyaev was born in Russia in 1874 and died in France in 1948. During the span of his life he wrote some thirty books, many of which were translated into English and published in this country, where he is known primarily as a philosopher of religion. . . Professor Spinka devotes the first part of [his book] to Berdyaev's life, the second part to his ideas." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"This cogent volume gives us a fine study of [Berdyaev's] work in religious philosophy." A. W. Taylor
+ Churchman 164:17 Ag '50 140w

"This is indeed a most welcome contribution to the study and analysis of Berdyaev's thought. The late philosopher, outstanding both in the field of purely Russian religious experience, and on the wider scale of what Mr. Spinka calls Berdyaev's 'world-view,' has left us a spiritual legacy, still partly unexplored and therefore often puzzling. Matthew Spinka has done much to clarify and bring into focus the main points of Berdyaev's message." Helen Iswolsky
+ Commonweal 52:418 Ag 4 '50 700w

"One of the great religious figures of our time was the Russian philosopher about whom this book is written. He died in 1948 at the age of seventy-four, leaving behind him thirty-four books. Gradually these books have been translated into English, but there are still many of them inaccessible to the reader who does not know Russian. It is therefore fortunate that Professor Spinka, one of our leading American authorities on the Russian church, has written this volume on the life and thought of Berdyaev, and that he has included in it extensive passages translated from the Russian works not so far available in English." E. E. Aubrey
+ Crozer Q 27:352 O '50 600w

"The book is particularly timely as it outlines a Christian philosophy to explain and resist and overcome communism. As Berdyaev had been a Marxist and had known communism from the inside, this element in his philosophy is particularly pertinent. Theologians and others interested in securing a religious basis for a positive world outlook in the face of threatening communism should find this book of unusual value."
+ Kirkus 18:172 Mr 15 '50 230w
Sat R of Lit 33:34 Ag 19 '50 230w

SPITZ, DAVID. Patterns of anti-democratic thought. 304p $4.50 Macmillan

321.6 Democracy. Authority. Political science
49-8944

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"The almost exclusive emphasis Mr. Spitz chooses to lay on the Right, at a time when the greatest confusion in men's minds, or certainly in the minds of the intellectuals, lies in deciding the issues between communism and democracy, entails the flogging of many a dead horse. . . Moreover it is debatable whether many of these critics ever exercised any great influence on American thinking. But if one regards the book as a serious though restricted attempt to analyze certain past and present arguments against democracy, it does have real historical value." E. A. Clark

SPITZ, DAVID—Continued
Am Hist R 55:336 Ja '50 330w

"The reservations which have been expressed here by no means alter the judgment, already indicated, that Patterns of Anti-Democratic Thought merits a high place on any current list of significant readings. If it has become trite to observe that democracy is seriously challenged today wherever it exists, the challenge remains none the less the most urgent problem of our time. Without minimizing their seriousness, Dr. Spitz convincingly builds his thesis that 'the various and successive attacks on democracy have failed to validate themselves.' The demonstration is instructive and important." M. E. Frankel
+ — Columbia Law R 49:1021 N '49 1600w

"This is a useful enterprise carried through with conviction and dash and ingenuity. There are much less noble things than for a man to take his stand with men, feeling the weaknesses of others in himself and putting to their service whatever superior strength or virtue he may feel in himself." T. V. Smith
+ Ethics 60:148 Ja '50 280w

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich
Harvard Law R 64:180 N '50 800w

"Dr. Spitz has achieved his limited objective of political exposition, criticism, and commentary with a high degree of scholarly excellence and effectiveness. There is still room for further philosophical analysis of some of the thinkers he has partially dissected. The irony of his effort is that it comes at a time when it may be welcomed as a complete compendium of American anti-democracy by some extremists who are loudly asserting their monopoly of true democratic faith at the same time that they are doing their best to hinder the practice of democracy." H. A. L.
J Philos 47:444 Jl 20 '50 750w

"On the critical side, it appears that too much zeal in attacking the critics of democracy sometimes leads the author to identify such criticism with anti-democratic thought. Men like Sait and Irving Babbitt were not primarily opponents of democracy: they were great idealists and moralists pointing out the weaknesses of men and urging them to a higher life of integrity and moral ideals, without which no decent form of government can survive. . . The author does well, however, to attack the 'omniscient pretensions and schematic over-simplifications' (p. 23) of those who assert the necessity of a 'ruling class.' . . His real triumph is that he shows the emptiness of anti-democratic thought when contrasted to the oligarchical alternative and that he demonstrates the ancient truth that rule by force alone is the negation of reason and morality." W. A. Morton
+ — J Pol Econ 58:84 F '50 850w

Reviewed by K. V. Lottick
Social Educ 14:142 Mr '50 1000w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:373 S '49 360w

SPOEHR, ALEXANDER. Majuro; a village in the Marshall islands. 266p il maps pa $3.50 Chicago natural hist. museum

996.5 Majuro

"The native atoll village of Majuro in the Marshall Islands, like various others in eastern Micronesia, has been subject to domination by a succession of outside groups: the traders, the missionaries, the Germans, the Japanese, and now the Americans. But instead of being completely demoralized and disorganized as a result of this series of impacts, the Marshallese of Majuro have ridden out the storms, accepting and adapting what pleased them, rejecting what did not, until today they have an integrated, fairly stable culture. Dr. Spoehr's monograph is a product of one of the CIMA projects in American Micronesia carried on in 1947. It is an account of the 'formal social organization' of the village. The picture he presents, although it has some distinctive aspects, is fairly representative of many other atolls of the Trust Territory." Geog R

"In addition to being well written, the book is amply illustrated with sketches, charts, maps (constructed by the author with plane table and alidade), and photographs. It is unlikely that the CIMA investigations will give rise to a more charming product." R. E. Murphy
+ Geog R 40:504 Jl '50 470w

"Intended primarily for anthropologists, but of interest to a much wider audience. . . Administrative officers in the Micronesian field and students of cultural change will find this a most useful volume."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:177 Je '50 200w

SPOTTISWOODE, RAYMOND JOHN. Grammar of the film; an analysis of film technique. 2d ed 328p il $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

791.4 Moving pictures 50-7096

"This book, a study of the cinema as a prospective art form, presents aesthetic, technical, and historical discussions of the motion picture. The author defines technical terms, describes the basic tools, and clarifies the concepts of the cinema. Techniques and methods are analyzed in detail: camera angle, movement, speed, the close-up, the cut, sound in all its uses. Various kinds of film are described, and the many definitions of 'documentary' are considered. . . Originally published in England by Faber and Faber in 1935." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This is certainly one of the most outstanding books on the techniques and aesthetics of motion pictures written by a man who understands clarity and its application to criticism. Director, cameraman, writer, critic and the ordinary spectator will all relish this. Highly recommended for cinema collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:870 My 15 '50 50w

Reviewed by Seymour Stern
N Y Times p14 Ag 6 '50 950w

Reviewed by Cecile Starr
Sat R of Lit 33:48 O 21 '50 800w

STACK, HERBERT JAMES, and others, eds. Education for safe living. 2d ed 447p il $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

614.8 Safety education 49-11439

"A book planned for teachers, giving principles of education for safety from elementary grades to college, with suggested projects, reading references, program planning, and a chapter on audio-visual aids. Partial contents: The psychology of accident prevention; Home and farm safety; Fire prevention and fire protection; Traffic safety programs and driver education; First aid treatment; Methods and organization in secondary schools; Safety education for college students and adults." Booklist

"Addressed primarily to school administrators, this second edition continues to be the leading textbook in the field of accident prevention. Those engaged in any field of safety will find in this text a complete orientation in the subject." E. M. Hendriksen
+ Am J Pub Health 40:215 F '50 300w
Booklist 46:203 F 15 '50

STAFFORD, GEORGE THOMAS. Preventive and corrective physical education; il. with phot. and drawings by Gene A. Logan. rev ed 312p $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

615.82 Physical education and training. Gymnastics, Medical 50-9018

" 'The author has attempted to present in one volume the modern concepts of the therapeutic exercise phase of physical medicine in the prevention and correction of common handicapping conditions.'—Preface. First published in 1928, now revised to include new technique developed during World War II, and the experience of Veterans Administration hospitals." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 47:118 N 15 '50
School & Society 72:64 Jl 22 '50 20w

STALLINGS, ROY, and MYERS, PAUL, comps. Guide to theatre reading; under the editorial supervision of George Freedley; foreword by Rosamond Gilder. 138p $2.50; pa $1.50 Nat. theatre conf, B. S. Leathem, exec. sec, Western Reserve univ, Cleveland

016.792 Theater—Bibliography. Drama—Bibliography 49-6280

"Under the supervision of George Freedley, theatre curator of The New York Public Library, the editors of this volume have gathered in easy-to-read format a selected bibliography of works which have appeared since 1932, to serve as link to 'A Theatre Library,' by Rosamund Gilder [Book Review Digest 1932]. . . The book's contents are categorized as theatre practice, biography, English, American, Continental, and Oriental historical theatre, historical theatre (survey), drama as literature, dramatic criticism, production, acting, educational theatre, and esthetics of theatre. A brief résumé and paragraph on the author follow each entry, but prices are omitted." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 46:195 F 15 '50

"Meant for students, professionals, and interested laymen." Rochelle Gibson
Sat R of Lit 32:30 D 31 '49 140w

STAMPFER, JUDAH LEON. Jerusalem has many faces [poems] with an introd. by Ludwig Lewisohn. 92p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

811 50-7027

"[This] is the work of a young man of twenty-six, a student in American universities and a fighter for fourteen months in war around Palestine. This volume was awarded the Abram Leon Sacher prize for the best unpublished piece of creative Jewish writing during the past year." Nation

"It will certainly find favor among the author's co-religionists and among all those whose hearts respond to the promise of the new state in Palestine, and there will be a limited but warm audience to receive this book with acclaim." M. S. C.
+ Kirkus 18:86 F 1 '50 160w

"Mr. Stampfer has responded, this work indicates, to more than one kind of experience; those most deeply felt have not always produced the best poems, which is a very smug criticism to offer indeed, considering the nature of that experience. The music varies, some of it conventional, some of it experimental. . . There is also a very rich sensuous quality which I hope in time will overpower and beat down Mr. Stampfer's impulses toward the declarative." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 171:91 Jl 22 '50 150w

"The most successful poems are the Biblical narrative; a number of the vignettes of Israeli life; and a fantasia on romantic themes, 'The Romantic Poet.' The topical satires tend to become shrill; and the most personal of the poems are turgid at times. At their best, however, these poems present their observations and self-examinations with economy and vividness." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p33 Mr 26 '50 190w

"Judah Stampfer is a new poet who is going to be heard from. . . He is an American poet and an authentic Jew, proud of his ancestry as he contributes to the best writing tradition in America. There is no dichotomy between the two; with Israel a nation he can still live here and enrich the language that is his mother tongue. His poetry holds the wisdom of his profound heredity, but his poems are genuinely American." I. L. Salomon
+ Sat R of Lit 33:26 Ag 5 '50 470w

STAMPP, KENNETH MILTON. And the war came; the North and the secession crisis, 1860-1861. 331p il $4.50 La. state univ. press

973.713 U.S.—Politics and government Civil war. Secession 50-9835

"A documented, scholarly investigation of the growth of war fever in the North prior to the Civil War. The author discusses the disunionists both Northern and Southern, the party men who played politics, the businessmen who foresaw the loss of Southern markets, and those men who sincerely believed the Union must be preserved." Booklist

Booklist 47:134 D 1 '50

"One of the most scholarly and provocative books written in this much worked-over period." Avery Craven
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 D 2 '50 800w

STANDEN, ANTHONY. Science is a sacred cow. 221p $2.75 Dutton

501.8 Science—Methodology 50-5956

"In this book, the author, a chemist of high repute, attempts to cut away the pretensions of modern scientists and lay bare their limitations, which to him seem considerable. . . The serious side of his purpose is, he says, to warn the public that blind obeisance to science can be perilous—that scientists, in their pursuit of 'pure science' and science for science's sake, have forgotten that the proper study of mankind is man, and are too inclined to look upon man as something to experiment with." New Yorker

Booklist 46:257 Ap 15 '50
Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 30w

"The breezy but not flippant style is easily readable and effective. The writing seems at first simply the venting of the feelings of an irritated man. But thoughtful reading shows a man laughing, as he recommends, at the sophists who are cluttering the field in their scramble to impress themselves and others through sloppy, wordy attempts to assume a glowing mantle of science. He argues convincingly that the sacred cow cult had better be laughed out of the picture." R. L. Kenyon
+ Chem & Eng N 28:2122 Je 19 '50 1100w

"The book isn't just a gag. It is meant to be taken seriously. Impressive learning and thinking are behind it. It will irritate a few scientists. It will stimulate most." L. B. P.
+ Chem Eng 57:319 My '50 950w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 12 '50 160w

"There is a pressing need today for clear and piercing thinking about the natural and social sciences. Too often the slogans of 'objectivity' and 'the scientific method' are used to buttress unscientific reasoning and analysis. The limitations of the various scientific fields require careful examination, and the general laws discovered in these fields must be interpreted in the light of these limitations. Unfortunately, the present author's ridicule and satire do not meet this need." Karl Willenbrock
Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 31 '50 600w

"A comptometer could scarcely register the number of times that Mr. Standen, during the coming months, is going to be called 'irresponsible.' How many times he is going to be proved mistaken or illogical, however, is something very much else. In the meanwhile, it may confidently be expected, there is going to be a great swelling of sound in our land. It will be the chucklings and thigh-slappings and heart-warmed guffawings of great myriads of readers who belong to the race of the Everlasting Man, the human man, the one with the soul and the freedom. It will be a lovely sound to hear." Alan Devoe
+ Commonweal 51:634 Mr 24 '50 600w
Kirkus 18:18 Ja 1 '50 340w

"There is, of course, some truth in what Mr. Standen has to say, but it is lost in his humorless and sweeping denunciation of all things scientific." J. E. Brown
— Library J 75:317 F 15 '50 130w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
Nation 170:350 Ap 15 '50 1260

"All this is worth doing, and now and then Mr. Standen does it very well indeed. But such an attack is on the outposts of science, slapping down the charlatans and the pretenders,

STANDEN, ANTHONY—Continued
tightening the concepts, keeping scientific inquiry in its proper channel of meaningful questions. It is not an attack on the citadel of science—rather an attempt to make the citadel more secure." Stuart Chase
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 23 '50 1000w

"Mr. Standen's book is a wholesome effort to expose the sophistry of science and the overextension of the scientific method into fields where they have no place. If this reviewer had his way he would administer a chapter or two every hour to all teachers of science in the hope that they would be induced to talk plain English and to toss away the halos they have given themselves." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '50 700w

"A deft and telling piece of work."
+ New Yorker 26:104 Mr 11 '50 140w

"This book could have been more amusing—and more serious—had the things which are obvious to the people on the inside been more thoroughly examined." J. W. H.
San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ap 16 '50 500w

Reviewed by E. DeGolyer
— Sat R of Lit 33:29 Ap 8 '50 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:167 Je '50 240w

STANDISH, ROBERT, pseud. See Gerahty, D. G.

STANFORD, ANN. White bird. 58p $2.50 Swallow, A.
811 50-2885

This collection of poems by an American author includes selections from an earlier out-of-print book, In Narrow Bound, as well as new poems.

"Miss Stanford does fine work, more interesting when she begins to risk mistakes and strike out more boldly into realms of more richness, romance, and sensuous rhythm." Rolfe Humphries
+ — Nation 170:235 Mr 11 '50 230w

"Ann Stanford's brief poems are formal, carefully composed, with a quiet intensity that cuts vertically to the core of the matter. . . Her feeling for the natural world is an accurate recording of the California scene. . . Mrs. Stanford prefers a solitary walk through a non-peopled landscape. She resents the intrusion of the outer world. . . Of that intrusion, the destructive bulldozer is a local symbol; and, internationally, the 'oily flood' of malevolent power and greedy preparations for war. Her voice here becomes a little too shrill and bombastic in spite of some memorably epigrammatic couplets." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 20 '50 200w

"When the poet is equally moved by a sunbath, a rebuke, or an international conference, the reader begins to suspect that the poet is on the watch for occasions, rather than themes, for poems. This monotony is emphasized by the excessive regularity of rhythm." Milton Crane
N Y Times p18 F 5 '50 100w

"Miss Stanford at her best writes descriptive poetry in which she realizes with accuracy the details of nature, and employs them as figures for human experience. The themes of such poems are thoroughly conventional—love, loneliness, permanence and change—and they have validity as they are restated with intensity and originality of style. The defects of her poetry in this kind are its occasionally vague or commonplace epithets, and its occasionally derivative style." Arvid Shulenberger
+ — Poetry 76:365 S '50 400w

STANFORD, JOHN KEITH. Awl-birds; il. by A. M. Hughes. 89p $3 Devin-Adair 49-50277

The avocet, a rare and beautiful bird, which has not nested in England for over a hundred years, has recently returned and is once more raising its young there. On this fact, an English author bases this brief novel on the adventures of a war-weary ornithologist and a ruthless egg collector.

"[Derick's] persistent defense of the lovely 'awl-birds' is set forth in a beautifully written novelette, nicely complemented by line drawings."
+ Bookmark 9:161 Ap '50 50w

"The story is ably supported by illustrations by A. M. Hughes. His subjects include not only the avocet but also ducks, terns, gulls, stone curlews, plovers, and of course the bittern and the bearded tit. . . The theme of Stanford's story is of wide appeal. The ever-growing number of bird watchers will enter at once and eagerly into the excitement of 'The Awl-Birds.' The unfortunate indifferent will catch some of the thrill of nature study from a reading of this book." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 25 '49 250w

"Primarily of interest to bird lovers but charming story, wonderful sketches by A. M. Hughes, full page and smaller cuts (comparable, if not superior to Francis Lee Jaques) and beautiful format make this book a joy to read and of wide appeal." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1906 D 15 '49 80w

"Any reader who likes birds will enjoy this little gem of nature writing because it has to do mainly with birds, is well written and is delightfully illustrated." John Kieran
+ N Y Times p6 D 25 '49 450w

"Mr. Stanford's brief story of Derick's efforts to protect the avocets is a thriller, and although it is fiction, it is based on fact." L. M. Halle
+ Sat R of Lit 33:35 Je 10 '50 180w

STANFORD, JOHN KEITH. Guns wanted; with il. by A. M. Hughes. 348p $2 Scribner 50-215

A sporting novel of postwar England, told in the tradition of the old England.

"Readers who are quite contentedly and irreclaimably city-pent will probably find this book far more fun than a week-end trip to the country." J. A. Clark
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 23 '50 370w
Kirkus 18:37 Ja 15 '50 170w

"Humor varies from Evelyn Waugh-like satire and ridicule of amoral society and politico-black-marketeers, to the gentle touches of Angela Thirkell and the hearty laughter of Surtees at would-be sportsmen. Author's splendid characterization, authentic bird lore and A. M. Hughes illustrations make an exceptional book." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:492 Mr 15 '50 140w

"This elaborate but small joke about huntin' and shootin' in Britain is spread a great deal too thin for any but the most determined Anglophile." Anthony West
N Y Times p20 My 14 '50 470w

"It is a good humored, extremely well-written, and thoroughly entertaining story of some remarkably well-drawn country and country types." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 30 '50 550w

"The texture of 'Guns Wanted' is very uneven. In the passages where Mr. Stanford is describing the actual scenes of sporting life he writes vividly and well. But his portraits of London society and of black marketeers are uneasily artificial, while his dialogue is written in a kind of Wodehousian patois which rarely convinces the reader. Nevertheless, on its own rather shallow level this is an entertaining book and it does provide an interesting subjective portrayal of a dying class and its values." George Woodcock
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:15 Je 3 '50 500w

STANFORD short stories, nineteen fifty [by] Clay Putnam [and others]; ed. by Wallace Stegner]. (V4) 237p $3 Stanford univ. press

Short stories—Collections (47-5367)

Contents: The wounded, by Clay Putnam; The lady, by Donald Justice; A warm hand, by N. V. M. Gonzalez; The cannibal pot, by Maxwell Arnold; El Conquistador, by Thomas Doyle; The morning star, by N. V. M. Gonzalez; A start in life, by R. G. Kelly; Big Chlorinda, happy Chlorinda, by P. H. Lowrey; The fields of wheat, by J. A. Lynch; The big grey picnic, by Harry Muheim; The flimsy walls, by C. W. Parker; The lady walks, by Jean Powell; The old acrobat and the ruined city, by Clay Putnam; The grass on the other side, by Leslie Smith; No meadow lark song, by Elizabeth Thompson; The yellow turtle-neck sweater, by Milton White; The thing in their hearts, by Elizabeth Wolfe; The long hot day, by P. F. Zelver.

"Any reader who approaches this book patronizingly, as if it were just so much 'student' work, is in for a shock. Naturally, these stories vary in quality; but taken all together they exhibit a remarkable degree of authority and skill, and a wide spread of effectiveness." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 9 '50 280w

New Repub 123:21 Ag 7 '50 100w

"The students who wrote these stories have chosen no ivory tower. Perhaps the greatest criticism that can be made of this good selection is that there is no ivory tower at all evident in the stories, and there is hardly any laughter. A good liar is a grand storyteller, and there is no lying in these stories, and that is their major fault." W. B. R.

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 3 '50 650w

"The present volume should perhaps not be judged too strictly for it contains the work of new writers in the creative-writing classes at Stanford University. The best of these new writers is Clay Putnam, a twenty-six-year-old Oklahoman. His two stories, 'The Wounded' and 'The Old Acrobat and the Ruined City,' reveal a masterly craftsmanship and a vigorous imagination. . . The other writer whose work stands out in this volume is P. H. Lowrey, of Mississippi, of the same age as Putnam. 'Big Chlorinda, Happy Chlorinda' is a weave of characterizations expertly and beautifully done. The rest of the stories are, at best, journeyman work, competent but without much distinction." J. G. Villa

+ Sat R of Lit 33:26 Jl 29 '50 300w

STANLEY, FAY GRISSOM. Murder leaves a ring. 250p $2.50 Rinehart 50-12466

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:572 S 15 '50 90w

"Pleasant atmosphere and some good dialogue."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 10 '50 230w

"Her career-girl protagonists are believable, her dialogue is lively—and she may go quite a way if she can develop some individuality in plot and story-telling. This first is a conventional standard specimen of the Imperiled Heroine school, but quite a bit more readable than most." A. B.

+ — N Y Times p39 N 26 '50 80w

"Formula stuff, brightened up by good characterization."

New Yorker 26:168 N 4 '50 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 17 '50 100w

Sat R of Lit 33:44 N 25 '50 50w

STANLEY, FRANK ARTHUR. Punches and dies; layout, construction and use. rev 4th ed 583p il $4.75 McGraw

621.984 Punching machinery. Dies (metal working) 50-5433

"Revised and brought up to date with addition of latest material and methods. Much of material rearranged to present a more logical classification of information and to facilitate its use as a reference volume." (Booklist) For second edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

Booklist 46:264 Ap 15 '50

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:326 F 15 '50 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:19 Mr '50

STANLEY, WALLACE ARTHUR. Resistance welding; designing, tooling, and applications; il. by the author. 329p $7.50 McGraw

671 Electric welding 50-8768

"Spot welding and other forms of resistance welding are established and important processes in the manufacture of metal articles. This work is a comprehensive, practical treatment of the whole subject. It is written so that it can be used by all who are concerned with resistance welding, from the operators of welding machines up to design engineers who plan and specify products to be manufactured by resistance welding." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1302 Ag '50 90w

"Although it is designed specifically for engineers concerned with manufacturing, it is so clearly written and well illustrated that it should be useful to anyone concerned with this type of welding from machine operators upwards."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:77 S '50

STARNES, RICHARD. And when she was bad she was murdered. 224p $2.50 Lippincott 50-5644

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun p6 Mr 31 '50 100w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 2 '50 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 Ap 2 '50 140w

"It's been a long time since a first novel has been written as a simon-pure detective story, complete with eccentric sleuth, baffled but admiring Watson, and last-chapter roundup of suspects. Richard Starnes, a Washington newspaper man, takes these familiar old bones and plumps flesh onto them nicely. . . The articulation of the bones, however, is a little less than perfect; as a sleuth, Dr. St. George Peachy is cut on much the same lovable-curmudgeon bias as Dr. Fell, but exhibits somewhat less exacting standards of deduction and proof." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p25 Mr 12 '50 140w

"Agreeable if not overly important." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ap 23 '50 60w

"Dr. Peachy is worthy addition to fantastic amateurs of fiction. Tale is pungent, amusing, and well filled with excitement."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 Mr 4 '50 40w

STARNES, RICHARD. Another mug for the bier. 248p $2.50 Lippincott 50-10349

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 D 3 '50 60w

Kirkus 18:571 S 15 '50 50w

"As any one might guess from the title, this novel of Washington society belongs to that flip school of mysteries, which sometimes hovers on the brink of bad taste. Mr. Starnes' book, however, is redeemed by a sound and conscientiously worked out plot, and a toxicologist detective."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 24 '50 170w

STARNES, RICHARD—Continued

"Mr. Starnes, who lets a hard-boiled, red-haired Washington reporter tell the yarn, is inclined to try too hard for gem-like cynical wisecracks. Most of these remarks are pretty funny, however, and his book as a whole is bright and breezily tough." Hillis Mills

N Y Times p39 N 26 '50 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 3 '50 70w

"Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:38 N 4 '50 40w

STATHAM, LEON. Welcome, darkness. 441p $3.50 Crowell

50-8169

A story of seven men who survive after an army airplane crash on an island in the Philippines. The story, told from the point of view of one of them, reveals the characters and personalities of all as they struggle against the hardships of the jungle, are captured by the Japs, die by violence and torture, one by one, until only two finally escape.

Booklist 46:309; 336 Je 15 '50; Jl 1 '50

"What Mills' self-discovery has been is not made as clear to the reader as it is to Mills. But if Statham has not been wholly successful in representing his ideas, his exceptional talent shines clear and bright through every line and page. He has combined ideas and adventure in the exactly right proportion to make 'Welcome, Darkness' one of the year's outstanding novels." Emmett Dedmon

+ — Chicago Sun p6 S 17 '50 420w

Reviewed by Lloyd Wendt

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 17 '50 400w

"An amazing story, but an exhausting one to experience. A fresh revelation of the Pacific war years, remote and yet integral to war itself."

+ Kirkus 18:395 Jl 15 '50 280w

"This is a long book but the suspense is sustained throughout, although once in a while the action is slowed up unduly and the balance between the physical and emotional tensions becomes uneven. Of one thing we can be confident, however; Leon Statham has talent and has learned the tools of his trade, he writes an exciting and serious story in such a way that we can be sure that his next one will be even better." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 S 17 '50 450w

Reviewed by Leon Dorais

N Y Times p28 N 19 '50 180w

New Yorker 26:148 N 25 '50 190w

"The likelihood is that you'll hear more of Mr. Statham. Though it must have been a hard pull, he's well past his apprenticeship, as this excellent if horrifyingly violent novel shows." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 12 '50 700w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 33:29 S 30 '50 550w

STAUFFER, ROBERT CLINTON, ed. Science and civilization. 228p $2.50 Univ. of Wis. press

504 Science. Science—Philosophy 49-50144

"In celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the University of Wisconsin, eight outstanding educators representing the fields of philosophy, history, physical science, biological science, and social science contribute their special insights to the relationship between science and civilization." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Arthur Child

Ethics 61:92 O '50 140w

J Philos 47:366 Je 8 '50 360w

"An understanding of science demands the fusion of many different approaches and an extensive interpretation of esoteric details. But this volume does not greatly help the layman achieve this understanding. It remains rather a series of scholarly essays bound together for centennial purposes. The separate chapters, however, do merit attention." Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p6 Ja 8 '50 320w

"The book aspires to expose only the mere implications of the problem of the relationship of science to civilization. It has done it well." D. B. Thorburn

+ Sat R of Lit 33:59 My 6 '50 420w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:34 Mr '50 280w

STECKLE, LYNDE CHARLES. Problems of human adjustment. 351p $3 Harper

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Mental hygiene 49-49432

A consulting psychologist here presents techniques that will help the ill-adjusted personality to come to self-understanding. Partial contents: Man the animal; Emotional living; The road to neurosis; Sanity in sex; Courtship and marriage; Happiness in work; Maturity in old age. Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf 46:10 My '50

"'Problems of Human Adjustment' is a psychological presentation dealing with many important problems of man's maladjustment; it is not an exposition of psychoanalysis or of psychobiology. If the book is approached with this clearly in mind, it should have a wide reading among medical students, psychologists, teachers, social workers, and personnel officers. It should also stimulate a wider reading of the reference texts and result in a better understanding of human adjustments and maladjustments." A. H. Ruggles

+ — Survey 86:165 Mr '50 550w

STEDMAN, MURRAY SALISBURY, and STEDMAN, SUSAN (WINTER). Discontent at the polls; a study of farmer and labor parties, 1827-1948. 190p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

329 Political parties. Elections—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions 49-50349

"The thesis of this book is that farmer and labor parties in the United States have performed two great functions. These functions are, first, to act as vehicles for the expression of political discontent, and secondly, to popularize issues which the major parties have at first ignored but later have adopted. Precisely how these functions have been performed, and under what economic, geographical, and psychological conditions, this work endeavors to explain." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Hicks

Am Hist R 56:216 O '50 320w

"Though it has solid and valuable features, the essential weakness of this study is the failure to understand the true character of American political parties." C. A. M. Ewing

+ — Am Pol Sci R 44:495 Je '50 750w

Am Soc R 15:324 Ap '50 270w

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley

Ann Am Acad 272:218 N '50 380w

Current Hist 18:230 Ap '50 20w

Reviewed by Daniel Bell

J Pol Econ 58:452 O '50 700w

"The use of statistics is both competent and restrained, and the historical judgments are carefully delimited but illuminating generalizations."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:209 Je '50 220w

STEEGMAN, JOHN. The artist and the country house; descriptive notes by Dorothy Stroud on the houses il. in the paintings. 108p 97pl $8.50 Scribner

758.78 Paintings, British. Landscape painting. Architecture, Domestic 50-13016

Nearly a hundred reproductions of paintings and drawings relating to English country houses. The "houses are listed, illustrated and described. The plates show Zoffany's oil of the Garricks at Hampton, Middlesex. Inigo Richards gives us Halswell House in Somerset. We see Penns-in-the-Rocks, in Sussex, Linlithgow Palace in Stirlingshire and many more. Dorothy Stroud has done descriptive notes on the houses illustrated in the paintings; there is a list of owners." (Library J)

Kirkus 18:229 Ap 1 '50 120w

"Architectural, associational, and artistic interest are well blended and anyone plotting a mystery with an English background would find grim fortress, deceptively cheerful manor-house or desolate villa surrounded by weeping willows excellently pictured and documented. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:1295 Ag '50 140w

"This book [is] a delight to the historian and the amateur of architecture, who will, however, regret two things—first, that there are not five or six times as many and second, that those there are were not better chosen. . . If the point of the book is illusive, and if a round dozen of the reproductions are remarkable only for their complete irrelevance to any discoverable point, there remains a handsome balance of really valuable material." John Summerson

+ — Spec 184:346 Mr 17 '50 650w

"Mr. Steegman's style seems unsuited to a more serious study and even the plates scarcely do justice to the fascinating theme of this book. Any selection of illustrations is necessarily personal and arbitrary, but the 'Pineapple Picture' by Henry Danckerts should surely have been included, and it would have been more logical to reproduce Turner's 'Petworth House' instead of the 'Park.' While there are still so many pictures of country houses lying for the most part unknown and unreproduced, it is redundant to include several paintings of gardens and park scenes, landscapes and portraits, in which houses barely figure."

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 6 '50 700w

STEEHOLM, CLARA, and STEEHOLM, HARDY. House at Hyde Park; together with Sara Delano Roosevelt's Household book. 227p il $3.75 Viking

B or 92 Roosevelt, Mrs Sara (Delano). Roosevelt family 50-12746

After a long introductory section on the background of the Roosevelts and Delanos, this is a record of the recipes and remedies kept by Sara Delano Roosevelt in her "household book" from 1879 to 1931. Index.

Booklist 47:33; 173 S 15 '50; Ja 1 '51

"There's a pleasantly personal, familiar quality to this revival of an earlier day and this record holds further value as supplementary source material on this famous family."

+ Kirkus 18:584 S 15 '50 140w

"Valuable source material and excellent reading. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:1823 O 15 '50 120w

"The editors have performed a labor of love in filling in the background so lavishly that it becomes in effect another biography of Sara Delano Roosevelt. . . The editors have also taken great pains to translate the charmingly inadequate language of the recipes into terms understandable by modern cooks." Emma Bugbee

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 24 '50 550w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p67 D 3 '50 410w

New Yorker 26:167 N 11 '50 180w

Springf'd Republican p30A D 17 '50 240w

STEELE, MAX. Debby. 304p $3 Harper 50-6122

Character study of a mentally arrested woman. Debby Hall's story is told from the age of thirty-five when she is taken from the Home for Delinquent Women to serve as maid in the Merrill home, until many years later when she dies in the arms of the youngest Merrill son.

Bookmark 9:186 My '50 30w

"The apparent point of this mawkish narrative is that what Steele interprets as a diseased mind is the equivalent of what he interprets as a healthy mind." Mary Sandrock

— Cath World 171:155 My '50 200w

"The story has great tenderness and warmth, but the most critical reader cannot accuse it of sentimentality. The author writes well and sincerely, with no affectations." Dorothy Langley

+ Chicago Sun p7 Ap 9 '50 240w

"You wouldn't think—or at least I wouldn't have until I read this novel—that a woman who 'wasn't quite all right' mentally would make much of a heroine for any novel. But Debby Hall does. As she is here she is one of the most appealing characters I have met in contemporary fiction." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 19 '50 470w

"Some readers may feel that 'Debby' is too neatly packaged, falling victim, near the end, to its pattern; others may find Debby herself a shade too bizarre to be believable. But these and other possible objections must be minimized by the discriminating warmth of feeling which, when combined with perceptive writing, is all too rare in novels these days." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 26 '50 360w

"Where for us does the story fail to meet its goal? Perhaps in the looseness of story structure. Perhaps more in the failure of the author to make Debby as lovable in her eternal child character, as he would have us believe her to be. Dan Wickenden has handled in his Tobias Brandywine a somewhat similar design with, for us, more consistent success in difficult balance of fantasy and realism, more heartwarming a creation of character. A first novel, of distinction, but not an easy book to sell."

Kirkus 18:28 Ja 15 '50 360w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 O 27 '50 120w

"One of the tests of the novel is this: does the fictional world created by the novelist persist after the book is closed. . . 'Debby' passes this test with honors and does so not by 'competition' with these forms nor by any attempt to 'duplicate' them, but by creating a living world of its own, for which citizenship papers are available, good not only for the duration of the reading but possibly for the duration of the reader." Jessamyn West

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 19 '50 1000w

"Max Steele's talents are creative rather than dissective. This novel is a worthy winner of the 1950 Harper Prize. . . Mr. Steele is at his best with the children and Debby's adjustments to them, with her unconscious skill in companionship, her own deep maternal needs, her ecstasies and sufferings as one by one the Merrill children grow up and pass through her limited world. [He] is a master of delicate sentiment, and his dialogue is as sure as his sense of drama." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p40 Mr 19 '50 470w

"One of the most rewarding first novels I have ever read. . . This is not the grim and doleful tale it may seem. It is Mr. Steele's happy accomplishment that instead of writing another of those mildew-on-the-magnolia novels, those coruscating little compositions that are a cross between William Faulkner, Walter Pater, and Flair, he has managed to get warmth, compassion, sympathy, irony, humor, and deep insight into his pages." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 26:107 Ap 1 '50 240w

"All I can say is read it for yourself and see the ease with which the author conducts you into his—and Debby's—shadowy (yet real) other world, and how beautifully he maintains his bridge, between that world and the world you already know. I can think of no one else who could have written 'Debby,' much less written it with the clarity and the beauty that Mr. Steele has brought to his novel." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 15 '50 950w

STEELE, MAX—Continued

"It is to the author's credit that he does not over-sentimentalize Debby. . . It is original and it is honest, two qualities I like. It makes us care a great deal about a half-witted, artless, but not stupid, human creature." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 33:14 Mr 25 '50 800w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec 184:490 N 10 '50 100w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 30 '50 370w

"Debby will tug a few soft hearts among veteran circulating-library customers, but such experienced judges as Authors Porter, Wescott and Critic Jackson, who are supposed to use their heads as well as their hearts, still have some explaining to do."

Time 55:98 Mr 20 '50 550w

"Although the novel does not shun the grimness and pain of a family's history, the work takes on radiance from the humor and fancies of its childlike, playful, helpless, but adoring heroine."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:159 Je '50 290w

"There is humor and understanding; a remarkable book. Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 46:24 My '50

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:768 summer '50 110w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Diamond wedding. 309p $3 Doubleday

50-8496

The long story of a man of the Old West, Gowd Skinner, and the New England woman of gentle birth and breeding, who remained his only love thru life. When Gowd had become a leading citizen of Colorado and his children and Hope's gave an elaborate diamond wedding celebration, there was a surprise ending. The novel begins in 1835, the end is 1919.

Booklist 46:326; 353 Jl 1 '50; Jl 15 '50

"The tangy rhythm and the author's keen savor for the West make Diamond Wedding cover-to-cover readable novel." Mary Sandrock

+ Cath World 171:473 S '50 220w

"A solid and richly entertaining story." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 6 '50 400w

Christian Science Monitor p6 Ag 12 '50 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

"Characterization and plot have much of haunting vigor and beauty and originality. A terse, often inverted style, may serve to reflect the shades of Skinner's perceptions, now clean cut, now confused, and perhaps the rhythms of his labored speech. It takes away from pace of story, however, and sets up an often disturbing barrier for the reader."

+ — Kirkus 18:285 My 15 '50 270w

"The clipped and disjointed style which the author has adopted, apparently as a reflection of the laconicism and taciturnity of the chief character, unfortunately mar the readability of a fascinating tale. Recommended." J. E. Brown

+ — Library J 75:980 Je 1 '50 130w

" 'Diamond Wedding' is a competent story of a time and place and of a manner of life that are not likely to be seen again." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 23 '50 600w

"Mr. Steele seems never to have chosen finally between a kind of suprise-ending short story (which is all the frail 'diamond wedding' device justifies) and the enormously longer and more detailed novel which would have given body to his intention. Fallen between such extremes, the book is distractingly various in viewpoint, often forced in its writing and jerkily episodic in conception. As a whole, it leaves the impression less of a novel achieved than of the sketch of a novel." W. V. Clark

— + N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '50 380w

New Yorker 26:72 Ag 12 '50 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 30 '50 170w

"Although this book is some distance this side of the best novel that will be written this year, maybe even of the best historical novel, a book more thoroughly characteristic of the people, the history, and the habits of mind which make the Coloradan a separate species in the genus Westerner is not likely to make its appearance in some years." D. L. Morgan

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:15 Ag 5 '50 800w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 S '50

STEFFERUD, ALFRED. How to know the wild flowers; il. by Sidney H. Horn; endorsed by the Wild flower preservation society. 144p $2 Holt

581.973 Flowers. Botany—U.S. 50-6372

"An informal little book which lists the most familiar wild flowers, giving range, habitat, and a brief description of each flower with stress on the main features rather than on botanical detail. There are black-and-white illustrations of most of the flowers and a color chart on the jacket which could have been more useful had it been included in the book. For easy identification." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:236 Mr 15 '50

+ Bookmark 9:158 Ap '50 20w

Reviewed by G. J. Scharschug
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 Ap 23 '50 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '50

"While ostensibly intended for an adult to use with a child, this will end by teaching most adults as much as they in turn can share with the children. . . Handy pocket size, easy to use. Not prepossessing looking, but useful."

+ Kirkus 18:201 Mr 15 '50 120w

"Recommended for nature clubs, school libraries, and camp groups." J. F. Kennedy

+ Library J 75:567 Ap 1 '50 60w

"An exceptionally clear and useful introductory guide to the understanding and identification of our native plants, interestingly written and well illustrated with numerous drawings and a charming four-color frontispiece. It is designed for readers without botanical training." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 Ap 16 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:14 Ap '50

STEGNER, WALLACE EARLE. Preacher and the slave. 403p $3.75 Houghton

Hillstrom, Joseph—Fiction 50-8708

Biographical novel which, with considerable fictionalization, tells the story of a leader of the I. W. W., Joseph Hillstrom, during the last six years of his life from 1910 to 1916.

Booklist 47:14 S 1 '50

Bookmark 10:8 O '50 30w

"Vigorous characterizations, solid dialogue (sometimes coarse, even obscene) and comprehension of criminal labor fanaticism combine to tell the story. In the first part of the novel Hill's figure is rather obscure, later his type can be recognized if not understood. Says Hill, 'I can afford to be shiftless. The world owes me a living.' " Mary Sandrock

— Cath World 172:154 N '50 200w

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 17 '50 490w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 19 '50 480w

"This reviewer, generally allergic to so-called 'biographical fiction,' finds this particular book a very satisfactory piece of work with very few of the faults usually associated with this literary genre." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 52:636 O 6 '50 450w

"An extraordinary book, an exciting book, but its reception is unpredictable because of the reluctance of the general reading public to allow its emotions to be stirred in the cause of Labor. . . It is a difficult book to evaluate and it almost demands to be read in order to be recommended. Certainly not everybody's meat, but don't bypass it."
Kirkus 18:361 Jl 1 '50 300w

"Whether accepted as fact or fiction, Stegner has done a real service in throwing a not unfriendly light into some of the dark corners of this stirring chapter in labor history. Here is a psychological picture of the one man, as well as of many others who made up the movement. The author, now English professor at Stanford University, has lost none of the warm approach of The Big Rock Candy Mountain and has taken on a glowing style that makes this exciting reading." D. K. Oko
+ Library J 75:1182 Jl '50 110w

"Notwithstanding the author's insistence that his book is 'an act of the imagination,' it has the impact of history. . . The story is enriched by vigorous dialogue, some shrewd character sketches, insight into the motivations of the fanatics, and at least one powerfully nauseating description of an itinerant labor camp. Herein lies its best quality. As fiction it lacks the power, the drama, the emotion which characterizes such a work as 'Grapes of Wrath.' " S. H. Adams
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 10 '50 700w

"The real Joe Hill, of whose life, background and personality not much is known, was one of the several 'martyrs' who rose out of the Industrial Workers of the World during the first quarter of this century. . . In the early sections of his novel Mr. Stegner strays far from known biographical fact; and it is in these sections that the central character remains somewhat dim. . . Possibly this initial shadowiness of the main figure is an effect the author worked for; in some ways it is a fascinating introduction; and it may be that the second half of the novel is made more emphatic by the early tentativeness. Yet the question is whether the possible gain is worth the cost." Richard Sullivan
+ — N Y Times p4 S 10 '50 500w

"A sympathetic sizing up of an extremely difficult character, as well as of an interesting phase in American history."
+ New Yorker 26:118 S 9 '50 160w

"In the end, the novel comes off; in spite of its indefinite beginning, which perhaps could not have been otherwise considering how little is known of its central figure, the book is a successful piece of work. How old-time labor philosophers will like it is another matter. Its author's suggestion that Joe Hill just might have been guilty will seem to them sacrilege. Nevertheless, the reader will make up his mind which view to take. Meantime he will have read a genuinely powerful novel of labor as it once was in the U. S." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 25 '50 900w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 S '50

STEGNER, WALLACE EARLE. Women on the wall. 277p $2.75 Houghton

49-50344

A collection of eighteen short stories written by this mid-Western author-teacher during the years 1940 and 1949. All have been published in magazines and some have appeared in Martha Foley's Best American Short Stories and the O. Henry Memorial Award volumes. The settings range from Vermont to California, Mexico, and the inland Northwest. Most of those set in Saskatchewan are chapters from the writer's novel, Big Rock Candy Mountain (Book Review Digest 1943). The theme of most of the stories is the complexity of the human character, whether child, adolescent, or adult.

Bookmark 9:161 Ap '50 30w

"The title piece, 'The Women on the Wall,' is a particularly deft bit of social portraiture of war brides; and for a picture of race prejudice, 'The Chink' is hard to beat. Stegner is always the quiet, sure workman, slipping in almost unnoticed bits of poetry and little ironies and sage observations as the story moves along, but, though almost unnoticed, the little touches dig in, take hold, do their work on the subconscious mind of the reader. But he is at his best, when he is aroused, when he gets his waters to rolling and roiling, for then he gets up on that high plateau that most of his 'The Big Rock Candy Mountain' represents." Feike Feikema
+ Chicago Sun p45 Ja 9 '50 380w

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 8 '50 800w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 2 '50 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '50

"There's humor and pathos and occasional irony—but there's none of the sordidness, the disillusionment that marks so much of contemporary short story telling. Some may even call Stegner's stories old fashioned. I found them hearteningly American, without ever being either corny or sentimental."
+ Kirkus 17:611 N 1 '49 170w

"Stegner has long been recognized as a master exponent of the technique of the modern short story. This collection demonstrates his brilliant, incisive characterization as revealed by casual incident. But his mood is one of disillusionment and despair, his characters callous and cruel; life itself nothing but hopeless frustration, each individual 'alone, terrified and at bay.' " R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:106 Ja 15 '50 110w

Reviewed by Theodore Norman
New Repub 122:21 Mr 13 '50 170w

"In his quiet way, Wallace Stegner is one of the most talented writers in our midst. Of his eighteen stories, fifteen are distinctive and at least eight are worth the attention of future anthologists. Only three are ordinary. It is a batting average any short story writer could be proud of." Richard Match
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 1 '50 600w

"Half a dozen solid books ('The Big Rock Candy Mountain' among them) testify that Wallace Stegner is a serious writer—serious in the good, straight, French sense of the term. Now these collected short stories, interesting and well written, add to that testimony. Moreover, these stories are indicative of how one writer responded to the influences of the time . . Mr. Stegner writes with clarity and power, enough of the latter to produce a cumulative annoyance in the reader that this author should be so often concerned with the trivial. All too often Mr. Stegner sets out after sentimentality with the same equipment that could and sometimes does permit him to achieve tragedy." Harry Sylvester
+ — N Y Times p15 Ja 1 '50 550w

"The impulse in Mr. Stegner's writing has its origin in the pathetic incident, but his characters are often so lightly and unimaginatively drawn as to seem perfunctory. The most touching story is 'The Colt.' "
— + New Yorker 25:80 Ja 7 '50 90w

"This is a group of remarkably able stories, reflecting people as well as places, developing character as well as situations. Mr. Stegner is one of the top craftsman among today's short-story writers, and this volume, representative of his work over a ten-year period, is eminently worth your time." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 4 '50 950w

"Although almost half the stories here (those concerning Bruce, a sensitive boy in Saskatchewan around 1917) possess continuity of characters and place, they and the others develop no consistent attitude toward life or living and attain neither philosophic nor literary consistency. The eight Bruce stories, however, are among the best things that Mr. Stegner has done. With them he writes with understanding and certainty. Although strongly imbued with the sense of place, the background—the local color—never obtrudes, never gains control of the characters or incidents they to a certain degree determine. At their individual best these stories center around an incident as simple as the trapping of a gopher or slaughtering of a sow. . . . More ambitious and frequently less successful is a group of stories in which Mr. Stegner is concerned with some of the more immediate problems of our times." William Peden

STEGNER, W. E.—Continued

Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ja 21 '50 600w

Springf'd Republican p6D F 19 '50 300w

Wis Lib Bul 46:20 Ja '50

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:576 spring '50 30w

STEIG, WILLIAM. Agony in the kindergarten; foreword by Arthur Steig. [217p] $3 Duell

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 50-7028

Drawings showing children's reactions to adult sentiments and questions, such as "You're just like your father," "That's a brave little man," "Don't," "How do you like your new baby brother?"

Reviewed by Iris Barry
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 2 '50 260w

"It is a kindergarten in which the infants enjoy their infancy and the adults do not, but Mr. Steig's agony, in most cases, is the reader's delight." D. D.
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '50 140w

New Yorker 26:126 Mr 18 '50 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 15 '50 120w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Blood will tell. 219p $2.25 Doubleday

50-8920

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ag 13 '50 50w

Kirkus 18:288 My 15 '50 90w

"An over-expanded short story rather than a fully developed novel, which makes a disappointing addition to the generally pleasant Bagby series."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 13 '50 210w

"A neat puzzle (though the solution could stand a little tightening), a well-realized background of place and people, and a terse brisk narrative—the whole dry, deft, deadly and delightful." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 20 '50 140w

"Fine, fine stuff that will keep you surprised throughout. You have seen most of these characters yourself in other situations and Mr. Bagby has done a beautiful job of mixing them up in one magnificent pot-pourri." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 30 '50 550w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Frightened amazon. 223p $2.50 Doubleday

50-9263

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 S 17 '50 60w

Kirkus 18:371 Jl 1 '50 70w

"Mr. Stein seems to have abandoned archeological backgrounds in favor of local color and human behavior. Certainly the color is there, and it's interesting. But one misses the more intricate plots which Elsie and Tim used to expose among their diggings."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 24 '50 200w

"Throughout, Mr. Stein handles dialogue, local color, and the threat of mob violence with his customary skill. But this is, essentially, a fairly routine whodunit." Elizabeth Bullock
+ — N Y Times p11 S 3 '50 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 24 '50 100w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Needle that wouldn't hold still. 208p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

50-9181

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:318 Je 1 '50 90w

"A rather heavy handed account of intramural politics which sounds authentic but unfortunately is too wordy to carry much suspense."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 3 '50 170w

Reviewed by Hillis Mills
N Y Times p24 Ag 27 '50 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 1 '50 100w

Sat R of Lit 33:40 S 30 '50 40w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Three—with blood. 217p $2.25 Doubleday

50-5999

Detective story.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 2 '50 50w

Kirkus 18:10 Ja 1 '50 70w

"Mr. Stein has always written clever mysteries with a good archeological background. This latest seems a complete departure from the others. It is atmospheric and coy, the plotting is negligible, and except for a certain pre-Columbian golden cockerel, the archeological background is nil."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 26 '50 150w

"In an unusually short novel, Mr. Stein has managed to fuse a meticulous plot with a varied and richly perceived cast of characters and full notes on local customs." A. B.
+ N Y Times p31 Mr 26 '50 110w

"The Mexican atmosphere is undeniably authentic, but the plot is perhaps a little disorderly."
— + New Yorker 26:127 Mr 18 '50 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
— San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ap 23 '50 90w

Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ap 1 '50 40w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Ap '50

STEIN, HANA. The wedding. 250p $2.75 Wyn

50-7060

A novel describing a wedding day in a Jewish lower East-side family. Mama was happy to see Becky marrying well; but was miserable when she thought of the unhappiness of her oldest daughter Molly whose husband had deserted her. Both Molly and the widowed Mama wanted to marry again, but could not see their way clear until the day's ending.

Booklist 46:304 Je 1 '50

Bookmark 9:213 Je '50 40w

Chicago Sun p5 Je 6 '50 90w

"A simple, honest, touching little novel, 'The Wedding' is alive every moment with a fine human excitement." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 30 '50 350w

Kirkus 18:142 Mr 1 '50 210w

"'The Wedding' is a poignant and understanding novel, a book to be welcomed equally as a picture of New York and as a contribution to a concord of spirit." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ag 20 '50 320w

Reviewed by P. J. McDonnell
N Y Times p39 Je 11 '50 90w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 16 '50 220w

"It is a feat of artistic unity. Hana Stein has performed it beautifully, with an urgent emotion of her own that suffuses this first novel of hers. It has not been done without some cost. This surfeit of feeling, personal or supra-personal, as of a larger racial experience, has drained the Weinbergers of most other distinctive qualities. They exist as vessels of feeling. . . I would add that this is no great matter. One value is substituted for another. The book as a unit is unshakably good, a fine evocation of a Jewish experience." N. L. Rothman
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ap 22 '50 550w

STEIN, LEO. Journey into the self; being the letters, papers and journals of [the author]; ed. by Edmund Fuller; introd. by Van Wyck Brooks. 331p $4 Crown

B or 92 50-8701

Letters and other writings of Leo Stein, brother of Gertrude Stein, have been combined and edited to form a biography of the man. "Leo Stein long considered himself a failure, the victim, as he said, of a 'crippling neurosis' which prevented him from fulfilling his promise, from adequately meeting the world in which he lived. 'Journey Into the Self' records the 'education' of an exceptional mind during the first half of the twentieth century." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 186:77 S '50 950w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 23 '50 500w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier
Commonweal 52:416 Ag 4 '50 650w

Kirkus 18:321 Je 1 '50 170w

"This is a special book of limited interest and not for small collections." K. T. Willis
Library J 75:1294 Ag '50 80w

"Leo Stein, Gertrude's less well-known brother, died in 1947 at the age of seventy-five and just a few days after receiving the first favorable reviews of 'Appreciation,' his only even half-successful book. The present collection of letters is extraordinarily interesting in itself, quite aside from the fact that it also adds significantly to the documents concerning a much-studied group of between-wars intellectuals." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 171:89 Jl 22 '50 900w

"It is a genuinely important book, and an extremely fascinating one. Contemporary readers are likely to find it as exciting a discovery as, thirty years ago, their predecessors found 'The Education of Henry Adams.'. . Leo Stein was James's philosophical disciple, and the record of his life and thought substantiates his master's thesis. 'Journey into the Self' will delight the reader. It will also bring into the reader's personal experience a singularly 'effective genius.'" Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 2 '50 1900w

"Thanks to Stein's own frankness and the sensibility of the editing, we see the gradual working out of the critical approach on which he felt his pictorial taste was based. We witness his lifelong struggle with deep-seated neuroses, which were only conquered in his last years and which only then allowed him any real confidence, or any pleasure or ease in self-expression. The result is a volume that sums up an unusual individual, his contribution and his tragedy." J. J. Sweeney
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '50 1300w

"His preoccupation with himself is at times a little oppressive, but the book, for all its introspectiveness, reflects an extraordinary personality and a man of wisdom, humor, and independence of spirit."
+ New Yorker 26:73 Jl 22 '50 200w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ag 12 '50 900w

Time 56:82 Jl 24 '50 650w

STEIN, LEON. Racial thinking of Richard Wagner. 252p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Wagner, Richard. Race. Jews—Political and social conditions 50-8043

"The first part of the book discusses Wagner's notions on Volk, Kultur, language and music, his acrimonious attitude toward Mendelssohn, his anti-Semitism and anti-Christianity, and his position on Judaism in music. The second part deals with the effects and influences of these ideas on world culture and politics. Finally, Mr. Stein—who is a teacher, composer and conductor—subjects Wagner's ideas to logical analysis." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Felix Borowski
Chicago Sun p5 Je 25 '50 210w

Christian Century 67:1238 O 18 '50 650w

"Although part of the territory explored is not exactly virgin, the value of Stein's contribution lies in his thoroughgoing analysis and interpretation of Wagner's racial-political writings, especially those related to Mendelssohn, and their influence upon later music historians." W. H. Rubsamen
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 7:565 S '50 1200w

"The discussion is uniformly well reasoned. Although the author does not pussyfoot in expressing his searing antagonism toward Wagner's racial concepts, he does not condemn Wagner's music. On music and musicians, indeed, the author is an eminently sound and readable critic." Moses Smith
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 20 '50 230w

School & Society 71:319 My 20 '50 30w

STEINBECK, JOHN. Burning bright; a play in story form. 159p $2.50 Viking

50-10249

A play in the form of a novelette. "Its theme is the dilemma of a heredity-possessed man who discovers that he is sterile and must embrace as his own another man's child." (N Y Times)

Booklist 47:3; 98 S 1 '50; N 1 '50

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 29 '50 500w

"The same flaws that the drama critics hopped on so vigorously are of course present—the arty dialogue, the removal from reality, the shallowness of characterization reminiscent of an Arbor Day pageant. But in novel form, some of these faults are less disquieting. . . Nevertheless, with all the grandeur of the idea, and the greater tolerance of the eye than the ear, the book is hung up on the same basic flaw—the morality-play abstractness of the characters." C. H. Weiss
Commonweal 53:178 N 24 '50 700w

Kirkus 18:528 S 1 '50 240w

"Highly recommended for drama, fiction and theatre collection." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 50w

"Throughout the language is stately, as it so often is when a writer Sums Up. There is hardly a page without its Affirmation. It is all so Universal it hurts. At any rate, remembering some of the things Mr. Steinbeck has done in the past, it hurts me." Richard Lockridge
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 22 '50 650w

"Its four solitary characters are neither flesh-and-blood nor stock figures; husband, wife, friend, outsider, they are the legendary arch-types of folklore, speaking a spare, bare-boned language salted with color—a kind of abstract of folk speech that is stilted, poetic and moving. What it all comes to is a full-scale flight on Mr. Steinbeck's part into the upper air of the O'Neill genre of morality play; and while he navigates his craft with virtuosity, one returns to earth not quite convinced that one has ever cleared the treetops." A. S. Morris
N Y Times p4 O 22 '50 700w

STEINBECK, JOHN—Continued

"The play-novelette is not only successful in print, but a very interesting move in the direction of something fresh in fiction." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 27 '50 900w

"John Steinbeck's new 'play-novelette' is a flat failure as a novelette at least, and I think it is correct to add that he has not written an important work of fiction since 'The Grapes of Wrath,' more than ten years ago." Maxwell Geismar

— Sat R of Lit 33:14 O 21 '50 900w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Sat R of Lit 33:26 O 28 '50 600w

Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 490w

STEINBERG, JULIEN, ed. Verdict of three decades; from the literature of individual revolt against Soviet communism: 1917-1950. 634p $5 Duell

947.084 Communism—Russia. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917- 50-8921

"A series of excerpts on the political development of Russia since 1917. . . The selections are from the writings of many people ranging from Rosa Luxemburg, through André Gide, up to Budenz. . . Each decade is treated separately and shows the evolution of the first revolution into the present totalitarian government. Each section is preceded by an introduction and each author quoted is also introduced by the editor." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:37 S 15 '50

Chicago Sun p5 Ag 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 31 '50 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '50

"Verdict of Three Decades is an important book, almost too important to come from so young a thinker. Its importance at a time when the murky dealers are in control can hardly be underestimated. Of course, it has its flaws. The whole Popular Front era is brushed off. . . Yet, it is ungrateful to belabor this point. For as freedom's light grows everywhere dimmer, the very publication of Verdict of Three Decades is a hopeful sign." Ralph De Toledano

+ — Commonweal 52:514 S 1 '50 1100w

"Don't sidetrack it as 'just an anthology'. It is a positive contribution to better understanding of Soviet Communism today."

+ Kirkus 18:228 Ap 1 '50 550w

"These selections, together with the commentary, provide a consistent and well-knit picture of what has happened to Russia. Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 75:773 My 1 '50 110w

"Julien Steinberg has made a good job of editing this anti-Bolshevik anthology. . . It would be foolish to dismiss this book as one-sided propaganda. Some of the essays are on a high level. . . All the same, I doubt that this book succeeds in either of the purposes which justify an anthology: it does not build up a unified, coherent picture, and it does not make the reader want to know more about the authors who are represented here in selections." A. J. P. Taylor

New Repub 123:20 O 16 '50 800w

"The accusation sustained throughout six hundred pages is not a new one but it has seldom been more resolutely formulated or more eloquently argued. . . It is impossible in a review to consider every angle and every writer included in this comprehensive anthology. The fate of art and science in the U. S. S. R., the methods of Soviet espionage, the tactics and the dilemmas of American Communists are all covered in these revelations. The material accumulated is frankly offered as ex parte testimony. Its value and its claim to credibility rest upon internal evidence, upon the impression the witnesses made in varying degrees by their eloquence, their logic, their sincerity." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 30 '50 1750w

"A valuable and serious book." James Burnham

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 23 '50 1000w

"An integrated and well-edited collection of writings about Soviet Communism, drawn mostly from the works of men and women who have revolted against it and believe that Lenin and Stalin cynically betrayed a revolution they did not start in the first place. . . If there are any people around who still do not believe the accusations made against Lenin and Stalin, this book should dispel their doubts."

+ New Yorker 26:121 S 16 '50 130w

"Mr. Steinberg's notes are useful and sensible. They reach moderate conclusions on such tangled issues as whether Stalin is the heir of Lenin, and they impart a considerable amount of supplementary information about Soviet developments." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:21 Ag 12 '50 850w

STEINCROHN, PETER JOSEPH. How to stop killing yourself. 272p $2.95 Funk

613 Hygiene. Mental hygiene 50-7976

Dr Steincrohn, a practising physician of Hartford, Connecticut, studies the unconscious will to self-destruction which exists in many people, and advises some antidotes. He advises more cooperation with the physician as a counter-attack on fatigue, obesity, heart disease, high blood pressure, overwork, overexercise, sleeping pills, etc. Index.

Booklist 46:312 Je 15 '50

Kirkus 18:225 Ap 1 '50 100w

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 30 '50 260w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Kiki skates [il by the author]. [29p] $1.25 Doubleday 50-9427

Picture story book about Kiki who spent a winter vacation at her grandmother's farm, and learned to shovel snow and skate.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

"Delightful pictures for little ones who are enjoying their first winters in the out-of-doors." A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 29 '50 70w

+ Kirkus 18:508 S 1 '50 90w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 75:1672 O 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 N 12 '50 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p17 D 17 '50 100w

Sat R of Lit 33:43 D 9 '50 70w

STEINER, KALMAN. Oil burners. rev 2d ed 502p il $6.50 McGraw

697.7 Oil burners 50-5710

"The entire text is rewritten and a great deal of new material added. The many changes in construction, control, installation, and accessories of oil burners and changes in petroleum chemistry since the 1937 edition [Book Review Digest 1937] have made necessary a thorough revision." Booklist

Booklist 46:319 Je 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:499 Mr 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:25 Mr '50

STEINHAUS, HUGO. Mathematical snapshots. enl ed 266p il $4.50 Oxford

510.76 Mathematical recreations 50-9973

"An unusual and beautifully prepared volume which visualizes mathematical phenomena through photographs and diagrams. The text is simple and clear and readily understandable to anyone who has had first-year mathematics in high school. This second edition has been revised and enlarged." Booklist

Booklist 47:118 N 15 '50

"The book remains one of the most interesting and most rewarding works of its kind." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:2012 N 15 '50 120w

STEKEL, WILHELM. Autobiography; the life story of a pioneer psychoanalyst; ed. by Emil A. Gutheil; with an introd. by Hilda Stekel. 293p il $4 Liveright

B or 92 Psychoanalysis 50-7284

Autobiography of a Viennese physician, who was one of Freud's earliest collaborators. "Stekel's book sheds light on the personalities of the men who formed the first psychoanalytic society. It characterizes the life of the educated middle classes in Vienna, particularly of Jewish physicians during the last years of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century before the first World war." (Am J Soc) Index.

Reviewed by Bruno Bettelheim
Am J Soc 56:287 N '50 800w

"Wilhelm Stekel's book shines not only as a classic of autobiographic literature but as a highly informative and useful source of information about the modern development of psychiatry and psychoanalysis." Frederic Wertham
+ N Y Times p34 Je 11 '50 450w

"This autobiography is, per se, different than an ordinary personal journal in that Dr. Stekel was a trained analyst, who did much wondering about himself, and has few repressions in his self analysis. The reader may find himself disliking Dr. Stekel at times in a remarkably personal way—but will end up with the feeling that he has really met this man." M. S.
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 4 '50 240w

STENDHAL, DE, pseud. See Beyle, M. H.

STEPHENSON, WILLIAM. Testing school children; an essay in educational and social psychology. 127p $2.75 Longmans

371.26 Educational measurements. Schools—Entrance requirements A50-2928

"This book is a study of the use of intelligence and other tests in education and deals with the child in a social setting. It will be particularly valuable for those concerned with the problem of selecting children for various types of Secondary School education under the new Butler Education Act [in Great Britain] and it sets out to give parents and teachers an opportunity of reading about the problems, differences and techniques involved." (Publisher's note) During the war the author was consulting psychologist to the British Army, with the rank of brigadier. On his release from the army he returned to Oxford University and later came to the United States as visiting professor in the University of Chicago, and lecturer at many other universities here. Index.

"I am not at all happy about this. It is the 'border-line' cases who count in this business; the others select themselves. But here it is the psychologists who are to settle the border-line cases. As it is those very psychologists who for years have been talking, writing and testing 'intelligence,' and as intelligence is 'an empty concept in itself which we don't even measure in practice' according to this author, I don't quite see that his solution is one we can readily accept. This is not a tidy book. On one page we read the statement I have just quoted; on another that tests of intelligence have proved their reliability over and over again. Instances of this self-contradiction are numerous enough to make us wonder whether the author really knows exactly what he does mean. And yet the present condition of education in England gives this book an importance beyond its merits." Hunter Diack
New Statesman & Nation 40:212 Ag 19 '50 700w
School & Society 70:192 S 17 '49 90w

STERLING, GEORGE EDWARD, and MONROE, ROBERT B. Radio manual; chapter on television by Thomas T. Goldsmith, jr. 4th ed 890p il $12 Van Nostrand

621.3841 Radio—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 50-7680

"This popular manual is revised and new material added particularly in television and radio theory. Includes a brief description of the three systems of color television." Booklist

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

Reviewed by William Yates
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 18 '50 40w

"This well-known text and reference book has been considerably improved in this edition. Not only has there been extensive revision, but there are about half a dozen new chapters, including one written by Dr. Thomas Goldsmith, Director of Research for the Du-Mont Laboratories." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1052 Je 15 '50 130w

STERLING, THOMAS. House without a door. 238p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 50-5177

Detective story.

"This is a refreshing gambit even while one is wondering why Sterling chose to fling Hanna into mystery and a murder instead of accepting more fully his own challenge of discovering how those 34 years' absence from urban civilization would make it appear to her. . . The murder and its investigation make it apparent the author laid hold of a short story and then made a novel of it by committing murder. In consequence, though 'The House Without a Door' is a brisk stride away from beaten paths, it is also more muddle than novel. A muddle worth acquainting yourself with, if only to enjoy its freshness before indulging in the bleak comfort of telling its author what's wrong with it." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun p5 F 24 '50 250w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 5 '50 60w

"Coincidence stretching, but on its toes."
+ Kirkus 17:664 D 1 '49 100w

"Thomas Sterling is a new writer and a good one. Moreover, his situation is intriguing to the utmost and his plot is well developed. It's too bad that while his minor characters are so well drawn, he doesn't quite establish what makes Hanna tick. But if you can accept her motivations, the rest of the book is pure enjoyment."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 19 '50 180w

"The story is valid and exciting, and Mr. Sterling's descriptions of the day-to-day life of a recluse are fascinating."
+ New Yorker 26:119 F 25 '50 200w

"A most exciting and agreeable first novel." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 19 '50 170w

"Forthrightly written and extremely well characterized spine-tingler."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:43 F 25 '50 40w

"The suspense is well maintained and the climax plausible and exciting." L. W. A.
+ Springf'd Republican p3D F 26 '50 80w

STERN, MRS EDITH (MENDEL), and CASTENDYCK, ELSA. Handicapped child; a guide for parents. 179p $2 Wyn

136.761 Children, Abnormal and backward. Children—Diseases 50-6885

"Book designed to establish proper mental attitudes in parents of children handicapped

STERN, EDITH—Continued
by crippling diseases, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, blindness, deafness, speech defects, mental backwardness, or rheumatic fever. The authors suggest therapeutic methods, discourage oversolicitude, and urge the development of the most normal life possible for both parent and child." (Booklist) Suggested reading.

Booklist 46:270 My 1 '50

"Sound and helpful little book."
+ Bookmark 9:211 Je '50 40w

"To my knowledge the first, and an excellent first, book on this subject giving guidance on an always painful problem which demands a realistic rather than emotional attitude on the part of the parents involved."
+ Kirkus 18:87 F 1 '50 150w

"This is sound advice on a painful subject—a subject that is here dealt with intelligently and sympathetically. General rather than specific advice. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:491 Mr 15 '50 100w
School & Society 72:400 D 16 '50 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Wishik
Survey 86:419 S '50 450w

"This book should be valuable for medical students and students in other fields as well as for trained professionals about to begin their work with handicapped children." S. M. Wishik
+ Survey 86:466 O '50 650w
Wis Lib Bul 46:24 Je '50

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Duck to water. 117p $1.75 Macmillan 50-6888

A barnyard story about the hen who mothered eleven ducklings, and of the one duckling who thought he was different. He was sure he was destined to become either a swan or a peacock, but he learned in the end that he was just a duck, after all.

Booklist 46:262 Ap 15 '50

"An exceedingly arch story which you'll either read with delight or drop with a shudder."
Cath World 171:312 Jl '50 120w

"The whimsy [which is of the variety known to some cynical reviewers as 'whamsy'] may be so subtle that this reader is incapable of translating it, but it seems to me, long a devoted reader of G. B. Stern, a waste of talent on a subject of neither import nor much interest." Fanny Butcher
— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 9 '50 250w

"More than just an engaging vehicle for Miss Stern's engaging wit, the book has bones of actual experience. But it's the padding that's fun!" Marcia Marks
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 6 '50 420w

"All in all, a slight but generally delightful parable in feathered form, a special item for a special G. B. Stern market."
+ Kirkus 18:74 F 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:398 Mr 1 '50 90w

"The telling, if slight, is fairly animated and morally very sound, but includes more than a palatable dose of whimsy. With due respect to another of the chief characters, the whole thing could best be described as kittenish." Iris Barry
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 28 '50 250w

"Laced with the author's humor and infinite capacity for taking sides, the whole affair adds up to pure satiric pleasure. . . The beauty of garden and stream and wood spills richly through the story." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 9 '50 460w

"May seem a trifle insipid, even to the most determined animal-lover, since Miss Stern has stretched her leftovers so far that they have turned into soup."
— New Yorker 26:120 Ap 8 '50 120w

"G. B. Stern had a good time writing this fable which is in her best vein. Her readers are going to share that good time." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 14 '50 300w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS GEOFFREY LISLE HOLDSWORTH). Ten days of Christmas. 266p $3.50 Macmillan 50-10700

A story of a Christmas houseparty which is being anticipated by young and old as The Most Glorious of our Lives, the first post-war Christmas. The unfortunate duplication of a gift precipitates two quarrels that threaten to disrupt the happiness and serenity of all. The childrens' quarrel is made up before the ten days are over, but the grown-ups' quarrel, based on twenty years of secret pains and jealousies, lasts much longer.

Booklist 47:116 N 15 '50

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 12 '50 380w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 5 '50 270w

"Superbly, heartbreakingly skilful in handling, it has a poignance that takes the reader to the heart of it, powerless to stop the deluge. G. B. Stern has a wicked genius for quarrels. . . I was fascinated to the last word, and exhausted as if I'd lived through it myself. G. B. Stern in her old tradition, and nobody does it better."
+ Kirkus 18:535 S 1 '50 280w

"Miss Stern has again displayed her skill in portraying real people in all their lovely and unlovely aspects. The reader will like the characters and sympathize with their problems. Highly recommended." Harriet Forbes
+ Library J 75:1825 O 15 '50 80w

"The exception in Miss Stern's roster of wholly human characters is the much-too-good Uncle Ted, the sentimental fulcrum on which much of the action of 'Ten Days of Christmas' turns. But he is the single a-little-short-of-credible weakness in this small, entertaining and thoroughly meaningful novel." F. H. Bullock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 5 '50 750w

Reviewed by Evelyn Eaton
N Y Times p56 D 3 '50 500w

"Family animosity alone is hardly enough to sustain a book, and Miss Stern's device of synchronizing her discussion with the Christmas season does little to camouflage the consistent and wearisome pettiness of her characters."
New Yorker 26:162 N 4 '50 110w

"Miss Stern has written before about the foolish, futile pain human beings inflict upon one another, pain that hasn't the justification of grandeur or sacrifice and yet is a part of daily existence. She brings to her subject compassion and the wit that never deserts her. Her dialogue has never been more sparkling." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 17 '50 470w

"There is much good insight into this tightly knit group and there is real movement inside the people, who grow as well as act. But every detail is blared as though through a megaphone at a college football game and, indeed, Mrs. Stern does protest too much. For if she had not told us so much about her characters but had held her peace and let them live, perhaps we might know even more about them." Anne Fremantle
Sat R of Lit 33:13 D 16 '50 750w

STERN, MADELEINE BETTINA. Louisa May Alcott. 424p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press
B or 92 Alcott, Louisa May 50-6953

A reconstruction of the life of the author of Little Women. It presents her as the central character in a remarkable family, tracing her life from her third birthday to the day of her death. Comments on "newly identified pseudonymous and anonymous stories" are included. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 50w

"A series of excellent articles, published serially, has already established Miss Stern's right to speak authoritatively concerning both Miss Alcott's life and her writings. She has now placed all devotees in her debt with a really definitive study, based upon all extant material, both in print and in manuscript. . . This book contains all the reader could possibly wish to know about Louisa Alcott. It will stand for a long time—perhaps permanently—as the authoritative book in its field." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 9 '50 470w

"The book is easy to read and there are more than 300 pages! This means that the younger readers who might enjoy both style and content will not endure it, maybe—but it is for the general reader." K. T. Willis

Library J 75:693 Ap 15 '50 80w

"From the many uncritical and over-enthusiastic accounts of [Louisa May Alcott] Miss Stern's book stands out by reason of its unfailing objectivity and good sense. For general readers it offers a compact and almost breathless narrative of a remarkable career, a success story on the Oliver Optic model. . . All students of nineteenth century America will value Miss Stern's work equally with Ednah Cheney's volume of Louisa Alcott's life, letters, and journals, and Katharine Anthony's analysis of her personality." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 16 '50 1300w

"The weakness of this biography by Madeleine B. Stern . . . is that she has presented a mass of material in an unsorted, undifferentiated form. This cluttered abundance, unleavened by the clarifying judgments of critical biography, overcomes both subject and reader. Nevertheless, this book is the work of a loving and patient hand, a fact the Alcott enthusiast will appreciate." Allan MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p10 My 28 '50 700w

Discussion by the author and Allan MacDonald

N Y Times p13 Jl 2 '50 800w

"Miss Stern isn't always able to reconcile her admiration for her subject's sterling personal qualities with her own faint but perceptible distaste for the sugar coating Miss Alcott applied so liberally to her educational pills. Her description of the author's childhood, however, and of her relationship with her amiable but undoubtedly exasperating father is very well done."

+ — New Yorker 26:125 Ap 22 '50 200w

"Miss Stern has written a carefully documented life of the popular writer but more important to the general reader is the warm, living picture, she gives of the woman." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 2 '50 390w

"Although Louisa May Alcott has been an attractive subject for biographers, Miss Stern's full length, solidly documented portrait still fills a need. . . Not only has Miss Stern avoided the pitfalls of uncritical enthusiasm and unsupported psychiatric diagnoses, she has also kept her book free from the fictional devices and affectations which are sometimes used to conceal a lack of thorough investigation in 'arty' and 'dramatic' biographical writing." Herbert Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 33:54 My 6 '50 950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:309 S '50 300w

STERN, WILLIAM, and ORMONT, DAVID. Bill Stern's sports quiz book. 128p il $2; spir pa $1 Messner

796 Sports 50-7292

"200 series of 10 questions, on all sports, with answers." Library J

"A handy weapon against dull evenings and a pleasant way to add to your store of sports knowledge." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 7 '50 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

Kirkus 18:85 F 1 '50 50w

"Not suitable for reference." R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:780 My 1 '50 20w

"The authors have provided a vast amount of material in entertaining form for the sports enthusiast, young or old. Errors, it seems, are bound to creep into books of this kind, whether from inaccurate sources, faulty memory, poor proof-reading, or what. Most noticeable to the Springfield hockey fan will be the listing of Eddie Shore's first name as Ernie, a star pitcher for the Red Sox 35 years ago." D. B. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 23 '50 200w

STETTINIUS, EDWARD REILLY. Roosevelt and the Russians; the Yalta conference; ed. by Walter Johnson. 367p il $4 Doubleday

940.531 Crimea conference, Yalta, Russia, 1945. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia 49-10915

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by Blair Bolles

Am Hist R 55:942 Jl '50 650w

"There are many choice items for both the general reader as well as the serious student of American foreign policy. . . The real value of the book to those interested in our diplomacy lies in the very detailed reporting of the negotiations between the Big Three and their Foreign Ministers." W. B. Ballis

+ Am Pol Sci R 44:486 Je '50 900w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

Ann Am Acad 271:185 S '50 400w

Foreign Affairs 28:508 Ap '50 80w

"Mr. Stettinius's book (it proved to be his testament) is not in itself distinguished but it is an invaluable record of a conference that may prove to have been a turning-point in history."

Manchester Guardian p4 F 3 '50 420w

"Nothing is more irritating than the self-righteous hindsight displayed by most of those who write about the Yalta Conference. In order to make any objective assessment of Roosevelt's statesmanship on that occasion, we must judge his actions on the basis, not of our present knowledge, but of the situation as it then was and the information which was available to him at the time. Although the conference only took place just five years ago, this demands a very considerable feat of historical imagination. The importance of Roosevelt and the Russians is that it assists the wary reader to accomplish this feat." R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 39:193 F 18 '50 1550w

Reviewed by Wilson Harris

Spec 184:82 Ja 20 '50 800w

"Mr. Stettinius's book is a notable contribution to the history of the war. It gives an admirable picture of how an inter-allied war conference was conducted. It has one weakness. It was, and presumably still is, the opinion of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Eden that had Roosevelt agreed to stay two days longer the business of the conference would have been wound up more securely. Mr. Stalin shared this view. Mr. Stettinius's excuse for the President's hasty departure is unconvincing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p38 Ja 20 '50 1350w

"Drawing heavily on personal knowledge of the Conference, on many hitherto unrevealed documents of the meeting, and on conversations with the main participants, Mr. Stettinius presents the most complete account of the Yalta meeting yet available, and makes a strong case for American policy."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:74 Mr '50 320w

STEUER, ARON. Max D. Steuer: trial lawyer. 301p $3.50 Random house

B or 92 Steuer, Max David 50-6773

An informal biography of the well-known trial lawyer, written by his son. He studies

STEUER, ARON—Continued
especially five of his father's cases, and attempts to reveal the elder Steuer's character and methods by quoting passages. Explanatory text is included for each case. No index.

"Although the author expressly disavows the intention of writing a full-scale biography, one feels the lack of more information about Max Steuer's early life and background—the forces that were responsible for his fabulous memory, his hard-driving will to work, his abstinence from the use of stimulants, his patient persistence. A further development along these lines would have given the book a wider appeal. As written, it is a book by a lawyer about a lawyer and largely for lawyers, though others who delight in the drama of the courtroom will also find it entertaining." Covington Hardee
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 7 '50 420w

"For the general reader the author has fashioned a volume of interesting effortless reading. His writing is simple, lucid and enjoyable. The only objection to his work is that there is not more of it."
+ Harvard Law R 64:183 N '50 200w
Kirkus 17:688 D 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by Anne Whitmore
Library J 75:104 Ja 15 '50 100w

"Justice Steuer has disclaimed any attempt to write a full-dress biography, and his personal stuff on his father is exceedingly skimpy; the bulk of the volume is made up of studies of some of Mr. Steuer's more celebrated cases, with long but well-edited examples of the Steuer technique of cross-examination, an art at which he was the acknowledged master. . . Lawyers will enjoy these examples, but they can be understood by the general reader quite as well." Stanley Walker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 4 '50 650w
N Y Times p29 My 14 '50 650w
+ New Yorker 26:134 Ap 15 '50 130w

STEVENS, ALDEN, and STEVENS, MARION. America; a traveler's guide to the United States; with the assistance of more than twelve hundred correspondents in all parts of the country and with many maps by Samuel Bryant. 634p $5 Little 917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Automobile touring—Road guides 50-6685

"Made up of 28 'TransAmerica Tours' showing fastest routes and giving facts and statistics for states, cities and towns. Map and mileage chart on end papers and other maps. Route finder and full index." Bookmark

Atlantic 186:86 Ag '50 100w
Booklist 46:285 My 15 '50
Bookmark 9:183 My '50 40w

"An excellent coverage."
+ Kirkus 17:534 S 15 '49 140w

"At last someone has written an annotated guidebook to the United States with a light, pleasant touch. 'The Stevens' America' is no doubt hardly as complete as 'The American Guide,' which came out last summer but, at any rate, the entries are easier to read than a dictionary." H. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:42 Ap 8 '50 240w
Springf'd Republican p12C My 21 '50 300w

"A truly readable motorists' guide-book to the United States has been the longfelt want of hundreds of thousands of Americans who burn up our highways, and their own automobile tires, every year. And here, at last, is an answer to that need, a friendly and personal book written by two acknowledged travel authorities of good taste and sound judgment." T. E. Chandler
+ Survey 86:336 Je '50 500w

"There is not as much information as this reviewer would have liked on the real 'back country'—in Utah and Arizona, for instance—and an even more extensive hotel and restaurant list would be fine. But this is undoubtedly the most useful single volume for travelers—and it makes good reading too."
+ Theatre Arts 34:11 Jl '50 500w
Wis Lib Bul 46:26 Je '50

STEVENS, EDMUND. This is Russia, uncensored; introd. by Walter Bedell Smith. 200p $2.75 Didier pubs.
947.084 Russia 50-12180

"A brief, almost capsulized account of post-war USSR, from Politbureau intrigues to devaluation, new anti-Semitism, the cultural purges, and Russian claims to 'firsts.' It was awarded a 1950 Pulitzer Prize in its original form—forty-four separate articles published last winter in the Christian Science Monitor." (Sat R of Lit) No index.

Booklist 47:113 N 15 '50

"There is ample evidence in Mr. Stevens' book that war between Russia and America is not automatically inevitable and that a better understanding of the Russian problem will enable us the better to deal with it." J. G. Harrison
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '50 700w
Kirkus 18:377 Jl 1 '50 210w

Reviewed by V. M. Dean
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 3 ' 1050w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 3 '50 180w

"It is to Stevens's credit that he refuses to be tied to 'formal evidence'—in this case official Soviet statements. And he creates a sense of tactile immediacy of Soviet reality. Both are features still generally absent from our learned works, though their authors be neither naive nor incompetent. On the other hand, the author's opportunity of seeing Soviet life first-hand—an opportunity denied the scholar and expert—is offset by a serious shortcoming. This is Stevens's failure to supplement his rather astute immediate observations and judgments by the kind of background and analysis which lends more than fleeting interest to a book." George Fischer
Sat R of Lit 33:17 N 11 '50 650w
Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 350w

STEVENS, WALLACE. Auroras of autumn. 193p $3 Knopf 811 50-9355

A new collection of poems by the winner of the 1950 Bollingen Prize for Poetry, author of Harmonium (1923), Ideas of Order (1936), Man With the Blue Guitar (1937), Parts of a World (1942) and Transport to Summer (1947).

Booklist 47:58 O 1 '50
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '50
Kirkus 18:411 Jl 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by George McDonald
Library J 75:1669 O 1 '50 100w

"The deprecatory implications of the title will not disturb one sect of Mr. Stevens's enthusiasts; he is, lately, one of the two most be-culted American poets—the other being Dr. Williams. Yet these implications are pertinent, for in this book there is a good deal that is chill, airy, remote, the luminous quality wavering now and then into no more than meditative verse, into prose even. . . There are beautiful lines in this collection and, more rarely, beautiful poems." Rolfe Humphries
+ — Nation 171:293 S 30 '50 350w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 29 '50 450w

Reviewed by Lloyd Frankenberg
N Y Times p20 S 10 '50 900w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 26:129 O 28 '50 300w

Reviewed by W. V. O'Connor
Poetry 77:109 N '50 1050w
Time 56:106 S 25 '50 500w

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA. Myles Standish, adventurous boy; il. by Paul Laune. 191p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Standish, Myles—Juvenile literature 49-10704

A story of the childhood of Myles Standish which tells principally of a family feud and how Myles secured the aid of Queen Elizabeth in saving his father's land from Cousin Edward's grasp. The final chapter describes Captain Myles Standish's services to the Plymouth colony in America.

Reviewed by F. D. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 13 '49 80w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 10 '50 50w

"Like the others, this attempts to make biography interesting for 8-9 year-olds. Children will undoubtedly like the story but much of the incident is based on conjecture, and there is very little real biography here. Recommended for limited purchase." M. E. Martignoni
Library J 75:328 F 15 '50 70w

"An exciting and educational story. . . Parents and teachers would enjoy reading this book as much as their youthful charges."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 13 '49 150w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Music in the hills. 282p $2.75 Rinehart

50-10195

Sequel to Vittoria Cottage (Book Review Digest 1949). James Dering, after his demobilization, goes to the Scottish border farm of his aunt and uncle to learn farming and try to cure a broken heart. In this quiet story of life at Mureth farm he manages to do both things.

Booklist 47:69; 98 O 15 '50; N 1 '50

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '50 250w

+ Kirkus 18:531 S 1 '50 140w

"Quiet romance for many readers." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 75:1507 S 15 '50 70w

"A pleasant story."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 29 '50 130w

"The book will not go down in history as an important contribution to the fiction of our day. It burns like a candle in a flare of neon. Yet it casts a decent and a cleanly light." Sugden Tilley
N Y Times p30 O 29 '50 230w

+ New Yorker 26:162 N 11 '50 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 3 '50 160w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 184:354 S 29 '50 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 22 '50 180w

STEVENSON, ELIZABETH. Crooked corridor; a study of Henry James. 172p $2.75 Macmillan

813 James, Henry 49-11903

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"Miss Stevenson's style is analytical, and, when evaluative, elliptical. She assumes James' high excellence; she wastes few words in adoration. Her analytical and critical insight, partly individual and partly distilled from recent Jamesian criticism, should help one slice through the supposed 'difficulties' of James." G. R.
+ Canadian Forum 30:46 My '50 210w

"Sometimes, I think, Miss Stevenson labors a point; sometimes she skimps, as in her discussion of James' all-important language. But in the main she is remarkably pithy and provocative, and as an added merit she never out of enthusiasm for generalizing loses sight of Henry James: her book is particularly rich in direct reference to James' works and characters and stated ends." David Burnham
+ Commonweal 51:468 F 3 '50 450w

"As lucid a statement as one could wish of what James has come to mean, or ought to mean, for the modern consciousness." Howard Doughty
+ Nation 170:137 F 11 '50 300w

"Miss Stevenson may be 'precise' when it comes to framing her own thoughts; but the book, in design and substance, in the exploration of the texts, in definition and formulation, betrays all the weaknesses of 'impressionistic' criticism, which is criticism documented, so to speak, on the run. . . If we accept, for a moment, her dictum that the 'proper' study of James is his fiction, and if she is reading it from the 'inside,' why, we can legitimately inquire, has she found it necessary to go 'outside'? . . The raids for requisite facts across her established frontiers are sporadic, slapdash, made in uncritical haste. Miss Stevenson proposes to do one thing, attempts another —and ends with neither. She has not, for one thing, read even all of James's fiction; nor has she, as her skimpy bibliography shows, sought out all the pertinent related texts." Leon Edel
— New Eng Q 23:245 Je '50 1250w

"It is a bold thing for a young critic to have joined battle with a complete book, A Study of Henry James. Miss Stevenson, however, makes an excellent first impression." J. D. Scott
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:516 N 25 '50 950w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 18 '49 320w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Sat R of Lit 33:17 F 18 '50 230w

"A great deal has been written concerning the literary talents of Mr. James but for such a figure as he there is always room for one more book, especially if it offers some new insight into the man, his times, and or his works. This book does not do that. Not that Miss Stevenson does not know her Henry James. She does, and her book is clear, concise and beautifully organized. She says what she has to say well but there is little new in her analysis of James's novels, not even a change in emphasis." J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p8C F 5 '50 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Jl 28 '50 1350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:15 Mr '50 260w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. Year of the oath; the fight for academic freedom at the University of California; in collaboration with other professors of the University of California. 156p $2 Doubleday

378 California. University. Teachers—Oaths of allegiance 50-9877

"A group of University of California faculty members reports on the dispute between Regents and faculty concerning special loyalty oath. While both parties agreed on exclusion of Communists from faculty, controversy raged on academic freedom. A compromise seemed to have been reached, but after this book came off the press, Regents dismissed thirty-one faculty members, none of them even allegedly a Communist. The case is of general importance because it is a sign of a growing trend." Library J

Booklist 47:71 O 15 '50

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 16 '50 800w

Reviewed by H. W. Flannery
Commonweal 53:306 D 29 '50 1900w

"The book is not bitter, nor is it a propagandized plea for sympathy with the victims. Rather it is a challenge to the public to face the issue dramatized by their case. Told in direct, uncomplicated prose. Well documented."
+ Kirkus 18:540 S 1 '50 190w

STEWART, G. R.—Continued

"This small, well-written, well-documented book should interest anybody concerned with the problem of the freedom of academic institutions." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 75:1664 O 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 15 '50 1350w

"Mr. Stewart's book is a useful handbook of information, but it is seriously marred by a failure to do justice to the position of the overwhelming majority of members of the faculty who found no difficulty in signing their contract and working for the repeal of its foolish provision requiring a special non-Communist affirmation." Sidney Hook

+ — N Y Times p6 O 1 '50 1350w

"A report, commendably dispassionate in tone, on the serious situation created this past year at the University of California when the faculty members were required by the regents to take a non-Communist oath."

New Yorker 26:136 O 7 '50 160w

"No Californian interested in his university's good, or in the good of education in general, can afford to leave [this book] unread." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 17 '50 3000w

"A brilliant and searing study which in microcosm is the story of our contemporary democracy striving to keep itself from being enslaved by enemies from within. . . This book was not written by George Stewart alone; he was helped in both the writing and research by seventy faculty members who opposed the oath. Mr. Stewart and the University of California faculty deserve our heartiest thanks. If we survive, it will be because we have idealists and fighters of their caliber to match our men on the battlefields." Irving Stone

+ Sat R of Lit 33:12 S 30 '50 1300w

STEWART, JAY. Before it's too late. 249p $2.50 Mill

50-6373

Mystery story.

"Stewart writes amusingly and ought to manage a better yarn than this when he gets a plot that isn't so unmanageable." James Sandoe

— + Chicago Sun p6 Mr 24 '50 80w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 23 '50 60w

"A good swift pace and some entertaining dialogue to this."

+ Kirkus 18:77 F 1 '50 90w

"A rather routine thriller which fails in suspense because of its obvious plot."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ap 23 '50 150w

N Y Times p39 Ap 16 '50 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 9 '50 90w

"Every so often a really good mystery story comes along from the pen of some little-known author, which has all the qualities of suspense, good characters, interesting locale, a novel plot with a new twist and a climax that knocks off your hat. Such a book is 'Before It's Too Late.' " J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 100w

STEWART, JIMMIE ADAIR. Ceramics for all. 156p il $2; pa $1 Barnes & Noble

738.3 Pottery 50-6801

Handbook for beginners containing information and instructions on working with clay, and the equipment to use. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 47:10 S 1 '50

Bookmark 10:38 N '50 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:2012 N 15 '50 60w

"In this book the beginner will find the basis for a firm foundation in a creative and ever popular art craft."

+ School Arts 50:10a O '50 90w

STEWART, JOHN CRAIG. Through the first gate. 280p $2.75 Dodd

50-6534

A novel of adolescence. The time is the middle twenties and Tom MacAllen, the hero, is the son of a southern planter. Tom's character is sketched from the time when his father gave him his first rifle, to the last year in high school.

"Mr. Stewart's first novel is rewarding because he knows how to write and how to remember."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 26 '50 180w

"The author, whether equipped with powers of retentiveness or observation, knows the adolescent mind well and reports it with sureness. A wistful note of social protest sounds throughout. The insertion of an excessive amount of nature description makes Mr. Stewart sound like a frustrated poet from time to time, and such passages retard further a narrative pace that never, at its fastest, exceeds a snail's crawl. This, together with the intrusive formula-plot, weakens the author's promising material." Harrison Kinney

+ — N Y Times p26 My 21 '50 400w

"Tom's decision to shun the Grand Order of the Young Klan, his subsequent ostracism, and his final show-down with a neighborhood bully form a solid and authentic-sounding core around which Mr. Stewart has woven, not quite so skillfully, an account of the more ordinary tribulations and triumphs of the early teens."

+ New Yorker 26:116 Mr 25 '50 120w

"This is a fine first novel and ought to be preface to a body of impressive work." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 S 2 '50 290w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 16 '50 90w

STEWART, WILL, pseud. See Williamson, J.

STIGLER, GEORGE JOSEPH. Five lectures on economic problems. 65p $1.75 Macmillan

330.4 Economics 50-7262

These five lectures on economics were delivered at the London School of Economics, by a professor of economics from Columbia University. Contents: The economists and equality; Monopolistic competition in retrospect; The classical economics: an alternative view; The mathematical method in economics; Competition in the United States.

"Interesting examples of Stigler's point of view on some phases of economic history and methodology largely calculated to hold interest and appeal for the general reader." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 75:1188 Jl '50 80w

Reviewed by Harvey Levin

Nation 171:90 Jl 22 '50 900w

STILWELL, HART. Campus town. 273p $3 Doubleday

50-5010

Novel "developing the character of 'Lefty' Mason in his life at a southern state college after World War I. Inhibited at home by a drunken father, he builds up strong desires to get ahead on his own merit. His sense of fairness battles first impressions in his meetings with the KKK, unions, sex, and discriminatory action against two professors." (Library J)

"An outspoken airing of vicious educational and prejudice practices, this is not for the squeamish reader."

Kirkus 17:610 N 1 '49 190w

"Hard hitting, vital adult reading." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 74:1904 D 15 '49 70w

"Supporting characters are shadowy holdovers from the sketchbook of John Held Jr., and the style—mostly in the 'tough' school—is marred by forced profanity and soggy polemics. At the finish, one is exhausted by the effort of standing at a keyhole. There is a plea for racial tolerance in 'Campus Town,' as there was in Mr. Stilwell's first novel, 'Border City.' But the author has not done justice to a classic period. His story, for all its fervency, lacks credibility and his characters lack basic motivation." James Kelly
— N Y Times p4 Ja 8 '50 360w

"The author has endeavored to convey his ideas through the medium of hard-boiled realism and in the process has sacrificed much credibility." R. F. Henchey
— Springf'd Republican p8C F 5 '50 170w

STIMPSON, GEORGE WILLIAM. Book about American history. 436p $3.50 Harper
973 U.S.—History. Curiosities 50-6986

A collection of miscellaneous questions on the subject of American history, answered in narrative form. Based on thirty years of reading and research by the author. Index.

Booklist 46:301 Je 1 '50

"Frequently asked questions accurately answered with a wealth of colorful detail."
+ Bookmark 9:185 My '50 20w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 17 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:92 F 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p19 Ag 13 '50 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 16 '50 150w

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 33:20 Jl 15 '50 430w

"Another generous allotment of facts from the tremendous stockpile built up by Mr. Stimpson in 30 years of reading and research. His previous quart-size encyclopedias, 'A Book About the Bible' and 'A Book About a Thousand Things,' have made themselves at home in many a living room, and the present volume may prove to be even more welcome and useful than its brothers." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p5C My 28 '50 310w

Wis Lib Bul 46:23 S '50

STINETORF, LOUISE A. White witch doctor; decorated by Don McDonough. 276p $3 Westminster press 50-8709

A novel describing the life of an American medical missionary in the Belgian Congo.

"An articulate chronicle, rugged, valiant, and true." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 186:74 S '50 450w

Booklist 46:309; 353 Je 15 '50; Jl 15 '50

"An adventurous, zestful but uncomplicated story which will leave the reader sharing the natives' fondness for Ellen." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 171:474 S '50 220w

"Not very often is a missionary the hero or heroine of a novel. And hardly ever is that novel as good as Louise Stinetorf's 'White Witch Doctor.'" Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p5 Jl 23 '50 460w

"Here is a story of missionary life as exciting as any adventurer's tale, and with a lot more truth than such yarns usually have. Here is Africa—the dark region of the Congo, to be more exact—minus the usual bunk and romanticizing. Here are the African natives, for all their strange customs and beliefs, like humanity everywhere. And here are the missionaries, pictured not as saints and pious hymn singers, but as devoted men and women working at a serious and important job—and being pretty human about it, too." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 23 '50 410w

"Most of the people one meets in these pages are plausible human beings, and the situations are realistic and convincing. While this is not a great missionary novel, it is much better than average. It is the kind of book which rewards reading and deserves lending, particularly to persons who are skeptical concerning the value of Christian missions."
+ Christian Century 67:1108 S 20 '50 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

Kirkus 18:282 My 15 '50 250w

"Local color is vivid and picturesque characters are clearly delineated. Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 75:1045 Je 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 23 '50 900w

"'White Witch Doctor' is a story of adventures in which the leading character never knows defeat. It may please the lovers of hairbreadth escapes. But to those who know Africa well and to many a devoted, efficient missionary, medical or clerical, the book will prove disappointing. The author has been too eager to produce a thriller. Her book lacks adequate descriptions of the wilderness and of the influence of the wilderness upon the human mind and spirit." M. L. J. Akeley
N Y Times p18 Jl 23 '50 500w

New Yorker 26:71 Jl 29 '50 150w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 23 '50 800w

Reviewed by M. L. J. Akeley
— Sat R of Lit 33:15 Ag 5 '50 1150w

Time 56:90 Ag 14 '50 450w

Wis Lib Bul 46:25 S '50

STODDARD, GEORGE DINSMORE. On the education of women. 101p $1.50 Macmillan
376 Education of women 50-7130

"The President of the University of Illinois gives his views on the education of women. He believes that, since 80 per cent of all college women become homemakers, women should receive thorough training in homemaking, as well as preparation for citizenship." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '50

"Some home economists may feel Dr. Stoddard has failed to recognize certain important aspects of home education, but most of them will tend to agree with his arguments for such education for men as well as women and for the world significance of the right kind of education for women." B. I. Coon
J Home Econ 42:824 D '50 350w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 72:151 S 2 '50 200w

STOKES, ADRIAN, ed. Cezanne. See Cezanne, P.

STOKES, ANSON PHELPS. Church and state in the United States; introd. by Ralph Henry Gabriel. 3v 936;799;1042p il $25 Harper
261.7 Church and state in the U.S. 50-7978

"The question of the relation of Church and State is one of the most important issues of our day. It is being debated in ecclesiastical circles, in legislative halls, and in the press. Its implications are being weighed in our courts and learned judicial decisions are being handed down which spell out the meaning for today of this fundamental American principle. . . The ground covered by Dr. Stokes in these three volumes is defined as 'an historical survey, source-book, and interpretation of documents and events showing the growth of religious freedom under the friendly constitutional separation of Church and State, and the resulting influence of religion in all major phases of national development; also a study of the status of churches under federal and state constitutions, statutes and judicial decisions; authoritative opinions on matters at issue by courts, Church bodies, statesmen, religious leaders and publicists and a discussion of contemporary problems of adjustment.' The author was for twenty years Secretary of Yale University and later Canon of Washington Cathedral." (Kirkus) Bibliography. Table of dates. Index.

STOKES, A. P.—Continued

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet
Ann Am Acad 271:222 S '50 500w

"Dr. Stokes is one of those historians valued not so much for the conclusions he draws as for the tremendous compilation of data he presents. This is no way to cast reflection on an eminent historian, but merely to indicate that his talent and industry as a researcher are by far his greatest strength and the major reason for the tremendous importance of this book." J. O. Supple
+ Chicago Sun p5 Jl 9 '50 360w

Reviewed by John Evans
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 16 '50 490w

"I must express admiration for the author's courage in undertaking a project of such majestic proportions, the fortitude with which he has pursued it, and the scholarly method and judicious temper with which he has carried it through. The theme bristles with controversial points. No one could write a book about it that would not displease some group either by what it included or by what it omitted or by the author's interpretation of some of the data. On the first two scores the author has taken the safest, as well as the fairest, course by including practically everything and omitting little that is relevant to the subject. On the last, he must take his chances as to what the critics, Protestant and Catholic, will say about his interpretations." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 67:589 My 10 '50 2750w

"A magnum opus which has everything: grand typography, excellent paper, good introduction and preface, careful analysis and synthesis, pertinent illustrations, extensive notes, a critical and classified bibliography, a table of dates beginning with Moses and ending with 1949, appendices, addenda, written in irenic style, with perspective and balance." C. H. Moehlman
+ Crozer Q 27:343 O '50 1400w

"So much well-earned gratitude has already been expressed by reviewers that it may not be unjust to Dr. Stokes to express some disappointment that his achievement was not greater. One who uses the volumes for a broader purpose than that of an exhaustive book of reference will, for the most part, look in vain for the insight which carries inquiry beyond the surface of recorded fact and opinion. . . In so far as Dr. Stokes is concerned with the decisions of American courts on matters of church and state, his treatment of those materials is generally exhaustive and discriminating." M. D. Howe
+ — Harvard Law R 64:170 N '50 3100w

"A careful, objective and scholarly study which should be an indispensable reference book for all who wish to be informed about the subject. . . This is a thorough study, carefully annotated, and indexed and with extensive bibliographies. Indispensable for research and reference."
+ Kirkus 17:648 D 1 '49 270w

"A remarkable work, spacious, erudite, and magnanimous. Canon Stokes has attempted, singlehanded, what is ordinarily assigned to a whole organization or academy—nothing less than a comprehensive survey of the whole history of church and state in America. Nothing like it has been undertaken before; nothing like it will need to be done again. It is unique and definitive." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 9 '50 2000w

"One ground of confidence in the author of this work is the fact that eleven years ago he had the prophetic foresight to drop everything else and begin work upon it. Now is when we most need it, but we would not have it now had not someone begun it years ago—for this is a monumental work. Here is the source material we need for the understanding and analysis of several issues of American life which have become explosive. . . On all points there is an ample portrayal of historical background, biographical material on principal personalities, and relevant statutory and other primary documentary material set out in full." J. A. Pike
+ N Y Times p3 My 28 '50 1300w

"These three volumes are a tract for the times but they have not been got up in haste. They represent a lifelong concern on the part of their author, whose activities both as citizen and churchman have involved him in the subject over many years, prior to the recent thirteen years, which he has devoted to this encyclopedic work." W. L. Sperry
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 Jl 1 '50 1100w

"Adjectives for description of this work come easily to mind: encyclopedic, exhaustive, authoritative, objective. These volumes by Dr. Stokes mark, in monumental fashion, the climax of a varied and distinguished career." Liston Pope
+ Yale R n s 40:174 autumn '50 750w

STOKES, DONALD HUBERT. Appointment with fear. 187p $2.50 Coward-McCann 50-9540

Mystery story.

"An intelligently written mystery which delves among somewhat scurrilous material without being offensive."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 24 '50 180w

"The major mysteries posed by this book are why it was written and why it was published. The plot is fantastic, the people caricatures and the style sophomoric." M. H. Oakes
— N Y Times p29 O 8 '50 180w

"The style is pleasantly straightforward; but somehow the book misses fire. Perhaps it's crowded with too much good material." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 24 '50 110w

STOLZ, MARY SLATTERY. To tell your love. 243p $2.50 Harper
50-9836

A novel for older girls about one summer in the life of the Armacost family. Anne, just finished high school, was broken hearted because the youth she loved chose a less intense partner. Theo, the plain sister, met and fell in love with no fuss at all. Fourteen-year-old Johnny, who worried about being skinny, tried to build up some muscles, and kept things going with his pithy remarks.

Booklist 47:45; 63 S 15 '50; O 1 '50

"The touch of humor Johnny brings into the story is a relief from the intensity of Anne's emotions, and there are some delightfully inconsequential two-track family conversations. In theme and plot, this wholesome, well-written story is not unlike Going Steady by Anne Emery, but is perhaps a bit more mature and for slightly older girls." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 26:384 S '50 200w

"There may be a surfeit of nobility here, but the family relationships are warm and happy, the dialogue witty, and the sobering picture of a moneyless teen-age marriage gives the book substance."
+ Kirkus 18:424 Ag 1 '50 300w

"An unusually fine, mature book for adolescent girls." Siri Andrews
+ Library J 75:1914 N 1 '50 80w

"A well written, refreshingly honest and sincere story. . . It all adds up to a rich, mature story with an insight into human relationships which older teen-age girls will thoroughly enjoy." Siri Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 15 '50 230w

"The Armacosts are attractive people, blessed with humor and imagination. Through them the author manages to say a number of perceptive things about the business of everyday living." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p34 O 8 '50 250w

"Written at times with a young author's excessive pleasure in adverbs and figures of speech, this story is nevertheless very good reading. The characters are at times almost too charming or too whimsical to be quite true, but they are delightful company. One closes the book with regret. It is a story that young girls and many mothers will thoroughly enjoy." R. H. Viguers
+ Sat R of Lit 33:50 N 11 '50 320w

STONE, HAMPTON, pseud. See Stein, A. M.

STONE, IRVING, and KENNEDY, RICHARD, eds. We speak for ourselves; a self-portrait of America. 462p $5 Doubleday
920 U.S.—Biography 50-9974

"An anthology of selections from autobiographies of Americans from all walks of life, statesmen, politicians, explorers, educators, doctors, theater people, writers, preachers, etc." Library J

Booklist 47:95 N 1 '50

"More details about some of the lesser-known persons represented would have been helpful to the average reader. On the whole, though, 'We Speak for Ourselves' is a chorus of Americans that sounds its message with both strength and faith—all the more reason for hearkening to it in such days as these." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p5 O 10 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:451 Ag 1 '50 110w

"A good idea, nicely developed and well edited." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:1664 O 1 '50 80w

Springf'd Republican p8D O 1 '50 60w

"A useful and interesting collection."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:16 N '50

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Prince and the porker; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 67p $2.75 Dodd 50-10180

Story of a show horse named Prince, and the attachment between Prince and the pig called Tam. When Tam didn't go to England with Prince for an important show, things went wrong until Tam was sent for.

"Some of the most hilarious goings on in horse and pig history." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 26 '50 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 40w

"Good book to read aloud in grades four to six."
+ Horn Bk 26:477 N '50 100w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow
Library J 75:2083 D 1 '50 50w

"Phil Stong's expertness in farm material and his specialty of ludicrous suggestions find perfect complement in the amusing line drawings of Kurt Wiese, whose years as limner of 'Freddy' have put him in trim for all piggy portraiture." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p24 N 12 '50 150w

Reviewed by G. C. Castor
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 12 '50 90w

"A jolly, funny, exciting story. Kurt Wiese's drawings are as much a part of it as the text. It is a worthy successor to 'Honk the Moose.' "
+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 N 11 '50 180w

STORY, JACK TREVOR. Trouble with Harry; il. by George Maas. 121p $2 Macmillan 50-9442

Mystery story.

Booklist 47:98 N 1 '50

"An English writer with the singularly fitting name of Story has created as engaging a tale as I have encountered in months of looking for something really amusing to read. It's brief—just 121 pages—proving that writers who wish to amuse should avoid trying to hold their readers too long." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 1 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:343 Je 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 75:1182 Jl '50 70w

"J. Trevor Story has turned out a pleasantly muted mystery that is genuinely funny fantasy as well." H. M.
+ N Y Times p39 O 22 '50 180w

Reviewed by Evelyn Eaton
Sat R of Lit 33:14 D 16 '50 360w

STORY PARADE (periodical). Adventure stories from Story parade; outstanding stories of adventure. 314p il $2.50 Winston 50-6686

Contents: Forgotten island, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; The ship's cat, by Cornelia Meigs; Oscar on roller skates, by M. E. Neikirk; Christmas cherries, by E. J. Gray; Helpful Henry, by Florence Brumbaugh; Gold mine in the sky, by H. L. Williams; The fire-boy of Dunsoon, by J. L. Cutler; Horseshoe nails, by Laura Benet; The little ewe lamb, by R. H. Myers; The strange little piper, by Richard Bennett; Magic at midnight, by J. S. Tippett; The monkey spirit, by M. L. Poston; Snowshoe Thompson, by D. M. Fultz; For the honor of XDY, by Chesley Kahmann; Mary Lou's Christmas, by Ellis Credle; Dragon! by E. W. Everett; The haunted wreck, by Le Grand; Patchy, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; The Secret staircase, by M. H. Lee; Adventure on Lone Gulch trail, by Helen Dickson.

"Excellent selection." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 5 '50 130w

"Recommended." F. M. Hensey
+ Library J 75:703 Ap 15 '50 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 7 '50 100w

"The book could be of considerable value to story tellers in libraries and schools." R. T.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 160w

STOUFFER, SAMUEL ANDREW, and others. Measurement and prediction. See Studies in social psychology in World war II.

STOUT, REX. In the best families. 246p $2.50 Viking 50-9975

Detective story.

Booklist 47:98 N 1 '50

Kirkus 18:439 Ag 1 '50 90w

New Repub 123:20 N 20 '50 110w

"Mr. Stout casts his story along classic lines, but he manages to add considerable humor to the old Sherlock Holmes situation."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 O 29 '50 230w

"Somewhere in all this faintly preposterous but entertaining melodrama there is also a murder mystery, possibly strong enough to sustain a short story. Now that Zeck is out of the way, we can look forward to the resumption of the solid old Wolfe-Goodwin chronicles of crime." A. B.
N Y Times p40 O 15 '50 140w

New Yorker 26:136 O 7 '50 100w

"One of the best Stout novels in some time." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 22 '50 90w

"Still an old master."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 S 30 '50 50w

Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 120w

STOUT, REX. Three doors to death; a Nero Wolfe threesome. 244p $2.50 Viking 50-6707

Three novelettes describing some of Nero Wolfe's cases. All three of the stories have appeared previously in The American magazine.

"All [are] amusing—though only the second, 'Omit Flowers,' happens to be a good detective story as well. . . A very large share of the peculiar charm of these tales is far less Nero's than Archie's. Archie is as constant and as ingratiating in his own very different manner as that Watson who gave his name to a noble tribe by playing chronicler to Nero's uncle, Sherlock Holmes." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun p5 Ap 21 '50 270w

Kirkus 17:681 D 15 '49 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 28 '50 140w

N Y Times p18 Je 18 '50 130w

"All three are handled with ease and are quite informative as well as entertaining."
+ New Yorker 26:124 My 6 '50 100w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

STOVER, HERBERT ELISHA. Men in buckskin. 311p $3 Dodd
50-9282

A historical novel of the American revolution laid in the Susquehanna country of central Pennsylvania and dealing chiefly with the Indian raids instigated by the British.

Booklist 47:45 S 15 '50

"It makes good, exciting reading following the redoubtable Simon about and, along the way, you meet some extremely interesting people, including Washington himself, 'Beast' Butler, the British hellion, and Norris, the turncoat cleric who warred so savagely on the settlers." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 10 '50 450w

"A story based on the author's familiarity with the history and terrain of northern Pennsylvania and New York State. It is easy reading, but lacks climactic effects."
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 16 '50 190w

"The narrative is no doubt a faithful picture of the period, but it is a bit pallid as history and perfunctory as romance. As a work of fiction, its flight is hampered by the weight of cartography."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ag 20 '50 200w

"With a solid sense of history, with scholarly precision yet with lively imagination, Herbert Stover reveals in this book the nature and the fierceness of the struggle between the loyalists with headquarters at Niagara and the rebel settlers in the Susquehanna Valley." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 27 '50 270w

Reviewed by Martin Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:33 S 2 '50 240w

STRACHEY, GILES LYTTON. Biographical essays. 294p $2.75 Harcourt
920 49-11684

Contents: Sir John Harington; Muggleton; John Aubrey; The life, illness, and death of Dr. North; Madame De Sévigné's cousin; The sad story of Dr. Colbatch; Lady Mary Wortley Montagu; Hume; Voltaire; Voltaire and England; Voltaire and Frederick the Great; A sidelight on Frederick the Great; The Président de Brosses; The Rousseau affair; The Abbé Morellet; Gibbon; James Boswell; Mademoiselle de Lespinasse; Madame du Deffand; Horace Walpole; Walpole's letters; The eighteenth century; Mary Berry; Lady Hester Stanhope; Madame de Lieven; An adolescent; Mr. Creevey; Charles Greville; Carlyle; Froude; Dizzy; A diplomatist: Li Hung-chang; Creighton; A statesman: Lord Morley; Sarah Bernhardt. Index.

"The style of all the essays, is literary—abysmally so—a style that has been praised as 'crystalline' and is reminiscent of innumerable models. It is gushing, epigrammatic, patched with purple, antithetical, and conspicuous because the words are forced to strain for effect by connotation or by their arrangement, with but the loosest support from any specific meaning." John Farrelly
— New Repub 122:25 Ja 30 '50 650w

"Lytton Strachey was as entertaining a writer as anyone of his century and while his prose does not now have the shock effect it had on his generation, it still is a lively and witty style in which the model of many contemporary English authors may easily be discerned. These short, highly seasoned and delightful essays are fragments of civilized conversation at its best. In their new and accessible form in these two volumes, they constitute some of the best recreational reading in print." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 4 '49 180w

STRACHEY, GILES LYTTON. Literary essays. 295p $2.75 Harcourt
820.4 English literature—History and criticism. French literature—History and criticism 49-11685

Contents: Shakespeare's final period; Words and poetry; Shakespeare at Cambridge; Othello; Rabelais; Sir Thomas Browne; The Old Comedy; Congreve, Collier, and Macaulay; Racine; Pope; The lives of the poets; Two Frenchmen; Voltaire's tragedies; The wrong turning; A simple story; The poetry of Blake; Henri Beyle; The last Elizabethan; Macaulay; The first Earl of Lytton; A Victorian critic; A Russian humorist; Mr. Hardy's new poems; An anthology; English letter writers. Index.

Reviewed by John Farrelly
— New Repub 122:25 Ja 30 '50 650w

"It is a good thing to have Strachey's essays collected in small, well-printed, and good-looking volumes, but it was a mistake to break up the author's original arrangements, to group the pieces under these two heads, and to sort them out chronologically according to the dates of the subjects. Strachey's 'portraits in miniature' of the historians, which made a significant series and set one another off, are, for example, thus senselessly scattered, and are not even all to be found in the same volume."
New Yorker 25:64 D 24 '49 110w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 4 '49 180w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 D 31 '49 60w

STRAIN, PAMELA. Pleasure from pictures; a book for young and old. 128p il 32 col pl $5 Studio
759 Painters. Paintings 50-8379

Selections from all the great European schools of painting from the early Italian to modern English painting. American painting is omitted. Brief descriptive text describes the various schools, the artists, and the works here studied. No index.

"A most pleasantly upholstered armchair tour of many galleries with the gallery-talk well-organized and excellently illustrated. . . Recommended for popular use." C. S. Plaut
+ Library J 75:1296 Ag '50 80w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 123:24 D 11 '50 60w

"Half the pages are in black and white, half in full color, all beautifully printed. The brief text is excellent for any one over twelve, old enough to wish a resumé of the history of painting. The selections are what one would expect in this sort of book, but all surely chosen to give 'pleasure.' . . . For children under twelve, two former Studio picture books by Katherine Gibson still are outstanding. 'Pictures to Grow On,' and 'More Pictures to Grow On.' " L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 1 '50 200w
San Francisco Chronicle p27 D 3 '50 50w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander
Sat R of Lit 33:46 N 4 '50 180w

STRAKACZ, ANIELA. Paderewski as I knew him; from [her] diary; tr. from the Polish by Halina Chybowska. 338p il $5 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Paderewski, Ignacy Jan 49-11799

"Diary of the wife of Paderewski's secretary from 1919 to 1941. The pianist's peace-time interests and the Polish president's political efforts are intermixed with personal details of the author's family life. The book conveys also some of the Polish people's way of life and aspirations before the recent war." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 18:41 Ja '50 50w

Reviewed by George Hanson
Library J 75:108 Ja 15 '50 70w

"Being in no sense a musician, the author has not attempted to judge Paderewski the artist. Despite its avowed limitations, however, this book is full of interesting incident and some really significant documentation. Papers are printed here that have not hitherto been publicly recorded, and data interpolated by Sylwin Strakacz clarify for American readers certain events in and pertaining to Poland from the end of World War I down to the time of Paderewski's death." L. L. Jarecka
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:287 Mr '50 1000w

"Despite its chatty style, its lack of substance and its naivete (bordering at times on foolishness), Mrs. Strakacz's diary has a kind of faded, woolly charm." Nicolas Nabokov
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 My 7 '50 950w

"The treatment is, of course, thoroughly nonobjective, but such devotion is not at all amiss in primary source material. Certainly there have been few men in nineteenth- and twentieth-century political and cultural history more completely worthy of the adoration which Mme. Strakacz so lavishly bestows in her vivid, intimate, and moving memoir." J. T. W.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:39 F 11 '50 230w

STRAKHOVSKY, LEONID IVAN, ed. Handbook of Slavic studies. 753p $12.50 Harvard univ. press

947 Civilization, Slavic. Slavic literature 49-3015

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"A solid and handsome volume." R. J. Kerner
+ Am Hist R 55:365 Ja '50 750w
Foreign Affairs 28:338 Ja '50 20w

"Consisting of twenty-eight chapters prepared by eighteen specialists, A Handbook of Slavic Studies is an indispensable guide to the study of the history and literature of the Slavic world. It provides a tightly-knit review of the major lines of development among the Slavic peoples. A comparative table of chronology, and an index of names, places, and events add to its usefulness. All the surveys are adequate, and some of them . . . are brilliant in their comprehensive insight."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:365 S '49 280w

STRAND, PAUL, il. See Newhall, N. W. Time in New England

STRAUS, HANNAH ALICE. The attitude of the Congress of Vienna toward nationalism in Germany, Italy, and Poland. 164p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

940.27 Vienna. Congress, 1814-1815. Nationalism and nationality. Europe—Politics 49-49105

"The researches of Miss Straus support the long-established view that German, Italian, and Polish nationalism fared badly at the Congress of Vienna largely because these movements had little popular support by the people themselves; and that Vienna Congress leaders cannot be accused of being unaware of national feelings even though some may have unduly discounted their long-term potentials." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Am Hist R 55:588 Ap '50 900w

"The author writes for readers who know their Vienna Congress. Her bibliography is impressive, although there are a few puzzling omissions. The continued dependence on works produced within ten years of the Congress should hearten contemporary writers on recent conferences. Her book has limitations. One gets the impression that nationalism was chiefly a diplomatic concept instead of a great moral and spiritual ground swell. It is indicative of the author's focus that a reader needs more grounding in diplomacy than in nationalism." Garland Downum
+ — Ann Am Acad 269:183 My '50 400w

STRAUSZ-HUPE, ROBERT, and POSSONY, STEFAN THOMAS. International relations in the age of the conflict between democracy and dictatorship; original maps and charts by Harold K. Faye. 947p il maps $6 McGraw

341 International relations. U.S.—Foreign relations. Russia—Foreign relations 50-7029

"This book discusses international relations in the modern world. With special emphasis on the 'conflict between democracy and dictatorship,' the stress is on power, analysis of the principles in foreign policy and peace enforcement, and arrangement is by subject rather than chronological. To supplement the discussions, appendices include texts of various diplomatic papers such as the German-Soviet Pact of 1939, the North Atlantic Pact and other documents." (Library J) Index.

"As the subtitle suggests, this volume approaches the subject of international relations with special reference to the contemporary world struggle for power. It will appeal to teachers who have wanted a text sympathetic to the ideals of the West in this struggle, and who have desired a topical treatment of the full range of subject matter normally embraced in general courses on international relations." N. J. Padelford
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:791 S '50 650w

Reviewed by Oliver Benson
Ann Am Acad 271:189 S '50 360w

"The authors have produced an interesting book, although it could be cut down to half its size without losing its essential merits." F. H. Cramer
+ — Current Hist 19:101 Ag '50 550w

"The authors, both university professors, are experts in the field and have produced a valuable contribution to the subject." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:778 My 1 '50 130w

"One of the great strengths of this comprehensive manual of international relations is its practical recognition of the full range and complexity of the subject. The authors have gone far beyond the disciplines of history, international law and professional diplomacy which were once sufficient to the understanding—or at any rate, teaching—of international relations." Crane Brinton
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 6 '50 800w

"A textbook of uncommon readability and uncommoner cynicism. . . By way of elaborating on this thesis, the authors piece together huge quantities of information, all of which go to show how complicated is international politics, despite its apparently simple rules, and how rich the take. They also come up with numerous side remarks, some of which are penetrating comments on the game's progress and some downright kibbitzing. Their long discourse is therefore bound to give any adult reader several informing, and perhaps provoking, evenings."

STRAUSZ-HUPE, ROBERT—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:47 S 16 '50 320w

"The advanced student of international relations will find an excellent guide to the prevention of war, consciously stressing the implications of the third factor, in this book." Hans Kohn
+ Survey 86:333 Je '50 240w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Mothering Sunday. 278p $3 Coward-McCann
50-5890

The English "Mothering Sunday" corresponds to the American "Mother's day," altho the derivation is older. The novel is based on this old custom, and describes the happenings of that day when her five grown children, and her grandchildren as well, descended upon Anna Caldwell. The children are devoted to their mother, but do not know each other, and the developments of that day were enlightening to the members of the whole group.

Booklist 46:194; 232 F 15 '50; Mr 15 '50

"In this novel, which covers a single day, Miss Streatfeild has curbed her whimsy, has dealt shrewdly with the Parliament-member son and his American wife, ironically with the managing daughter, compassionately with misunderstood children, and has made a story that is both gentle and amusing above its serious undertones."
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 11 '50 190w

"While not likely to prove an important novel this is way above average on the score of sheer readability. . . Unusual both in its whole and in its component parts. Inescapably British—both in matter and manner, but good reading."
+ Kirkus 18:31 Ja 15 '50 290w

"Miss Streatfeild's underlying thesis grows from her conviction that deep hurts, through neglect, or misunderstanding in childhood or early youth, create repressions, and distorted minds. Her great charm is that she writes pleasantly, about agreeable people. Her characters are extraordinarily diversified in type and age, are vivid, and endearingly human." Constance Black
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 5 '50 320w

"This story is told with a deft and economical hand. Precisely chosen conversational tidbits and natural actions are used in place of descriptive passages to build tremendous suspense for the family meeting. . . The beauty of this fine tale lies in the fact that the reader is allowed to know the members of the family intimately before the meeting and is thus prepared for and anxious to see their reactions to each other. The book is a feast of characterization." P. J. McDonnell
+ N Y Times p34 F 26 '50 190w

New Yorker 26:121 Mr 18 '50 80w

"Miss Streatfeild gets right into her excellent story and doesn't let the reader down at any point, proving again that for domestic comedy, the English writers are in a class by themselves." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 26 '50 120w

"It is curious that there is a quality here which suggests that rare and beautiful book of Virginia Woolf, 'The Waves.' If only the two could have been combined so that this one might have the spare, haunting beauty of Virginia Woolf's! And if 'The Waves' could have something of the clarity and integrity of this book's character drawing, even a suggestion of its very real story, what a fine novel they would have made! . . 'Mothering Sunday' has an impact, a value, which is worth remembering." M. S. Douglas
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:34 Mr 11 '50 360w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 184:88 Ja 20 '50 300w

Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 19 '50 140w

"Like not a few novels of its kind, Mothering Sunday deals with present-day matters without always conveying the sense that the author is, in fact, thinking in present-day terms. . . The author seems to accept so much that is improbable that the accumulation results in the air of unreality which permeates the book. The heart-burnings of Carol, the American wife, seem, also, anything but American."
Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 6 '50 330w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Ap '50

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Double identities [Eng title: Two graphs]. 243p $2.50 Dodd 50-6987

Detective story.

"Interesting for its plot which circles a pair of strikingly similar brothers. There are Rhode's customary patches of repetition and the unassimiliated wads of speculation at the fireside of that tiresome fraud, Dr. Priestley. If at this point one wonders why Rhode is, after all, enjoyable, it may be guessed that his enjoyment lies in an old fashioned compassion for narrative rather than in the building of fretwork around the consciousness of a dull lot of people with nerves."
— + Chicago Sun p6 Ap 7 '50 150f

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 7 '50 230w

"[Dr Priestley] proceeds, for the first time in his honored career, to solve a case by guesswork rather than deduction. Despite this departure from strict rules, this remains one of the more attractive recent Rhodes, with a fine involved plot of impersonation, intricate family hatreds, and some excellent detailwork by Superintendent Waghorn." A. B.
+ N Y Times p25 My 7 '50 130w

"As English as roast mutton, and probably not much more stimulating."
— New Yorker 26:112 Ap 1 '50 100w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. Mingo Dabney. 383p $3 Dial press
49-50311

A continuation of the story of the youngest Dabney, following the course of his love for Rafaela Galban, the Cuban patriot, known as La Entorcha. Mingo followed her to Cuba, became involved in the revolt against Spain, fought with the insurrectionists, and finally won the lady.

Booklist 46:189 F 1 '50

Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Chicago Sun p6 Ap 13 '50 500w

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 5 '50 350w

Christian Science Monitor p4 Mr 11 '50 140w

"It seemed to me a more superficial book, cutting less into emotional values, less convincing than its predecessors. Possibly the remoteness of the setting, while adding glamor of a sort, conditioned the reader's response."
Kirkus 17:658 D 1 '49 340w

"Compares favorably with Hemingway in its vivid description of guerrilla warfare, convincing characterization of extreme types, passionate love of liberty, but especially in its tender story of love amidst cruel conditions. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1904 D 15 '49 100w

"An exciting narrative of the revolt against Spanish rule. . . Mr. Street spins a good yarn and reminds you that fighting a tyranny makes strange comrades-in-arms." George Conrad
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 5 '50 270w

"Mr. Street deftly describes details of clothing, food, customs and terrain. Written most of the way in a blend of pidgin Spanish and contorted English, his novel offers the simple action of a Hollywood Western (here, Spaniards replace Indians and Cubans replace cowpokes). It will have appeal for all lovers of historical popcorn." James Kelly
N Y Times p35 F 26 '50 200w

"In a prefatory note, Mr. Street points out that he has taken several liberties with historical fact. This will probably disturb his readers far less than will the liberties he has taken with his native prose."
New Yorker 26:101 Mr 4 '50 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 2 '50 200w

"It is an exciting tale and visually quite graphic. The pity is that it has no depth at all, that it is all words and movement, as flat as the screen upon which it could have its most representative existence." N. L. R.
Sat R of Lit 33:30 Mr 18 '50 260w

STRENGTHENING of American political institutions [by] A. S. Mike Monroney [and others]. 134p $2 Cornell univ. press

320.973 U.S.—Politics and government
49-50428

Five lectures delivered during the spring of 1949 at the Cornell symposium on "America's Freedom and Responsibility in the Contemporary Crisis." Authors are Congressman Monroney, on the Legislative Reorganization Act; Thomas J. Hargrave, on industrial mobilization; Thurman Arnold, on the federal loyalty program (with additional comment by Arthur E. Sutherland, Jr.); Don K. Price, on the Presidency; and Edgar Ansel Mowrer, on the formulation of American foreign policy.

Am Pol Sci R 44:505 Je '50 100w

Current Hist 18:165 Mr '50 50w

"Of books that propose to cover the subject suggested by this one's title, there is no end. But not so many do as well in stating the problems involved or presenting a viewpoint on each that is at once so succinct and informed—though, of course, open to debate. The reason for this is the all-around capability of each contributor." P. R. L.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:57 My 6 '50 300w

STRINGER, ANN (MRS HENRY RIES), and RIES, HENRY. German faces. 114p il $3 Sloane

914.3 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- . National characteristics, German 50-8710

Two American journalists here report on their experiences in interviewing post-war Germans. Photographs and brief prose descriptions feature a banker, a shopkeeper, ex-soldier, war widow, youth, and many others of the "little" Germans of today.

Booklist 47:11 S 1 '50

"An important book, especially in view of the tension that obtains thruout the world." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 23 '50 360w

Reviewed by A. L. Goodman
New Repub 123:22 Ag 14 '50 430w

Reviewed by J. A. Kugelmass
N Y Times p3 Jl 23 '50 360w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman
Sat R of Lit 33:20 O 7 '50 500w

Reviewed by M. C. Vernon
Survey 86:569 D '50 400w

STRINGFELLOW, ROBERT B., ed. Standard book of hunting and shooting [col. il. by F. L. Jaques]. 564p maps $5.95 Greystone

799.2 Hunting—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Game and game birds Agr50-421

A book on game hunting and shooting in North America, an abridgment of The Hunter's Encyclopedia, edited by Raymond R. Camp (See Book Review Digest 1948). Each topic has been written by an expert in the field. "The work is divided into 10 parts, the subjects of which are big game, small game, animal predators, upland game birds, waterfowl, special picture section, firearms, ammunition, dogs, and miscellany. Under the last named one can find the answer to almost any question not covered in the other parts of the book. . . Included in the work are trajectory charts of rifle ammunition and pattern charts and loading tables of shotgun ammunition." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Menaugh
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 7 '50 200w

"An 'abridgement' of The Hunter's Encyclopedia but it reduces 1152 pages to 564 by omitting whole sections (Winged Predators, Small Animals, Shore Birds, etc.) and articles on rarer animals (Bison, Caribou, Jaguar, etc.), printing from same plates." R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:781 My 1 '50 40w

"In abridging 'The Hunter's Encyclopedia' Editor Stringfellow has selected his material wisely and generously. . . Perhaps the greatest feature of this volume is its high degree of reliability." C. H. Ferguson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 19 '50 450w

STRIPLING, ROBERT E. Red plot against America; ed. by Bob Considine. 282p il $3 Bell pub.

335.4 Communism—U.S. Communist party of America

"The author of this book was the chief investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities from 1938 to 1948. Mr. Considine has 'edited' the story of Mr. Stripling's adventures, first for a newspaper syndicate, then for publication in the present book. The final 113 pages are lifted, by permission from 'primers' against communism published by the committee in 1948 and obtainable from the Government Printing Office." N Y Times

"His book is as exciting as a spy thriller and as important as freedom itself. Reading this book will enable Americans to smash creeping communism and save our heritage." Walter Trohan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 26 '50 450w

Foreign Affairs 28:681 Jl '50 30w

"You would gather from Mr. Stripling, that, at a time when most Americans were blind to the Communist menace, he and Martin Dies were conducting a brave and successful attempt to expose and identify the Communist activity in our midst. The facts are somewhat different. . . There are no useful comments here on the investigative procedures of the committee. Stripling makes some perfunctory criticisms of the headline-grabbing proclivities of committee members; but his remedy for this is beyond belief. . . For an adequate picture of the Un-American Activities Committee in action, it must be corrected by reference to William Gellerman's well documented book 'Martin Dies.' " Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 D 4 '49 1200w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p16 Ja 15 '50 470w

STRONG, CHARLES STANLEY. South Pole husky; decorations by Joseph A. Farren. 295p $2.75 Longmans

50-5526

Story for older boys about a seventeen-year-old Norwegian boy who went on Amundsen's South Pole expedition in the Fram. The boy's love of dogs is the deciding factor, for he helped in the care of the 100 huskies of the polar expedition.

STRONG, C. S.—Continued

"The achievements of the boy, Nils Paulsen, are not overdrawn, and his belief in the outstanding courage of his dog, Blynken, is amply proved. Amundsen's faith in the endurance of Eskimo huskies, compared with that of Mongolian ponies, is wholly justified, and the dog's individuality and heroism finds full appreciation. All the thrill of icebound adventure is here and the details are not too painful." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 26:108 Mr '50 120w

Kirkus 18:23 Ja 15 '50 210w

Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field

+ Library J 75:883 My 15 '50 80w

"It is a thrilling reconstruction of a great adventure, and a splendid story of both dogs and men." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 19 '50 270w

"Though it does not always make the most of its dramatic possibilities, this direct, simply told adventure story with its authentic background has plenty of appeal." F. C. Smith

+ — N Y Times p24 Ap 9 '50 220w

"This is a fine adventure story, obviously based upon knowledge and experience."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:46 Ap 8 '50 140w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p8D Ap 2 '50 180w

STRONG, JOANNA, pseud. See Horowitz, C.

STRONG, KENDRICK. Sagebrush circuit. 194p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Missions—U.S. West—Social life and customs 50-14969

As a young theological student in the 1930s, the author spent most of one year as a home missionary in an isolated little town in the West. The town had been very nearly captured by two girl evangelists and much of the story is concerned with the war between the two rival churches but there are also anecdotes of village and ranch life and the author's own housekeeping adventures.

Booklist 47:70 O 15 '50

"This is a book worth reading. It is the fascinating and extraordinarily well-written chronicle of ten months spent some years ago in a missionary parish in the West by the author. . . I read the book through at a sitting; there are touches which will remain with me, I fancy, far longer." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 27:374 O '50 500w

Kirkus 18:599 O 1 '50 220w

"A most intriguing tale." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 140w

"The background of his story is very good indeed, and his story itself is singularly dull. The unregenerate ranch folk are much more interesting than the young preacher and his problems; and in reading the book one feels that the preacher knows it but does not understand why, even now." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p45 S 24 '50 270w

"The book is pleasant reading; it is often gay without stooping to flippancy or frivolity; it is rarely solemn and when it is it is so to good purpose."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:57 O 7 '50 200w

STRUIK, DIRK JAN. Lectures on classical differential geometry. 221p il $6 Addison-Wesley

513.7 Geometry, Differential 50-13349

"A college textbook based on material used by the author in a one-semester course offered to advanced undergraduate students and graduate students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Lucid discussions are supplemented by exceptionally good illustrations and a liberal sprinkling of biographical and bibliographical notes." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is well organized and beautifully illustrated." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1302 Ag '50 50w

"Although there is little question that the book can be studied most efficiently under a sympathetic instructor, it is recommended also for those uncommon (but not rare) persons who like to tackle such subjects by themselves."

N Y New Tech Bks 35:58 Jl '50

STUART, E. R. (JEB STUART, pseud). Objector. 282p $3 Doubleday

50-6850

A character sketch of Heath, a registered conscientious objector to war. His tribulations and his earnestness are described from the day when he refused to accept a rifle which was being issued to him, until the time when he met his death in battle in Germany.

"The craftsmanship of The Objector is better than average, and it is therefore annoying to find 'silence' described no fewer than forty times with slightly varying adjectives, in less than three hundred pages." H. T. K.

+ — Canadian Forum 30:120 Ag '50 220w

"A flabby novel more apt to rouse antifiction than antiwar sentiments."

— Cath World 171:311 Jl '50 150w

Chicago Sun p5 My 9 '50 90w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 7 '50 420w

"Mr. Stuart writes some superb scenes of quiet irony in which the army—and, indeed, Heath's parents, who understand him no better—try unsuccessfully to get at the root of his behavior. Unfortunately, the root of Heath's behavior is never altogether clear even to the reader, much less to Heath himself. His character lacks center." Ruth Chapin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p4 Ap 15 '50 700w

"Those who differ with, but respect the beliefs of conscientious objectors will find little in this over simplified, self-consciously written book that will make them more sympathetic. And it is hard to see how conscientious objectors can look on it as an intelligent presentation of their point of view. It is, like the Army's action in assigning Heath to a combat unit, a mistake." Paul Farrell

— Commonweal 52:133 My 12 '50 390w

Kirkus 18:111 F 15 '50 210w

"Mr. Stuart seems desperately sincere and he has tackled a big and vital theme. The trouble is that he has explored practically none of the infinite possibilities of this theme. He has brushed crudely over the surface, and this unfinished surface is even further marred by some incredibly bad writing. Mr. Stuart's style can best be described as an awkward and extremely self-conscious attempt at primitivism and very often it sounds like one of those unlamented parodies of Hemingway." J. J. Maloney

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 16 '50 550w

"Jeb Stuart, who was a machine-gunner and cannoneer in World War II, writes well, but his point of view is never clear. The reader can never definitely tell whether the hero, Heath, is a true pacifist or a mere crank trying to spite his father." Charles Spielberger

— + N Y Times p12 Jl 2 '50 130w

"Mr. Stuart passes from one cheerless chapter to the next with a notable lack of enthusiasm, and his deadpan manner of writing does nothing at all to raise his hero above the level of an automaton."

— New Yorker 26:133 Ap 15 '50 90w

"Each episode in 'The Objector' illustrates and nails down certain ideas but on the whole the effect is that of flicker-flashes held together by editorial comments. Written in a somewhat colorless prose, these episodes are realistic enough, yet they dribble by unexploited and without expanding into any dimensions. As yet the conscientious objector has no stature in literature and Mr. Stuart's fictionalized attempt is not likely to change that situation a great deal." Siegfried Mandel

Sat R of Lit 33:21 Ap 8 '50 600w

"Wherever he goes, without orating or attitudinizing, Heath makes converts to himself, if never to his cause. . . Never seen sentimentally, he is nevertheless, through Mr. Stuart's very frank, half-humorous, businesslike prose, understood, sympathized with, admired, and pitied."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:285 S '50 220w

STUART, GRAHAM HENRY. Department of State; a history of its organization, procedure, and personnel; drawings by Gloria E. Anderson. 517p il $7.50 Macmillan

353.1 U.S. State, Department of 49-11378

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"In this useful and informing volume there is a maximum of administrative mention and a minimum of foreign policy. Many a deserving officer, however humble, receives his meed of notice in Mr. Stuart's careful narrative. Nevertheless there are some individuals whom at least one reader would like to have seen mentioned. . . The author manages to touch, in clever fashion, albeit sometimes unevenly, on the principal problems of foreign affairs as he goes along. The work would be even more useful if it had given us some summary, and perhaps appraisal, of the guiding principles of American foreign policy which the successive Secretaries of State developed and invoked throughout the history of the Department of State." S. F. Bemis
+ — Am Hist R 55:620 Ap '50 600w

"The book in reality is a little of everything beginning with the problems faced by John Jay in 1784 to the bundle of problems inherited by Dean Acheson in 1949. The broad coverage is at once the strength and the weakness of this book. The rich variety of information in the book is made quickly accessible by an excellent index. . . In noting weaknesses one can point to some omissions. . . A more serious defect in the book seems to this reviewer to be the frequent failure to show how the Department as organized at a given time contributed to the policy decisions cited in the illustrative cases." John Gange
+ — Am Pol Sci R 44:194 Mr '50 1150w

"On the whole, Professor Stuart's treatment of the Department of State and of those who have carried on the Department's work is highly sympathetic, as well as informative. He may be criticized in some quarters as an apologist for the Department. Actually, while his is an 'inside job,' and while he believes in giving credit where credit is due—or overdue—he does not hesitate to criticize policies or personnel." N. D. Palmer
+ Ann Am Acad 268:221 Mr '50 750w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Churchman 164:17 F 1 '50 330w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:83 Mr '50 250w

STUART, JEB, pseud. See Stuart, E. R.

STUART, JESSE. Clearing in the sky, and other stories; woodcuts by Stanley Rice. 262p $3.50 McGraw

50-10491

Twenty-one brief stories or sketches about the simple lives of the southern mountaineers. In the title story a farmer takes his son up to the little patch of garden on the mountain, and explains how he has lived so many years longer than the doctors predicted. Many of the stories have appeared previously in magazines.

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50

"Here is Jesse Stuart at his magnificent best, telling his well loved tales of the Kentucky hills." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 12 '50 550w

"The simplicity of outlook is sometimes too easygoing. One may tire of the same locale. Yet these things are forgotten in the freshness of plot, the gusto and savor and genuineness of matter and manner, which lift the sum of Jesse Stuart's work up against the literary skyline like one of his mountains." T. M. Longstreth
+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 N 18 '50 550w

"True flavor of the hills and an oblique light touch on accents and dialect characterize the whole."
+ Kirkus 18:530 S 1 '50 130w

"More superb tales of his mountain folk by a superb craftsman. These flavorful 'yarns' with their freshness, dramatic tenseness and directness are outstanding in current storytelling. . . Will be popular in both public and school libraries." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 120w

"The good earth of Jesse Stuart's native hills still produces an excellent yield. These twenty-one stories of Kentucky are tart, full-flavored, immensely readable. Here in rich abundance are Stuart's improbable characters and outrageous incidents with the ring of truth about them, the humor which you are never absolutely sure is intentional, the affectionate regard which manages—most times—to stop just short of sentimentality." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 19 '50 450w

"If this last remnant of eighteenth-century life should ever vanish from the vista of America, Mr. Stuart has preserved its flavor for us in his ballad-like stories of the hills of home." Charlotte Capers
+ N Y Times p28 N 19 '50 310w

"Told in a garrulous, folksy manner that can only be taken a very little at a time."
New Yorker 26:131 O 28 '50 20w

"Mr. Stuart gives his reader another good dish of the same, flavoring it with his own familiar folk-humor. As his short stories have always done, these reflect his marvelous ear for the dialect of his people, his awareness of the sources of their actions, his ability to tell a good anecdote—for these tales are almost all just that." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 7 '50 600w

"Fiction does not necessarily have to be based on fact; the main trouble seems to be that few of the stories in 'Clearing in the Sky' are convincing; though the stories are told for the most part in the first-person style familiar to Mr. Stuart's readers, the tellers are hard to distinguish each from the other, and most of the tales sound as if told by an author trying to write like a hill man." H. S. Arnow
Sat R of Lit 33:20 D 23 '50 650w
Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 150w

STUART, JESSE. Hie to the hunters. (Whittlesey house publication) 265p $3 McGraw

50-7330

Story of the friendship between two boys, Sparkie the sixteen year old mountain lad, and Did Hargis, the fourteen year old city "softie," whom Sparkie rescues from a pair of young bullies. Did goes with Sparkie to his mountain home and tho, in time, his family gets him back, he has learned a new way of life and a new strength.

Booklist 46:241; 287 Ap 1 '50; My 15 '50

"An appealing, flavorsome tale of Kentucky hill people."
+ Bookmark 9:186 My '50 40w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p5 My 9 '50 300w

"One can read the story with a disregard of its improbability, and delight in its pictures of hill country life. No one will ever excel Jesse Stuart in this respect. Stripped of its unreal plot, this story of two boys sharing the work and the pleasures of the hills will be found humorous, moving, and genuinely entertaining." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 7 '50 550w
Christian Science Monitor p6 Je 3 '50 230w

STUART, JESSE—Continued
"An original if not wholly convincing yarn."
+ — Kirkus 18:143 Mr '50 270w

"Jesse Stuart knows mountain people and their life and portrays them with affection and insight. The cornhuskings, dances, war between 'terbackermen' and hunters will appeal to boys, especially." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 75:1057 Je 15 '50 80w

"The prolific quality of Jesse Stuart, who writes with ease and simplicity, has produced in 'Hie to the Hunters' a book with a thin story line and a great deal of interesting backwoods information. Others may even feel he has written here a story for teen-age boys the approximate age of his main characters or younger—the earnest Didway Hargis, fourteen, the city boy, and Jud Sparks, sixteen, the lean and powerful country boy, a team a little reminiscent of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn." Whit Burnett
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 My 14 '50 750w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
N Y Times p21 My 14 '50 180w

New Yorker 26:118 My 20 '50 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 2 '50 650w

"This is a magnificent recital of woodland lore and a warm, rugged tale of the friendship of two teen-age boys. The author's devotees will miss the bountiful humor and the relatively well-ordered plot of 'Taps for Private Tussie,' the instinctive proportionateness of his short stories, and the lyric simplicity of his poems. In short, the book should be approached with the expectation of enjoying Stuart's customary descriptions of animal and nature life in the Kentucky hill country, and the values which they hold for an emotionally and esthetically starved city boy." J. C. Long
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 My 13 '50 650w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 18 '50 150w

Wis Lib Bul 46:29 Je '50

STUBBS, HARRY CLEMENT (HAL CLEMENT, pseud). Needle. 222p $2.50 Doubleday 50-6146

A detective story in a science-fiction setting. The "detective" is a creature from another planet in search of a criminal who is like himself, a symbiote. With the help of the boy, Bob Kinnaird, the Hunter is finally successful in his mission.

Booklist 46:233 Mr 15 '50

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p5 Ap 3 '50 50w

"Mr. Clement's novel is a model of what the detective story should be. . . As science-fiction, Mr. Clement's yarn is equally successful, picturing the meeting of a human and alien intelligence as a friendly and sympathetic event it might very well be, rather than the tedious affair of 'noble human being meets evil Bug-Eyed Monster.' This story, first published in 'Astounding Science Fiction,' will be read with pleasure by both sets of fans." Fritz Leiber
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 2 '50 300w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 26:214 My '50 70w

"For this new audience of science fiction readers, this has an imaginative, ingenious content."
+ Kirkus 18:7 Ja 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p29 Mr 12 '50 130w

Reviewed by Don Fabun
San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 16 '50 120w

"The thing is done with such a deceptive lightness of touch that most readers will not realize they are getting anything but a very good story with a thoroughly original theme." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 Je 17 '50 140w

STUBBS, STANLEY A. Bird's-eye view of the pueblos. (Civilization of the American Indian ser) 122p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press
970.6 Pueblos 50-9197

"This book is something new under the sun of anthropology. Mr. Stubbs conceived the idea of photographing the Indian villages of New Mexico and Arizona vertically from the air and accompanying each photograph with a precise keyed ground-plan. Twenty-five pueblos are covered. Each reproduction and ground-plan is accompanied by a body of tabulated data (name and derivation of name, location, linguistic group, period of occupation, type of construction, present population, area, and fiesta dates) plus a brief physical description." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1906 N 1 '50 80w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 123:25 D 11 '50 60w

"Mr. Stubbs, a native New Mexican, and graduate of the state university, is research associate at the Museum of New Mexico. This is his country, and he knows it and loves it, and he has here perfected an admirable device for the sharing of that love and that knowledge." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 33:24 O 28 '50 190w

STUDIES in social psychology in World war II; v.4, Measurement and prediction, by Samuel A. Stouffer [and others]. 758p $10 Princeton univ. press
355.1 Soldiers. Social psychology (49-2480)

"Volume IV of Studies in Social Psychology in World War II, this is a scientific report on the methods and research used in the general study of the subject by the Research Branch, Army Information and Education Division. Some chapters deal with the theoretical problems of measurement, scales, etc., and others with predictions." (Current Hist) For volumes 1-3 see Book Review Digest 1949.

Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Ann Am Acad 272:261 N '50 480w

Current Hist 19:106 Ag '50 50w

"Full of compact detail regarding the assumptions, problems, and methodological tactics, these are highly instructive accounts of the problems encountered in predicting the behavior of large masses of men. Summary chapters . . . present a crystal-clear condensation of the central considerations involved in these studies of measurement and prediction."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:362 S '50 360w

SUGRUE, THOMAS. Watch for the morning. 304p $3.50 Harper
956.9 Palestine—History. Zionism 50-14729

"The story of Palestine's Jewish pioneers and their battle for the birth of Israel." (Subtitle) Maps on endpapers. No index.

Booklist 47:93 N 1 '50

Bookmark 10:29 N '50 30w

"This is a pleasant, competent and sometimes lyrical account of an event which has produced a handsome freshet of books during the past several years—the establishment of the state of Israel. . . Here is a volume which adds substantially to man's understanding of man." J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 7 '50 650w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 53:126 N 10 '50 400w

"A book writen with a touch of greatness."
+ Kirkus 18:495 Ag 15 '50 290w

"A beautifully written, sensitive, and wonderfully moving story. . . Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:1505 S 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by Marie Syrkin

Nation 171:415 N 4 '50 650w

"Mr. Sugrue's book is well worth the reading. The lesson it teaches could be well applied to India, Southeast Asia, to Korea and elsewhere. If it is not, the West itself faces extinction." B. C. Crum

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 1 '50 1600w

"The real reward a visit to Israel offers is the opportunity of meeting some of the most attractive and fascinating people on the face of the earth. 'Watch for the Morning' is made to order for those who cannot visit the little country; Sugrue introduces you to men, women and children you might meet if you made the long trip, and his skill is such that you will finish the book feeling that you now know the people whom he came to know and like. This is a fine, sincere, and continuously exciting book." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 O 1 '50 850w

SUHL, YURI. One foot in America. 252p $2.75 Macmillan

50-9837

"The autobiographical account of the experiences of a highly imaginative Galician Jewish boy who came to Brooklyn in 1923 to join a family group who had preceded him. The young 'greenhorn,' as his friends dubbed him, had many bewildering adventures in adjusting himself to the New World." (Library J) "The Polish-born author came to this country when he was fifteen. He designates the book a novel, but its richness of impressions is certainly autobiographical." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R)

Booklist 47:62 O 1 '50

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p17 N 4 '50 360w

"An understanding picture of immigrant life, the lights and the shadows, this has the feel of authentic reporting and adds a colorful panel to life in a new world."

+ Kirkus 18:433 Ag 1 '50 180w

"Recommended for larger libraries." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 75:1288 Ag '50 80w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 1 '50 550w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 33:27 D 2 '50 340w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p19A O 15 '50 240w

SULLIVAN, ALOYSIUS MICHAEL. Incident in silver; a book of lyrics. 128p $2.50 McMullen

811 50-6023

A collection of sonnets, ballads, and free verse on such diverse subjects as stags and earthworms, Deirdre and Michaelangelo, and the five Sullivan brothers who died on the Juneau.

"All are handled with clear and melodious skill."

+ Cath World 171:160 My '50 120w

"Mr. Sullivan's nine published works in poetry constitute, by themselves, an imposing one-man exhibit. Their general excellence should excite the admiration of traditionalists and experimentalists alike. This latest volume is fitting and welcome addition." Gustav Davidson

+ Sat R of Lit 33:20 My 20 '50 650w

SULLIVAN, RICHARD. Fresh and open sky, and other stories. 210p $3 Holt

" A collection of slight, readable stories about plain people with good jobs and nice families. Mr. Sullivan likes to prod these people into a brief mood of bewilderment or regret and then allow them to settle comfortably back into the lives they have laid out for themselves." New Yorker

"It is unjust to criticize writing for what it does not do. These stories are shaped and finely conceived. But as one goes thru the book he keeps wishing for a higher emotional level, for the situations to blow up a stronger wind, for the children's stories to reach for a solider richness and for the others to be more dramatic." Paul Engle

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 10 '50 370w

Kirkus 18:679 N 15 '50 200w

"Author is instructor in literature and creative writing at Notre Dame. If he teaches as well as he writes his classes must be eminently successful." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:2075 D 1 '50 90w

"Mr. Sullivan lets his characters muddle through. At the same time he denies his readers the same degree of independence. He takes them like children by the hand. He spells out the meaning of every story. He overexplains. In doing so, he destroys the artistic impact of his fragile situations, his gentle talent, and his story-telling technique." R. D. Graff

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 3 '50 500w

"The little crises that make up so much of life constantly tempt the writer of short stories and expose him to a variety of dangers, ranging from sentimental exaggeration to the artful flatness of some magazine fiction. Freshness of spirit, as well as a sure hand, is what one needs to record the ordinary bewilderments, anxieties, hopes, and triumphs of human existence. Mr. Sullivan has both." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p6 D 3 '50 360w

"The writing is sincere, if unremarkable, and the characters hold up very well under the small strains imposed on them by their author."

+ New Yorker 26:168 D 9 '50 70w

SUMMERS, HARRISON BOYD, and others. How to debate; a textbook for beginners. new ed 349p $2.75 Wilson, H.W.

808.5 Debates and debating 50-13019

"A revised and enlarged edition presenting in nontechnical language those elements of debate theory and technique which have the greatest practical value for the beginner in the field of formal and informal debate." (School & Society) First published in 1934 with title: Contest Debating; for first edition under title: How to Debate, see Book Review Digest 1941.

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

School & Society 72:80 Jl 29 '50 30w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 6 '50 150w

SUMMERSON, JOHN NEWENHAM. Heavenly mansions, and other essays on architecture. 253p pl $5 Scribner

720.4 Architecture 50-561

Ten essays on various aspects of architecture, by the curator of Sir John Sloane's museum. Contents: Heavenly mansions: an interpretation of Gothic; Antitheses of the quattrocento; The mind of Wren; John Wood and the English town-planning tradition; The vision of J. M. Gandy; Viollet-le-Duc and the rational point of view; William Butterfield, or the glory of ugliness; Architecture, painting and Le Corbusier; The mischievous analogy; The past in the future. Index.

Kirkus 18:15 Ja 1 '50 180w

Manchester Guardian p5 D 28 '49 350w

"The great value of Mr. Summerson's interpretation of Gothic architecture is that it makes it possible to look at a Gothic building as a work of art. For this reason the essay in which he presents us with it, is the most important in the collection. . . Even when [Mr

SUMMERSON, J. M.—Continued
Summerson] is being most 'purely' historical, as in 'John Wood and the English Town-Planning Tradition,' the play of ideas is always there. And it is accompanied by an agreeable love of paradox. . . This love of paradox makes it the more strange that he should not see that the fact that Dudok's buildings at Hilversum have been more imitated in England than in Holland is really evidence tending to prove, not to disprove, the possibility of a national style of architecture emerging. . . But Mr. Summerson's reflections on the architectural situation to-day should help to clear so many minds of cant that one hesitates to make even this criticism." Marcus Whiffen

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:670 D 3 '49 850w

"Each essay is a voyage of discovery. What is so interesting, and what makes Mr. Summerson the architectural critic of his generation in the same sense as were Lethaby and Geoffrey Scott, is [an] aversion to dogma. . . The illustrations are as special and provocative as would be expected, and the book is bound in some new plasticity which is pleasant to handle and will support without a mark a wet mug of beer, or so it is said. It is supremely well worth reading." Lionel Brett

+ Spec 183:866 D 16 '49 900w

"With a most attractive blend of learning and wit [Mr Summerson] discourses upon Alberti and Wren, Viollet-le-Duc and Le Corbusier, the architectural problems of the present day and the possibilities of the future; and if, here and there, some passage at first strikes the reader as fanciful or extreme, he will usually find on reflection that there is a great deal to be said in support of the author's view."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 13 '50 1200w

SUNNERS, WILLIAM. How to win prize contests. 392p $3 Arco

659.17 Prize contests 50-8176

"An encyclopedic guide to the art and science of winning part of the millions in prizes offered regularly to contest winners." (Subtitle) Arrangement is alphabetical under subjects. "For libraries which cater to contestants." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 47:9 S 1 '50

"The information is in a rather informal alphabetical order, resulting in a hodge-podge of facts, advice and warnings, but practically every form of brain teaser from jingles to quizzes and from jumbles to 'tangle towns' is covered. There are lists of phrases, very good instructions on preparation of entries, and an absolutely fascinating collection of 189 words applicable to soap. You'll want to rush out and buy some." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9B Jl 2 '50 240w

SUR, WILLIAM RAYMOND, ed. See Music educators' national conference. Piano instruction in the schools

SURMELIAN, LEON Z. 98.6°. 313p $3 Dutton 50-8769

The hero, Daniel Moore, was in his final term at college when he learned he had tuberculosis. This is a detailed clinical account of his four-year-long recovery, first in a state sanitarium, and later in a private sanitarium in California. The title refers to the normal body temperature.

"There isn't, after all, much of a story in '98.6°,' but it's all very human and down to earth. With this quality in his writing, no doubt Mr. Surmelian will give us stories in the future with more depth and purpose." Kelsey Guilfoil

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 13 '50 500w

Kirkus 18:315 Je 1 '50 190w

"Excellent prose, constructive approach. Not for neurotics, patients, or adolescents." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 75:1182 Jl '50 110w

"Mr. Surmelian's dogged devotion to his hero is more tiresome than it is touching. He seems to expect us to take Daniel very seriously, both as person and as 'thinker.' The bald truth of the matter, I am afraid, is that Daniel is a priggish little bore who could not hold his own in a freshman bull session. . . On the credit side, it must be said that Mr. Surmelian dispenses some valuable information concerning the symptoms and therapy of tuberculosis, and he pulls no punches in describing the lamentable conditions in some of our state and city hospitals." J. J. Maloney

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ag 13 '50 500w

"As a portrait of a literate young American male's reaction to a bout with one of history's greatest killers, '98.6°' is faithful and reportorial. Even its climax is typically American. Its ending, as one would anticipate, is happy. It is almost a boy-meet-girl treatment of the white plague. Yet the tragedy is always there, held down by its hero's inability to speak his lines with anything more convincing than a Hollywood inflection." Thomas Sugrue

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 6 '50 270w

"Horrifying in its way, the book is written with complete knowledge of its subject and with the kind of conviction which should make the healthiest reader shudder. Mr. Surmelian has explored the heart of his Daniel Moore so thoroughly that the hardest-boiled reader will say to himself 'Yes, T. B. must be something very like this.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 8 '50 800w

"Hard enough to live through at first hand, the course of tuberculosis . . . makes far from agreeable reading, even, one imagines, for those who have endured the disease themselves. Even more distasteful to the normal, healthy reader are the frequent passionate interludes. It is a fact, of course, that the sexual drive is heightened in tuberculosis. But while these episodes are undoubtedly intended to throw Daniel's ultimate spiritual rebirth into brighter contact, they are quite evidently a good deal more interesting to the author than the final revelation." P. T.

Sat R of Lit 33:32 S 2 '50 290w

SUTCLIFF, ROSEMARY. Queen Elizabeth story; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 208p $2 Oxford 50-9131

Devonshire in the days of Queen Elizabeth is the scene of this story for ages nine to eleven. The little heroine is Perdita, daughter of the rector of Broomhill. Perdita's dearest wish is to see Queen Elizabeth, and the story tells how she realizes her wish.

Booklist 47:48 S 15 '50

"Altho the plot itself is slight, the telling of what made up village life for a happy family of that day is delightful. Done with loving care by one obviously well grounded in the period, it is rich with flavorful detail of country fair, Christmas Mummers, the doings in a busy seaport with its wonderful Tall Ship—all seen thru the wide eyes of a little girl." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 10 '50 220w

Horn Bk 26:376 S '50 120w

"There's lots of detail here, of customs, clothing, houses, speech, education, etc., and the story is unhurried in its progress. Not for the action-minded child, for the more serious reader, rather."

Kirkus 18:417 Ag 1 '50 180w

"Excellent background material. Girls will love this book." C. W. Field

+ Library J 75:1515 S 15 '50 70w

"For all that it moves slowly and has so many details, this is an absorbing and enchanting book. It re-creates a period through a child's eyes, and leaves her with two Queen

Elizabeth stories, her mother's and her own. It belongs on the shelf beside 'Master Skylark.'" L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 20 '50 240w

"The author seems to possess good background in Elizabethan times and customs, so that both setting and people in this miniature picture are clearly drawn. The slow pace of the story allows time for details which thoughtful readers will appreciate. Perhaps children today, too, may discover the glamour of the Elizabethan story, as Perdita did when it was told her by her mother." Irene Smith
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 20 '50 180w

"It is a quiet, rather romantic story that girls will like better than boys. Lovely drawings illustrate it."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:51 O 21 '50 100w

SUTTON, HORACE. Footloose in Canada; with photographs mostly by the author. 291p maps $4 Rinehart 917.1 Canada—Description and travel
50-3408

An informal guidebook to "the famous places and the back trails" of the Dominion of Canada. Includes maps, but not road maps, illustrations, and specific costs as far as possible. Index.

Booklist 46:314 Je 15 '50

"Gay, informing guide."
+ Bookmark 9:242 Jl '50 30w

"As a guidebook, it has its irreverent moments, but on the whole, for all its superficial sophistication, the once-over-lightly technique gives the new tourist what he will need to know and what he will find."
+ — Kirkus 18:200 Mr 15 '50 160w

"Informative and yet interesting, with even a touch of humor." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:1183 Jl '50 110w

"Mr. Sutton covers succinctly almost everything worth seeing from Louisburg to Vancouver, with special emphasis on resorts, hotels and restaurants." Beach Conger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 28 '50 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 12 '50 160w

"Mr. Sutton has managed to include a wealth of interesting factual material and to interpret much of it with a discerning and pleasant wit. For the American tourist who is likely to stick fairly close to beaten paths and who is looking for intelligent hints on where-to-go and what's-to-be-seen, along with some amusing observations on Canadian folk ways, this book can be unhesitatingly recommended." Merrill Denison
+ Sat R of Lit 33:35 Jl 15 '50 650w

Reviewed by Leo Marceau
Springf'd Republican p9B Jl 2 '50 240w

SUTTON, HORACE. Footloose in Italy; with photographs mostly by the author. 344p maps $4 Rinehart
914.5 Italy—Description and travel 50-8380

A popularly written guidebook to Italy by the travel editor of The Saturday Review of Literature. Includes many photographs, maps, hotel and restaurant listings, and lists of Italian works with English equivalents. Index.

Booklist 46:352 Jl 15 '50

"Entertaining, elegant, this is for a classy clientele and not that school-teacher's summer abroad."
Kirkus 18:255 Ap 15 '50 70w

"With Holy Year attracting a record number of post-war tourists to Europe, books on Italy continue to head the list in the travel field. Horace Sutton's 'Footloose in Italy' is the best of the latest publications and will be enjoyed by many who have no intention of traveling at all." Beach Conger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Jl 23 '50 100w

"Mr. Sutton chooses the general travel-book method rather than the style of the pocket-guide, and this book is embellished with more photographs than most. . . The text is the kind of things you can sit down and read, too, full-packed as it is with facts and figures of just the sort you'll need for your visit. Undoubtedly Mr. Sutton's ability to combine the maximum of fact and the maximum of generally readable discussion is the reason why he received his award for top-ranking Travel Journalism a year or so ago." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 12 '50 160w

"Horace Sutton, operating as a one-man Cook's, has managed to cram the history, the spirit, the sights, the customs that are Italy's into 344 pages—and has done it in style. Readers of his travel columns in the SRL won't be surprised to find this book enthusiastic, well-paced, witty, yet studded with down-to-earth information needed to smooth the way from New York to the Uffizi Galleries in Florence." Bernard Kalb
+ Sat R of Lit 33:10 Jl 1 '50 320w
Springf'd Republican p6D Jl 16 '50 110w

SUZUKI, DAISETZ TEITARO. Essays in Zen Buddhism, first series. (Complete works; ed. by Christmas Humphreys) 383p il $3.75 Harper
294.32 Buddha and Buddhism 50-13886

"This is the first American edition of this interpretation of Zen Buddhism which is the branch of Buddhism that has been developed by Chinese scholars. The author was a distinguished Japanese scholar and his essays on this subject were first published in 1926. This is an easily read but comprehensible exposition of the philosophy of spiritual development known as 'sudden enlightenment.'" Kirkus

"For courses in history of religions this book furnishes a valuable collateral reference, for it fully illustrates one influential branch of Buddhist development in China and Japan." C. H. Hamilton
+ Crozer Q 27:373 O '50 300w

"Those who are interested in mysticism will find this study enlightening and for students of comparative religion it is indispensable."
+ Kirkus 18:311 Je 1 '50 100w

"This volume is the first series of Dr. Suzuki's essays and it gives us a clear introduction to the subject. Those who intend to experiment with the discipline will naturally read his later works and follow the rules of training, because Zen is so empiric it can only be understood when applied. 'Without practice,' the Buddha is reported to have said, 'the clearest exposition can produce no real result.'" Gerald Heard
+ N Y Times p5 Je 4 '50 850w

SWAN, EMMA. Lion and the lady, and other poems. 76p $2 New directions 811 49-49685

First publication in book form of the poems of this American author. Many of the poems have appeared in magazines.

"Miss Swan's verse seems to me to be dry to the point of desiccation." Rolfe Humphries
— Nation 70:94 Ja 28 '50 40w

"In her work, poetry—one of 'the languages of the imagination'—frequently appears as its delightful, unexpected, and unmistakable self." Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 26:117 My 20 '50 70w

Reviewed by Ray Smith
Poetry 76:363 S '50 600w

SWANSTROM, EDWARD ERNEST. Pilgrims of the night; a study of expelled peoples; with a foreword by Francis Cardinal Spellman. 114p il $2.50 Sheed
940.53159 Refugees, Political 50-9380

"A book, addressed primarily to American Roman Catholics, in which Monsignor Swanstrom calls attention to the serious plight of twelve million people who were forced to quit their homes in Poland, Czechoslavakia, Hungary, and other countries after the war and dumped into Germany, the land of their presumed ethnic origin. These expellees, as they are called . . . are starving, jobless, and dying in a defeated country that cannot fulfill the needs of its own citizens. The author concerns himself with typical individuals, portrayed in case histories and in terrifying and pitiful photographs." New Yorker

SWANSTROM, E. E.—Continued

"I received my copy of Pilgrims of the Night as I was leaving for Europe, and brought it along when I visited—in Germany and Trieste—the people and the makeshift camps it describes. Its pages were eagerly thumbed by priests and social workers, by army officers, and by some of the unfortunate 'pilgrims' themselves. Their comments seem the best introduction. . . 'Yes, that's the way it was,' they said." Sighle Kennedy
+ Cath World 172:235 D '50 900w

New Yorker 26:140 O 21 '50 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 19 '50 160w

"Swanstrom, executive director of War Relief Service of the National Catholic Welfare Conference has strikingly presented this tragic picture of those forgotten souls, the 'pilgrims of the night.'" R. F. Henchey
+ Springf'd Republican p12C S 17 '50 110w

SWIFT, JONATHAN. Selected prose works; ed. and with an introd. by John Hayward. 482p maps $2 Chanticleer 827 50-7681

"The full and unexpurgated text of 'Gulliver's Travels,' with 17 miscellaneous prose pieces, including 'A Meditation Upon a Broomstick' and 'A Modest Proposal,' are contained in this volume." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 46:288 My 15 '50

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 4 '50 70w

Reviewed by Paul Dinnage
Spec 184:762 Je 2 '50 1200w

SWIGGETT, HOWARD. The hidden and the hunted. 249p $2.75 Morrow
50-6161

A tale of international intrigue in which an American and a Russian match wits in an attempt to recover the papers of a Czech economist.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p6 Mr 24 '50 100w

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 26 '50 350w

Kirkus 18:33 Ja 15 '50 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 Ap 16 '50 180w

"For readers who want their cloak-and-dagger stories to keep right up with the times, and for the benefit of others who fear that adventure and chivalry can no longer go hand in hand, let it be said at once that 'The Hidden and the Hunter' will give much satisfaction." Robert Knittel
N Y Times p35 Mr 26 '50 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 26 '50 100w

"The authentic Paris, Prague and Helsinki settings are not too skillfully woven into the story and the characters and situations lack basic motivation and credibility, but the story itself moves at a rapid pace with plenty of action and violence." R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 26 '50 130w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Doctor's wife comes to stay. 305p $3 Doubleday 50-8316

Rex Tweed, a young English artist, living in London in 1947, and his much-admired mother-in-law, wife of a Scotch doctor, are the central figures. When Elizabeth, Rex's actress wife, goes to the United States to act in a successful play, the doctor's wife comes to stay with her son-in-law and her grandchild. The doctor's wife's illness brings out some hitherto unknown facts about her past, and Rex, determined to keep his own marriage intact, takes his little daughter with him to America to join Elizabeth.

"A solid, humorous, somewhat old-fashioned story with well-drawn characters."
+ Bookmark 9:244 Jl '50 50w

"For readers who enjoy the leisureliness of finely burnished, slow moving prose, 'The Doctor's Wife Comes to Stay' in their memory." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 25 '50 470w

"Mr. Swinnerton is rarely guilty of overstatement. In his own line, he is the same kind of craftsman as Rex, who refrains from adding to a portrait two touches of orange which 'would heighten an already sensationalized face to brilliance and would be tremendously effective'; because, as he says with conscious pride, 'I'm an artist!'"
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 22 '50 270w

"Swinnerton has developed, in his style, some rather irritating mannerisms which give one a sense of choppiness, quite different from his one-time suavity. Could it be an effort to appear more modern than his substance?"
Kirkus 18:212 Ap 1 '50 280w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 75:862 My 15 '50 70w

"'The Doctor's Wife Comes to Stay'—the ungainly title seems especially cumbersome in contrast with the deft novel to which it attaches—is marked by Mr. Swinnerton's unfailingly easy felicity of style, and interesting contemporaneity of subject matter, potent gaiety and charm. . . All of the characters of Mr. Swinnerton's story move through it with an infectious aliveness and credibility. And despite a perceptible dragging through some fifty-odd pages of its mid-section, I found 'The Doctor's Wife Comes to Stay' one of the most entertaining novels that have come my way this season." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 4 '50 650w

"His new novel will add little, if anything, to his prestige. He of course writes with skill; he sustains somewhat tepidly the reader's interest, and is adequate in portraying character—especially people of his own generation. However, the novel lacks intensity and freshness. It doesn't say very much, and that with little distinction." H. F. W.
+ N Y Times p22 Je 18 '50 270w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill
New Yorker 26:90 Je 24 '50 290w

"Mr. Swinnerton never entirely integrates his story into a satisfying whole. But if you like Mr. Swinnerton, you'll find here that special evocative power of his which compensates for this and other deficiencies." J. V.
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 6 '50 300w

"I don't think Mr. Swinnerton's power to paint family life has ever been shown more masterfully than in this book. 'The Doctor's Wife Comes to Stay' is a superb conversation piece, in which the figures and the landscape are admirably adjusted. There is only one character who seems rather oversize, a little overconscious in his attitudes and rather too voluble for a great painter; yet if Rex Tweed is a thought out of proportion, Mr. Swinnerton so contrives it that he never obscures the lovely women who are the delight of this book." R. E. Roberts
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:18 Jl 8 '50 600w

"This is not a great or an impelling novel, but it is the satisfying work of a writer who loves his craft, is certain of his tempo, of his characters (with the one exception), and can evoke an irridescent charm without romanticism." Sylva Norman
+ — Spec 183:834 D 9 '49 370w

"The Doctor's Wife Comes to Stay is not an altogether easy book to read, although it is written with much humour; its subject, obliquely revealed, is really the artist's investigation of the secret lying in the Victorian mother's past. Mr. Swinnerton prepares us for the final dramatic scenes . . . with admirable artistry."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p853 D 30 '49 310w
Wis Lib Bul 46:21 Jl '50

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Tokefield papers, old and new. 215p $3 Doubleday 824 50-3746

"A new and enlarged edition of the volume of essays by Mr. Swinnerton published in 1927 [Book Review Digest 1928]. His gay reflections on a variety of topics from cats to 'Carmichaels' (his pet name for the self-pitying sort who contrive to make others feel callous) are retained, and he has added some intimate memories of Arnold Bennett and H. G. Wells, a farewell to reviewing' . . . and an essay on 'What I Want my Daughter to be' that paints an ideal picture of an independent, well-balanced mind in a healthy body. This, and his modest semi-biographical introduction to the volume, convey much of his own philosophy of life and outlook on literature at 65." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 46:319 Je 15 '50

"When the little book is finished, the author himself seems almost a lifelong friend to the reader, less by any intimacy of word or phrase [for he is a reserved man and writer] than by the aura of irrepressible, communicated warmheartedness which pervades its pages. Those pages are never in the popular interpretation of the word 'gay,' for they are contemplative, not humorous, essays, but they are 'happy' in the sense of reflecting and sharing a quiet philosofic adjustment to life." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 16 '50 800w

"Perspicacious commentary, unpretentious personal history, and a pleasing conversational companion for quiet reading—this should have an assured sale among his fiction followers as well as in the essay field."
+ Kirkus 18:80 F 1 '50 190w

"[The essays] are such as to give him a secure place in the liking of those who value tolerance, humour, and a subtle and discerning insight into human nature." A. S. W.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 14 '49 150w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Mr 12 '50 360w

"A bed-table book, and a good one."
+ New Yorker 26:119 F 25 '50 100w

"They are distinctly fuddy-duddy. If the familiar essay is dead—as is sometimes announced—here is all the proof one needs." Robert Halsband
— Sat R of Lit 33:26 Je 17 '50 110w

"He is generous and perceptive when he writes about old friends he likes and admires. . . Mr. Swinnerton is not a brilliant reviewer like Arnold Bennett, but he is tireless, attentive and intuitive." Stevie Smith
+ Spec 183:544 O 21 '49 550w

"Mr. Swinnerton has the leisurely gait, the easy elegance, of the personal essayist, qualities which are becoming rare in the art."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p698 O 28 '49 160w

SYKES, CHRISTOPHER. Character and situation; six short stories; introd. by Evelyn Waugh. 240p $3 Knopf 50-9929

Six short stories, each a detailed character study of an Englishman, far from his native land, and often in an embarrassing situation.

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50
Kirkus 18:436 Ag 1 '50 220w

"Brilliant, malicious stories; remindful of Maugham and of Hardy's Life's Little Ironies, but still indisputably Sykes. . . Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 90w

"The six tales make entertaining reading—at least until the usually somewhat inadequate point is reached. Mr. Sykes is a natural-born story-teller though not a born writer of short stories. He sketches scenes, character, and incident like an accomplished talker. He can strike off an amusing simile or he can turn a platitude into wit. . . But his manner relapses into that of the essayist, and that probably explains why the biographical essay—real or pseudo—fits him best." J. W. Krutch
+ — Nation 171:348 O 14 '50 550w

"Writing for a market can be enervating enough but it also makes for a discipline Mr. Sykes sadly needs. I can think of no published contemporary quite as prolix. Still, for the reader who has time enough and patience, he has something to say." Harry Sylvester
N Y Times p24 D 10 '50 270w

"Mr. Sykes apparently is willing to use all his space in describing the background and personality of each subject, in order eventually to be able to make some tiny, ironic point of disillusionment about human beings and their ways. As a result, his stories seem top-heavy, an effect that is increased by the charm and importance of the style in which they are written."
+ — New Yorker 26:142 O 14 '50 120w

"There is beautifully literate, and thoroughly civilized enjoyment to be derived from Mr. Sykes' work. His is a rare and pleasing talent, and he has expanded it lavishly in this small and widely diverse collection." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 26 '50 450w

SYLVESTER, HARRY. Golden girl. 255p $3 Harcourt
50-6735

"The story concerns the inner conflicts, hidden emotions, and religious scruples aroused in a group of American men living in Lima, by the charming and beautiful blonde Terry Morley." Library J

"Conflict between Catholic sexual standards and the amoral lack of standards is the core of the novel, but the true resolution of the conflict is not indicated. Told in nervous, staccato prose and with swiftly manipulated scenes that set a colorful stage in Lima for the confused doings."
— Cath World 171:155 My '50 250w
Chicago Sun p22 Ap 23 '50 140w

"Except for the bullfighting scenes, which are marvelously done, this is a singularly unpleasant novel about as nasty a group of people as any writer has picked to pieces in a long time." V. P. Hass
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 23 '50 300w

"These unattractive people meander from one liaison or misunderstanding to another. All is bitterness, futility, and promiscuity. The characters are petulant and formless. . . The Catholics in A Golden Girl are incredibly misinformed." Murray Ballantyne
— Commonweal 52:74 Ap 28 '50 900w

"Some interesting writing which has sharpness and tension, this will have a certain curious fascination for a more sophisticated audience."
Kirkus 18:111 F 15 '50 180w

"The continual probing of each character's sex life becomes rather monotonous, but it is to the author's credit that the details considered so necessary in many modern novels, are left to the imagination of the reader." J. E. Brown
Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 130w

"The author of 'Dayspring,' 'Moon Gaffney,' 'All Your Idols,' is a serious writer. He believes that a story, on whatever level he writes it, should say something. And yet there is an obscurity here, even when you sense the nature of the theme toward which he is working. . . 'A Golden Girl' can never quite emerge from the murkiness that results." J. K. Hutchens

SYLVESTER, HARRY—Continued
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 23 '50 550w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p6 Ap 9 '50 600w

"Sylvester has done it all with utmost care; but what is vastly more important, he has conveyed it simply and easily and without too much foreign flavor. One gets the impression that while the action of the story takes place in Peru, it might easily happen right here in San Francisco, as it very well could. There are golden girls here, too." Herbert Cerwin
San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 2 '50 550w

"'A Golden Girl' is concise, worried, and the best story he has written." Gouverneur Paulding
+ Sat R of Lit 33:25 Ap 15 '50 600w

SYLVESTER, LAURENCE ARTHUR. Handbook of advanced time-motion study [pub] in assn. with Modern ind. magazine. 273p $5 Funk

658.542 Time study. Motion study 50-1558

"Covers the basic methods and application of the result of time-motion study. The importance of considering the human element and physical conditions is stressed in connection with these studies and their application." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:258 Ap 15 '50

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 26 '50 50w

SYLVESTER, ROBERT. Second oldest profession. 373p $3 Dial press

49-50312

A story about a New York city newspaper, called the Globe, and of Ned Gorse, a reporter on that paper. Ned started out eager to fight the vested interests, but almost at once he was discovered by the ruthless publisher of his paper. As Ned advanced in his profession he pleased his boss but lost his friends and finally his wife. The book ends with his death.

"Not since the 'Front Page' has there been, in this reviewer's opinion, a novel of such fidelity to the facts of newspaper life as 'The Second Oldest Profession.' It is the work of an old hand at the game, a man whose wide knowledge of newspapers and the men who make them permits him to tell his story without distortion or imagery." R. L. Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 12 '50 470w

Kirkus 17:675 D 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by Leonard Burkat
Library J 75:320 F 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Robert Hagy
N Y Times p26 F 12 '50 380w

"Mr. Sylvester's characterizations are run-of-the-mill, but his storytelling, fast and sure and taut, holds the reader in a state of quiet and happy fascination from beginning to end."
+ — New Yorker 25:98 F 18 '50 100w

"'The Second Oldest Profession' isn't a pleasant book, probably its evident closeness to the distasteful truth precludes that. It is too bad, though, that the author saw fit to overdramatize what was in its bare bones already pure melodrama." E. J.
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 5 '50 200w

"A good novel seldom is written in anger, but this book, in its explosive wrath, contains virtues which counterbalance defects. It tells the truth. Its characters are less preposterous than those in the real life of what the author chooses to describe as the second oldest profession." Emile Gauvreau
+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 F 18 '50 700w

SYME, RONALD. Bay of the north; the story of Pierre Radisson; il. by Ralph Ray. 192p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 Radisson, Pierre Esprit—Juvenile literature 50-5501

The story of Pierre Radisson, one of Canada's most famous explorers. It tells of his life as a prisoner of the Iroquois, his escape, and subsequent fur trading expeditions and explorations along Lake Michigan and Hudson Bay (the "Bay of the North"). For grades 7-9.

Booklist 46:222 Mr 1 '50

"This is a most exciting Indian story told in vivid, dramatic prose."
+ Bookmark 9:165 Ap '50 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 26:201 My '50 100w

"Occasional abrupt transitions mar an otherwise fast pace, but all in all it should prove an easy-moving adventure yarn, with the added value of its true story background."
+ — Kirkus 18:24 Ja 15 '50 200w

Reviewed by Louise Davis
Library J 75:639 Ap 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr
Library J 75:990 Je 1 '50 80w

"Mr. Ray's pictures are, as usual, outstanding, the map endpapers clear and helpful. It is a fine book for older boys." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 19 '50 150w

"Ronald Syme has told the story of Pierre Radisson with verve and accuracy. His readable prose and dramatic presentation do justice to one of the heroic lives of colonial America." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p28 Ap 2 '50 180w

"Mr. Syme has told this story with charm and vigor." M. R. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ag 12 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 46:30 Mr '50

T

TABER, GLADYS (BAGG) (MRS F. A. TABER) First book of cats; pictures by Bob Kuhn. [41p] $1.50 Watts, F.

636.8 Cats 50-5921

Information about all kinds of cats. Includes a few anecdotes about outstanding cats and an expository story of how a little girl cared for her kitten. For ages 6-10.

Booklist 46:205 F 15 '50

"The sketches of cats and kittens are charming and decorative. The text is interesting narrative and also informative." Millicent Taylor
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Ap 29 '50 50w

"Concise information about care and feeding of cats with some references to cats in history and a few testimonial anecdotes together with sensitive sketches of the proud self-sufficient animals makes a sure-fire combination to intrigue both the cat cultists and those who admire from a safe distance."
+ Kirkus 18:99 F 15 '50 90w

"Written by one who appreciates cats and while simple enough for third—and fourth—graders to read, it will be liked by older cat lovers." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 75:567 Ap 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 21 '50 100w

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 26 '50 190w

Sat R of Lit 33:47 Ap 8 '50 80w

Wis Lib Bul 46:28 Ap '50

TABER, GLADYS (BAGG) (MRS F. A. TABER). Stillmeadow seasons; il. by Edward Shenton. 256p $3 Macrae Smith co.

630.1 Country life Agr50-455

Essays on each month of the year at the author's Connecticut home. The house was built in 1690, and Mrs Taber raises cockers, and her account of her life is colored by both facts. Hints on good eating also crop up in the course of the book.

Booklist 46:297; 313 Je 1 '50; Je 15 '50
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '50

"There's a serenity, sparked with humanity, that gives Gladys Taber's books about Stillmeadow their unfailing charm."
+ Kirkus 18:276 My 1 '50 180w

"This is a delightful book, certain to be popular in public libraries and browsing rooms." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:1179 Jl '50 120w
Wis Lib Bul 46:17 Jl '50

TABRAH, MRS RUTH M. Pulaski place. 280p $3 Harper

50-5054

"Of all the residents of Pulaski Place and Foundry Street, within the precincts of Our Lady's parish, only Steve Kowalski refuses to accept the traditions of the closely knit community. Back from service overseas, Steve becomes the first citizen of Polish descent to win an appointment to the town's police force. The drama in the story lies in the conflict between Steve's broader concept of his job and the conviction of his mother and father, his neighbors, his parish priest, his younger brother and even his wife, Irene, that Steve is 'our policeman.'" N Y Times

Booklist 46:89; 172 N 15 '49; Ja 15 '50

"Mrs Tabrah—understanding and skillful in portraying the Polish community, its exuberance, superstitions, and fierce pride in separateness—is not yet quite at her ease in scenes that require narrative drive."
— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 26 '50 240w

"This mirrors a despised, unassimilated community, gives it life and meaning. Searching, serious, fiction with a purpose."
+ Kirkus 17:630 N 15 '49 190w

"A readable, vivid, sympathetic story with likeable characters and dialogue to drive home the blunt point of nationalistic intolerance." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 75:105 Ja 15 '50 70w

"'Pulaski Place' is an unusual first novel, especially in its objectivity and in the range of its characterization and mood, in which robust comedy and plain tragedy are interwoven. Her people are real and likeable, and her story of them as individuals is well told and holds one's interest; beyond that, it adds to appreciation of fellow Americans who succeed in crossing the bridge from one civilization to another and understanding of those who fail." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 My 7 '50 700w

Reviewed by Nancy Ladd
N Y Times p31 F 5 '50 180w

"Mrs. Tabrah's people are commonplace, and so is their situation, but her approach is so forthright and unpretentious and her respect for those she writes about is so great that the final effect is a sort of photographic realism, not very distinguished or arresting but at least perfectly true and uncontradictable."
New Yorker 25:98 Ja 21 '50 100w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 33:29 Mr 4 '50 140w

"An unassuming, genuinely sincere story. . . Rich in character, teeming with scenes of lusty and sometimes grotesque humor, exciting, tender, 'Pulaski Place' accomplishes much more through its complete lack of pretentiousness than many a more ostentatious, purposeful novel." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p3D F 26 '50 300w
Wis Lib Bul 46:29 F '50

TAFT, CHARLES PHELPS. Democracy in politics and economics. 69p $2 Farrar, Straus

321.8 Democracy. Religion. U.S.—Politics and government 50-8670

This book contains lectures delivered at the Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, in April 1949. The author, lawyer, civic leader, and former president of the Federal council of churches of Christ, examines the bases of our democracy and shows the need in a true democracy for a continuing faith in religion.

"This is a thought-provoking book by an extraordinarily studious layman and is well worth the reader's time, less for the final answers that it offers than for the reflection that it stimulates." E. L. Klein
+ Chicago Sun p5 Ag 6 '50 360w

"Mr. Taft's popularly written book is to be commended to every intelligent citizen, especially to policy making officials in industry, labor, and government, and to preachers." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 23 '50 400w
Kirkus 18:292 My 15 '50 210w

Reviewed by G. W. Wakefield
Library J 75:1294 Ag '50 140w

"There is much in the volume to praise. Its nonhistorical content is fresh and personal. Its spirit is uplifted and yet practical. Its specific injunctions are filled with common sense and sweet reasonableness. But Mr. Taft seems not to see what he continuously demonstrates: that religion (he speaks as though it were exhausted by Christianity) is defined by and indeed constituted from the problems of life, rather than being a magic formula given for the solution of those problems." T. V. Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:11 Jl 29 '50 850w
Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 6 '50 240w

TAFT, DONALD REED. Criminology; a cultural interpretation. rev ed 704p il $5.50 Macmillan

364 Crime and criminals 50-7616

"Three things are accomplished in this revision of the 1942 edition [Book Review Digest 1942]. The book is brought up-to-date. New material is added. The general and specific cultural emphases, as explanations for both the crime problem in general and for individual criminal acts, that characterized the earlier book, are further integrated with data relating to both crime causation and the treatment of the criminal." (Social Forces) Chapter bibliographies. Index

Reviewed by A. E. Wood
Ann Am Acad 272:256 N '50 320w
School & Society 71:287 My 6 '50 30w

"Dr. Taft's long view of the crime problem permits successful integration of all criminal behavior within one thought system. He is to be commended for taking this stand against the over-extension of the concept of crime that is reducing the scientific character of criminology through the removal of the ifs from the ought and must statements and through the introduction of several special subjective personal criminologies. . . One can leave his book not only with some understanding of crime but also of some of the other behavior of man." A. C. Schnur
+ Social Forces 29:107 O '50 550w

TAIT, GEORGE E. Saddle of Carlos Perez [il. by the author]. 87p $2 Westminster press

50-6854

Carlos was a bright small boy living on a large ranch in Colombia. He dreamed of owning a fine saddle and saved all his money for a year for just that purpose. Thru a stroke of bad luck he lost his money, but his bravery and alertness earned him his saddle anyway. Glossary.

Booklist 46:322 Je 15 '50

"8-12-year-olds will find [this] thrilling and very informative. The setting is a ranch in Colombia which the author knows well, and there are excellent descriptions of everyday life, of vaqueros (cowboys) at work, and of fiesta times." M. B. King

TAIT, G. E.—Continued
+ Chicago Sun p3 My 6 '50 70w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ag 6 '50 110w

"Excellent regional material as the setting and the people are real and vigorously drawn."
Kirkus 18:206 Ap 1 '50 120w

"Recommended for ages 8-12." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 75:1198 Jl '50 80w

"This is Mr. Tait's first book, but it is written with a sound knowledge of the things that appeal to young readers." M. B.
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 16 '50 140w

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ag 12 '50 50w

TALBOT, LAURA. Prairial. 236p $2 Macmillan

A first novel. The scene is England during the time of Edward VII. At the Tenants' Ball, Emily, the highly nervous young wife of the squire, meets Hayton, a new tenant. Her husband, William, has neglected her because he has been disappointed in hope for a son. Emily and Hayton are soon involved in a love affair, and the situation is further confused when Emily tries to kill their child. Emily is sent away for a time by her husband; Hayton is discharged. There is a hope for a new adjustment as the novel ends.

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 23 '50 360w

"Laura Talbot writes economically and with a fine sense of nuance—Lucy and Katy, the children, are particularly well done. But the subtle, relentless cruelty and moral irresponsibility of Emily, the persistent insinuation that madness may sometimes be sanity, darken the appeal and overshadow the fine execution of the book."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 5 '50 140w

"The style is a little ungainly, but it grows on one, and so do the characters. In the climax the author explores for a moment a deeper level of the terrible and the pitiful; the clarity and restraint of the book as a whole, however, are vitiated by a device of inserting, in italics, the unspoken thoughts of the characters; with this device there enters the occasional note of intensity, a fault from which the book is elsewhere admirably free." J. D. Scott
+ — New Statesman & Nation 39:250 Mr 4 '50 130w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p20 Jl 9 '50 180w

"This English novel is a sort of 'Lady Chatterley's Lover' with a difference. The difference is that it wasn't written by D. H. Lawrence. . . The story is well written, and it may surprise some that it has a happy ending." John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 33:36 Ag 12 '50 270w

"Prairial is a woman's book, and the male reader may find some difficulty in accepting its subjective point of view. . . This curiously titled study is intelligent and well written; but it leaves one male reviewer a little uneasy." L. A. G. Strong
+ — Spec 184:256 F 24 '50 180w

"Prairial is composed largely in terms of emotional clichés, but the dialogue is written with skill."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 17 '50 300w

TALBOT, PHILLIPS, ed. South Asia in the world today [by] Henry Brodie [and others]. 254p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

959 Asia, Southeastern 50-7986

Lectures and papers delivered at the Harris Institute at Chicago University in May, 1949. The materials are grouped under the headings: The problem; Social forces in South Asia; Economic forces in South Asia; Political forces in South Asia; America's stake in South Asia. The contributors are experts who are either natives of South Asia or have spent many years there. Index.

"As edited by Phillips Talbot, this collection of lectures serves to bring the region into integrated and striking perspective. The overall picture which emerges is highly informative." F. R. Valeo
+ Ann Am Acad 271:235 S '50 340w

Booklist 46:332 Jl 1 '50

Reviewed by G. J. Scharschug
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Jl 16 '50 220w

"All such efforts are necessarily uneven in quality and thoroughness, but on the whole the book is remarkably readable and thoroughly worth while. . . The experts were not always in agreement. The reader, too, will frequently differ. In particular, he will wish that the discussions on policy had not ignored the political realities of Washington so thoroughly. To be fair, it is equally regrettable that Washington has often ignored Asian realities as thoroughly." M. B. Jansen
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 14 '50 430w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 50w

"The main purpose of the institute was to analyze the problems involved, and in this it has done its job extremely well. The various lectures and the round-table discussions provide a sound basis for policy planning that should be helpful both to our government and to students of the Far Eastern situation. In advancing ideas for United States policy, however, the experts get into a highly controversial field in which the idealism of a Chicago conference table does not always mesh with the grim reality of what is and is not practical in the current situation." A. T. Steele
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 9 '50 1000w

"Like most symposia, this one is somewhat unwieldy and decidedly uneven. The central section on economics, solidly factual and well documented, is by far the strongest, and the final section much the weakest. A good deal of the political writing is chiefly opinion liberally sprinkled with clichés and slogans." R. A. Smith
+ — N Y Times p33 Je 11 '50 340w

"A book to provoke thought and stretch imaginations, it carries through its pages a plea for understanding the peoples of South Asia, not from our Western point of view, but from theirs." Eleanor Breed
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 2 '50 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:347 S '50 300w

TALLANT, ROBERT. Romantic New Orleanians. (Society in America ser) 384p $4.50 Dutton

917.6335 New Orleans—Social life and customs 50-5202

Anecdotal history of the city of New Orleans which is composed largely of facts and stories about famous New Orleans families—Creole and American. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:166; 187 Ja 15 '50; F 1 '50

Bookmark 9:134 Mr '50 50w

"In spite of some incredibly bad writing and several amazing examples of redundancy . . . 'The Romantic New Orleanians' captures much of the color, the drama and the flamboyance of a truly great city." Ben Kartman
+ — Chicago Sun p6 F 15 '50 650w

"'The Romantic New Orleanians' elicits an earnest 'Ah,' for here is something that has the sprightliness of a sprig of parsley, the succulence of Antoine's special, and the savor of bayous in the spring." E. F. Murphy
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 29 '50 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '50

Kirkus 17:639 N 15 '49 270w

"Another thoroughly entertaining, as well as well documented, retelling of fact and legend about famous New Orleans families. . . Recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 74:1817 D 1 '49 70w

"Mr. Tallant, though lacking the abandon with which Mr. Amory wrote of people amusing but not yet dead, has succeeded fully. This is social history at its readable best, admirably reasoned, impartially but intimately told. Upon its solid foundation of research, it is light as omelette espagnole at Antoine's." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 22 '50 650w

"A penetrating and yet amusing interpretation of the social characteristics and attitudes of the inhabitants. If the result in 'The Romantic New Orleanians' seems at times quite familiar, it is unavoidable because of the cascade of preceding books. . . For the person who has read nothing about New Orleans there is no better introduction than this book. After reading it, one has only to visit New Orleans and suddenly find himself Creolized and romantic." Hubert Creekmore

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 22 '50 550w

"Readers of Mr. Tallant's novels will find none of his boisterous, rib-tickling humor here. This is a serious piece of work. He has done his job well, tracking his New Orleanians into the small lanes of their city as well as along the carriage routes. He has captured amply that sense of the tides of superabundant life that is the spirit of New Orleans and its people." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 7 '50 600w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman

Sat R of Lit 33:21 Ap 1 '50 1000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:214 Je '50 160w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 Jl '50

TALLANT, ROBERT. State in Mimosa. 274p $3 Doubleday

50-10583

"This novel deals with the life and prejudices in a small town in the South. John Caliph returns home after many years in Europe with two displaced persons whom he has befriended. Upon his return he meets his old friends and runs up against the small group who control the town. As he gradually finds himself involved in a struggle with this crowd there is a feeling of growing terror and helplessness which inevitably ends in tragedy." Library J

Booklist 47:138 D 1 '50

"In an abrupt style that has little beauty but satiric humor and urgency, Mr. Tallant's story rises from degree to degree of stress to a last-moment climax that is also catastrophe and retribution after the classic pattern of Greek drama."

Christian Science Monitor p6 D 16 '50 110w

Kirkus 18:569 S 15 '50 220w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 80w

"Mr. Tallant writes his story well. His love story is fresh and delicate. . . Except for certain stock small-town minor characters whom Mr. Tallant has not bothered to freshen up much, this is a very good novel indeed."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 D 3 '50 320w

"Readers who recall Mr. Tallant's gay spoof of New Orleans backstreets (Mrs. Candy and Saturday Night) will be surprised by this rather obvious morality play. Here, once again, we are reminded that prejudice and bigotry, no matter where, are the roots of the same corruptive forces that led to the Nazi ruin." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p28 N 19 '50 300w

TALLMAN, ROBERT. Adios, O'Shaughnessy. 277p $3 Doubleday

50-8219

"A novel about footloose Americans in a remote Mexican town. . . The names of the most important people in his book, next to O'Shaughnessy, are Gloria and Ella, Americans, and Pamela, an English girl. There are also a number of Mexicans." New Yorker

"He has the gift of gab, but he hasn't anything worth saying. That at any rate is my seasoned opinion. . . Frankly, I was bored and definitely not amused."

— Kirkus 18:216 Ap 1 '50 170w

"It combines the least desirable characteristics of Norman Douglas, Hemingway, Céline, and Henry Miller; is deliberately offensive, and certainly nothing on which to waste taxpayers' money." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 75:863 My 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy

N Y Times p20 Jl 9 '50 130w

"Mr. Tallman is at pains to describe people exactly as he sees them, which is to say according to the contents of their medicine cabinets. He finds infinite irony in merely listing the names of many highly advertised articles of common household use. When his lack of plot, design, or thought becomes too apparent, he produces a show of violence, a murder, an earthquake, or a minor revolution."

— New Yorker 26:93 Je 24 '50 120w

"One asset this tale has—the one, I think—is the sly, casual, disinterested, sometimes mordant writing that has gone into it. . . This book is diverting, too, in a similar fashion, except that nobody forced this upon Mr. Tallman. He picked this footless tale about incredible people in incomprehensible situations and then thumbed his nose at it, winking at us all the while." N. L. Rothman

— + Sat R of Lit 33:34 Jl 15 '50 230w

TANNENBAUM, FRANK. Mexico; the struggle for peace and bread. 293p $3.50 Knopf

972 Mexico 50-5736

A survey of the events which have shaped present-day Mexico. Mexican history is traced from the colonial era, but the main emphasis is on the economic, social, and political developments of the country. Index.

"Despite its general excellence the book lacks a bibliography, and is completely devoid of footnotes and citations to source materials. The general reading public will undoubtedly read the book with avidity but the scholar who wants to be guided to the source materials will read it and look elsewhere for bibliographical aids." A. S. Aiton

+ — Am Hist R 56:163 O '50 550w

"It is a good, honest, serious book, by one who deeply respects Mexico and has followed the Revolution from its early days." S. G. Inman

+ Ann Am Acad 270:195 Jl '50 650w

Booklist 46:230 Mr 15 '50

Cath World 172:80 O '50 100w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 5 '50 700w

"Tannenbaum is best in his grasp of the psychological factors of the Mexican and of Mexican national life. His desire for fairness and frankness is likewise evident; and he does not hesitate to recite the sins even of the living powers of the Mexican government, with whom he has been on familiar terms. Despite his summary and positive manner, however, he betrays some basic uncertainties; and his grasp of the spiritual factors of the subject is decidedly tenuous. This results in a number of apparent inconsistencies of judgment, especially in historical evaluation." J. A. Magner

+ — Commonweal 52:443 Ag 11 '50 800w

Foreign Affairs 28:691 Jl '50 40w

"An able, worthy study of interest primarily to serious students and followers of Latin-American relations."

+ Kirkus 17:685 D 15 '49 170w

"The book has a breadth of vision and an authority which make it required reading for anyone who wishes to understand Mexico. Highly recommended." Scott Adams

+ Library J 75:400 Mr 1 '50 80w

"The book is a valuable contribution to knowledge of the essential undercurrents of

TANNENBAUM, FRANK—Continued
Mexican life and history which must be faced honestly, both by Mexicans and Americans, if the two countries really are to understand each other." A. H. Uhl
+ New Repub 123:19 Jl 24 '50 550w

"The best book on Mexico which has appeared in many a year. It is written in affection, as a friend must write, and in stout realism, as a friend should write." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 26 '50 1100w

"Frank Tannenbaum, Professor of Latin American History at Columbia University, knows Mexico as few people do and better than most 'old Mexico hands.' . . Moreover, having approached the problems that interest him more with warm personal concern than with mere academic curiosity, he became exceptional: an American who enjoys the confidence of many of Mexico's policy-makers and leaders, and the close friendship of even the people's sphinx, Gen. Lázaro Cárdenas, President from 1934 to 1940. . . The book is written as a series of analyses. Some readers may find in it a number of puzzles and contradictions, which are inevitable if history is seen in terms of moral goals and individual consciences, rather than as a working of political processes." Anita Brenner
+ — N Y Times p7 F 26 '50 800w

"Professor Tannenbaum writes with integrity and a deep insight into the struggle which has brought Mexico from chaos to days of comparative peace. It is unfortunate, however, that a man of Professor Tannenbaum's background and with all his knowledge of Mexico and its people, should produce just another book on Mexico." H. C.
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 4 '50 300w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippy
Sat R of Lit 33:37 F 25 '50 1000w

Reviewed by S. G. Inman
Survey 86:418 S '50 430w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:196 Je '50 280w

Wis Lib Bul 46:18 Ap '50

TANSMAN, ALEXANDRE. Igor Stravinsky; the man and his music; tr. by Therese and Charles Bleefield. 295p $3.75 Putnam

B or 92 Stravinskii, Igor Fedorovich 49-48884

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

"That the book would gain by tighter organization is inescapable. This fact seems particularly unfortunate since the author had a perfect model of concise organization constantly before him in both the score and prose writings of Stravinsky. The analytical portions of this book do not prove as direct, clear, or helpful to at least one pair of eyes as do similar sections in E. W. White's Stravinsky. . . Tansman's book can be considered a worthwhile contribution to the Stravinsky literature, and its defects overlooked, [however] on the strength of its main objective: clarification of the principles underlying Stravinsky's art and demonstration of the unity which has marked its development." R. S. Tangeman
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 7:285 Mr '50 800w

"The second half of Tansman's book is a chronological résumé of all of Stravinsky's works with a critical analysis of the more important ones—a considerable undertaking, for the output has been large. Whatever its value as criticism, and I found it rather dull, repetitious, and abstruse, though with occasional sharp insights, it is a valuable reference work, containing the dates, circumstances, and particular problems of each work, with its place in Stravinsky's development. It should be noted in conclusion that despite its title the book reveals much of Stravinsky the musician but little of the man." Harold Brown
+ — Nation 170:284 Mr 25 '50 600w

TAPPLY, HORACE G. Fly tyer's handbook; il. by Lu Henderson. [new rev ed] 69p $2 Durrell

799.12 Flies, Artificial Agr49-473

A book for the beginner in the art of fly tying. The author is an experienced fisherman and an editor of Outdoors magazine.

Reviewed by Bob Becker
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 7 '50 60w

"An excellent book, cleverly illustrated by Lu Henderson." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:405 Mr 1 '50 30w

TARRY, ELLEN. Runaway elephant; pictures by Oliver Harrington. 37p $1.50 Viking 50-8863

Hezekiah, a little boy from Harlem, New York, joins Mr Ed for a ride in his big red automobile. They are on the track of a runaway circus elephant. Hezekiah has the one piece of information needed to get Modoc back to the circus, and of course he gets the reward.

Booklist 47:82 O 15 '50

Bookmark 10:10 O '50 30w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 22 '50 170w

"Based on an actual news story, this is a delightful, appealing story."
+ Kirkus 18:465 Ag 15 '50 110w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 75:1912 N 1 '50 90w

"We say that fact is stranger than fiction; nevertheless, it takes genius to find such a fact in the news as the escape of a bull elephant from the circus and turn it into a good story. That genius Ellen Tarry has, and she is ably abetted here by an irresistible artist." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 O 8 '50 250w

Reviewed by M. R. Brown
N Y Times p14 D 31 '50 130w

"This is a very amusing story. The drawings, printed in rust and gray, are equally pleasing."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:40 N 11 '50 170w

TASAKI, HANAMA. Long the imperial way. 372p $3.50 Houghton 50-3997

Story of the war in northern China told from the point of view of a Japanese private soldier. The author is a Hawaiian-born, American educated Japanese.

"The author has brought off the considerable feat of making people whose inner life has seemed to us indecipherable emerge as human and understandable; and he has done it without in any way trying to whitewash their conduct."
+ Atlantic 186:90 O '50 130w

Booklist 46:336 Jl 1 '50

Bookmark 10:8 O '50 40w

"The raison d'être for the book might be to give us an understanding of our enemy but it fails in that purpose for the same reason that it fails as a novel. Today there is no set form for fiction but its people must be recognizably human. Even if Private Takeo and his companions are subdued by the overly formal, dogmatic Japanese culture, it should at least be intimated that they are suppressed human beings." Mary Sandrock
— Cath World 171:475 S '50 200w

Chicago Sun p16 S 3 '50 350w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 20 '50 550w

"As a novel, Mr. Tasaki's maiden effort shows plentiful evidence of immaturity. His characterization is fairly successful, but diffuseness, awkward construction, and limping dialogue hinder the total impact of a work which might otherwise well have become the Japanese equivalent of 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' . . Nevertheless, the book's vital central theme does get across to the reader: the awakening of a questioning and rebellious spirit in a mind trained blindly to obey." Takashi Oka

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 12 '50 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '50

"With rare exceptions the characters are lifeless, and the action, laid in the pre-Pearl Harbor China campaigns, mechanical. The book was written in English, but the prose is so wooden one can almost detect the grain." James O'Gara

— Commonweal 52:540 S 8 '50 400w

"As well as being a compelling novel of men at war this is a revealing picture of a feudalistic phenomenon in our century and the idealistic framework within which we must reach understanding. This should find a large audience."

+ Kirkus 18:338 Je 15 '50 300w

"Can be read as a Japanese equivalent of The Naked and the Dead and seen as a Japanese counterpart of All Quiet, for this is competent writing. Beyond that, its real value lies in the insight it gives into the form and substance of Japanese society and the clues it offers for building future understandings. . . Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 75:1045 Je 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

Nation 171:171 Ag 19 '50 850w

"Tasaki is a fine observer and a reporter with a heart, and his book combines entertainment with a great deal of information." Bill Mauldin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 13 '50 1350w

Reviewed by Ray Falk

N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '50 450w

New Yorker 26:73 S 2 '50 80w

"Written in English by a man who was drafted into the Japanese Army and fought through the 'China incident' and in World War II, yet had the American upbringing and training to look objectively at what went on, the book is an extraordinary reflection of something we in this country have known nothing at all about." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 15 '50 950w

"Hanama Tasaki, who was educated at Oberlin College and who is now a farmer, has written a novel ranking with the half dozen best to come from any country after this war. It is brutal and moving and real, and the characters in 'Long the Imperial Way' are always human beings, even though Japanese." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 33:8 Ag 12 '50 1100w

TASHLIN, FRANK. 'Possum that didn't; story and illustrations. [61p] $1.75 Farrar, Straus

817 Satire. Caricatures and cartoons 50-9357

Cartoon book, with enough text to explain the story. It is all about a happy little 'possum, hanging upside down in a tree in the forest, as 'possums have always done. A group of picnicers on their way home decide the 'possum is not happy, so they take him back to the city, tree and all. His experiences in the city almost wreck the poor 'possum, but he finally finds his way back to the forest—and happiness.

"A delightful, ironic bit of whimsy, illustrated by some of the cleverest drawings ever to tell a story. Every child and adult can enjoy it. There are no age lines." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 10 '50 180w

Kirkus 18:444 Ag 1 '50 120w

"The story is amusing, and you can read it at a standing."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 17 '50 110w

Reviewed by Charles Poore

N Y Times p25 S 17 '50 270w

TATLOCK, JOHN STRONG PERRY. Legendary history of Britain; Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia regum Britanniae and its early vernacular versions; pub. in cooperation with the Mediaeval acad. of America. 545p $7.50 Univ. of Calif.

942.01 Geoffrey of Monmouth, bp.—Historia Britonum 50-7428

A survey of Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae, which attempts to show how much is traditional and how much imaginative. The author was a noted Chaucer scholar, and was professor of English at the University of California. He spent many years on the present work and was able to correct galley proofs before he died. Bibliographical footnotes. Index.

"There is a wealth of information for writers of history or fiction, or for the study of the Middle Ages."

+ Current Hist 18:354 Je '50 40w

"This [is a] monument of literary scholarship. . . Volume will be essential for university libraries and desirable for college and very large public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 75:778 My 1 '50 150w

"This is a monumental tribute to thorough and important scholarship. Professor Tatlock, widely known for his work in the Chaucerian field, has left a book which, it may be safely predicted, scholars will consult with pleasure and profit for many generations to come." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 18 '50 320w

"Dr. Tatlock rates the 'Historia' as 'one of the most influential books ever written' and few who follow his patient dissection of it and his evaluation of the early vernacular versions will feel disposed to dispute the verdict."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:21 Jl 15 '50 220w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:337 S '50 220w

TAYLOR, ALBION GUILFORD. Labor problems and labor law. 2d ed 608p $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

331 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. 50-6138

"Extensive revisions and additions were necessary in this edition because of the many economic and legal changes since the late 'thirties. The arrangement of subject matter has undergone a complete reorganization and many portions have been rewritten. Certain chapter titles in the first edition do not appear in the second, though much of the material is embodied in chapters bearing other titles. Two entirely new chapters have been added, one on wage theories and another on collective bargaining. The references following each chapter incude many new titles, along with older treatises thought to be most valuable." (Pref) Indexes. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

"While thoroughly revised from the factual standpoint, the book remains basically unchanged in approach and content. . . Professor Taylor's work does point up the vital matter of social evolution. At the same time it provides a great deal of basic factual material that cannot be well presented orally and furnishes a well-rounded outline of practically all the topics that are usually considered in labor-problems courses." A. Morgner

+ Ann Am Acad 270:166 Jl '50 290w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 75:1297 Ag '50 70w

TAYLOR, DEEMS, and others. Pictorial history of the movies. rev & enl 376p il $3.95 Simon & Schuster

791.409 Moving pictures—History 50-8567

Revised edition of a book first published in 1943 (Book Review Digest 1943). The period covered is from 1893 to 1949. The photographs are arranged chronologically and the captions outline the history and development of the motion picture.

TAYLOR, DEEMS—Continued

"This pictorial history is a fascinating book, cleverly put together in chronological order. Its pictures are clear, the captions informative and sometimes witty, and there is an index to help you locate some favorite star or movie." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 16 '50 450w

"The title of this volume is overambitious, since the photographs included are principally concerned with the masterworks of Hollywood. While shots from 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari' and 'The Bicycle Thief' do manage to find a place here, no samples are offered of the superb creations of Eisenstein, Pagnol, Pabst, Dreyer, or, indeed, of most of the other European experts. The captions, though determinedly whimsical, are informative."

New Yorker 26:74 Jl 22 '50 130w

"Few movie fans will resist the temptation of detecting sins of omission and commission in this new and enlarged edition. . . Even fewer will fail to find deep enjoyment in its rejuvenation of glamorous lads and lassies." A. L. Mayer

+ Sat R of Lit 33:9 D 16 '50 700w

TAYLOR, FRANK JOHN, and WELTY, EARL M. Black bonanza; how an oil hunt grew into the Union oil company of California. (Whittlesey house publication) 280p il $4 McGraw

665.5 Union oil company of California 50-10066

"Primarily, this is the history of the Union Oil Company of California . . . its personnel, early struggles, later triumphs. It is, however, much more than a history of Union—it is a most thrilling account of the development of the 'Black Bonanza' from 1885 in Pennsylvania down to the present. Authors have covered every phase of the development of this greatest of today's industries, when more than 4000 products are locked up in a barrel of oil." Library J

"An industrial biography, this is chiefly a business man's book though the spectacular, speculative nature of this field lends a certain drama."

Kirkus 18:448 Ag 1 '50 180w

"Chapters on the financial development and manipulations are the least interesting to the lay reader. Not too important for the general public library." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 75:1658 O 1 '50 120w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p19 D 17 '50 250w

"'Black Bonanza' is a story that has long needed telling. . . It is a well told, profusely illustrated story, that necessarily includes a large part of California history, for the story of oil is an integral part of California's rapid growth in this half century." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 5 '50 550w

TAYLOR, FRANK SHERWOOD. Short history of science and scientific thought; with readings from the great scientists from the Babylonians to Einstein [Eng title: Science, past and present]. 368p il $5 Norton

509 Science—History 49-50027

Studies the development of science from the first use of the lever principle to the splitting of the atom. Includes readings from the works of the great scientists. Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is a revision of an earlier effort on Mr. Taylor's part to sketch the highlights in the development of modern science. For pedagogical purposes, it is considerably superior to the other single volume surveys available to the American reader. . . To know more than superficially the whole development of science from its origins in Egypt and Mesopotamia to the latest developments in nuclear energy is virtually impossible for one man. Hence it is not surprising that in treating some subjects, for example medieval science, Mr. Taylor's account is woefully weak." Marshall Clagett

+ — Am Hist R 55:873 Jl '50 480w

"This is no ordinary history of science. . . This is done so clearly and definitely that the story is fascinating." Harrison Hale

+ Chem & Eng N 28:498 F 13 '50 150w

"The first impression of this treatment is that the book is a scrapbook sort of thing, but on more careful reading, the basic, integrated plan is apparent. While it is good to have these excerpts gathered together, the physical sciences and inventive progress are favored at the expense of biology. It is odd, for example, to read a discussion of 19th Century physiology without finding the name of Claude Bernard." J. W. H.

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 18 '49 160w

"While Dr. Taylor's opinions about the boundaries and functions of science are sometimes philosophically shaky, he writes clearly about the facts upon which his interpretations are based. The book contains a good deal of important information and should be a helpful reference volume for the general reader." J. E. Pfeiffer

+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 Ja 21 '50 1550w

TAYLOR, GRIFFITH. See Taylor, T. G.

TAYLOR, HAROLD, ed. Essays in teaching. 239p $3 Harper

371.3 Teaching. Education—Philosophy. Education, Higher 50-12880

Essays by members of the faculty of Sarah Lawrence College. Contents: The idea of a college, by Harold Taylor; The teacher and the student, by Esther Raushenbush; On teaching literature, by Horace Gregory; Experience of philosophy, by H. M. Lynd; Second thoughts of a psychologist, by Rudolf Arnheim; On teaching modern poetry, by Stephen Spender; American history in college education, by B. J. Loewenberg; Comments on art and education, by Kurt Roesch; Education and the family, by L. B. Murphy; Music in the college, by N. D. Joio; Learning in biology, by M. P. Grant; Western values and the individual, by Charles Trinkaus; The individual student, by Harold Taylor. Index.

"A vital, exhilarating book, but limited market."

Kirkus 18:500 Ag 15 '50 140w

"The essay form makes it welcome reading for parents and for all interested in the education of youth. The dynamics of teacher-student relations is stressed within the fabric of the subject taught. Especially provocative are the opening and closing chapters by President Taylor, and Rudolf Arnheim's essay on psychology. Highly recommended." Nathaniel Stewart

+ Library J 75:2003 N 15 '50 140w

"The book might easily have been smartly and startlingly destructive. By holding out against that temptation it has become infinitely more valuable, even if perhaps less amusing. There are sharp attacks against ready-made answers, against useless 'survey courses,' against Appreciation Courses (under this name anything can happen). But throughout there is the constructive attempt to apply expensive, experimental methods to the larger area of mass-education." F. M. Hechinger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 19 '50 850w

Reviewed by H. N. MacCracken

N Y Times p6 D 10 '50 850w

School & Society 72:255 O 14 '50 30w

TAYLOR, PETER HILLSMAN. Woman of means [il. by Margaret Bloy Graham]. 160p $2.75 Harcourt

50-7597

Quint Dudley, aged twelve, is the narrator of this brief novel. Quint's mother was dead; his father was a traveling man, so Quint had either traveled with his father or lived with his grandmother. When his father married a wealthy woman in St Louis, both Quint and his father went to live in the family mansion of the former Mrs Lauterbach. Quint's stepmother had always yearned for a son, as he had needed a mother. The arrangement was only of short duration, for the marriage ended in a breakup and insanity.

Booklist 46:304 Je 1 '50

Bookmark 9:244 Jl '50 40w

"Page by firm page, sentence by animated sentence, this brief novel moves with the quality of the best modern fiction. Quietly it establishes its situations, and then goes on to reveal with an astonishing combination of clarity and subtlety the drives and distortions of its characters." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 14 '50 500w

"The incidents are natural, limited and plausible. Most of them, however, are merely introductory scenes for the final, tragic moments; they form an expanded short story rather than a novel. The details of family activities, of individual sensibilities are made quietly, the impressive images of childhood, the secret intuitions of boys are revealed soberly, effectively." George Miles

+ Commonweal 52:275 Je 23 '50 250w

Kirkus 18:267 My 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 N 24 '50 120w

"Related in the first person, in prose as quiet, as clear as a stream in summer, this short book tells the story of Quint Dudley. . . Best of all, however, is the subtle characterization of the stepmother whose love for Quint is complicated by her persistent fear that her second husband might have married her 'for a reason.' . . What, alas, is not convincing, what seems as incredible to the reader as it did to Quint, is the sudden and terrible disintegration of a woman to whom life had given all but an heir. This unaccountable lapse mars a book that would otherwise have been perfect of its kind." James Stern

+ — New Repub 122:20 Je 26 '50 650w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

New Statesman & Nation 40:566 D 2 '50 650w

"Mr. Taylor's style, sure, flexible, unobtrusive, is an effective instrument. He explores with much skill the family relationships, and the relationships of the family to society, through bits of casual conversation, the little everyday incidents of the household. The slightness of 'A Woman of Means,' which is hardly longer than a long short story, is deceptive: it is a work of very solid merit. It is not, however, the fully realized novel for which a reader of Mr. Taylor's excellent short stories could wish." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 21 '50 500w

"Actually, the scale of 'A Woman of Means' is not large. It is a short novel—about 40,000 words—but there is such a vividness of characterization and such a sense of the depth and complication of event that the effect is one of a full-bodied narrative." R. P. Warren

+ N Y Times p8 Je 11 '50 750w

"The mood of the novel, which is elegiac and its style, which is spare and precise, are reminiscent of Willa Cather, and the locale—St. Louis in the mid-twenties—seems as remote in time as Miss Cather's Nebraska of the mid-nineties."

New Yorker 26:117 My 20 '50 120w

"This is one novella which seems as slight in effect, in content, and in quality as it is slight in form. It has not the impact of Peter Taylor's fine stories ('A Long Fourth and Other Stories'), but the milieu which Mr. Taylor has taken for his province, 'The contemporary urban, middle-class world of the upper South,' has its charm." Evelyn Eaton

Sat R of Lit 33:13 Je 3 '50 380w

"By keeping his aim modest and his voice down, Author Taylor has written a good, if not a major, novel. One flaw: the stepmother's crackup is too feebly foreshadowed; when it comes it is as unexpected and as nearly incredible to the reader as it was to the boy. The boy, however, is a bright little minnow, dragged flopping and flashing out of a dark pool of childhood, one of the most vivid children of the year's fiction."

+ — Time 55:110 My 15 '50 270w

"Mr. Taylor's subtle and well-disciplined talent is here at work upon a problem somewhat too complex, perhaps, for his present stage of development, yet one worth trying by very reason of its difficulty."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:285 S '50 220w

"This is rather disappointing. For most of the way through, it is a very slight but pleasant series of recollections, then, suddenly, the author asks us to take it much more seriously, which is a little out of the question." Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 39:768 summer '50 100w

TAYLOR, RAYMOND H. (RODGER TAYLOR, pseud). Song of the frog. 309p $3 Bobbs 50-7915

Character study of a psychopathic youth who attempted to escape from reality by drinking himself insensible. When even that failed he retreated to a lonely cabin in the Mother Lode region of California. There at last he was able to bring himself to a more normal attitude.

"Mr. Taylor's concluding situation seems tailor-made to underline his point: it does not grow out of character. The book's background, the California foothill country, is drawn extremely well. It comes alive and sings at times." Hal Borland

— + N Y Times p12 Jl 2 '50 200w

"The feel of the seasons in the Mother Lode country is remarkably well conveyed. . . As a whole, the novel is uneven. Mr. Taylor doesn't put over his chief character but he has certain insights which promise a better story in the future." J. V.

— + San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 9 '50 400w

TAYLOR, ROBERT LEWIS. Professor Fodorski (a politico-sporting romance). 250p $2.75 Doubleday 50-9666

A football satire. Professor Fodorski, a middle-aged refugee civil engineer from an unnamed European country, arrives in the United States with a hundred dollars and an English grammar. He blunders onto the campus of a southern college, is bitten by the football bug, and the fun begins.

Booklist 47:40 S 15 '50

Bookmark 10:33 N '50 30w

"All in all, a pleasant change from the usual run of novels, and ideal fare for football fans with a touch of pixie in their makeup." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 17 '50 400w

Kirkus 18:571 S 15 '50 120w

"Mr. Taylor's fable is a joyous satire composed in high good humor and calculated to popularize reading even among blocking back and sports writers." Red Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 15 '50 550w

"The trick Mr. Taylor plays here is vaguely similar to the one that was played a year or so ago, with pleasing Hollywood overtones, in a book called 'It Happens Every Spring.' However, Mr. Taylor's treatment of the idea is much superior. His prose is smoother, his comic touch surer, and his invention richer. Along the way he has many droll things to say about the South, newspaper sports coverage, interfering college trustees and radio announcers." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p32 S 10 '50 320w

TAYLOR, R. L.—Continued
Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 1 '50 800w
Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 33:36 O 28 '50 320w
School & Society 72:271 O 21 '50 20w

TAYLOR, ROBERT LEWIS. Running pianist. 340p $3.50 Doubleday
920 50-7312

A collection of biographical sketches and four short stories, the sketches being reprinted from the New Yorker. The title piece is an essay on Percy Grainger, the pianist and composer. Among the others considered are: Mrs Rosalie Edge; Robert J. Flaherty; Bobby Clark; Dr Samuel Crumbine; Eugene F. Moran; and Joshua Lionel Cowen.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 6 '50 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '50
Kirkus 18:158 Mr 1 '50 180w

"That facts can be livelier and crazier, as well as stranger, than fiction is forcefully suggested by this collection of pieces. . . Three of them are short stories which would seem delicately dazzling in any company. Yet they twinkle but faintly in comparison with the extensive blaze of the other twelve items, a procession of Mr. Taylor's gorgeous biographical sketches." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 30 '50 950w

"Mr. Taylor's new collection, 'The Running Pianist,' is a thoroughly enjoyable exhibition of his work. It shows an alert but tolerant inquisitiveness, a large amount of understanding and decency, and the warm and irresistible humor of a born raconteur. . . The book includes several short stories, but except for one called 'Stand, Navy' they are not as high in quality as the biographies. This is a trifling criticism, though, when the book is considered as a whole. A good beer needs no egg in it." Marion Hargrove
+ N Y Times p10 My 21 '50 460w

"Mr. Taylor's prose style is among the more beguiling in The New Yorker's stable. In addition he has an affinity for the eccentric in his subjects, which makes for lively reading. . . When he leaves the worlds of the theatre and the circus Mr. Taylor is somewhat less successful. The reading is still lively. The eccentricities are still there. But you sometimes get the uneasy feeling that the author put them there, instead of finding them there, in order to liven up his businessmen and his people with missions. . . Other objections should be recorded. One is to the editing or, rather, lack of it. . . Editorial laziness, I imagine, also dictated the inclusion of four short stories in the book. . . They are less successful than Mr. Taylor's factual pieces in that they appear more contrived and the felicities of style which enliven his factual prose impart to his fiction a somewhat intrusive gloss. A more serious objection to them, however, is that they don't seem to fit in—in style or content—with the profiles. Alone these would have constituted a consistent and consistently entertaining book." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:35 Jl 8 '50 550w

TAYLOR, RODGER, pseud. See Taylor, Raymond H.

TAYLOR, SAMUEL A. Happy time; a comedy of love; based on the stories by Robert Fontaine. 184p $2.50 Random house
812 50-7752

A play taken from a book of the same name. "Essentially, 'The Happy Time' is an account of the education of a 12-year-old French-Scotch-Canadian boy named Bibi in the arts and ethics of love." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Booklist 46:332 Jl 1 '50

"Recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:1048 Je 15 '50 30w

"The play will hardly do for a church parlor, but it is highly amusing and warmly human." W. P. Eaton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 N 26 '50 180w

"A comedy of love that has few modern equals." Luther Nichols
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 25 '50 360w

TAYLOR, THOMAS GRIFFITH. Urban geography; a study of site, evolution, pattern and classification in villages, towns and cities. 439p il $6.25 Dutton
323.35 Cities and towns 49-10022

"In this volume the prolific British writer on geography and related subjects has turned his attention primarily to questions of the site and evolution of the city. He concerns himself largely with problems of environmental control, of functional patterns, and of distribution in general, rather than with sociological or architectural aspects of city life. . . His classification of cities is by site: towns in plains, river towns, seaports and lake ports, mountain towns, mining towns, religious centers and resort towns. The material used is world wide and generally includes places which the author himself has visited. There are 300 plans and diagrams." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 14:826 D '49 150w

"The book contains numerous studies of towns in all parts of the world, based largely on the extensive travels of a lifetime, during which the author has always been an exemplary observer and recorder in note and sketch. It is unfortunate, however, that the field method he practices with excellent results is given such a pretentious title as the 'circumspect concept,' and that he fabricates baffling formulas as a shorthand for his observations and, incidentally, as a key to his working concept of the scope of urban geography. In spite of the skill with which many of the studies are handled, the book falls short of its overall purpose because of his insistence on a conceptual frame that cannot contain the detailed structure of his work." R. E. Dickinson
+ — Geog R 40:339 Ap '50 1200w

"This reviewer closed the book with mixed feelings of admiration for the author's inductive approach to the subject and some intellectual indigestion, the result of the breathless and somewhat repetitive writing. Perhaps it is fair to say that the inductive approach has resulted in the accumulation of many facts for which appropriate generalizations have still to be developed." J. J. Honigmann
+ — Social Forces 28:346 Mr '50 330w

"Of particular value are the studies of Canberra and Toronto at one end of the scale and of the small agricultural and mining townships at the other. From them much can be learned about town planning as a coordinating activity, and it will be recognized how broad and humane the coordinators' outlook must be if their work is to be effective."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p315 My 13 '49 1300w

TEAGUE, MRS RUTH TOWNSEND (MILLS). Cooking for company. 309p il $3.50 Random house
641.5 Cookery. Entertaining 50-5545

A book of menus and recipes, directions and hints on service for company dinners, barbecues and buffet suppers. The material originally appeared under the title "Conversation Piece" in the Ladies Home Journal.

Booklist 46:229 Mr 15 '50
Bookmark 9:158 Ap '50 50w

"This is not a book for the beginning cook, nor for the home run on very economical lines. . . The arrangement of menus, with accompanying recipes, is carefully planned to take care of every contingency, all kinds of parties, indoor entertaining and outdoor, table service or buffet. There are an unusual number of dishes that are sure conversation pieces; but very few of them are easy or quick."

Kirkus 17:688 D 15 '49 280w

Wis Lib Bul 46:24 Je '50

TEED, PHILIP LITHERLAND. Properties of metallic materials at low temperatures. 222p $3.50 Wiley

669 Metals

"The demands of our modern high-speed civilization require knowledge not only of the behavior of metals at high temperatures but also at low temperatures. However, much less attention has been paid to the low end of the temperature scale. This work is apparently the first attempt at a substantial compilation of information at this end. It is concerned not only with the behavior of metals at extremely low temperatures but also with their behavior at temperatures such as are encountered by airplane structures in high altitudes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The work is a critical and well organized digest of the published literature. . . The book is of interest to professional metallurgists, engineers, especially those concerned with the design of aeronautical and military equipment, and also to physicists." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1511 S 15 '50 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:72 S '50

TEGGART, FREDERICK JOHN, ed. Idea of progress; a collection of readings; rev. ed, with an introd. by George H. Hildebrand. 457p $6; text ed $4.50 Univ. of Calif.

901 Progress. Civilization 49-49294

"The present volume brings together the leading concepts of history that have appeared in Western literature during the lengthy span of time that separates Hesiod from Charles Darwin. . . The present volume had its inception in a syllabus edited in 1929 by the late Frederick J. Teggart, and published by the University of California Press. Professor Teggart chose the original selections, nearly all of which have been reproduced in this edition; with these I have selected others from Thucydides, Plato, Seneca, Cicero, Augustine, Lafitau, Ferguson, Robertson, Volney, Marx, and Darwin. From the works of Seneca, Cicero, and St. Augustine, I have added further selections to those originally chosen by Professor Teggart." (Pref) Selected bibliography. No index.

Am Pol Sci R 44:514 Je '50 50w

Reviewed by Edward Rose

Am Soc R 15:320 Ap '50 450w

"As a collection of readable extracts on social theory, this book is excellent, often summing up a considerable work in a few paragraphs of the author's own words, with the breaks neatly concealed." H. T. C.

+ J Philos 47:420 Jl 6 '50 190w

Reviewed by J. J. Spengler

J Pol Econ 58:462 O '50 650w

"Even now, in the gloom of a mid-century pessimism, the idea of progress retains a perennial if somewhat faded vitality. Certainly it is an idea which continues to merit serious examination by philosophers, historians, and sociologists. This book will be of material assistance in this respect." R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 33:59 My 6 '50 290w

School & Society 71:351 Je 3 '50 20w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Social Forces 29:215 D '50 280w

Social Studies 41:192 Ap '50 30w

TEILHET, DARWIN (CYRUS FISHER, pseud). Happy island. 309p $3 Sloane

50-10508

An American ex-officer, who spent the war years writing propaganda, is hired to indoctrinate the workers on a Hawaiian plantation. He poses as a struggling young painter, and almost gets away with it, until an honest man and his wife unmask him.

Booklist 47:174 Ja 1 '51

Kirkus 18:531 S 1 '50 190w

"Highly recommended for entertainment, and for its implications." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 120w

"Not very interesting to the average reader of fiction."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 26 '50 140w

"Mr. Teilhet knows Hawaiian background and the mood of the islands. However, his novel will appeal chiefly to readers who expect the worst of human nature—and will accept the author's samples as authentic." James Kelly

N Y Times p13 D 31 '50 150w

"You can read it, almost breathlessly, for its rapid action, for its plot and sub-plot, for its skillfully worked out web of intrigue, and you can have a high old time reading it just that way. But you can also recognize that underneath the story-telling Mr. Teilhet is saying something to the point in today's world." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 2 '50 700w

TEILHET, MRS HILDEGARDE (TOLMAN). Rim of terror. 250p $2.75 Coward-McCann

50-5067

"Elizabeth, on a cross-country drive to Spokane to meet her fiancée, picks up a wiry young hitch-hiker, an Idaho-born physicist who worked in Vienna, fought as a partisan, and was sent here by the Russians as a spy. He changed sides, though, and the Left Arm, a spy outfit in this country, was now after him. The two are never quite overwhelmed, it develops, and the agents of the Left Arm are finally bundled off to jail." N Y Times

"Mrs. Teilhet, using a fresh section of the map for a fairly familiar business, sets some demonstrable facts in a web of fiction together with an incidental editorial or two on our national alertness." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun p4S Ja 20 '50 130w

"The author has built a great novel of dread and foreboding with a minimum of words. 'The Rim of Terror' should keep any one on edge." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 15 '50 250w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 40:306 S 23 '50 120w

"Mrs. Teilhet is an old hand at turning out a good spy thriller, but usually her background is more unorthodox than this one, which smacks faintly of the Hollywood formula. If her plot is threadbare, however, her writing is still excellent and her flair for suspense is unfailing."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p30 Ja 29 '50 270w

"Mrs. Teilhet is a very accomplished hand at this kind of running violence, and she has never written a more satisfactory or literate book."

+ New Yorker 25:103 Ja 21 '50 160w

"Mrs. Teilhet's story is a thundering, almost unbearably suspenseful yarn that forces the helpless reader on and on, page after page, chapter after chapter. . . One of the most thrilling excitements of the year." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 5 '50 550w

"Top thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:36 F 11 '50 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 S 1 '50 280w

TEMPLE, WILLIAM, abp. Daily readings; comp. by Hugh C. Warner. 279p $2.50 Macmillan

208 50-6632

Brief excerpts from the writings of Archbishop Temple, arranged for each day of the year. Indexes to subjects, and references.

"The extracts are, of course, devout; for he was a devout man; but not many of them are what is usually called 'devotional.' Most of them furnish stimulus to vigorous thinking. There is not much evidence of systematic arrangement, but the topical index partially supplies this need. The best way to use the collection will be either to read in it at random or else to take it as it comes—and in either case to take it slowly." W. E. G.

Christian Century 67:868 Je 19 '50 150w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 164:17 Je 15 '50 100w

TEMPLEWOOD, SAMUEL JOHN GURNEY HOARE, 1st viscount. Unbroken thread. 320p il $5 Knopf

929.2 Hoare family 50-8964

A history of five generations of an English Quaker family of bankers and humanitarians. The first part of the book deals with the family and its various alliances with other prominent families. The remainder describes the family interest in sport, centering in game books which have been kept assiduously for over a hundred years. Genealogical chart. No index.

"An unexpected book from a public man and politician, this has a mellowness of recall and a charming absorption whose appeal should be primarily for the advanced sportsman as well as the reader whose first interest is English biography."

+ Kirkus 18:344 Je 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 75:1411 S 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by A. W. Boyd

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 15 '49 480w

New Yorker 26:74 S 2 '50 180w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 33:28 Ag 19 '50 750w

"Lord Templewood writes with a warm and grateful pietas that gives his early chapters a peculiar charm. . . From one aspect of his forbears' activities—the sporting—he passes by a skilful and natural transition to his own, filling the greater part of his book with anecdotes of varied sport with many companies in many lands." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 183:710 N 18 '49 850w

"In his concluding chapters Lord Templewood describes the little house on a Palladian model which he has built on his Norfolk estate, his delight in the planting of the woods and avenues around it, and the insistent call, after a life devoted to the public service, of his books, his birds and his trees. No one would wish him to withdraw from his active and valuable participation in present-day affairs; but it is impossible to grudge him the measure of retirement which has resulted in this mellow and happy book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 2 '49 1050w

TENG, SSU-YU. New light on the history of the Taiping rebellion; issued under the auspices of the International secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations. 132p pa $1.75 Harvard univ. press

951.037 China—History—Taiping rebellion, 1850-1864 50-2109

"This bibliographical survey of historical studies summarizes briefly the work of the Chinese, Japanese and Western historians in Taiping and analyzes their treatment of several perplexing historical questions. Dr. Teng also provides a running account of the nature, causes, early history and other aspects of the rebellion." Am Pol Sci R

"Dr. Teng's excellent bibliographical essay will be of great value to all students of modern Far Eastern history and international relations; they owe a debt of gratitude to both Dr. Teng and the Institute of Pacific Relations. . . It is carefully annotated throughout, and all necessary characters are given in the extensive notes and character annex. No serious scholar of modern China should be without the work." E. H. P.

+ Am Hist R 56:208 O '50 240w

"His unique bibliographical work should prove of great value to the many American scholars who are now working on this subject, while [the] brief account of the rebellion itself should find a much broader audience. It offers to the non-specialist a stimulating introduction to the cataclysm that shook China a century ago and set in motion the revolutionary process which has continued in spasms ever since." F. R. Valeo

+ Am Pol Sci R 44:784 S '50 110w

"The great merit of Dr. Teng's bibliographic survey lies in the fact that it makes possible for the first time an efficient approach to the study of the Taiping Rebellion on the part both of beginning students and of mature scholars. . . This major portion of the book suffers from an apparent lack of clarity concerning its purpose. The material is the material for a bibliographic survey, and the guiding ideas are those appropriate to such a survey; but the arrangement is the arrangement for an interpretative history." M. C. Wright

+ — Pacific Affairs 23:200 Je '50 800w

TERBORGH, GEORGE WILLARD. Dynamic equipment policy; a MAPI study. 290p $3.75 McGraw

658.2 Machinery—Trade and manufacture. Depreciation 49-5404

"In its foreword this book is described as 'an attempt to rethink fundamentally the underlying theory of equipment policy.' It is the result of a research study conducted under the auspices of the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, of which the author is Research Director. The major portion of the book is concerned with a theoretical analysis of the problem of equipment replacement of producers' goods and the development of an engineering formula as a basis for replacement decisions. It concludes with a relatively brief discussion of replacement policy." (Management R) Glossary. Index.

"Dynamic Equipment Policy is a valuable contribution to replacement policy. Its verbosity reduces comprehension time for the non-mathematically trained reader. Because it is too detailed for the typical business executive, Terborgh promises to issue a manual for practical application." A. A. Alchian

+ — Am Econ R 40:693 S '50 1800w

"Dynamic Equipment Policy is lucid and stimulating; and it is an important contribution to the field of capital replacement policy and practice. But it is by no means gospel." H. N. Emerson

+ — J Pol Econ 58:368 Ag '50 600w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 74:1608 O 15 '49 90w

"The influence of Dynamic Equipment Policy is certain to be reduced by the complexity of the presentation. The use of a special and unfamiliar terminology constitutes a severe handicap in the communication of the author's ideas. Many who might turn for help to the book will be discouraged by the difficulties of its presentation." W. P. Fiske

Management R 39:366 Je '50 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:549 D '49 300w

TEY, JOSEPHINE, pseud. See Mackintosh, E.

THANE, ELSWYTH, pseud. See Beebe, E. T. R.

THANE, ERIC, pseud. See Henry, R. C.

THARP, MRS LOUISE (HALL). Peabody sisters of Salem. 372p il $4 Little

920.7 Peabody, Elizabeth Palmer. Mann, Mary Tyler (Peabody). Hawthorne, Sophia Amelia (Peabody) 49-49265

The combined biographies of the three Peabody sisters of nineteenth century Salem. They were: Elizabeth, who never married, but was called the "grandmother" of Boston, and was the founder of the American kindergarten; Mary, a teacher, who became the second wife of Horace Mann, the educator; and Sophia, artist and reputed invalid, who married Nathaniel Hawthorne. Index.

"Unfortunately the first chapter, 'Cuba Journey,' is the least convincing of the whole volume. . . Both in chronology and character this chapter is out of place. The author has read widely in her sources, and used them well, on the whole. She writes well. . . Apart from certain disputed points and trivial errors, Mrs. Tharp seems to be both accurate and interesting. . . Mrs. Tharp is genuinely skillful and nearly always successful at portraying persons and places. . . Those who read many books will call this one great; those who read very few will grant that it is good." Stewart Mitchell

+ — Am Hist R 55:926 Jl '50 800w

"In style and technique the book is a blend, and a very good one, of letters and diaries and Mrs. Tharp's reanimation of the past. In its scenes, in its conversation, in its detailed knowledge of the background, it is an invigorating, honestly recaptured chronicle. These people mattered largely in their day, and we enjoy that day and feel their vitality in this leisurely and attractive book." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 185:82 F '50 360w

Booklist 46:133; 140 D 15 '49

Bookmark 9:106 F '50 50w

"Wit and pathos, respect and scholarship are the ingredients of this book. In it we meet afresh, Alcott and Emerson, Margaret Fuller and Mrs. Browning. It achieves that blend of history and humanity that makes a first-rate biography." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 170:479 Mr '50 220w

"Mrs. Tharp has written an intelligent and vivid appraisal of the Peabody sisters and has also sketched many fascinating personalities of the period. Emerson Alcott, the publisher Fields, the Unitarian leader Channing come into her pages and she has used little known letters and unpublished manuscripts with considerable effect." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun p6S Ja 16 '50 400w

"Judged by any standard you like, this is absorbing biography. The year 1950 is not likely to offer any more exciting reading experience." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 8 '50 500w

Christian Century 67:175 F 8 '50 210w

"This is a rare and lovely book." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 5 '50 1650w

"Mrs. Tharp has written an entertaining collective biography of these three women, in and out of whose lives wander many of the great intellectual figures of the time. Feminine intuition and sympathy supplement careful research—the book is based largely on manuscript letters and journals. She has made real people of her three heroines and humanized the great names to which they were linked, though she has contributed little to an understanding of that greatness. The Peabody Sisters is essentially a feminine footnote to The Flowering of New England." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 51:517 F 17 '50 290w

Current Hist 18:228 Ap '50 40w

"Authoritative, highly documented biography, which is at the same time first rate reading."

+ Kirkus 17:615 N 1 '49 350w

"Mrs. Tharp has written an informal, well documented, well indexed book that fits into the mass of material on this important period. It is written for the general reader and may be included in collections for upper grades in secondary schools." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 74:1903 D 15 '49 110w

"The sisters have figured in the background of so many New England studies that a biography of them in their own right fills a real void, especially one based on such careful research and so readably written as Mrs. Tharp's. One quarrels at times with her sense of perspective, but her flair for setting and psychology brings the Peabody world to life in a significant way." Howard Doughty

+ Nation 170:63 Ja 21 '50 1100w

"Mrs. Tharp has re-created the Peabody girls and the circle in which they moved with consummate skill. It would be easy to make the Peabodys objects of fun, but Mrs. Tharp writes of them with sympathy and affection and understanding. . . She has not, however, wholly avoided the most serious dangers in dealing with these remarkable sisters—that of being distracted into the trivial and the frivolous, if we can indeed use such a word as frivolous in connection with the Peabodys. . . But these are minor matters. What is important is that one of the exciting families of our middle period should be rescued from oblivion and made to live again." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 8 '50 2100w

"Mrs. Tharp has a narrative ability and an affection for her subject which is contagious. Her scholarship is extensive and, while one wishes she had included a list of her sources as well as a complete list of the writings of the Peabodys themselves, it is convincing. Lacking the wit, anecdotal bites and change-of-pace writing which made Brooks' 'Flowering' and 'New England: Indian Summer' the classics in this field, she has none the less produced both the Book-of-the-Month Club choice for January and a notable addition to the ever-expanding shelf of Good Old Days books about Boston." Cleveland Amory

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 8 '50 1500w

New Yorker 25:80 Ja 7 '50 280w

"Generously Mrs. Tharp has filled in the background of that golden age in which the sisters lived. At one time or another, you meet all of the 'Olympians'. She gives an interesting treatment to the young crowd of Transcendentalists parading the Boston streets in smocks and tasseled caps. . . Mrs. Tharp evokes rather than probes in her presentation of the Peabodys. Her portraits have that quality we call inspired which defies the wreckage of time and catches certain aspects that remain in the mind of the reader; Elizabeth at her happiest when she was giving more than she could afford; Mary, always stimulating to the mind; Sophia, filled with irrepressible buoyancy. Mrs. Tharp's manner of presentation is summed up perfectly in certain words of Mary Peabody's: 'It is not enough to cultivate the memory or even to enlighten the understanding. Out of the heart are the issues of life.'" Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 15 '50 1300w

"Mrs. Tharp has been wise in her choice of a subject, and the Peabody sisters have been fortunate in their biographer. She writes with a sure though light touch, and, with a wealth of manuscript material at her disposal, has produced a book that is firmly based in fact and delightfully readable. Her task was not easy. . . There are, however, one or two inaccuracies. It is a bit surprising to find Mrs. Tharp accepting unreservedly the legend of Nathaniel Hawthorne's mother as complete recluse, a point which has been questioned in the latest Hawthorne scholarship . . . and the author's reference to 'the gentle Thoreau' may raise a few eyebrows. However, these are minor points at which to cavil in a book that has so many good things." M. B. Stern

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:8 Ja 7 '50 1000w

"The story of a gifted and brilliant trio living in the heyday of American letters, 'The Peabody Sisters of Salem' becomes of absorbing interest, opening a vista in retrospect of the strength of character and accomplishments of these three who pioneered in the field of education for women in America." Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p3D F 12 '50 750w

"This is a delightful picture of the times described so vividly in 'The Flowering of New England' and gives an unusual insight into characters and personalities which often have been presented from quite a different angle." E. H. Johnson

THARP, LOUISE—Continued
+ Survey 86:157 Mr '50 500w
Time 55:94 Ja 16 '50 800w

"Mrs. Tharp's working of this rich trove is patient, skillful, and lively. Now and again she permits herself the dangerous license of the fictionalized biographer, but her fancy is so grounded in fact as to be not seriously annoying. Both the general reader and the student of the period will find the Peabody sisters worth knowing."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:173 Je '50 240w

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:16 Ja '50

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Too long endured. 279p $2.50 Dodd

50-10051

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 15 '50 60w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 O 22 '50 120w

"A natural for Thayer fans." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 22 '50 40w

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Within the vault. 282p $2.50 Dodd 50-5409

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Mr 5 '50 60w

"A highly skilled writer might argue—and prove—that there is no such thing as a dull setting for murder. This one is set in the basement safe deposit vault of a bank in the small town of Monroe, N. J. Lee Thayer has not demonstrated the skill to make it anything but dull. It is also confusing and filled with unlikely coincidences." Hillis Mills
— N Y Times p27 Mr 5 '50 150w
San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 19 '50 110w

THEILHEIMER, WILHELM. Synthetic methods of organic chemistry, v2. 336p $7.50 Interscience

545.9 Chemistry, Organic—Synthesis

"This volume is a continuation of the task which Dr. Theilheimer planned for the culling of chemical literature to form an active guide to preparative methods. It is as carefully assembled as the previous volume [Book Review Digest 1948] and follows the same general scheme for classification which has proven so helpful to users. There is a cumulative subject index to Vols. I and II for those who do not wish to search both books for the appropriate classes of reactions. . . This volume has all reaction-symbols clearly placed at the top of each page." Chem Eng

"How much assistance the research man will derive from this particular volume is problematical, for the coverage is admittedly restricted. The translation appears to be well done, and print and paper are good." N. L. Drake
Chem & Eng N 28:806 Mr 6 '50 250w

"There are essentially no errors in the sections of the book which have been checked. It may be noted, however, that an inconsistency in nomenclature of acridines does occur. This is less the fault of the author than that of the workers in the field, who have not agreed upon one system of numbering the acridine ring system. . . It may be added that Dr. Theilheimer has been aided in his recent efforts through grants in money and facilities by a number of American firms. This friendly and generous gesture should not go unmentioned, for all users of the work will owe them a debt of gratitude. It is in accord with the best traditions that such be done." E. A. Steck
+ Chem Eng 57:265 Mr '50 450w

THEIMER, WALTER. Encyclopedia of modern world politics. 696p $5 Rinehart

940.5503 Political science—Dictionaries and encyclopedias. World politics—Dictionaries

50-5768

"Comprehensive, alphabetically arranged handbook on political terms, systems and current political thought, giving information for practically every country in the world and brief biographies of leading politicians. Frequent cross references. An expansion of the British Penguin edition, with special emphasis on the American scene." Bookmark

Am Pol Sci R 44:786 S '50 50w
Booklist 46:230 Mr 15 '50
Bookmark 9:134 Mr '50 40w
Canadian Forum 30:143 S '50 220w

"The author is a European cosmopolite, but his American edition, with special revisions and additions for United States readers, is discriminating and well informed." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 5 '50 60w
Current Hist 19:105 Ag '50 20w
Kirkus 17:641 N 15 '49 120w

"Recommended as tool for quick reference in libraries which have more thorough works for serious readers." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 74:1906 D 15 '49 140w
Manchester Guardian p4 My 12 '50 240w

"Covering, as he does, some highly inflammable issues, the author must be commended for his factual and even-handed treatment. He displays, as well, an admirable ability for concise statement. What isn't quite as satisfactory, though, is the handling of American politics—which are on the whole quite sketchily put down, as if gleaned from a textbook published in some foreign clime." L. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 21 '50 270w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 33:13 Mr 18 '50 270w
Times [London] Lit Sup p303 My 19 '50 250w

THEOTOCOPULI, DOMINICO, known as EL GRECO. El Greco; ed. by Ludwig Goldscheider. 2d ed 20p 220pl $5 Phaidon

759.6 Paintings, Spanish

"A reprinting of a prewar book [Book Review Digest 1938], although items now considered of doubtful authenticity have been deleted. Among the new material are reproductions of three pieces of sculpture by El Greco. Paintings cleaned during the intervening years have been newly photographed. This edition contains 220 page-size plates, ten in color; the details of many paintings have been blown up, some as large as the original. In the seventeen pages of introduction Mr. Goldscheider, an art historian of considerable background, has succeeded in capturing the essentials of El Greco's life and work." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Indexes.

"Dr. Goldscheider's book, by emphasising the sources of El Greco's mannerism, does much to free him from the current view of him as an isolated genius, unfettered by tradition, whose drawing and colouring were sufficiently strange for us to claim him—flatteringly—as one of ourselves, a 'modern.' The plates are excellent throughout." David Carritt
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:310 Mr 18 '50 90w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander
Sat R of Lit 33:39 Ja 7 '50 140w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). County chronicle. 311p $3.50 Knopf 50-9976

A new Barsetshire story, the scenes of which are Marling Hall, the Cathedral Close, Gatherum Castle, and Stories. Isabel Dale, the heroine, comes into money and marries Lord Silverbridge, thus making it possible for him to stand for Barchester. And Mrs Brandon settles her difficulties in a very satisfactory fashion.

Booklist 47:54; 76 O 1 '50; O 15 '50

Bookmark 10:33 N '50 30w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 5 '50 600w

"Her Barsetshire grows to be more and more of a museum piece, fondly regarded but unavoidably out of date; and her long golden summer afternoons gather a tarnish that was not there before." R. A. C.
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 21 '50 360w

Kirkus 18:436 Ag 1 '50 210w

"The simple happenings in Barsetshire will go on indefinitely and somehow one just does not tire of the delightful life within the wall, so Mrs. Thirkell's stories will be generally purchased and read." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 75:1408 S 1 '50 90w

"What would a Trollope devotee say of Mrs. Angela Thirkell's latest Barset chronicle. . . That it is prattled rather than written, has cheek and charm but no story and no vestige of villainy except for the fiercely hated Stafford Cripps and 'Them'? But it is so amusing, so breathlessly full of gusto, that he would read on." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 15 '50 110w

"The good old days are lamented acrimoniously. And there is an increasing note of sharpness and rancor in the chronicles which sometimes mars them to the reader who was used to their mellow pleasantries. But taken all in all, Mrs. Thirkell's humor has not really lost its grace. . . But she obviously idolizes her own county families, she can still laugh at them, and for the sake of that, the reader might as well ignore her preoccupation with her personal ogre, the Labor Government, and just settle down for a good time." Anne Brooks
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 22 '50 950w

"Those who admire Angela Thirkell will delight in this book and those who do not won't read it anyhow, so they really will not matter at all as the author might say." Nancie Matthews
+ N Y Times p4 O 8 '50 470w

"A novel of wit and style in which at least three delightful heroines struggle separately through the wilderness to the promised land of marriage with a nice, solid man."
+ New Yorker 26:142 O 14 '50 100w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 N 25 '50 550w

Time 56:106 O 23 '50 500w

"Each character that is introduced is slightly more verbose than the last, and far less humorous. Interspersed with the seemingly endless conversations that ensue are the author's observations. These are arranged in sentences containing anything up to 250 words, with very sparse punctuation (making this a difficult book to read), and are often coloured with unnecessary condescension."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 22 '50 150w

THOMAS, BENJAMIN PLATT. Theodore Weld, crusader for freedom. 307p $4.25 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Weld, Theodore Dwight. Slavery in the U.S. 50-9667

The first published biography of Theodore Weld of Ohio, a man well-known in the Abolitionist movement, who sought neither fame nor publicity. His wife was Angelina Grimke, daughter of a South Carolina slaveholder, who was one of the first women to speak in public for emancipation. Bibliography. Index.

"There are a few errors of fact. . . This, however, does not seriously affect the value of Mr. Thomas' volume. He has done a great service to historians and to the reading public by his faithful research and his colorful presentation. The story of Weld and of his wife Angelina Grimke . . . is both stirring and inspiring." Ralph Korngold
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 24 '50 500w

Current Hist 19:290 N '50 130w

"Interesting as a fresh slant on a little known factor in the cause of the emancipation of the Negro, though not inspired writing."
Kirkus 18:589 S 15 '50 220w

"Mr. Thomas emphasizes the warm humanity and the devoted humanitarianism of such men as Weld. That Mr. Thomas is sympathetic to the abolitionist crusade should be noted but not regretted. As he points out, 'the struggle for equal human rights is still a vital issue in our day,' and it is cheering to have a historian of his intelligence on the side of the angels." David Donald
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 12 '50 1300w

"A vivid biography. Mr. Thomas has made use of a wide range of source material. Weld's activities, interests and purposes can be followed clearly, and the whole account is rich in illuminating detail. . . Certainly he has every right to admire Weld, Weld's philosophy, and Weld's methods, and to impress his readers with his admiration. Yet he owes his readers something more. He owes it to those not thoroughly familiar with the subject to make clear why Weld was mobbed at his meetings, and why Daniel Webster could find nothing good or valuable in abolitionist work." R. V. Harlow
+ — N Y Times p6 D 24 '50 750w

Reviewed by Irving Dilliard
Survey 86:510 N '50 400w

THOMAS, ELBERT DUNCAN. This nation under God. 210p $2.75 Harper

973 U.S.—Religion. U.S.—History 50-6818

"The history of the United States is discussed in terms of four Presidents: Thomas Jefferson, 1743-1826; Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1865; Woodrow Wilson, 1856-1924; and Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1882-1945. These Presidents are seen as characteristic figures of their times, influencing their periods and being influenced by them. Other sections of the book discuss various aspects of world history and government that Senator Thomas feels bear on our own." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 46:351 Jl 15 '50

Chicago Sun p4 Je 11 '50 40w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p18 My 5 '50 360w

Reviewed by Roger Shaw
Churchman 164:16 Je 1 '50 190w

Kirkus 18:311 Je 1 '50 130w

"It was this reader's opinion that Senator Thomas' interpretations of American history and democracy are more effective than his generalizations relating to other lands and other times. First to last, however, his volume is a stimulating, hopeful account of this country's material and spiritual past. Moreover, it charts a course for the present and future that all public officials and those who elect them would do well to consider." N. K. Burger
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 23 '50 370w

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON, 1923- Out of this world; across the Himalayas to forbidden Tibet. 320p il col pl $3.75 Greystone

915.15 Tibet 50-10918

"Account of the journey of father and son to the chimeric land of Shangri-La,—Tibet. Setting out with the necessary permit from the Dalai Lama, the famous traveler and radio commentator and his son penetrated far into Tibet to the Holy City of Lhasa, where they had an audience with the Dalai Lama, were entertained handsomely and talked to ministers and officials. However, of most interest to the reader will be the description of the country, isolated for centuries, the flat, high plains (14,000 feet above sea level), the prayer flags, shrines and monasteries which bristle from the country-side. . . The author intersperses the narrative with information about the religion in this feudalistic theocracy, warfare with foreign powers such as China and Britain, and success or failure of previous missions to Tibet." (Kirkus) No index.

THOMAS, L. J.—Continued

Booklist 47:135 D 1 '50

"Mr. Thomas tells an exciting tale . . . with the enthusiasm of a young tourist and the attention to detail of an old explorer. He has made a valuable contribution to the literature of geografy, anthropology and religion." Mason Warner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 10 '50 550w

"It is unfortunate that the author utilizes the style of a cinema travelogue but the subject and Thomas name should result in passable travel and adventure sales with a plus for young people. Over 100 fine illustrations."
Kirkus 18:670 N 1 '50 190w

"Here is memorable gossip of a strange land richly illustrated with excellent pictures." R. C. Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 3 '50 1100w

"It is seldom that a book appears so fortuitously as 'Out of This World.' If it is an obituary of a little known country, it is also a necessary supplement to the news stories on the front pages. . . If you have a son of high school age whom you wish to wean away from television, try him with 'Out of This World.' . . And when he's finished, grab the book yourself and rediscover the delights of that almost obsolete pastime called Reading." Quentin Reynolds
+ N Y Times p7 N 26 '50 1100w

"The author tells the whole story pleasantly enough and with a kind of engaging earnestness that goes far to make up for the fact that he is not by any means a professional writer. His book will find a large audience for whom what he writes about Tibet, its people and its politics will come as thoroughly interesting news." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 27 '50 1000w

"Simply and likably written, the best way to come to terms with its fabulous subject." James Hilton
+ Sat R of Lit 33:11 D 23 '50 800w

" 'Out of This World' will surely find a place among the classics of travel literature. Not only did the journey take them to one of the most inaccessible of lands, but the report itself is lively, timely and vital." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 480w

THOMPSON, CLARA MABEL, and MULLAHY, PATRICK. Psychoanalysis: evolution and development. 252p $3 Hermitage

131.34 Psychoanalysis 50-7061

"Trained in psychoanalysis by Freud's pupil and colleague, Ferenczi, and for twenty-five years a leading practitioner, Dr. Thompson is the founder, and since its inception in 1946, president of the William Alanson White Institute of Psychiatry. [This book] is based on lectures she has given at the institute, at the related Washington School of Psychiatry and at the New School for Social Research." (N Y Times) "[It] tells the story of the evolution of psychoanalysis as a science of behavior and of the recurrent scientific controversies that have plagued its growth." (Chicago Sun)

"Concise and even-tempered book." J. P. Spiegel
+ Chicago Sun p15 Je 13 '50 500w

"Authoritative, informative and thoroughly readable book." Lloyd Frankenberg
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 23 '50 1050w

THOMPSON, CRAIG. Police state; what you want to know about the Soviet Union. 257p $3 Dutton

914.7 Russia—Description and travel. Russia—Social conditions 50-5958

"A sort of journalistic handbook on Soviet Russia by a reporter who spent two years in Moscow as a correspondent for Time and Life. Mr. Thompson's main purpose is the dissection of the Communist claim that life is better in Russia than it is in the bourgeois-capitalist countries. He considers, in order, the Soviet government, election machinery, and domestic economy, and the status of Soviet women, education, and culture, and in every case he finds the system wanting." New Yorker

Booklist 46:245 Ap 1 '50

"The style of the book may grate on some nerves; the brisk reference to Tolstoy and Chekhov as 'secure among the world's greats,' for instance. And there are some slips and questionable statements. . . The value of the book lies in its straight reporting rather than in the author's occasional ventures into Russian history and communist philosofy." W. H. Chamberlin
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 26 '50 550w

Current Hist 18:356 Je '50 40w

"Written in popular style and containing more factual material than philosophical discussion, this account is readable and worthwhile as background material for small, general collections." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 75:564 Ap 1 '50 130w

"A well put together introduction to Soviet life which does what it sets out to do without frills or apologies." Martin Ebon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 7 '50 400w

N Y Times p15 Ap 9 '50 230w

New Yorker 26:121 Ap 8 '50 100w

"The book contains several shocking facts, but the most shocking thing about it is simply Thompson's rather dry and matter-of-fact recital of the Soviet Union's sordid lies and startling injustices. He has studied the Communists and lived with them for so long he is no longer excited about them. . . The book is compelling reading, once you get started. And once you've read it, you'll understand Communism as never before." George de Carvalho
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 19 '50 470w

THOMPSON, ELLERY FRANKLIN. Draggerman's haul. 277p $3 Viking

B or 92 Fishing 50-7866

"The personal history of a Connecticut fishing captain." Subtitle

Booklist 46:253; 302 Ap 15 '50; Je 1 '50

"It is not quaint, and Ellery Thompson is not a 'character.' It is a human book, full of hope and disappointment, of satisfaction and discontent, of loneliness and friendship, and it contains a good deal of laughter." Walter Havighurst
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 18 '50 450w

"We have to congratulate the captain for keeping his feet firmly planted on his deck. No dark symbolism for him. He is not a great writer, and he makes no pretense to be. But he tells his story with unflagging zest, and he gets through his story of New England fishermen and whaling men without mentioning 'Moby Dick.' This is a real achievement." William McFee
+ Christian Science Monitor p22 My 22 '50 600w

"It is a bluntly, honest book, by a simple, clean living man. He even handles his very unorthodox introduction to the sex side of life with a kind of naive simplicity that is characteristic."
+ Kirkus 18:152 Mr 1 '50 230w

"A grand yarn! It will appeal to young and old." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:693 Ap 15 '50 130w

"The writing is comfortable, but it shows signs of having been tampered with by some editorial artisan; it would have been better to let the Captain write as he pleased and in his own idiom."
New Yorker 26:102 Je 3 '50 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 25 '50 160w

Reviewed by Edmund Gilligan
Sat R of Lit 33:19 Jl 29 '50 270w

THOMPSON, HENRIETTA MARY, and REA, LUCILLE E. Clothing for children. 412p il $6 Wiley

646.36 Clothing and dress. Children—Care and hygiene 49-48198

"A textbook on designing and making children's clothes, for teachers and students of home economics, intended to be useful also to homemakers. Children's clothing needs from the baby's layette to the wardrobe of a school girl or boy of twelve are considered. The family budget and minimum clothing requirements for low incomes receive attention in one chapter." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

"On the whole, the book is written from a practical viewpoint, giving valuable information to the consumer as well as to students and teachers of home economics." Gertrude Strickland
+ J Home Econ 42:214 Mr '50 300w

THOMPSON, VIRGINIA MCLEAN (MRS RICHARD ADLOFF), and ADLOFF, RICHARD. Left wing in southeast Asia. 298p il $4 Sloane

959 Asia, Southeastern—Politics. Communism—Asia, Southeastern 50-8118

"[The authors] give factual, seemingly unbiased details of Left-wing movements in each of five southeast Asia countries where communist parties, though 'poorly organized, indifferently disciplined, and inadequately led,' are still the strongest and most aggressive in the area. Although ardent nationalism exists, the absence of widespread acute misery and intellectual curiosity has prevented the support of the masses necessary for successful revolution. According to the authors, who visited the area in 1947, 'southeast Asia has not yet been assigned a very high priority on the U.S.S.R.'s agenda of world revolution.' " Library J

"This book is a significant contribution to our knowledge of Southeast Asia." M. B. Jansen
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 17 '50 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '50

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 52:444 Ag 11 '50 650w

Current Hist 19:104 Ag '50 60w

Foreign Affairs 29:160 O '50 70w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton
Library J 75:777 My 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Guy Wint
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 11 '50 800w

"The survey of left-wing movements in Southeast Asia by Virginia Thompson and Richard Adloff is well-intentioned. But it is too stodgy and limited in scope for a reader lacking regional background, and too sketchy for a specialist." W. L. Briggs
— + New Repub 123:18 Ag 7 '50 130w

"The book is too restricted and dull for the general reader and not perceptive or informative enough for the more specialized reader. This is a pity, because the subject is extremely important and the authors have obviously put forth great labor. They still manage to give more information than is available elsewhere but they have failed to illuminate it in a way that would make it useful." Harold Isaacs
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 25 '50 700w

"An especially timely contribution to the fund of popular knowledge about Southeast Asia. Broken down into chapters on the overall Southeast Asia political context, specific chapters on the development of the left-wing movement in each area and an extensive biographical glossary, it provides a convenient handbook for following the news from that restive part of the world." H. R. Lieberman
+ N Y Times p33 Je 11 '50 550w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 2 '50 550w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow
Sat R of Lit 33:12 Jl 22 '50 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:348 S '50 200w

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson
Yale R n s 40:162 autumn '50 290w

THOMSON, ELIZABETH HARRIET. Harvey Cushing: surgeon, author, artist; foreword by John F. Fulton. 347p il $4 Schuman

B or 92 Cushing, Harvey Williams. Brain—Surgery 50-3130

The life story of the famous American surgeon, author, teacher, and artist. The work is based upon family diaries, letters, and other papers. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 9:243 Jl '50 30w

Reviewed by T. R. Van Dellen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Je 18 '50 410w

"A careful, authoritative but still highly readable biography."
+ Kirkus 18:120 F 15 '50 170w

"A fascinating account. . . Recommended for all libraries." B. B. Libaire
+ Library J 75:564 Ap 1 '50 140w

"Miss Thomson writes clearly and gracefully, with humor and a human understanding that bring the sometimes alarming scientist into focus as a comprehensible human being. If there is any phase of her subject that she has neglected, it is Cushing, the biographer; and this does no harm, since the biography speaks for itself. Her book is especially good in tracing the development of the bibliophile who collected one of the most remarkable private libraries in America." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 18 '50 1100w

"Working in the Historical Library at Yale University where Dr. Cushing's collection of books is housed, Elizabeth Thomson has caught the spirit which inspired so many of his pupils. . . Since the 'school' which he founded is perhaps Dr. Cushing's most important achievement, the reader feels a bit let down merely to have the name of a prominent pupil mentioned and ushered out with hardly a comment." J. W. Watts
N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '50 750w

"Miss Thomson has done a first-rate job. Her portrait reveals as much of Dr. Cushing's interesting, if contradictory, personality (as reflected in his diaries and letters) as it does of his pioneering work in the most difficult branches of surgery and of his career as a sort of medical statesman. Photographs, and many drawings by the Doctor, who was an indefatigable amateur sketcher."
+ New Yorker 26:110 Je 10 '50 120w

"Cushing had experienced his share of death and battle and disease, but in today's depressing confusion his life, which ended only a few years ago, in 1939, reads almost like a saga out of a better age. It was a life of pride, nobility, integrity, and it was also—in spite of its tremendous responsibilities—carefree and happy. Elizabeth Thomson's story of that life is one of the most inspiring books I have read in recent years." Martin Gumpert
+ Sat R of Lit 33:16 Jl 29 '50 800w

THOMSON, GLADYS SCOTT. Catherine the Great and the expansion of Russia. (Teach yourself history lib) 294p $2 Macmillan

947.06 Catherine II, empress of Russia. Russia—History 50-6988

"This study of Catherine the Great has no pretensions to original research. It is merely an attempt to give the reader an outline of the story of the Empress and the Russia over which she ruled. References to the material from which the story is chiefly derived will be found in the text. A list of books suggested as starting-points for further study is given at the end of the volume." (Introductory note) Index.

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 21 '50 40w

"Catherine the Great of Russia had a career no biographer need highlight for effect and Miss Thomson gives it a stirring recital. But she does considerably more; the setting is expertly sketched, the cities, social background, even the physical geography of eighteenth-century Russia are described with precision, and space is found for the arts and sciences." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 Jl 15 '50 80w

THORN, C. JORDAN. Handbook of American silver and pewter marks; pref. by John Meredith Graham II. 289p il $3.50 Tudor

739.23 Hall marks. Silversmithing. Pewter 50-5385

"Two lists, alphabetically arranged, give silversmiths and pewterers, with approximate dates of activity and location of shops. For most are also given reproductions of marks or 'touches' used. Several pages of line drawings illustrate chronological changes in design of pieces and half-tone photographs show pieces by outstanding designers." Booklist

Booklist 46:216 Mr 1 '50

Reviewed by P. L. Nothstein
Chicago Sunday Tribune p43 D 4 '49 50w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:1187 Jl '50 50w

THORNDIKE, RUSSELL. In the steps of Shakespeare. new rev ed 308p pl $2.75 McBride

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Contemporary England. Great Britain—Description and travel. Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 50-7466

An English Shakespearean actor and novelist describes in this guidebook the places in England, Scotland and Wales associated with Shakespeare and his plays. Illustrated with photographs. Index. First edition was published in 1939 with the title: A Wanderer with Shakespeare.

"Highly recommended for theatre and Shakespeare collections in university, college, and middle to large public libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 75:1048 Je 15 '50 50w

"Mr. Thorndike's book is full of pleasant oddments of information. It is written for the general reader who enjoys Shakespeare rather than for the scholar." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 18 '50 200w

"Although there is no telling where this Shakespeare guide will ramble, his geographical framework keeps him within bounds and admits some good photographs. His book is a catchall, true enough, and the personal intrusions sometimes are too cozy for comfort; but in general it is unpretentious and ingratiating." Robert Halsband

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:20 Je 3 '50 230w

THORPE, NIELS. Peter Nielsen's story. 199p $2.75 Univ. of Minn.

49-47346

In the person of a fictional character, Peter Nielsen, the author tells the story of his own boyhood on a farm in Denmark, thirty years ago. "One feels with this peasant boy the bite of hunger and cold in bad winters, the happiness when his father finds work with a benevolent landowner, the misgivings with which at 10 he sets out for his first job on a dairy farm, the joy of holiday reunions with his large, affectionate family." (N Y Times) For readers of twelve or older.

Booklist 46:143 D 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p3 Ap 15 '50 100w

"Though well written, in the first person, style is a bit stilted. Will appeal to the unusual teen-ager who is interested in European peasant life." Sonja Wennerblad

+ — Library J 75:409 Mr 1 '50 80w

"His is an unpretentious, genuinely moving story for readers of 12 and up." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 F 5 '50 190w

Wis Lib Bul 46:30 F '50

THRUELSEN, RICHARD. Men at work. 231p $2.75 Harper

331.7 Occupations 50-8601

"Brief informal sketches, reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post, about 16 average Americans who through industry and perseverance have achieved a reasonable amount of success. The jobs described appear to be run-of-the-mine and the men about halfway up the ladder in their fields. The slick treatment will appeal to readers even though the book is not important vocational material. Partial contents: "All the livelong day"—the railroader; Movie house manager; Textile trainee; Family at work—resort owners; Eat and run—drive-in operator; Chicken farmer." Booklist

Booklist 46:357 Jl 15 '50

Kirkus 18:273 My 1 '50 130w

"Mr. Thruelsen is alert, graphic and easy to read; he avoids the obvious and the dry rot of statistics. He ranges from tree surgery to textiles, from managing a chicken farm to managing a movie theater, from technical jobs to drive-in lunchrooms. Mr. Thruelsen is a good reporter in all fields."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 O 15 '50 140w

"Mr. Thruelsen does the job in what has come to be recognized as expert magazine style—factual, amusing, with just enough in the way of 'human interest' and no dramatic incidents missed if possible. It's a good, workable pattern, familiar as it is to any magazine reader, and Mr. Thruelsen is one of its top-ranking exponents. . . In its field this is a good job." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 13 '50 600w

"The book is an excellent demonstration of the fact that Americana is not necessarily something that happened in 1767—it's going on right now." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 O 7 '50 180w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 310w

THUESEN, HOLGER GEORGE. Engineering economy. 501p il $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

620.02 Engineering—Estimates and costs 50-13553

"An introductory work for engineering students and also for practicing engineers whose knowledge of the economic aspects of their professional activities needs refreshing. The subject is covered broadly and topics discussed range from interest calculations to the evaluation of proposals for new enterprises. The author is head of the School of Industrial Engineering and Management of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1832 O 15 '50 70w

School & Society 72:207 S 23 '50 20w

THURBER, JAMES. The 13 clocks; il. by Mark Simont. 124p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 50-11076

"A fairy tale not for children about a duke, so cold and cruel that time has frozen around him, who has imprisoned a beautiful princess in his castle, and about a prince who rescues her by performing a seemingly impossible task." New Yorker

---

Booklist 47:174 Ja 1 '51

"Mr. Thurber has done it again, though I don't know just what it is he has done this time—a fairy tale, a comment on human cruelty and human sweetness or a spell, an incantation compounded of poetry and logic and wit." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 3 '50 700w

" 'The 13 Clocks' does not always keep to the upper air of comic greatness that was the normal altitude in 'Fables for Our Times' and other of Mr. Thurber's short pieces. Yet it has its peaks, and on the relaxed and playful slopes between, fields are plowed by 'the dragging points of stars' and there is 'a smell a little like forever in the air, but mixed with something faint and less enduring, possibly the fragrance of a flower.' Marc Simont's witty and emphatic illustrations are expert echoes of the text." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p6 D 3 '50 550w

"Even though Mr. Thurber has used the traditional form, his story might be considered essentially ingenious satire on that form, written in a many-tiered, poetic prose style. It can be read by almost anyone of voting age or over with no condescension whatever. Marc Simont's illustrations are properly romantic and sinister."

New Yorker 26:166 D 9 '50 90w

Time 56:60 D 25 '50 650w

THURBURN, ROSE. Wilderness is yours. 231p $2.75 Morrow
50-8981

Political intrigue during a war between two unnamed minor European countries provides the background. Slade, a ruthless, self-seeking government official is the central character.

Booklist 47:14 S 1 '50

"An effective portrayal of precarious politics and a conscienceless character, this is not however for general tastes in fiction."

Kirkus 18:336 Je 15 '50 130w

"Unimportant but recommended for its entertainment value." J. E. Brown

Library J 75:1182 Jl '50 120w

"The book is extraordinarily skilful for a first novel, and goes about its job in quite the right way: it gets you involved in a well-told story, and then it earns your respect." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 14 '50 90w

"This is a story of what happens to people as well as principles in war-time; Slade, sharpening up his office routine; Patkov, peering from his mountain look-outs; Rosie and Robbins, trying to make their faith in war meaningful, all are very credible people—so credible in fact, that you wonder whom, if anybody, Miss Thurburn really has in mind. And if her story is a bit sad, one feels it is not because she wished it to be that way, but because that is the way it really is." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 6 '50 750w

Reviewed by Joyce Geary

N Y Times p17 Ag 6 '50 180w

"For all the dramatic war scenes and the suspenseful intrigues of power politics, Miss Thurburn's story is essentially a psychological novel. The plot, original and arresting in itself, serves mainly to develop the character of Slade. It is a tribute to the author's craftsmanship that her protagonist's calculating selfishness stops short of the ghoulish. In less deft hands so cold-blooded a cynic might have turned out an incredible monster, and not one of those pragmatists for whom mankind is a stockpile of 'good contacts' and nothing more." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 33:21 S 2 '50 500w

"Miss Thurburn writes fluently and often carefully, but without distinction." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec 184:590 Ap 28 '50 100w

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 30 '50 180w

"Miss Thurburn tells this story in a manner very much like that of Mr. Graham Greene; and she is chiefly occupied with the effect of Slade's decision upon his own career and character, and that of his immediate associates. Since these figures, including Slade, are never more than obvious puppets for the materialization of ideas, the result is to make trivial an important and interesting theme."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p273 My 5 '50 250w

THUT, ISAAK NOAH, and GERBERICH, JOSEPH RAYMOND. Foundations of method for secondary schools; with special contributions by Vernon E. Anderson [and others]. 493p $4 McGraw

373 Education, Secondary. Teaching
49-50194

"A textbook for general secondary school methods courses which relates method to the recent developments in the curriculum area. . . Part I discusses method as a general plan of procedure selected to achieve a special type of educational product. . . In Part II, each of the three major teaching plans of methods found in secondary schools today is described in detail: the daily assignment of 'recitation' method; the subject-matter unit method; and the experience unit method. Part III presents special aspects of general methods; namely the core curriculum in its relation to method, the comprehensive testing program, the guidance aspects to teaching, the problem of discipline, the use of audio-visual aids, and professional improvement through in-service education." (Publisher's note) Selected references at end of each chapter. List of visual aids. Index.

"An attractively arranged analysis of various procedures. . . The presentation of texual matter is lucid, with study being facilitated by chapter summaries and bibliographies. Up-to-datedness is represented by a description of sociometric techniques. Careful pruning would have helped the authors avoid trespassing on the preserves of educational psychology and other subjects which have presumably been completed by the student. Slips like 'De Feltra' are fortunately rare." W. W. Brickman

+ — School & Society 72:86 Ag 5 '50 280w

"The very comprehensiveness which marks the authors' approach to the study of method has apparently led to a major weakness. They have found it difficult—and in at least one case impossible—to avoid the use and the repetition of many of the stereotypes and clichés regarding method which so often have interfered with the understanding of method and with creative teaching." E. W. Burr

+ — Social Educ 14:238 My '50 450w

TILDEN, WILLIAM TATEM. How to play better tennis [drawings by Frederick E. Banbury]. 191p $2.75; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

796.34 Tennis
50-7349

"Drawing on his experiences as tennis player and teacher, Bill Tilden gives an analysis of the techniques, tactics, psychology, and ethics of tennis for those enthusiasts who wish to play a better game. He laments the fact that commercialization has taken the color and glamor from tennis, and in summing up he briefly discusses the last of the great personalities of the court and cites modern players who may or may not revitalize the game." Booklist

---

Booklist 46:284 My 15 '50

TILDEN, W. T.—Continued

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '50

Kirkus 18:86 F 1 '50 120w

"Comprehensive, practical, authoritative." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:781 My 1 '50 20w

"Sound and thorough, detailed and explicit are the Tilden instructions." Tom Meany

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 14 '50 240w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p7 Ap 16 '50 370w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 18 '50 100w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 9 '50 110w

TILLERY, CARLYLE. Red Bone woman. 314p $3 Day

50-6056

The "Red Bones" of Louisiana are supposed to be either part Indian or part Negro in ancestry, altho they themselves claim to be part Spanish. A widower of good family, Mr Randall, out of sheer loneliness, took Tempie, one of the Red Bone women into his home and eventually married her. The new environment helped Tempie, and the two struggled to have their children accepted as pupils in the "white" school. In this they were successful.

Booklist 46:211; 232 Mr 1 '50; Mr 15 '50

"Good reading that quietly and firmly shows how one small group met racial prejudices." Mary Sandrock

+ Cath World 171:392 Ag '50 190w

"Written with a good amount of skill, interest, and even charm." T. E. Cassidy

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 28 '50 370w

"'Red Bone Woman' is not only an original novel; it is a warm, honest, and at times beautiful piece of writing, which holds the reader's interest to the last word. Its author, Carlyle Tillery, a Southerner who has lived most of his life in Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi, is here writing with understanding and compassion of people and places he really knows about." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 6 '50 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '50

"It is a strange and haunting sort of story. Not easy reading, because of the constant use of the difficult dialect, but a revealing book, and a searching study of an oblique kind of miscegenation. . . A psychological novel, uneven in style, but worth special consideration."

+ Kirkus 18:113 F 15 '50 240w

"Entertaining, unusual, and revealing reading. Not like the usual light fiction, this is a haunting, charming story. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:561 Ap 1 '50 80w

"Carlyle Tillery has as true discernment in character, as keen an eye for subtle detail, in depicting concerted action in a rural community as he has for portrayal of tranquillity or turmoil in a farmhouse. The Deep South has found a new voice." W. T. Hedden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 23 '50 950w

"Mr. Carlyle's main interest is the human qualities of his people, and for the most part he has done well with them. There are many very moving and comic scenes scattered through the book and the reader gets a thorough picture of farm life, customs and landscape." Hubert Creekmore

+ N Y Times p42 Ap 16 '50 450w

New Yorker 26:118 Ap 22 '50 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 24 '50 700w

"A simple tale of simple folk, not without its faults, and perhaps handicapped for many readers by the strangeness of the material and the unavoidable use of a difficult dialect, 'Red Bone Woman' is nevertheless a work of solid accomplishment." Herschel Brickell

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:27 Ap 15 '50 700w

TILMAN, HAROLD WILLIAM. Two mountains and a river. 232p pl maps $3.75 Cambridge

915.8 Mountaineering. Asia—Description and travel [50-196]

A mountain explorer describes his unsuccessful attempts to climb Mt Rakaposhi in the Himalayas and Muztagh Ata in Chinese Turkistan. He also relates other difficulties: visaless troubles in Afghanistan and his arrest as a spy by Afghan officials. Index.

Booklist 46:333 Jl 1 '50

"A journal of adventure that becomes progressively more entertaining chapter by chapter." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 8 '50 250w

"Never showy, this is for the more serious follower of mountaineers and mountaineering."

+ Kirkus 17:619 N 1 '49 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 13 '50 210w

"Climbers can learn from Mr. Tilman not to be too solemn about their pleasures. No doubt this is easier for him than for some others; after all he has stood on the top of the highest mountain yet climbed. . . Two Mountains and a River is also a book for the general reader who can enjoy the unusual and exhilarating spectacle of a man of intelligence and sensibility doing precisely what he most wants to do." J. A. Smith

+ — New Statesman & Nation 39:138 F 4 '50 800w

"This is, in greater part, a travel book; informative, but merrily written and entertaining. . . The book is illustrated by a great number of truly magnificent mountain photographs. I am not quite sure whether they are all Mr. Tilman's or whether some were taken by his Swiss companions on the Rakaposhi effort. Their activities with their cameras get frequent mention. At any rate they are so good that, with the help of some adequate sketch maps, they make the author's lively descriptions seem almost superfluous." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 26 '50 750w

Reviewed by W. B. Hayward

N Y Times p20 F 19 '50 280w

New Yorker 26:124 Mr 18 '50 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 11 '50 150w

"Mr. Tilman is a highly accomplished mountaineer, but he is also an explorer. The fact that he did not ascend Rakaposhi or Muztagh Ata does not stamp the expedition as a failure. It has resulted in a charming book of travel, and has cleared up some geographical puzzles."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 3 '50 850w

TILSLEY, FRANK. Champion road. 563p $3.50 Messner

50-9977

"Jonathan, who tells his own story, started life in the early part of this century in Tollerton Clough, 'which in those days was a little Lancashire village.' . . Except for his service in two world wars, Jonathan never leaves Tollerton Clough. Whether as, at the beginning, a poor but ambitious bricklayer's helper, or as a confident young man buying and selling mill shares in the postwar boom, or as a successful builder and leading citizen hobnobbing with the local aristocracy, or as a bankrupt, Jonathan Briggs is altogether a product of Tollerton Clough." Christian Science Monitor

"Mr. Tilsley gets the reader pretty interested in his main characters and he is a vigorous story-teller—but he goes on much too long."
+ — Atlantic 186:90 O '50 130w

Booklist 47:76 O 15 '50

Bookmark 10:33 N '50 40w

"Forty years of ups-and-down of a Lancashire marriage told in a sturdy English tale which is as meaty and well stuffed as a Lancashire ham." Mary Sandrock
+ Cath World 172:233 D '50 170w

"Much of the pungency of the narrative style derives from the fact that Briggs, the teller of the story, is hard bitten, abrupt, and little given to indulgence in the softer emotions. 'Champion Road's' faults are few. The author's touch with children is not as sure as it is with adults. His ear is not attuned to their speech." Edward Barry
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 1 '50 450w

"Mr. Tilsley is an accomplished storyteller, a realistic novelist in the old-fashioned tradition. In 'Champion Road' he has done for Lancashire something of what Arnold Bennett did for the Five Towns. His characterizations have the ring of true regional particularity; his handling of the Lancashire idiom is a constantly recurring delight." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 O 7 '50 800w

"Mr. Tilsley's new novel demonstrates once more that a novel filled with the details of day-to-day existence is the most accurate, most meaningless, and least interesting reflection of life." C. A. Cline
Commonweal 53:181 N 24 '50 500w

Kirkus 18:428 Ag 1 '50 210w

"A spacious novel, with breadth of understanding and knowledge. And it is a novel of real character—of character in process of development and change—whose like you will not come upon often." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 1 '50 1000w

"Mr. Tilsley's book is very much like those massive Sunday dinners they gave you in his native North Country—ample, solid, and very, very filling." John Barkham
+ N Y Times p34 O 1 '50 360w

"Mr. Tilsley arrives at a last page that strikes exactly the right parting note, offering true love, wisdom, and wry humor—equal quantities of each."
+ New Yorker 26:101 S 30 '50 80w

"Ever since the death of Arnold Bennett I have been looking for someone to step into his shoes. . . In 'Champion Road' Frank Tilsley has not quite achieved the standard of 'Riceyman Steps' or 'The Old Wives Tale'; nevertheless there are qualities in his book reminiscent of these more important works." A. J. Cronin
Sat R of Lit 33:15 S 30 '50 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p23A N 5 '50 450w

TIMASHEFF, NICHOLAS SERGEYEVITCH, and FACEY, PAUL W. Sociology; an introduction to sociological analysis. 399p $3.25 Bruce pub.

301 Sociology 49-5555

"This introductory textbook presents sociology as a way of looking at the world. Eschewing theoretical considerations and problems of method, the authors declare that the core of sociology is the systematic investigation of society. This edifice of the analyses of society, they further state, rests upon a 'relatively simple conceptual scheme.' The book presents some of these basic analytic concepts to beginning students—the tools of their trade, as the authors remark. . . Material in the book is presented in the starkest possible fashion. Theoretical and methodological discussions are avoided; statistics, tables, cases, and 'other products of particular research' are not included; sources are not cited." Am J Soc

"The book remains at the level of affable generality and provides apt examples of points made. But the real heart of the research process—theoretical sophistication linked with humble and arduous research—is not in this book. This is its greatest limitation, especially since it purports to rest upon the empirical study of society. Another criticism of the book is that often material presented as analysis is in fact description—and fairly obvious at that. . . The orientation of the authors toward sociology and its introduction to students is heartily indorsed. Despite its shortcomings, the book stays rigorously at its task—the presentation of knowledge of group life secured through a framework of stated concepts." H. L. Smith
+ — Am J Soc 56:91 Jl '50 750w

"The unguided reader could conclude from this volume that sociology lacks contributors, growth, or controversy; he could hardly envision a dynamic discipline influenced and often buffeted by current conflicts. Still, this is a well-written little book, logically ordered and consistent with the modest claims in the introductory 'Note to the Instructor.'" C. H. Page
+ Am Soc R 15:151 F '50 220w

"It is a book to be evaluated by students, since it is written for students on the elementary level. Certainly it is the type of textbook that students will read, and in reading it they will be challenged by its logical and coherent systematic analysis, by its mature and clear style, and by its pointed illustrations from everyday experience." M. J. Williams
+ Social Forces 29:222 D '50 950w

TINA, DOROTHY LES. See Les Tina, D.

TINBERGEN, JAN. Dynamics of business cycles; a study in economic fluctuations [Am. ed] by Jan Tinbergen and J. J. Polak. 366p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

338.54 Business cycles 50-6578

"Part one describes long-run, cyclical, and interrupted movements; part two explains these economic fluctuations; part three discusses economic policy, or the ways in which economic movements may be influenced. For specialists." (Booklist) Index.

"Altogether, the American public has every reason to be grateful for the appearance of this book. . . One of the more serious criticisms is that Professor Tinbergen does not consider sufficiently the possible inflationary impact of wage increases in an already inflationary situation. . . Knowledge of recent American experience would have undoubtedly contributed to a different formulation of the conclusions. Just the same, the book ought to be extremely useful in a stimulating (and quite unorthodox) course on business cycles, and it ought to prove of interest and value to the layman." W. F. Stolper
+ — Ann Am Acad 269:162 My '50 1200w

Booklist 46:270 My 1 '50

Current Hist 18:356 Je '50 40w

TINDALL, WILLIAM YORK. James Joyce, his way of interpreting the modern world. (Twentieth century lib) 134p $2; college ed $1.50 Scribner

823 Joyce, James 50-5299

"An unusually intelligible interpretation concentrating on Ulysses and Finnegans Wake. The author examines Joyce in terms of Stephen Daedalus (Joyce himself), Humanity, The family cycle, and Myth and symbol, explaining Freudian implications, multi-lingual puns, symbols and characters, and through it all stressing the humor and understanding Joyce poured into his writing." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:197 F 15 '50

Christian Century 67:304 Mr 8 '50 290w

"Mr. Tindall's new book provides an excellent summary of Joyce's achievement. He makes many things clearer; he also makes clear some things which have never been clear

TINDALL, W. Y.—Continued
before. Full of insight, his study is clear, stimulating, well written, and, best of all, brief." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 F 25 '50 450w

Reviewed by Vivien Mercier
Commonweal 52:204 Je 2 '50 260w

Current Hist 18:228 Ap '50 10w

"Not easy reading and demanding considerable background for full appreciation."
Kirkus 18:17 Ja 1 '50 30w

"This one is among the best of the lot. It has an eye for meaning. It has an ear for feeling. It profits by the findings of the previous explorers. And, on numerous occasions, it makes findings of its own, thus extending known horizons. This book has another virtue. Reading Joyce is lots of work. It is also lots of fun. Tindall shows us that the fun is worth the work." Nathan Halper
+ New Repub 122:19 Mr 27 '50 500w

"A worthy addition to the rapidly lengthening shelf on Joyce. It is not a boiling down and summing up of familiar ideas, but a fresh interpretation based on a number of new insights and original discoveries, by one of the leading experts in the field." J. M. Morse
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 19 '50 550w

"The informal character of Mr. Tindall's approach, for all its virtue in other directions, often leaves the general pattern of his exposition somewhat vague. This is particularly regrettable in the case of a critic who appreciates the great importance of form in Joyce as thoroughly as Mr. Tindall shows he does." J. J. Sweeney
+ N Y Times p5 F 19 '50 650w

"Mr. Tindall writes for non-specialists, providing handy notes on all the people who exerted an influence on Joyce, from Nicholas of Cusa to Sigmund of Vienna, and although few of his insights appear to be original, he is certainly the first commentator to make 'Finnegans Wake' sound as though it might be fun to read."
+ New Yorker 26:123 Mr 18 '50 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 16 '50 150w

Reviewed by R. M. Kain
+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 Mr 4 '50 650w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 5 '50 150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:154 Je '50 280w

TITTLE, ERNEST FREMONT. Mighty fortress; with a foreword, Portrait of a preacher, by Paul Hutchinson. 179p $2.50 Harper

252 Sermons 50-8672

A collection of twenty sermons from the works of Ernest Fremont Tittle, who for thirty-one years was the pastor of the First Methodist Church of Evanston, Illinois.

Chicago Sun p5 Jl 4 '50 40w

"His sermons were short, touched with humor, projected with remarkable skill in public speaking. They were clear, yet profound. They were marked by mellowness and humility, uncompromising but not angry, fearless but not bitter, realistic but yet heartening. They spoke to the central issues of life, with hardly a reference to denominational considerations but with incessant applications to conduct. . . Paul Hutchinson, editor of the Christian Century, has supplied a biografical foreword of lively interest and high quality. It is a loving and manly characterization of a loving and manly man who, 'tho dead, yet speaketh.' " A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 25 '50 400w

"It is hard to believe that there is a Christian anywhere, capable of reading English, who would not be profoundly stirred and lifted by reading these 20 sermons by the late Ernest Fremont Tittle, or a preacher who would not be made a better preacher by the same experience." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:868 Jl 19 '50 350w

"The book is composed of twenty sermons. They represent a remarkable handling of biblical incidents and background with a deft application to modern problems. The sermons are marked by simplicity. The illustrations illustrate. There is directness and clarity in style." J. H. Ivey
+ Crozer Q 27:366 O '50 950w

Kirkus 18:596 O 1 '50 120w

TOBOLDT, WILLIAM KING. Automobile body rebuilding and refinishing. 464p il $5 Int. textbook

629.26 Automobiles—Repairing 50-6756

"All of the operations in rebuilding and refinishing of damaged automobile bodies are covered in sufficient detail for practical use in body shops. Uses of modern tools such as dinging hammers and hydraulic straightening equipment are described. The text descriptions are supplemented by numerous photographs and line drawings. The sections on painting account for approximately four-ninths of the book's length and are outstanding for their many practical points." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Although some discussion of the techniques of auto-body rebuilding can be found in other books, the present book is comparatively so much more complete that it deserves to be called a pioneer work." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:701 Ap 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:34 My '50

TOCQUEVILLE, ALEXIS CHARLES HENRI MAURICE CLEREL DE. Recollections; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos; ed. with many additions from the original text and an introd. by J. P. Mayer. 332p $5 Columbia univ. press

944.07 France—History—February revolution, 1848 49-50219

"These 'Recollections' were first published in France in 1893 and appeared in English translation three years later. The present edition reproduces the English text of 1896, but a number of short passages, omitted from the earlier printings, have been restored in full. The amplifications, identified by brackets, contain some of De Tocqueville's most telling judgments. His pen portraits of Louis Philippe, Lamartine, Louis Napoleon, and other political leaders, are more trenchant than Daumier's caricatures, and his comments on human motives have the lethal urbanity of La Rochefoucauld's maxims." (N Y Times) Index.

"Few such incisive case studies in political behavior have been written in which acute observation of events is combined with not less acute reflection on their meaning. This is, indeed, a still useful manual on the nature and effects of a society in crisis. Here, too, is that subtlety of thought, that felicity of style, which makes all of Tocqueville's writing a delightful literary experience for the reader. In this edition of the Recollections, J. P. Mayer, already known as one of the outstanding students of Tocqueville, has done a truly admirable editorial service to general reader and scholar alike." Phillips Bradley
+ Am Pol Sci R 44:1065 D '50 450w

"If this document merited another English edition, it merited something far less shabby than this." Sherman Kent
— Ann Am Acad 270:194 Jl '50 650w

"[The Recollections] are his last work and by no means the most important. Even so, the general reader will be more than amply rewarded by the rich wisdom and brilliant wit of a great statesman." Melchior Palyi
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 27 '50 210w

Current Hist 18:99 F '50 70w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
Nation 170:327 Ap 8 '50 1700w

"Recollections of 1848 is the best book about a revolution ever written by a contemporary. Yet even Tocqueville was overwhelmed by his experience. This book is not a finished work, a complete work of art like his two masterpieces, Democracy in America and The Ancien Régime and the Revolution. He wrote to instruct himself, not to persuade the public. Usually he reined in his brilliance; here, writing only for himself, he was not ashamed to be clever." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 36:465 N 27 '48 1800w

"Respect for De Tocqueville's extraordinary insight has been rising in recent years and this amplified volume of his 'Recollections' will increase it. J. P. Mayer, an authority on political thought and a biographer of De Tocqueville, has written a pertinent introduction." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 1 '50 380w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 33:37 Mr 4 '50 260w

TOLKIEN, JOHN RONALD RENEL. Farmer Giles of Ham; Aegidii Ahenobarbi Tulii agricole de Hammo, Domini de Domito, Aule Draconarie Comitis, Regni Minimi Regis et Basilei mira facinora et mirabilis exortis, or in the vulgar tongue, The rise and wonderful adventures of farmer Giles, Lord of Tame, Count of Worminghall and king of the Little Kingdom; embellished by Pauline Diana Baynes. 78p il $2 Houghton

A mock-heroic tale of a farmer living in the Little Kingdom in the valley of the Thames, sometime in Britain's dim past. The farmer captures a dragon and his enormous treasure, and defies the king and his knights who come to take it away from him.

"Mock serious, written in brilliant style, this tale by the author of the classic, 'The Hobbit,' [Book Review Digest 1938] is ideal for reading aloud." M. B. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 12 '50 200w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 60w

"To enjoy the book, one must have a lively imagination, an ear for wonders, a sense of absurdity and pleasure in oddly-compounded words. Try reading it aloud in a family with these qualities." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 26:287 Jl '50 100w

"This will delight the Hobbit audience. . . Recommended for all collections." Clara Adams

+ Library J 75:2084 D 1 '50 70w

"Both Farmer Giles and the dragon Chrysophylax offer you a laugh on every page. You will read it again, and read it aloud to any group over ten years old. The many delicate line drawings are priceless." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 320w

"There is rare flavor in this tale by the author of 'The Hobbit.' The sophisticated decorations, attractive to older tastes, may discourage some children." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p50 N 26 '50 150w

"As he likes to do, Mr. Tolkien writes the tale in a dead-pan, make-believe-scholarly style, purporting to be translated from the vulgar Latin of the time. In this style Mr. Tolkien spins his readers a yarn which involves not merely giants—there were giants on the earth in those days, though they don't seem to have been very bright—but even dragons, including one that talked. Along with this is any amount of fine and robust pseudo-scholarship such as an explanation of the name of the River Thames and much else of the same sort." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 4 '50 700w

"It is not unlike the famous story of the Reluctant Dragon. Humor underlies every word of it, although it is far from an obvious humor. The dialogue between the two is a matching of wits and a need to prove which one is the victor in the struggle between them. It is a joy to read. Farmer Giles's story is told in medieval language and embellished with drawings that might have come from an ancient manuscript."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:41 N 11 '50 230w

Reviewed by Gwendolen Freeman
Spec 183:718 N 18 '49 100w

TOMPKINS, NORMAN CLYDE. Sales and advertising opportunities for the small manufacturer [pub] in assn. with Printer's ink pub. co, incorporated. 346p $4.50 Funk

658.8 Salesmanship. Advertising. Marketing 50-13456

"An idea book covering state and federal aids to industries, use of market surveys, regular and new distribution channels, training of sales personnel, new market possibilities, and the all important problem of advertising." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 47:130 D 1 '50

"This excellent collection of tested ideas will help small manufacturers meet competition and expand a business to unlimited proportions." Winifred Baum

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 10 '50 90w

TOMPKINS, PAULINE. American-Russian relations in the Far East. 426p maps $5 Macmillan

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. Eastern question (Far East) 49-48919

For descriptive note see Annual for 1949.

Reviewed by S. K. Hornbeck
Am Hist R 55:908 Jl '50 650w

Am Pol Sci R 44:796 S '50 60w

"The story is written in an engaging style, although at times it sacrifices the appearance of objectivity by the use of disapprobative comments directed at the parties involved, particularly the United States. . . The reader may in some cases, wonder whether unusual statements are based on specific evidence. . . When allowances are made for somewhat impulsive statements, it will be found that the book promises much usefulness as a treatment of one segment of the larger, bipolar political rivalry." B. H. Williams

+ — Ann Am Acad 268:195 Mr '50 390w

Christian Century 67:401 Mr 29 '50 180w

"Brought up to current times, it is a frank and enlightening study of the causes of the present impasse."

+ Current Hist 18:100 F '50 40w

Foreign Affairs 28:517 Ap '50 30w

Reviewed by H. R. Isaacs
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 9 '50 850w

"In her introductory discussion of the background of Russian-American relations, for example, Miss Tompkins easily dismisses the 'tradition of friendship' as a quixotic myth. There was, however, such a tradition—whatever its validity—in the public mind. . . Apart from such matters, Miss Tompkins has succeeded very well in what she set out to do. Her book is well organized and well written. It is provocatively interpretive. While the documentation is uneven and the bibliography reveals some unexpected omissions (the Stimson books, for example), there is ample evidence of careful and thorough research." F. R. Dulles

+ — Pacific Affairs 23:216 Je '50 1200w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 18 '49 190w

"Pauline Tompkins, a competent scholar and indefatigable student, keeping her sympathies well in hand, has given us in this book a most commendable study of the entire course of American relations with Russia with implications which extend far beyond Eastern Asia. She has a fresh angle on an old political problem and writes with a literary skill none too common among historians. Her book is easy, delightful, and provocative reading." Tyler Dennett

+ Sat R of Lit 33:13 Mr 18 '50 550w

TOMPKINS, PAULINE—Continued

"Soviet foreign policy is not criticized fundamentally, for the author often accepts the official statement. Thus, for the most part, it is treated benevolently, while American policy is subjected to a barrage which leaves it in shreds. Rightly or wrongly the reviewer has gained the impression that the volume would have been better balanced in this respect if the author had devoted her undoubted talents to Soviet foreign policy (including both the Moscow Politburo and the Foreign Office) with the same meticulous detail and the same type of criticism she used on American foreign policy." R. J. Kerner

Yale R n s 39:541 spring '50 1050w

TONG, HOLLINGTON KONG. Dateline: China; the beginning of China's press relations with the world. 269p $3.50 Rockport press

951.042 Press—China. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-14048

"Hollington Tong, American-trained journalist and Kuomintang wartime Vice-Minister of Information responsible for China's overseas publicity, regrets China's unfavorable foreign press which resulted largely from 'the combination of high-geared Communist propaganda, and a blundering government policy of censorship.' Chinese incomprehension of American journalistic methods and standards, and disharmonious factions within his government, together with personnel and technical problems, complicated his task. Mr. Tong criticizes a number of prominent American writers and institutions for what many people nowadays term realistic attitudes; he calls them communistic, and as a Nationalist he has nothing good to say for them." Library J

"Interesting though biased." H. P. Linton

Library J 75:564 Ap 1 '50 140w

"Since Tong was a devoted follower of Chiang Kai-shek and a public relations man for his government, his views are frankly partisan. Yet Tong has a reputation for personal integrity and fair play that gives his views more weight than they would have if they came from a man of lesser conscientiousness." Arch Steele

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 7 '50 550w

"Dr. Tong makes this analysis without malice or rancor. But he does name names and gives dates and facts." R. A. Smith

N Y Times p22 Ap 23 '50 450w

TOOLEY, RONALD VERE. Maps and mapmakers; a brief history of cartography from the earliest times to the 19th century. 128p il $6.75 Batsford

526.98 Cartography 50-2999

"Originally planned as a guide for amateur collectors, it is in fact a carefully arranged catalogue of all the most notable printed atlases, maps, and charts from the first edition of Ptolemy's 'Geographia' in 1475 down to 1877. . . The arrangement of the first part of the book is historical. A full chapter is devoted to each of the four great 'schools' of map makers and publishers that successively in Italy, the Netherlands, France, and England developed the science and scope of cartography between 1477 and 1840. Another is given to the sixteenth-century Germans, whose maps, though less well known than those of their contemporaries, were scientifically superior, partly because of the improved surveying instruments devised by such men as Peuerbach, Peter Apian, and Stöffler. Then follow more detailed chapters on the maps and charts of Great Britain and Ireland, in which are included some most useful lists of the marine atlases and charts from 1588 on and of the large-scale county maps that preceded the Ordnance Survey. In the four chapters of the second part the author essays an enumeration of all the important printed maps of America, Africa, Australia, and Asia (including China and Japan). To each chapter is appended a bibliography of works on the maps mentioned." Geog R

"Incomplete and provisional it is bound to be; but this book, packed with titles, dates, and lists and including biographical notes on cartographers and publishers, is remarkably comprehensive. . . 'Maps and Map-Makers' is too ambitious and too crowded for accuracy and scholarship not to suffer. Many important maps are overlooked, and there are egregious errors, as when the author calls Halley 'the first to compile mortality tables' and describes Laurence Nowell, an Elizabethan historian and dean of Lichfield, as 'a gentleman of Leicester.' . . Nevertheless, with all its defects, this is the most comprehensive work on its subject yet published in any language, and one of the most generously illustrated." Edward Lynam

+ — Geog R 40:498 Jl '50 800w

"This is a collector's handbook, rather than a book to be collected for its own sake. It does contain a large number of highly agreeable reproductions of old maps, but its great value is bibliographical. It is the first really extensive catalogue raisonné in its subject, and there must be a small number of readers for whom it would have been the only choice of a seasonable gift at Christmas."

New Statesman & Nation 39:21 Ja 7 '50 120w

"It would be unfair to judge this writer as a historian. If he sometimes assumes that rôle (and some of the brief introductions to his chapters are excellent), it is mainly to ensure system in his chronicle and order in his massed cohorts of maps. The very abundance of his material precludes any leisurely treatment of it. . . No book quite like Maps and Map Makers, nor so useful in its way, has ever been published in England. Nor have we any work on this subject so well or so generously illustrated, for it contains nearly a hundred large plates, several of them in colour. It has come very opportunely." Edward Lynam

+ — Spec 183:922 D 30 '49 750w

"This is the most comprehensive book on early maps yet published in England. It is best described as a systematic and exhaustive catalogue; but its arrangement and the titles, names, lists and dates with which it is packed make it a basic contribution to both the history and the bibliography of map publication. The illustrations are exceptionally numerous and handsome. . . Yet the book has the inequalities and defects of a pioneer work. Mr. Tooley's desire to enumerate as many atlases, maps and publishers as possible has often outweighed considerations of style and even of research."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p812 D 9 '49 900w

TOPP, MRS MILDRED (SPURRIER). In the pink. 242p $2.50 Houghton

818 Mississippi—Social life and customs 50-8823

A continuation of Smile Please (Book Review Digest 1948). These further reminiscences of life in a Mississippi small town chronicle the doings of grandpa and his crony, Mr. Griggs, among others. Then there is Miss Tempe, the town seamstress, who wins respect by taking in the children of the woman who has run off with Miss Tempe's own wandering husband.

Booklist 47:10 S 1 '50

Reviewed by Marge Lyon

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 17 '50 450w

" 'In the Pink' is written chiefly for laughter—some of it farcical, but cleanly so; a little boisterous but kind." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 S 23 '50 260w

Kirkus 18:326 Je 1 '50 230w

"This is an amusing bit of Americana. Recommended for public libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 75:1180 Jl '50 90w

"Culture comes to Greenwood in strange guise, and cruelty is there, for the author is aware of life's tragedy as well as its comedy. Her book is a mosaic of deft writing."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 24 '50 320w

N Y Times p37 N 5 '50 270w

"Readers who had the good fortune to encounter Mildred Spurrier Topp's 'Smile Please' will remember the author and her little sister as the most irrepressible, ingenious limbs of Satan on record. This new series of recollections of her childhood in Greenwood, Mississippi, is just as entertaining, just as lively, and just as uninhibited. . . To Mrs. Topp must go in all fairness full credit for presenting life in the deep South from a new, unique, and excruciatingly funny angle." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 33:32 O 21 '50 600w

TORNEY, JOHN ALFRED. Swimming. 315p il $3.50 McGraw 797.2 Swimming 50-6052

"'Swimming,' by the head swimming coach at the University of Washington, contains chapters on the care of pools, aquatic exercises for beginners, life-saving instruction and tests, how to make use of debris for support in the water, and how to do comedy dives. There are photos showing the racing start, the backstroke flip turn, various aquatic games, and precision drills." (N Y Times) Reference sources. Index.

Booklist 46:349 Jl 15 '50

"A thorough-going text book for instructors, janitors, engineers, administrators and swimmers. . . Well illustrated with diagrams and photographs." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 75:781 My 1 '50 40w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p14 My 28 '50 130w

TOURTELLOT, ARTHUR BERNON. Anatomy of American politics; innovation versus conservatism. 349p $3 Bobbs
320.973 U.S.—Politics and government. Political parties—U.S. 50-6590

A study of American government and politics which "ranges widely, examining in some three hundred pages the origins of government, the three branches of the national government of the United States, the Democratic and Republican parties, and party conventions, campaigns and elections." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:270 My 1 '50

Chicago Sun p5 My 16 '50 100w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 23 '50 600w

Christian Science Monitor p7 My 6 '50 650w

"A lively, provocative study. . . One can find no fault with Mr. Tourtellot's purpose, for there is an acute need for a first-rate, popular treatment of American government. The many textbooks on the subject are unreadable for most people. . . There is literally no contemporary survey of our political system which is complete, accurate, readable, and reasonably profound in its insights and judgments. Accordingly, it is with a good deal of regret that it must be reported that 'An Anatomy of American Politics,' while frequently stimulating and informative, falls considerably short of filling the need mentioned above. . . . But the seeming ease with which this book has been written has betrayed its author into more factual errors than such a volume may reasonably contain." R. K. Carr
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 2 '50 750w

"Arthur Bernon Tourtellot is neither a pedant nor a politician, and his book is neither tedious nor banal. On the contrary, it is as crammed with facts as an almanac and as readable as Ellery Queen. By sharp, concise writing and by the liberal use of bright and pointed anecdotes, he imparts to the history of politics in this country the flesh and blood vitality it deserves. . . Its principal weakness is one of style. Mr. Tourtellot, an official of the March of Time, gives his analyses of people and events with a cocksureness, a glib subjectivity which the sensitive will find annoying." Cabell Phillips
+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 19 '50 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 25 '50 350w

Reviewed by R. C. Snyder
Sat R of Lit 33:11 Je 3 '50 850w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Horseman Hal. 41p il $1.50 Doubleday
50-9226

"Concerns Hal, who had a donkey but longed for a horse. He proved he was growing up the day he shot the hawk, and his knowledge of horseflesh on a horse-buying expedition was another step in the right direction. It took a storm, however, and adventures with a horse thief for him to show his courage and resourcefulness and to achieve his heart's desire." (N Y Times) For ages six to ten.

Kirkus 18:350 Jl 1 '50 90w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 75:1515 S 15 '50 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 5 '50 130w

